THE JURY AWARD $7,975

IN MISS ABBIE VAN DOREN'S SUIT FOR DAMAGES.

She Had Enjoyed Excellent Health Until the Accident and was Doing a Prosperous Business as a Dressmaker—Her Troubles Since that Time—As She Testified Yesterday—The Jury Brought in a Verdict in Her Favor.

The case of Miss Abbie Van Doren vs. the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad, to recover $50,000 damages for personal injuries, caused by the carelessness of its employees, was resumed in the United States Circuit Court yesterday morning.

Mr. Abram Van Doren, father of the plaintiff, testified that when he lived near Bound Brook he had three daughters, all in good health, and that on the day in question Abbie and Corie left their home to go to Sunday-school. He said that they were brought home in a wagon later in the afternoon and ever since Abbie had been in very delicate health, sleeping poorly and being unable to do any work of any account.

He testified that she had been lame and under the doctor's care almost continuously since the accident and on a number of occasions had fallen when attempting to walk. These falls he said were generally followed by fainting spells.

Miss Abbie Van Doren, the prosecuting witness, was assisted to the stand by her father. She walked with difficulty and told in a brief, straightforward way the story of her injury. She said that in June, 1888, she was living with her father near Bound Brook and carried on the dressing-making business, in which her mother assisted her, and from which she realized about $75 per month. Until June 9th she said she had enjoyed excellent health, working continuously and walking with ease wherever she wished to go.

On the day in question she stated that she had started to walk to Sunday-school in company with her younger sister and had taken as usual the road leading across the track because it was shady and pleasant and had a nice walk along it. Miss Van Doren said she saw the engine standing very near the crossing and noticed that the fireman was not out as usual.

According to her statement she and her sister started to cross the crack on the regular sidewalk when she heard the stamp of horse's hoofs and looking around saw the animal almost upon them. She said she tried to draw her sister out of the way, but before she could do so the horse was upon them and they were under the wagon. After being taken from under the vehicle and the horse's feet they, she said, were taken to the house of Mr. Linbarger and thence to her home, where Dr. Fisher was immediately called to attend her and dress her injuries.

From July till October she said she had been confined to her bed, then for one month was carried about the house, and about the first of December began to walk a little. She stated that she had since been lame, had not slept soundly, and had suffered great pain with her injured limb, which grew short and weak and frequently gave way under her weight allowing her to fall to the floor.

When asked about her sister Cora, who died from her injuries, the witness broke down and wept for some moments. The cross-examination was very brief and the jury gave the most careful attention while Miss Van Doren was testifying.

In charging the jury yesterday, in the United States Circuit Court, in the case of Abbie Van Doren v. the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad for $50,000 damages for personal injuries received at Bound Brook, Judge Atchison said that the test was whether the railroad company had been negligent and had been the primary cause of the injury which resulted in Miss Van Doren's injuries. The Judge charged as a matter of law that any negligence of Mr. Washburn, who drove the horse which injured the plaintiff had nothing to do with the responsibility of the railroad company. As to the question of damages, if the jury found for the plaintiff, they must take in consideration not only the expense of medical attendance on the plaintiff and her inability to continue her trade, but her alleged deplorable physical condition.

In summing up for the plaintiff, Mr. Reed said that the plaintiff would suffer probably her whole life from the injuries she received at the crossing.

Ex-Congressman Clark also summed up for the plaintiff. He said that the company was negligent in allowing the locomotive to stand near the crossing. He contended that the engine would not have been near the crossing had not the engineer's wife been visiting in a house near the crossing.

For the railroad company Mr. Grey said that the damages claimed were beyond reason. He claimed that had Miss Van Doren been treated by more skillful physicians she would have soon recovered. He concluded, claiming that it was not right to make any corporation pay for what it is not responsible.

A. G. Richey, also for the railroad company, claimed that the responsibility of the accident rested on Mr. Washburn, and that there was no carelessness on the part of the engineer.

The jury this morning brought in a verdict in favor of the complainant, awarding her damages amounting to $7,975.

Fourteen Altogether.

Three other dogs were caught by the dog catchers yesterday and taken to the dog pound. The keeper of the pound reports that there are fourteen dogs incarcerated now.

Dr. Lowrie made a strong attack on the liquor traffic, and said that Methodism was fast becoming in the ears of the liquor element the synonym for national prohibition.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

AN AMERICAN THE INVENTOR.

A Baltimore Professor Says He Originated the War Balloons.

BALTIMORE, April 1st. (Special.)—Prof. Wm. R. Wil of this city, says he believes the war balloons from which the Germans have been observing Russian fortifications and armies are his own invention.

The descriptions of the balloons in the Associated Press despatches from Europe coincide exactly with the plans which he perfected some time ago and submitted to Chief von Lindenberg, of the Aeronautical Department of the German Army.

He is convinced the Germans have appropriated an American invention without giving either credit or price for it.

Prof. Wils first conceived the idea of his balloon in March, 1881, just after the Mattis riots, when there was talk of war with Italy and of an Italian ironclad bombarding New Orleans. He planned an aerial torpedo ship to meet the threatening occasion, and this plan he submitted to the German Government.

Utah All for Harrison.

PROVO CITY, Utah, April 1. (Special.)—The Republican Senatorial Convention was called to order here at noon to-day with four hundred delegates, representing twenty-four counties in attendance.

ABOUT TEETH.

Things It Is Well to Keep in Mind About Their Preservation.

Children have twenty teeth—ten in the upper arch and ten in the lower. Adults have thirty-two teeth—sixteen in the upper arch and sixteen in the lower. As the jaw and bone grow larger it is necessary for the teeth to be larger and a greater number. A current belief is that persons (especially those of the older generation) have a double row of teeth. This is a mistake. The fact that the teeth, by artificial from malarticulation, become worn down so that the cutting edges of the incisor teeth present a double surface, and to the casual observer seem so, There are occasionally to be found supernumerary teeth, but they hardly ever cut a figure, and are generally detected by the expert dentist. The first set of teeth are, as a rule, easily driven, as their attachment can be easily broken up.

The first set of teeth even in children are as essential to be saved as the six-year old molars, and should be examined frequently and properly treated and filled. Gold is decidedly the best material for a great majority of cases, however silver and tin fillings are frequently used, are very valuable in preserving many teeth.

Teeth properly treated and filled should last from five to twenty-five years—even longer, owing to the care and skill used in filling, and also to the nature and quality of the teeth as well.

Cement and porta percha answers for temporary fillings, but are not lasting. They wash out or wear down and in a short time must be renewed.

Teeth can not be cleaned too often. The enamel is not likely to be worn off, as some suppose, with the tooth-brush.

CHARCOAL.

Charcoal should never be used on the teeth. It has a tendency to tattoo the gums above the teeth and cause them to turn a dark blue or black in color. Besides, it partakes of the nature of diseased dead and worthless wood.

Many tooth washes, nostrums and powders are unfit to be used, hence one had better consult a competent dentist.

Each tooth is an individual member, and is susceptible to several diseases besides caries. It requires a skillful diagnosis in some cases to tell at once which tooth is affected or what the matter is, owing to reflect action and a hypersympathetic condition, as is sometimes the case, as well as the inability of the patient to intelligently describe the symptoms.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

George W. Childs is credited with having told a newspaper person in confidence that he would rather be dead than be a woman. Somebody ought to interview a number of our distinguished men and ask them what they would do if they were women.

A number of lightweight gold double eagles have been shipped east from California. By the ingenious use of electricity the coins are supposed to be sweated to the extent of seventy-five cents or a dollar each. This may be mentioned as one of the modern scientific uses to which electricity is put. The lightning has been harnessed for the uses of thieves, but it would apparently be easier to earn a dollar honestly than to get it by this tedious process.

A cheerful fact that is in New York city which believes that the world is growing steadily more and more wicked and that it must necessarily be so till the disciples of the true church are caught up into heaven, after which the rest of the people, which includes about 99 per cent. of the race, will be destroyed. Yet this sect enjoys its belief thoroughly and grows jolly and fat over it. Maybe these disciples are so pleased because they all feel sure they themselves will be saved.

The Greatest Loss.

It is not wealth or friends, it is not even health. That which men have need to lament most is lost enthusiasm. A sad day it is when a man says to him self: "The aspirations of my youth are illusions, my hopes of noble achievement are dust. Bread and butter are all I care for henceforth." The want of this enthusiasm will make youth aged its presence will keep the old young. The Moravian says:

Find me the man in whom the fire of early vigor and hopefulness has not been replaced by the steady and persistently forceful determination of middle life, who cares no longer to do and to dare, whose soul is like a burned out volcano, the lava and ashes of former eruptions and pulsing emotions alone remaining, and you will have shown me the man to be pitied. Life is tedious to him, a ceaseless round of wearying duties—drudgery. He does not welcome the effort that strains and tests his powers. He approaches success nameless dread. He expects the worst in seeking to forecast events, and in consequence the worst not infrequently comes. Of only such a man could escape from himself! And he may, if he will, by self forgetfulness in seeking to advance the interests of others more really unfortunate. Let him put his whole soul into anything for others, and in which he being he exercised. Enthusiasm for almost anything is better than dreary, dead level aimlessness. Better even that hope of enthusiasm that leaps over the bounds of cautious prudence than to have it replaced by cynicism.

Railroad Cars by Electricity.

Several of the long distance railways of Massachusetts are preparing to substitute electricity for steam. Edison is not the only one who has devices for this purpose. James A. Lakin, the man who perfected the long distance telephone, and a member of the legislative committee on railroads, predicts that in a year railroads in Massachusetts will be operated exclusively by electricity.

The current will be taken from the rails in the system projected for Massachusetts. The supplying power will come from relay stations along the routes. A curious incident of the discussion about electricity for propelling rail cars occurred when Mr. Lakin met the interstate railway commission, which reminds one of the question asked George Stevenson by a member of the royal commission to investigate railroads: "What would you do if a cow should get on the track?" One of our interstate commission asked Mr. Lakin how an engine could whistle without steam. "Do you have to have steam in the mouth when you whistle!" immediately asked Mr. Lakin in reply. The advantages arising from the absence of dust steam and smoke in a railway train can not be estimated.

Dangling Bachelors.

The lot of the wealthy, not yet old bachelor who hangs upon the edge of fashionable society has hitherto been regarded as a most enviable one. With no wife of his own to require his attention or to become jealous, the fashionable bachelor has been quite free to bestow his attentions on other men's wives, roaming from flower to flower in the wedded garden like the gay butterfly he is. No marriage for him, when he could flirt to his heart's content with ladies who were married to other men. If he bestowed such devoted attention on single women, immediately there would begin to be expectations raised and he would be looked to to explain in a serious manner what he meant by hanging around in that one.

But in the case of the married woman it was perfectly safe. If the husband did not object, or, better yet, did not know of his dangling about the wife the society bachelor was in clover. There was a zest to this pursuit that did not exist in the case of young girls. If the lady was talked about in an unpleasant way, what did it matter? That did not interfere with his pleasure. Now though, it looks as if the gay bachelor's paradise had been entered by the man with a pistol and all his joys have been dispelled. Husbands begin to shoot. How sorry everybody must be for the poor bachelor! There ought to be formed a bachelors' protective association or life insurance society.

THE ARENA OF POLITICS.

Both Parties Making a Vigorous Fight in Rhode Island.

MINNESOTA ENDORSES CLEVELAND.

Its Delegates to the National Convention Instructed to Work and Vote for His Nomination—The Republican National Congressional Committee Announced.

PROVIDENCE, April 1.—Both Republicans and Democrats claim that next Wednesday will give them the victory, and the campaign is being prosecuted in a more energetic manner than has been witnessed in this state since the overturn of the Republicans in 1887. The Democrats are very enthusiastic over the visit of ex-President Cleveland to this city Saturday, and the Republicans, by bringing McKinley and Reed here, evidently are not over confident that their reflection theory has been grasped as faithfully by the voters as would indicate success for Senator Aldrich's aspiration.

Ex-President Cleveland will reach this city Saturday on the 3:15 p. m. express from New York, and will be escorted to the opera house where a rally will be held, and ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio, and Congressman William L. Wilson, of West Virginia, will speak. President Andrews, of Brown, will preside. Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, will speak at Newport tomorrow night.

For the Republicans McKinley will speak at Pawtucket and Reed at Woonsocket. At the latter place the Young Men's Republican club, which is to be held Monday evening. Secretary of the Navy Tracy and Congressman Harrison were to be the special guests. It is announced that William E. Barrett, speaker of the house of representatives, will, with Mr. Reed, address the Republicans at Newport the night before election.

The local Democrats expect to tender a public reception to ex-President Cleveland at the city hall Saturday night. Rallies are also to be held by the party at a dozen different points in the state. Senator Frye, of Maine, speaks in this city tonight.

To Vote and Work for Cleveland.

ST. PAUL, April 1.—Four hundred and fifty of Minnesota's representative Democrats assembled in state convention at Market hall. They elected eighteen delegates to the Chicago convention and instructed them for Cleveland in the following resolution, introduced by Morton S. Wilkinson, of Wells:

Resolved, That the delegates selected by this convention are instructed to vote as a unit for and to engage every manly endeavor to secure the nomination of Grover Cleveland as the candidate of the Democratic party for president of the United States.

The delegates at large are M. Doran, Lesueur; F. B. Morton, Minneapolis; Lewis Baker, St. Paul; Thomas Wilson, Winona. The usual tariff resolution was adopted.

We hold, in accordance with the traditional policy of our party, to the use of both gold and silver and to the sole coinage function of the government is to maintain the relative values of the metals of coinage as established by the commercial world, and if there has been a sufficient fluctuation in the value of either to make the existing ratios unequal then to read just the reverse of the present ratios of either metal in the mint of coinage, the dollar shall be equivalent in value, and then to permit the free, unrestricted coinage of both metals. We join the Democracy of New York in demanding the repeal of the Sherman silver coinage act.

The Republican Committee.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—The joint Republican caucus in the senate chamber was called to order by Representative Henderson. Senator Chilcott was elected as presiding officer and Representative Dalzell, Pennsylvania, as secretary. An arrangement was had by which, on the name of each state was called, its congressional delegation proposed its members on the Republican congressional campaign committee. The following is a list of names handed in: California, Representative Cutting; Delaware, Senator Higgins; Idaho, Representative Street; Illinois, Representative Hitt; Indiana, Representative Johnson; Iowa, Representative Hull; Kansas, Senator Perkins; Kentucky, Representative Wilson; Maine, Representative Boutelle; Michigan, Representative O'Donnell; Montana, Senator Sanders; New Hampshire, Senator Chandler; New York, Representative Ketcham; North Carolina, Representative Cheatham; North Dakota, Representative Johnson; Ohio, Representative Caldwell; Pennsylvania, Representative Wright; South Dakota, Senator Pettigrew; Tennessee, Representative Houk; Vermont, Representative Grout; Washington, Representative Hungate; West Virginia, Representative Haugen; Wyoming, Senator Casey; Oklahoma, Delegate Harvey.

Mill Seaton in Wisconsin.

MADISON, Wis., April 1.—The Democratic county convention met with about 100 delegates present. Resolutions were unanimously adopted indorsing Cleveland and the administration, the support of the nominees of the national Democratic convention, the record of Congressman Bushnell and the rest of the Democratic congressmen who voted against the Bland silver bill, tariff reform, opposition to free coinage, and a candidate for the presidency whose history and character are a platform in themselves.

The election of these delegates and the adoption of these resolutions is a complete victory for the Cleveland men and is considered as the end of the Hill movement in Wisconsin.

In Favor of Cleveland.

MEDIA, Pa., April 1.—At the Delaware county Democratic convention O. B. Dickerson, Jr., was elected chairman. The state delegates elected are J. Frank Beatty, Martin J. Dwyer, James A. Farnan, William H. Hall and Charles W. Haws. Grover Cleveland was the unanimous choice for president. The state administration was indorsed.

Reed Goes to Rhode Island.

NEW YORK, April 1.—Congressman Thomas B. Reed came here from Washington, and with Governor McKinley started for Rhode Island. Mr. Reed said he was going there to speak upon the issues in the present contest in that state, and would probably make his first speech in Providence Saturday night.

Venuvius Getting Ugly.

NAPLES, April 1.—The people are again in dread of an eruption of Vesuvius. The flow of lava is redder than usual, and other signs indicate danger.

MORGAN'S SILVER BOMB

The Senate Startled by His Resolution and Pointed Speech.

HE WANTS EVERYBODY ON RECORD

Be the Country May Know If Senators on Either Side Furnish Shadows of Presidential Candidates to Come Between Duty to the People and Their Votes.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—Senator Morgan, of Alabama, created a sensation in the senate by introducing resolutions calling upon the senate finance committee for information relative to the effect of the present silver act upon the price of silver bullion.

He took occasion to say that his main object in introducing the resolution was to force a full and free discussion on the silver question to ascertain whether there were senators who permitted the shadows of coming heroes in the presidential contest to come between them and their vote on what he considered a question of vital importance to the welfare of this country.

He said he was immaterial to him whether Harrison was to be the candidate of the Republicans or Cleveland or somebody else is to be the nominee of the Democratic party. "We have," he said, "several gentlemen on this side of the chamber who profess to be in favor of the act of 1890, but when asked to vote on the question say, 'Let us not consider that matter now in the face of the coming presidential election. It might interfere with the prospects of certain gentlemen with presidential aspirations.'"

John Sherman said he had no objection to going into a discussion of the silver question, but he criticised as impractical the resolution of the senator from Alabama.

If the senator only introduced these resolutions as a basis of discussion, it seemed to him (Mr. Sherman) better to let the committee make the investigation and present the facts before he proceeded to discuss them. He (Mr. Sherman) had no doubt the committee on finance would gravely discuss the questions presented; there were several of them which deserved to be discussed.

Sherman Suggests a Specific.

He suggested that if there was any such disturbance as represented by the senator from Alabama it ought to be remedied by a specific measure—by the passage of an act over or something else. It could not be reached by a debating school. When the senate was prepared to discuss this measure let it do so on some specific measure, not on mere theories. If the silver question was to be forced upon the senate let it be upon some business principle and not upon a series of resolutions invited by every variety of fact, theory and speculation.

Mr. Morgan said if the senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman) was ready now to take the resolutions as adopted he hoped he would be quite as ready after he (Mr. Morgan) and others had had the opportunity to express their views upon them. He should, of course, expect the senator to vote for them then, and was much gratified at the situation, trusting also that the senator would also be ready to join in bringing in his report, and recommending specific action upon them. The silver question was now before them in certain shapes, and when the senator of Nevada's motion to call up his free coinage bill on Monday under the five minute rule, that senators would have to vote in dumb show. He wanted to see on the Democratic side of the chamber who were looming up as presidential candidates from whom it was desired to secure expression of their views on this subject.

Wants Everybody on Record.

Mr. Teller—And some on our side, too. (Laughter).

Mr. Morgan—And some on your side, too. He (Mr. Morgan) would not accuse the senator from Ohio (Sherman) of being one because he had withdrawn from the contest, and to the honor of the country, as he (Mr. Morgan) thought. It was urged that to discuss this silver question now might hurt the party in November. Mr. Hawley, of Connecticut, asked which party.

Mr. Morgan—Your party.

Mr. Hawley—Not a bit.

Mr. Morgan said at any rate he did not wish this matter to be disposed of under cover. He wanted to give everybody the opportunity to say whether he was in favor of the free coinage of silver or against it on its merits.

Mr. Sherman said he senator from Alabama if he wanted to find out the views of the Democratic senators, why did he not take their votes in a Democratic caucus.

Mr. Morgan replied: Because votes in Democratic caucuses always had a bearing more or less direct upon party claims and nominations, while votes in this body were not subject to such influences. The result of silver legislation up to date was to force a protracted silver debate. All the senatorial aspirants for the presidency on both sides were pressed during the last session.

The senator's renewed consideration of the Indian appropriation bill. The committee's amendment to strike out the provision imposed by the house prohibiting the appointment in future of army officers to act as Indian agents was lost—29 to 34. The provision was retained in the bill as amended by Mr. Hawley, giving the president discretionary power to appoint a civil man when he thought it desirable. The rest of the bill was read and passed without objection.

The house continued the discussion of free wool, the following members speaking in favor of the measure: Mr. Wheeler, of Alabama, Stockdale of Mississippi, Johnson of Ohio, Yeomans of Michigan, Stout of Michigan, Whitegroot of Vermont, and Breckinridge of Pennsylvania opposed the bill.

The Motion Vitoed! Restored.

WASHINGTON, April 1.—President Harrison abandoned his contemplated ducking trip in order to personally conduct the negotiations for a renewal of the modus vivendi, having brought the matter to a point where it seemed probable that an early agreement would be made. He has been busily engaged most of the day upon this subject. There have been a number of written correspondence between the governments. The negotiations are proceeding wholly by personal interviews, and the president's confidence that an agreement will be speedily reached is believed to be well founded.

TWO WOMEN BRUTALLY MURDERED.

The Man Who Is Believed to Have Done the Deed Is Missing.

HOUSTON, April 1.—Mrs. Anna C. Shaw, an aged lady, and her widowed sister, Mrs. Johnson, were murdered at 201 Prairie street. Mrs. Johnson was a teacher in the public schools. With them lived Walter E. Shaw, son of the former lady, a young lawyer, about thirty-five years of age and disliked. Last night Shaw was at home with the family.

This morning the neighbors who went to visit the ladies found both of them dead on the dining room floor. Mrs. Shaw's throat was cut from ear to ear, while her sister's skull was broken in the back part of the windpipe. In an adjoining room was found the bloody razor with which the tragedy was enacted.

Beside a washbowl filled with bloody water was a half smoked cigarette, with bloody fingerprints upon it.

Young Shaw, the son and nephew, is missing. This morning at 1 o'clock a printer saw a man jump from the San Jacinto bridge into the Buffalo river, and it is supposed that this was Shaw. Dynamite is being used to resurrect the body, while the country is being scoured for traces of Shaw.

The Shaw family is one of the oldest and most respected in Texas. All the doors and the premises had been locked with bloody hands, and all the drawers had been burst open, supposedly for the purpose of robbery.

A Murderer Lynched.

FINDLAY, O., April 1.—Joseph Lytle, the man who killed his wife and two children in a horrible manner, was taken from the county jail by a mob of nearly 1,000. The doors were broken open and Lytle taken to the bridge, about two squares away, and strung up to an iron crosspiece of the bridge. Just as he was being pulled up a shot from a revolver rang on the air and the rope was shot in two, dropping the victim to the ground. He was then hurried to the nearest telegraph pole, where the hanging was completed. Lytle died without a struggle.

FASHIONS

NEW FRENCH HATS.

FOR LADIES AND MEN.

American hatters will smile when informed that the illustration is a photographic representation of the fashionable hat in Paris; so fashionable, in fact, that Parisians may be said to have almost gone mad over it. It is of the following dimensions: Crown, 7-8 in high; brim, 1-4; bell, 1-8 at sides, 3-32 front and rear; brim rounded, 1 7-8 front and rear, 2 1-4 at sides, 1-6 off at quarters; band, 1½ line; binding 8 line, reversed curl, 1-2 line round, heavy roll and pitch. The style is also followed in ladies' hats. It is not improbable that this style may reach here, but if so, it will probably be in modified form. Blocks have been made by several of the larger manufacturers, who have the matter under consideration.

FIGHTING IN VENEZUELA.

A Desperate and Bloody Civil Conflict in Progress.

REBELS LOSE THE FIRST BATTLE.

They Are Badly Defeated and Leave 300 of Their Dead on the Field—The Prisoners Counted and the Newspapers Muzzled by the Government.

PANAMA, via GALVESTON, April 1.—A French steamship which arrived here today brings authentic news of the uprising in Venezuela against President Palacio. The officers say that the country is in an anarchistic condition, and that life and property in the neighborhood of Caracas are in constant peril.

The rumors of a recent battle between President Palacio's troops and the insurgents under General Joaquin Crespo are confirmed. The battle was fought near Caracas and lasted for three hours. At first Crespo's forces were successful and drove the government troops steadily back on the road to the city. Reinforcements for Palacio's army arrived as the retreat was becoming a rout, and the government troops made a stand on the wooded hill. Crespo's troops were outnumbered almost three to one, the government having 7,500 troops to their 3,000.

As They tried to storm the position on the knoll three times, but were driven back with a loss of 300. The government troops then took the offensive, and followed the insurgents, who retreated, leaving 300 dead on the field.

The Revolt Is Spreading.

The insurgents retreated toward eastern Zamora with the intention of joining another insurgent army, which is said to be 6,000 strong. Detachments of the government troops went in pursuit, and several skirmishes took place, in which the revolutionists repeatedly defeated the regulars. The revolution is still spreading, and the insurgent forces are augmented daily. In eastern Zamora the people are taking sides with Crespo and many soldiers have deserted the government.

Crespo, the French officers say, has the reputation of being the best general in Venezuela. He is a brave fighter, but his policy at present is to remain inactive, while his forces are swelled by deserters from Palacio's army and by discontented citizens. Even the most loyal citizens have been rendered restless by the despotic measures to which Palacio has resorted to suppress the rebellion. Spies of the government are everywhere, and hardly a day passes without the arrest of some conspicuous man for utterances supposed to reflect on the government. The prisons are crowded and the newspapers are muzzled.

Large quantities of arms have been landed recently on the coast near Cabello. They are of American make and are known to have been distributed among Crespo's troops. When he shall have recruited and armed his forces sufficiently for a long campaign, Crespo is said to intend to march at once on Valencia, the capital of Carabobo, or upon Caracas.

The Government Determined.

The government is preparing for a desperate defense of both cities. The garrison in each has been doubled and men are at work night and day throwing up earthworks. Extraordinary supplies have been stored in the government buildings in both cities, and the roads have been flanked for a distance of thirty miles with small detachments of soldiers.

The government has an overflowing treasury, and is supplied with an abundance of small arms and a considerable number of cannon. The insurgents have comparatively few field guns.

Both Valencia and Caracas are already governed as if in a state of siege. Spies are in every place of public resort and have made their way into many private households. Arrests are made without apparent cause, and men are held prisoners without examination or trial.

Conspicuous men not in full sympathy with the government are in danger to go alone in the streets at night. Many are being seized and locked up on false charges. Many have left the city to escape such a fate, after having been warned that the government spies were watching them.

The French officers say that the cause of the revolutionists is the popular one, and that in case of two or three victories for Crespo the great majority of the people would throw off the semblance of loyalty and join their fortunes with his. The government has more money and better drilled troops than the revolutionists, and the issue of the conflict is therefore uncertain. At all events, they say, the struggle will be a long one.

The first train over the high bridge just completed over the Pecos canyon, Tex., which is 320 feet high and 2,180 feet long, comprised five coaches, bearing C. P. Huntington and a distinguished party of other Southern Pacific officers and other guests from Mexico.

The jury in the case of Mayor Gleason, of Long Island City, who has been on trial in the Queens county court of sessions for the past six days charged with assault on Alfred Nelson at a meeting of the board of health on June 30, returned a verdict of not guilty.

DAVID R. PAIGE IN HIDING.

The Embarrassed Ex-Congressman Believed to Have Fled to Europe.

CLEVELAND, April 1.—It has just been learned that ex-Congressman David R. Paige is in hiding. Paige was formerly engaged in business at Akron, but has of late been residing in New York. He has not been seen or heard from since Monday night, and telegrams sent to his business address remain unanswered. It is generally supposed here that he has decamped.

An investigation shows that only one Cleveland bank holds any Paige paper, but this is said to be amply secured. A large amount of paper with the name of John Huntington indorsed on it is held by various eastern banks. This indorsement the trustees of Mr. Huntington, who is now in Europe, have denounced fraudulent, basing their announcement on a cablegram from Mr. Huntington to that effect.

It is supposed that Paige sailed for Europe on the steamer Majestic Saturday morning. Paige has been in very hard financial straits owing to the city of New York withholding $800,000 which he claims due him for work on the new aqueduct.

The Silver Shutdown Spreading.

DENVER, April 1.—The closing down movement in the big mines of Colorado continues. A general consternation is now prevalent in all the silver producing sections of the state. The big Lacrantine mine in the Idaho Springs will close down. Henry R. Wolcott, brother of United States Senator Wolcott, said that his company was considering the closing down of the Last Chance at Creede, the heaviest producer in that camp. Judge Bailey B. Morse admits that he is going to close down all of his silver properties in Gilpin county. Other properties are considering the advisability of shutting down.

Chicago's Alleged Boodlers.

CHICAGO, April 1.—It is possible that, with one or two exceptions, the entire work accomplished by the grand jury with regard to the "boodlers" will be undone. The jurors have discovered that in the majority of the cases in which they have returned true bills there is not enough evidence to convict, and several "no bills" will be returned. This is stated on the authority of General Leib, foreman of the grand jury.

Baby Farmers Arrested.

LYNN, Mass., April 1.—Annie B. Fisher and Sarah Bowler, baby farmers, were arrested at Saugus, charged with keeping a baby farm. Six children, whose ages varied from three weeks to eight years, were found at the old and squalid house which the women called home. The finding of the body of a child near the home of the Fishers led to their arrest.

The Doctor Settled.

NEW HAVEN, April 1.—The suit which was begun by David S. Hankinson against Dr. T. B. Flagler for $2,000 damages for alienating the affections of the plaintiff's wife, was settled by the physician paying $1,000. The doctor then left town. Mrs. Hankinson is still in the almshouse under treatment for the morphine habit.

Swept by a Cyclone.

NELSON, Neb., April 1.—A most disastrous cyclone passed through here, ruining everything in its path. Several business blocks were uncofed and about thirty residences completely destroyed. The loss is estimated at $100,000. Five persons were injured seriously but none killed.

Professor Dana's Successor.

NEW HAVEN, April 1.—The successor to the venerable Professor James D. Dana has been appointed by the Yale faculty. He is H. L. Williams, professor of mineralogy at Cornell university. His connection with Yale will begin next fall.

The Withers Stable Sold.

Edward Murphy's Daughter Dead.

THE RALEIGH LAUNCHED.

NORFOLK, April 1.—The navy steel unarmored cruiser Raleigh, sister of the Chicago, now building in the Brooklyn navy yard, was launched at the navy yard. There were 10,000 persons present. Mrs. Haywood, daughter of Governor Holt, of North Carolina, broke a bottle of champagne over the bow of the vessel, amid salutes with cheers, yells, and a chorus of steam whistles, the Raleigh moved slowly into the stream. A long low of logs was in the path of the cruiser, and she crushed into it, cutting it completely in two.

One of the men in charge of the raft had his leg crushed between the timbers. A shed on the roof of which a large crowd had assembled was unable to stand the strain, and gave way with a crash, throwing the occupants into a heap on the ground. Only one man, an artilleryman in the navy yard, was seriously injured, his leg being so badly crushed as to necessitate amputation. Among those on the reviewing stand were Secretary Tracy and Governor Holt and staff.

The Raleigh is to be of 3,000 tons displacement, with twin screws, heavy protective decks, great speed, and heavy batteries of rapid fire guns. She has poop and forecastle decks, with an open gun deck between. Her length on load line is 300 feet, extreme breadth 42 feet and mean draft 18 feet. The Raleigh is to have 10,000 indicated horse power and a speed of nineteen knots. The engines are triple expansion. The main battery consists of one 8-inch and ten 4-inch rapid fire breechloading rifles on center pivot mounts, protected by thick steel shields worked as part of the hull or made fast to the carriage. There are six torpedo tubes, with openings about four feet above the water, worked from the berth deck fixed forward and aft, four of which are training tubes, and are placed at the sides of the forward and after berth decks. The tubes are of the Howell pattern, using gunpowder impulse. The rig is that of a two masted schooner.

THE BARDSLEY DEFALCATION.

PHILADELPHIA, April 1.—The report of the Bardsley investigating committee was presented to the councils committee on finance for action. The document covers sixty pages of printed matter in which the committee goes into an exhaustive review of the Bardsley defalcation, draws its own conclusions from the many features as they arise and closes with a brief recommendation to the councils.

The committee advises the passage of an ordinance regulating city deposits; the increase of the city treasurer's bond to $250,000; that the city controller be required to audit state as well as city funds. A large amount of space is devoted to the part played by Postmaster General Wanamaker in the investigation, but the committee finds that his particular connection stated as follows:

"Your committee would state that nothing in the evidence of their examination shows that Mr. Wanamaker had any dealings with Bardsley or was responsible for the wrecking of the Keystone bank. The name to the city will be diminished by the amount of $100,000, which represents the amount of Bardsley's bond as city treasurer. The possible losses of city funds will be confined to the sum deposited in the Keystone National and Spring Garden National banks at the time they failed, the amount in the former being $437,554 and in the latter $144,000."

A Theater Balcony Gives Way.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 1.—The Cox's Bo Weenie dramatic company attempted to give a performance at the Bijou theater, called "The Defeated Candidates." During the performance the audience began presenting the actors with eggs, carrots and brickbats from the galleries, and in the excitement the first balcony gave way, throwing the occupants on to the lower floor a distance of fifteen feet. Several were injured and taken to the hospital.

Death in a Burning Steamer.

CINCINNATI, April 1.—The steamer Golden Rule caught fire and burned to the water's edge. There were fifty people aboard the vessel. The passengers and crew barely escaped with their lives. Several of them jumped into the water, but all were rescued with the exception of Miss Nettie Maloney, Mate Riley and a deckhand, who were drowned.

The New York Central Robbed.

NEW YORK, April 1.—A delivery clerk, cooper and truck driver employed by the New York Central and Hudson River Railroad company are charged with systematically robbing the company of goods in transit, their robberies aggregating thousands of dollars.

Desperado Ford Captured.

CHARLESTON, April 1.—Deputy Sheriff Howard captured Ford, the murderer, who escaped from Mississippi while under sentence of death. He is supposed to be a brother of the man he slayed. He has killed eight white men and several negroes.

CONCERNING BRIDES.

WHAT IT IS THAT ENABLES ONE TO ALWAYS PICK THEM OUT,

Interesting Objects of Unobtrusive Observations While Traveling—There Is Something About a Newly Married Woman That Gives Her Away.

Brides are always interesting. From the beginning of the preparations for the eventful occasions to the closing of the honeymoon trips they are, be they bashful or homely, subject to a series of attentions, observations and comments beyond their knowledge.

Almost every woman who has not been a Lizzie Hopps to be, and almost every man who has not enjoyed the felicity of the honeymoon anticipates that happiness. It is easy, therefore, to account for the attention that brides attract. But while unseemly and obtrusive attentions are objectionable, casual observations and a pardonable display of curiosity are not to be considered rude, either to the brides or to others. That, at least, was the spirit that pervaded a small group on board a Grand steamer one evening when, other topics having been exhausted, the appearance and behavior of brides started conversation anew.

The air was too brisk for comfort outside, and the group had settled into comfortable lounges and chairs in the saloon, where the rest of the passengers could be observed.

"There's a bride," somebody remarked after a couple had passed by.

"Nonsense!" a young married woman exclaimed. "She's older than I. Why do you think she is? She doesn't look like one."

"But I know she is."

"How can you tell?"

"Oh! That's different."

For more than an hour the group sought to number, by appearance only, the brides on board. The room was well filled, and enough couples passed by, or could be seen, to put discrimination to a severe test. The women's observations were of course first directed to fellows, and by some method incomprehensible to the men they soon determined that certain young women had passed beyond the honeymoon period, having those who might be brides for more careful consideration.

"Isn't she a bride?" a young husband asked, after a couple that had been seated near by had retired. "She has a new traveling dress."

"She has a new dress, but she is not a bride," a matron answered. "She has not been married a great while, but then is not her honeymoon trip. Did you notice that her front hair looked curl? Would a bride be so negligent? Did you notice that she did most of the talking? She introduced and continued the conversation, while her husband's eyes sought objects elsewhere. Did you notice that he was utterly indifferent to the resting of her arm on his knee when she leaned forward to watch the expression on his face after one of her remarks? That denoted a familiarity that few brides would have exhibited. She has an affectionate nature and a vivacious manner, while he is less demonstrative. He is beyond the period of the honeymoon, although his wife does not recognize it. He is very gentle and obliging, but his ardor has cooled, while she, being away from home for awhile, is living over again to some extent the honeymoons of a few years ago. That, of course, is my opinion after seeing them for only a few minutes."

The reappearance of the couple known to be newly married attracted more than usual attention. The bride was very plain, and might, without exaggeration, be described as homely. Her dress was of cheap material and evidently home made, but that was of a pretty style, being a combination of old frocks and new trimmings arranged according to original ideas. Her ornaments were few and cheap, but the general effect of her appearance was that of neatness and a regard for economy. Her slight figure was a striking contrast to that of the groom, who was a well-made young man with a big frame, large hands and feet, dressed in an ordinary suit of black. They found seats near a cluster of lights, and were soon interested in a collection of photographs they carried.

"They are returning to their new home," the matron remarked. "They have not been very far, because they cannot afford it. They have known each other for a long while, I should judge, and both have had to work for a living. She is more intelligent than he, and she is probably the considered rule

THE BOROUGH COUNCIL.

ORGANIZED LAST EVENING WHEN THE FIRST MEETING WAS HELD.

Retiring Mayor Place Introduces Mayor-Elect Saunders—The Mayor's Remarks—The Committees—Borough Officers Elected—The Clerk's Salary Increased to $250—Other Business.

The Borough Council met in regular session last evening and organized. Ex-Mayor Place called the meeting to order. He then administered the oath of office to Mayor Saunders. In introducing him to the members of the Council he said "I hope you will treat him with the same courtesy as you have shown me."

COMMUNICATION FROM THE MAYOR.

April 1, 1892.

Gentlemen of the Council:

I have, for one year past, viewed the affairs of this borough from the stand point of a citizen and taxpayer, and as an humble citizen with a full share of taxes to pay in my privilege as well as my duty to call your attention to the existence of improvements pointing to public interest.

Our citizens have placed upon your shoulders and upon the shoulders of the Mayor, the duties that belong to the management of this borough. It is not necessary for me to say to you, each and every one, that we serve merely as vigilant watchmen, to see that the public funds are properly expended and that the public business is conducted. It is our duty to do all in our power to advance public interest. After giving our first thought to the health and protection of our people, it is our duty to their property by encouraging such public improvements as will not unnecessarily add to the burdens of the taxpayers, but will add to the number of our citizens.

We need no suggestion for transit, to such an extent that it becomes our duty to provide them, I am unconditionally in favor of a system, either overhead or by the ground cable, trolley or compressed air. The sacrifice which we are called upon to make in a street car franchise is given is small when compared with the great advantages. We give up a portion of our streets and in doing so we should require the traction company to keep the main part of the street in good condition. This might reduce rather than increase the cost of keeping the streets in order.

Our friends across the brook have taken action on the street car subject, and we are informed that the tracks are soon to be laid. We should take steps to extend their system, as provided for in a good one. I believe it has been decided that the trolley will be introduced, although I am somewhat inclined to favor the use of compressed air stored in tanks under the seats for propelling the cars. This may mind there is nothing the matter with the trolley. It is vastly superior to horses or a cable. In rapid transition throughout the country is itself an evidence of its utility. It has advanced so far that there is really nothing experimental about it. Our streets are well adapted for a trolley system because it does not, of itself, require the use of the poles to be placed in the streets, but at the curb line where there is room. In fact, it goes without saying that a good system of street cars will be a benefit to the borough: it will increase the population and improve our property; it will increase the value of property in the suburbs; our churches, our schools and the places of amusement, and in doing all this it brings no burden upon the tax-payers.

Next in importance for your consideration is the question of improving streets. I am inclined to the opinion that it will be well to adopt a general plan, which will provide for macadamizing every street in the borough on which the property owners petition for the same. The experience in view of what has already been done it does not seem to me likely that this will involve any burden, but on the contrary, that the result will be not benefitted by the improvements will be called upon to pay the interest thereon, and the return through an increased number of buildings and improved property will equalize in taxes the sum taken from the borough treasury. It has been charged that there are certain streets in the Borough which are at times in such condition that fire engines and heavy trucks cannot travel. If this be true, and if there are any buildings adjacent to these streets, it becomes your duty to see they are properly put in position.

As to sidewalks, the question seems to have been settled during the past year, for this has been accomplished. The Committee on Streets and Sidewalks, which has been recently submitted to the Council, admit that they have only had "moderate success." I can do no better than to refer you to the words of their report, and recommend it not only for your consideration, but your action:

"We do most earnestly recommend, in view of the urgent necessity of better walks in the borough, that the subject be kept well alive during the coming year and that the Council will, as far as possible, take steps that will cause a substantial improvement in this respect."

You are perhaps aware that a committee was appointed some weeks since by the Plainfield Council to investigate and report upon the question of sewerage. I know that the man on that committee upon whom devolved the duty of making this investigation is eminently fitted to find out what has been done in other places, and to do it the wisely and temperately. Mr. George H. Frost, through his large experience and acquaintance among engineers, will be able to give a able review of the subject which will be submitted in a report to the Council next year. Yet this I do not share the belief held by some, that our improvements are in advance of us, and that we are able to be overtaken by an epidemic. I believe that the conditions are such that as much as in fact as the best sewerage system that can be applied. We have been here favored with advantages as in cleaning safely for this system, and since we have been connected with a water front for street mains, there is no reason to doubt that we will be sure against any epidemic of all of its kind. But we cannot make everybody think as we do. The people of a city of a proper size it is very difficult for us to convince a stranger that our gravel soil is all that we claim for it. We cannot always see the water in our wells, even when it is there. We cannot always see the sewerage, and we cannot always see the filth in the air. A good sewerage must be native as well as one, and in this, as in all other matters, we must profit from the duties of others with that same skill, vigilance and energy that has characterized success in ordinary business pursuits.

Respectfully submitted, Mayor.

At the conclusion of his address Mayor Saunders swore in the new Councilmen, Messrs. M. L. Connolly and George H. Neal.

R. S. Braider and others petitioned Council to macadamize Manning avenue. The petition was referred to the proper committee when appointed.

R. T. Carrie and others petitioned Council to macadamize Brook avenue. This petition took the same course.

A petition requesting Council to macadamize Park place and Vine street was also referred to the Committee on Streets.

Mr. John Taylor Johnston and others in a petition requested Council to macadamize Mountain avenue and Farragut avenue. The petition was referred to the proper committee when appointed.

The several claims presented were referred to the proper committees when appointed.

Mayor Saunders then appointed the following committees:

AN EX-MAYOR ON LOVE

HOW AN ELOQUENT HONORED CITIZEN REGARDS IT.

Ex-Mayor Randolph's Lecture Before the Y. M. C. A. Last Night—Lovers' Love the "Love that Makes the World Go Round."

In his deeply interesting homily on "Love" ex-Mayor Randolph, in the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thursday evening, in the course of his remarks, said: "Consider in here outline what forms Love has and what various garments she wears, and moods she indulges in! Even among the lower animals, it is interesting to note the fluctuations of fierceness as well as of passion—friendly consideration, appreciation of companionship and affectionate regard, which are more than a mere shadowing forth of the finer qualities of Love as illustrated in the higher nature of man.

We have scarcely room to name, much less to dwell upon, their characteristics and manifestations.

There is the great theme, by itself, for example, of Lovers' Love—a theme upon which more pages have been written and read than upon any other or all others combined. This is the "Love that makes the world go round." Its for its budding and shooting forth, earth would be as full of waste places as any dead plant can be. This love is like the sunbeam—it is creative; it is the expression and the emblem of the creative power which, first moved upon the face of the waters, has always been in motion to prepare a home for man and then to make glad and fill with songs of birds, and brightness of foliage, and sweetness of blue sky the lives of mortals.

"And yet, this Lovers' Love, beautiful and emblematical as it is, is a thing largely of unreason and contradiction. It is less a thing of affinity than of propinquity. It is more a matter of chance than of conscience or consideration. It is a thing largely of absurdity. Nevertheless, it has a large power of causation in the direction of sin and misery, and is, in its outcome the veriest lottery in which one could take a hazard; with its unknowable train of sorrow and unmeasured possibilities of joy.

A Love akin to this—but which is sometimes the successfully ripened fruit of the bud once put forth at hazards, is Conjugal Love. This is a stream of more permanent flow, and deeper and deeper, and capable of yielding better returns to the life through which it flows.

The ideal of Conjugal Love is the perfection of lovers' love. This is the chief support and protection of society. It is the principle which, having the home, make it the center of all beautiful affections, and an inspiration to all who grow up about the hearth stone, or are even permitted for a moment to enjoy its warmth."

There again often lovers are nurtured and give forth their precious aroma. Who shall describe or define the love of a mother for her children? Or who shall point out all the beauty and interest of filial love, or of love fraternal? Surely such a task, however delightful, is too great for me.

Passing now out of the circle of the lovers which have grown out of the Lovers' Love, or have been summoned like the spirits of the vast deep, by this charming necromancy, we find still other beautiful lovers awakening our thought and admiration:

Here is the Love which we call friendship, which is the more deliberate unimpassioned selection by the heart of its responsive affinities—the thought of esteem and the feeling of approval and confidence, second only to, and resulting from the return of a sentiment sometimes more than fraternal. Ah! the world has had a long and successful run in New York to be played at Music Hall April 9, as advertised elsewhere.

—A special meeting of the Plainfield Bicycle Club will be held this evening at half-past seven o'clock. There will also be a gymnasium exhibition.

—Owing to disappointment in securing a speaker from the Five Points Mission, Mr. Chas. B. Brown has kindly consented to speak at Reform Hall to-morrow evening.

—Edsall says he can make it of interest to persons who are about to put on horses to examine his stock of Priestley's black silk warp Mackintoshes and other mourning goods, of which he keeps a good assortment, as elsewhere advertised.

The W. C. T. U. Four o'Clock Meeting

To-morrow afternoon in their new hall, Rink building, on Broadway, promises to be of unusual interest. Several of the ablest city pastors are expected to make brief addresses, after which the meeting will be thrown open for volunteer remarks.

THE PARK CLUB AGAIN.

THE WINNER AT BOWLING WITH THE UNION CO. COUNTRY CLUB.

The Clubs Have Played Two Games, and the Park Club Has Won Both. A Narrow Escape from Defeat—The Score 1,926 to 1,902.

The return game of bowls between the Park Club of North Plainfield and the Union County Country Club of Plainfield was played last evening and won by the Park Club. The allers of the Country Club were used and a large gathering of friends witnessed the game. It was very exciting from one from beginning to end, and this made the sport very exciting.

The Country Club kept ahead until the last player of the Park Club, Mr. Lyman, began, and he managed to bowl eight points more than Mr. Herring, the highest player of the Country Club.

This saved the Park Club from defeat, and made the winners of the only two games these clubs have had since the Park Club got its own alleys. The members are naturally very jubilant.

The following is the score in detail.

PARK CLUB.		UNION COUNTY CLUB.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Making of a Politician.

Thurlow Weed used to say that the greatest politician he had ever known was Abraham Lincoln. He was supreme as much by his intuitive knowledge of men as by anything else.

The first great requisite for a politician was, in Mr. Weed's judgment, exactly this intuitive knowledge of men. The successful politician must read the character and minds of others as an open book. He must in the same way feel, as it were, coming events in the political field and shape his actions accordingly. Then he must have the organizing capacity and the force to impress himself upon men. These qualities are the very ones that will enable a man to succeed in any business, financial, political or otherwise. But the politician must have in addition a personal magnetism which draws people to him. Lack of this mysterious power which attracts his fellow men to an individual causes one to be called a cold man, and has cost many an otherwise able politician the success which he would give some of the best years of his life to attain.

Besides having personal magnetism and the other qualities named, the successful politician must keep his promises to his friends and must never make a promise that he does not intend to keep. Moreover, he must never sulk, no matter how bitterly disappointed he is. "The politician who whines is the one who sooner or later must lose the game," once said Chester A. Arthur. The person who would succeed in politics or elsewhere must never let his personal resentments lead him to do rash or violent things. Hold fast to your nerve and never lose your head. The small man frets and fumes and fusses and shows that he is nervous; the strong man waits calmly and smilingly and keeps his mouth shut till he is ready to open it to some purpose. But the man who shows fear is lost.

Finally, the advice of that wise old gentleman, Simon Cameron, may be commended to the man who desires to make a figure politically: "Make a fortune which will enable you to be independent before you go into politics as a pursuit. Then you can play the game of politics without anxiety, and I tell you it's the finest game in the world."

One Way to Make a Speech.

Suppose you want to tell your audience, "The hasty man was sorry for it all the rest of his life." Say it thus:

The hasty man, the man who was in the habit of yielding to his temper, who gave way to the passion of anger, who was accustomed to let his wrath run away with him—the man, in short, who was subject to fits of rage, and had never learned to control himself, he regretted this deed. He repented the act which was the outcome of passion, he had remorse for that which he had done in the heat of his angry feeling, for the quick feeling of wrath which prompted him to a bad, rash and precipitate action, for the wrong committed in that moment when he was not himself, but was possessed by the spirit of evil; because of this he lamented. In the privacy of his chamber, in the bosom of his family or on the street, in the public highway, before the gaze of all men, where all mankind could behold him, he expressed his regret for the impulsive deed that marred his meditations all the rest of his life, during the remainder of his mortal pilgrimage, while he shared the common lot of existence here below, during all the years that he still tarried on this earthly planet.

There you have it, a fair specimen of the style of speaking of many orators in our time. Chop them off.

A man who barely escaped being buried alive while in a cataleptic trance says he endured agony untold for fear he should be buried alive, since he was entirely conscious. He believes if at any time a gun had been fired in the room where he lay the spell on him would have been broken. There may be a useful suggestion here.

Frances Willard tells the toughest intemperance story yet put on record. She says that a Chicago drunkard starved and abused his wife so that she died. Then he took her body and sold it to a medical college and with the proceeds of the sale went on a howling, long continued spree.

In a bill introduced into the New York legislature in the interest of good roads, provision is made for the employment on the public highways of prisoners, penitentiary convicts and tramps. These, however, are not to be let out on contracts, but are to be directly employed by state road commissioners.

It is to be feared that by the time the high dignitaries of Europe and the United States finish their arbitration on the subject of the Behring sea seals there will be no more seals left to protect. That is the trouble about diplomacy and arbitration.

The wicked editor of the St. Louis Globe-Democrat remarks: "Canada would be a nauseating dose for the Americans, but if she makes any more trouble for us we may be compelled to swallow her."

DEATH IN FIERCE GALES

MUCH HAVOC WROUGHT IN CHICAGO

A Number of Buildings, Including a Seven Story Structure, Demolished and Several People Killed and Injured—Towns in Kansas and Nebraska Wiped Out.

CHICAGO, April 2.—A terrific wind and thunder storm passed over this city, wrecking buildings and demolishing outhouses and prostrating telegraph wires. The severe story brick building at 14 and 16 Pearce street, on the west side, was struck by the wind and crushed like an egg shell. The building was surrounded by one and two story frame and brick buildings, the homes of laboring men, which were also wrecked, killing and injuring the occupants.

The following is a complete list of the dead: Mrs. Eliza Allen, Mrs. J. L. Gowan, William Gowan, Mary Gowan, 12 years old; David L. Hewlett, eight months old; Edward Mott, two years old; Horace Mott, five years old; Mary Walsh, twenty years old.

The injured are James Gowan, eighty years old; leg broken and hurt internally. Alice Hewlett, eight years old; cannot live. Mrs. Ada Keown; will die. James Mott, mortally injured. Mrs. James Mott; also fatally hurt. Jane Mott, twelve years; spine injured; may die. Minnie Mott, ten years old; seriously wounded. Horace Wygandt; will die. Mary Wygandt, wife of Horace; will die. Horace Wygandt, infant; will die. Mrs. Ellen Gleason; slightly injured. Mrs. Kate O'Shaunessy; slightly cut. Mark Seavery; cut about head. Several of Mr. Seavery's family were slightly injured. Mrs. Frank Gillenney; slightly hurt. Harry Wascoe; arm cut. Jacob Jacques; cut about head and arms. Henry Johnson; cut on head and left leg.

Many other houses were demolished and telegraph wires are strewn in every direction. It is not yet known how many other people were killed or injured.

Eight Other Buildings Down.

Eight other buildings were blown down during the storm. A frame flat building in process of erection on Adams avenue, between Seventy-fourth and Seventy-fifth streets, collapsed, seriously injuring four workmen. Three names are Charles Brockson, contractor, hurt about head and injured internally; Charles Benson, carpenter, leg crushed; Henry Wicklift, plumber, seriously hurt in back; John Ladd, helper, collar bone and left arm broken. At the corner of Sixty-fourth street and Champlain avenue an unfinished three-flat building went down before the storm. Peter Blum had his back broken and will die; Frank Cobb and P. Durkin, carpenters, received serious and possibly fatal wounds. Charles A. Heisler was blown from a scaffolding and received internal injuries that will probably prove fatal.

While passing 192 West Polk street Gus Dich, a German teamster, was struck by a falling tree and injured about the head and shoulders. His chances of recovery are slight. The other structures demolished were unoccupied. Scores of buildings were more or less seriously damaged and many persons received slight injuries. The property damaged will be great, but no estimate of its extent is possible.

NEBRASKA LAID WASTE.

The Town of Nelson Wrecked and Norfolk Badly Damaged.

OMAHA, Neb., April 2.—Nebraska was swept by a cyclone which has left desolation in its wake. The extent of the destruction is not yet known, but reports received show that the thriving town of Nelson, the county seat of Nuckolls county, is in ruins, and many buildings, including two churches, are wrecked at Norfolk.

Reports from other points indicate that the storm swept northeast and eastward from Nelson with great fury, but owing to the telegraph wires being prostrated it is impossible yet definitely to outline the track of the storm. The storm included in its track the town of Edgar and other places in Clay county, continuing on to Norfolk, where it must have traversed two miles of some of the finest country of the state in Nuckolls, Clay, Fillmore, York, Polk, Platte, and Madison counties.

From Clay Center come the reports that a cyclone passed through the center of Clay county. It is reported that at Edgar a number of houses were blown down and the depot wrecked and two railway employes killed.

From Wahoo comes the news that a cyclone struck that place and swept through Sanders county. It did great damage to barns, houses and other small frame buildings, also killing some stock. A farmer, whose name could not be learned, was killed.

At Norfolk it tore down a number of houses and broke many windows. A tent occupied by a family named Palmer was blown away and a little child was seriously injured. The Episcopal church and the residence of C. G. Miller were demolished. Palmer's debris was scattered for two of the Miller children. The Congregational church had the bell and dome blown from it and landed in the street below. The church was otherwise damaged. At the time there was about twenty-five teachers in the building.

At Sutton considerable damage was done. Joseph Needom and his family, including eight children, were in his house when the building was crushed and scattered over the fields, but only a scratch or bruise was inflicted on any one of the family. Messrs. Trollone and Pearson had their barns and houses blown away.

In Omaha the wind played havoc with the wires—all wires west are down. Many small buildings were blown down but no one was injured. It was the worst wind storm visiting Nebraska in years.

KANSAS TORN BY THE GALE.

Towanda Completely Destroyed and Many Lives Reported Lost.

KANSAS CITY, April 2.—A severe storm is raging here and reports from all parts of Kansas and the western Missouri show that the whole section has been swept and been the center of a cyclone. A cyclone passed through the western part of Kansas, destroying the town of Towanda completely and killing four people, wounding sixteen others. The town of Augusta, in Butler county, was greatly damaged and five people are reported dead and fifteen wounded. The wires are all down west of Topeka and it is impossible to get any verification of the reports, but there is no doubt that the storm has been very severe.

From Ottawa, Olathe and Salina come reports of severe winds, which blew down many houses and destroyed much property, injuring several people, but causing no deaths. The wind in Missouri was not so severe as in Kansas, but it has done great damage.

The Chinese Exclusion Laws Developing Complications.

ANOTHER DIPLOMATIC FUSS LIKELY.

The Treasury Officials Annoyed Over the Existing State of Affairs—Queen Makes Answer to Nettleton's Charges—The Silver Battle in the Senate Postponed.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The existing Chinese exclusion laws becomes more and more entangled, to the exasperation of the treasury department people, who are called upon to straighten out the complications which arise daily.

When the authorities decided that Chinese persons not laborers should not enter the United States, even though they were naturalized citizens of the Dominion of Canada, without the certificate exacted of Chinese persons on their original entry into the United States, it was with the expectation that one day the question would be raised as to the right of the United States to rule out citizens of Great Britain. So far as can be learned at the state department, there is nothing in existing treaties with her majesty's government which would involve diplomatic correspondence between Mr. Blaine and Lord Salisbury.

The representative of the Chinese government in this city will be very likely to seize upon this point and draw the English into the controversy, but nothing is expected to result from this alliance. The law against the admission of paupers and convicts from foreign countries is not regarded as a slap against Great Britain or any other nation, and there is very little reason for the assumption that the latest ruling of the treasury department in regard to Chinese who are subjects, so called, of Great Britain is a reflection in any manner upon England.

Another question raised is the right of a Chinese merchant already in this country to import his wife. The case of a merchant in Chicago who has recently returned to the United States with a Chinese woman, whom he represented to be his wife, has been decided to be illegal.

The collector of customs at the port of entry has been instructed to ascertain if the merchant's companion bears the relation to him that is accepted in this country as that existing between a man and his wife before he may pass these two Chinese persons. This is in accordance with a recent ruling of the supreme court, and will hereafter be followed in all similar cases which may arise.

The Behring Sea Case.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—It is learned this afternoon that the protocol which was concluded last night to Lord Salisbury, and which was reported to be President Harrison's response to Salisbury's note of March 26, was Sir Julian Pauncefote's report of the progress of negotiations for a renewal of the modus vivendi, now under way in this city; Immediately after the latter is being arranged in Washington there is, of course, more or less correspondence by cable between Sir Julian Pauncefote and the home office, but there has been no formal response to Lord Salisbury's latest note, and the probabilities are that there will be none. An impression prevails that a satisfactory agreement respecting the modus vivendi is rapidly approaching completion.

The cabinet again considered the Behring sea question at 2 o'clock. Members were present. It is understood that negotiations for a modus vivendi are progressing favorably.

In Senate and House.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The whole day was occupied in the senate by a rehash in detail of the Indian appropriation bill substantially as reported by the committee, amendments suggested being chiefly in the nature of increased appropriations for Indians in particular states. Mr. Morgan announced the postponement of his silver resolutions until Monday.

The debate on the free wool bill was continued in the house. Among those opposing the bill were Messrs. Bynum of Pennsylvania, those favoring it being Mr. McRae, of Arkansas, and Mr. Cox, of Tennessee, while Mr. Watson, of Georgia, spoke for the Farmers' Alliance. The house after recess considered private pension bills.

Queen Answers Nettleton.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—Before the joint committee on immigration Mr. Owen, of the immigration bureau on Ellis Island, read a statement in reply to Secretary Nettleton's charges against him. He testified that he had acted with integrity, and insinuated that Mr. Nettleton, influenced by personal spite, had given immigration act of 1891 had been passed, had done all he could to hamper and hinder the operations of the bureau from the day it was created.

Canal Cleaning Starts.

BUFFALO, April 2.—Superintendent Lillis of the section of the Erie canal is letting out the water in the Black River and lower levels of the canal here for the usual spring cleaning. All the mills on the section from Rome to Brockport are shut down for forty-two miles, dependent on the canal for water power will have to close down for the present month.

The Venezuela Trouble.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—A telegram to the department of state from the United States minister in Venezuela contradicts a report that a battle had been fought between the revolutionary and government forces near Caracas or anywhere in Venezuela. Both parties appear to be preparing for hostilities.

A Sliding Suicide.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., April 2.—Walter Britcher committed suicide by tying one end of a rope to the upper end of the balcony and the other around his neck, then sliding on the stairs the length of the rope.

Extradition with Sweden.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The basis of a new treaty of extradition has been agreed upon between Mr. Blaine and the Swedish minister from Sweden and Norway, and Secretary Blaine.

In Mandalay's Wake.

RANGOON, April 2.—Fort Sinbyugyun has been almost destroyed by fire. The British here feel sure that a conspiracy of the natives against them is on foot.

Traffic at a Standstill.

ST. LOUIS, April 2.—The strike of the firemen, longshoremen and boatmen is still in force and river traffic is at a standstill.

In Honor of the Hoosier Poet.

WASHINGTON, April 2.—The president and Mrs. Harrison gave a reception last night in honor of J. Whitcomb Riley, the Hoosier poet.

IOWA SWEPT BY THE STORM.

The Damage in Des Moines Alone Will Be Not Less Than $150,000.

DES MOINES, April 2.—A terrific tornado prevailed all over Iowa, which was especially destructive to property in the west half of the state. In this city the wind often attained a velocity of 100 miles and more per hour and averaged at the rate of 60 miles per hour for five minutes. Buildings were unroofed, chimneys blown down and fences and light structures destroyed. The loss is too hastily scattered that the aggregate is difficult to estimate but it will not be less than $150,000 in Des Moines.

Three small brick stores on the east side were crushed and the fire walls and roofs damaged on many larger buildings. A falling chimney broke through the roof of the state register building and severely injured the printers working at case. Mrs. H. C. Evans, of Bloomfield, Ia., daughter of General J. B. Weaver, was struck by a piece of plate glass from a crushed window in the house of the latter and badly cut about the face and neck.

At Atlantic Stuart, Atlantic, Guthrie Center, Indianola and other western Iowa towns great damage to property is reported, but no loss of life.

FASHIONS

New Walking Gowns.

HEAT AND FASHIONABLE.

The first is a graceful gown of lavender-gray sheep's wool, very prettily arranged in the prevailing Princess fashion. The bodice fastens at the back, the white of the long vest and the non-fastening velvet, white the cloth is taken up over it in straps, showing three points of velvet back and front. The velvet sleeves are full from the shoulder to the elbow, and then quite tight fitting to the wrist.

The other is a very useful gown for early spring, made in one of the rough, hairy tweeds which promises to be so fashionable this season, brightened with a twisted thread of silk. It is made with a double-breasted Newmarket coat, and a good umbrella skirt.

For Commencement Dresses.

Rainbow ribbons of white moire, striped with satin stripes of color, and plaids are used for girdles and Watteau bows on other dresses. The Watteau bows made up and ready to be put on the dress are sold at all the large ribbon counters. The favorite width of ribbon for this purpose is about four inches wide, and as fashionable as white for graduates. Watteau bows and girdles of white moire ribbon, tinted roses, will be used on many summer dresses, which are already being made up for fair girl graduates of June.

A Ranging Spectacle.

FAIRBURN, Ga., April 2.—Walter Cook, a negro, was hanged in the jail yard here. Over 10,000 people witnessed the execution. Cook died gamely and expressed belief that he was going straight to heaven.

The Burning of the Golden Rule.

CINCINNATI, April 2.—It is certain now that nine lives were lost by the burning of the steamer Golden Rule. A number of bodies are still missing and the death list may be still greater.

Archbishop Riordan's Loss.

CHICAGO, April 2.—Mrs. Mary Riordan, mother of Archbishop Riordan of San Francisco, and of Father P. J. Riordan, a prominent ecclesiastic of this city, died here.

Killed by an Express Train.

PERRYVILLE, Md., April 2.—Joseph Rayner, a citizen of Battle Swamp, was instantly killed by the Washington and New York limited express.

A Cashier's Suicide.

WAR TALK FOR IRELAND

A DEARY GO TO LOOK FOR HOME RULE

The Unionists Ready to Resort to a Civil Conflict in Case of a Liberal Majority Coming into Power and Passing Laws for Irish Legislative Independence.

LONDON, April 2.—The meager official report given to the press after a private caucus of the Unionists of Ulster gave no idea of the warlike tone of the speakers at that meeting. Knowing that their days are numbered, as belonging to the government majority, and seeing that the Irish parliament is the dominant fact of the near future, these advocates of constitutional order under the Tory regime met to declare civil war in the event of a Liberal majority altering the constitution.

The war drum throbbing throughout the speeches was, however, only faintly heard in the resolutions adopted. The meeting was held at Dawnshine house, the residence of Lord Arthur Hill, comptroller of the Queen's household. All the Ulster members were present except three. Some fiery spirits urged a plain declaration of an immediate resort to arms when Ulster is placed under the Dublin parliament.

The Liberal papers treat the proceedings as humorous, and the prediction of rebellion as mere vaporing. Interviews with several Ulster delegates in the lobby gave the impression of an intense hostility to home rule even keener than at the time when the movement was organized. Money was partly subscribed to arm 200,000 men, and Colonel Saunderson boasted that he would respond to the call for a revolt.

Churchill Thinks Ulster Will Fight.

As shrewd an observer as Lord Randolph Churchill still professes to believe that Ulster will fight, but no fear of this nature will in the slightest deter or alter the Liberal policy.

In the meantime the Ulsterites' plan of campaign will be a vigorous agitation in Ireland and Great Britain, working up the constituencies to believe in their menace.

Although the Nationalist Irish members consider the matter only a subject for derision Mr. Sexton last night called Mr. Balfour's attention to the fact that a crown minister, the comptroller of the queen's household, proposed a resolution inciting a section of the Irish to disorder. Mr. Balfour declined to commit himself by any statement in reply.

Mr. Balfour's reticent responses in regard to the date of the dissolution of parliament has involved several important questions. The Liberals were anxious to settle whether the election would take place on the voters' register of 1891 or that of 1892. Mr. Gladstone claimed that if dissolution occurred in the autumn a special bill ought to be introduced bringing the new register into operation then.

Mr. Balfour fenced the demand. Unable to refute Mr. Gladstone, he simply asserted that the crown had full discretion to deal with the matter. His response put the opposition in a bad temper, and they united against every vote of supply, especially attacking the estimates for the royal palaces.

Mr. Morton sarcastically protested against the vote for the Buckingham palace rat catcher. Mr. Labouchere advised that the rat catcher be brought to parliament where he could catch something, and he wanted Kensington palace to be used as an art gallery and Hampton court as a public preserve. The government members maintained discreet silence, carrying the votes with the usual majorities.

More Laborers for Dr. Webb.

BUFFALO, April 2.—Notwithstanding the declarations of brutal treatment of the employes of the Adirondack railroad, Contractor McGregor has succeeded in obtaining fifty-one recruits in this city and shipped them to the wilderness. The gang was composed mostly of foreigners. McGregor claims that the stories circulated about the railroad contractors and bosses were all false and said it was as nice a place to work in as any railroad camp could be.

AFTER M'KEON'S MILLIONS.

WASHINGTON, Pa., April 2.—John McKeon died on Feb. 5, 1891, and left an estate worth millions to his wife, Mrs. Sarah McKeon, and his five children.

It is now claimed that before his marriage to Mrs. Sarah McKeon he had been married, in Ireland to a woman named Catherine McGinn, whom he left behind when he came to this country and from whom he had not been divorced when he married the wife to whom he left his fortune.

This claim is made by a man in Ireland, who says he is Arthur McKeon, a brother of the deceased millionaire. He says that Catherine McGinn came to America some time after her husband, and that he does not now know where she is. He proposes to contest the will, however, and, he put his case in the hands of Lawyer Watterson, of Pittsburg.

A Mysterious Explosion.

NEW YORK, April 2.—A can of gunpowder exploded early this morning in front of 46 Willow street, Brooklyn, in the most fashionable quarter of the city. The windows on both sides of the street were shattered and the sound of the explosion was heard for miles. Among those who live in the neighborhood are Rev. Lyman Abbott, ex-Mayor David B. Whitney and General Horatio King. They and their families were a good deal alarmed. Those who reached the sidewalk after the explosion occurred saw two men running away and the remnants of a burning fuse lying near the curbstone in the gutter. Nobody was hurt so far as known.

Her Heart Dead to Love.

MEMPHIS, April 2.—Miss Cora Moore, a very handsome young woman, was found drowned in the bayou. Letters found at the girl's lodgings show it to be a case of suicide, committed while the girl was temporarily insane. The young woman was to have been married shortly. A friend named Mrs. McGinn, so it appears from the letters, called on her a few days ago and told her such horrible things about married life that from that moment "her heart was dead to love."

GOOD HEALTH

COMMON EMERGENCIES.

A physician gives in Popular Science News some suggestions as to what people should do in the smaller surgical emergencies constantly arising in the domestic circle, when a surgeon is not thought necessary or cannot be quickly enough reached. He says: "When minute bleeding points—such as sometimes occur upon the face after the use of the razor—are neither checked spontaneously nor by the usual means, a drop of tincture of iron, applied on a pledget of cotton or the end of a match, will at once put an end to the bleeding. Sometimes obstinate and even alarming hemorrhage follows the extraction of a tooth. In such a case a bit of cotton saturated with alum solution or sprinkled with alum powder and applied to the cavity will usually work admirably; but should these means fail to afford relief, a pledget of cotton saturated with tincture of iron and pressed into the cavity will promptly and surely stop the flow, unless the case be a rare and exceptional one.

"Epistaxis, or bleeding from the nose, is a common—though seldom serious—form of hemorrhage. It is usually checked spontaneously, or by such simple means as bathing the face and nasal cavities with cold water. Sometimes, however, when more persistent, some styptic application may be needed. Alum water or a solution of tannic acid may be snuffed up the nose from the palm of the hand, or some powdered styptic may be blown into the nasal cavities by means of a quill, roll of paper or other tube. A wad of cotton pushed into the bleeding side will often suffice to check the flow. But the most unique, simple and efficient way to check an obstinate nasal hemorrhage is by pressing an ordinary clothespin firmly over the cartilaginous portion of the nose, from above downward, and thus, by occluding the anterior nares, nearly prevent all further bleeding from that quarter."

Should the Grip Be Fed or Starved?

Sir H. Tyler, an English authority, says that the prevalent notion appears at present to be that the influenza being of a depressing character it is necessary to administer stimulants in the form of wine and spirits, and invalid food of a highly nutritive nature, and patients are recommended—as many will have observed—to persist in these "sustaining" beverages even when they feel nature rebelling against them, and when they do not find benefit, but rather the contrary, from them. He states that this notion of combatting a depressing complaint by the exhibition of stimulating remedies was especially advocated in a recent article by an eminent physician, but it would certainly appear to have led to much aggravation and numerous fatal results. On the other hand, attacks of influenza, heralded by the most distressing symptoms, have rapidly subsided under simple dieting and low diet, and the patients have been up and at work again in three or four days without any after effects of an injurious character.

Treatment for Persistent Dandruff.

The following treatment is reported by a physician to have given him good results in persistent dandruff: The scalp should first be thoroughly washed with soap and hot water and then carefully dried with a coarse and soft cloth. There should then be rubbed into the scalp a glycerin of tannic, of the strength of ten to thirty grains to the ounce. Very obstinate cases will require the higher strength of tannin. This process should be repeated twice a week at first, once a week afterward. If tannic fails, as it will in some cases, then resort is had to resorcin. After the formation of dandruff has ceased the head should be rubbed daily with olive oil, bandaged so that the cotton ten grains of carbolic acid and a dram of oil of cinnamon.

ETIQUETTE

ENGLISH GOOD FORM.

The Feather and Fraser Code Which Rules places the Old Social Etiquette.

In England, whether for good or evil, the old code of social etiquette is being superseded by a fresh one which has introduced important modifications. Some think the changes beneficial; others that they have done away much in the courtesy and politeness which gave such added charm to the intercourse of well bred people, which greater latitude and freedom in dress and guests do not replace satisfactorily.

Etiquette proper, as it was understood in the court of Louis XIV, has been transplanted into all others. It was a strict code, founded on reciprocal courtesy and reverence, but it has yielded to a less severe and authoritative one, which bears the same relation to good form, but is elastic, fluctuating, not immovable, but it is subtly imperious, and it expects society to conform to its unwritten rules. Some men of unbroken growth have had, in the last several years' experience, according to a writer in the New York Sun, who notes several dictates of modern English good form as follows:

The question of introducing guests to one another is vexing. Good form has, however, at present settled on reciprocal courtesy and reverence, but it has yielded to a less severe and authoritative one, which bears the same relation to good form, but is elastic, fluctuating, not immovable, but it is subtly imperious, and it expects society to conform to its unwritten rules. Some men of unbroken growth have had, in the last several years' experience, according to a writer in the New York Sun, who notes several dictates of modern English good form as follows:

"Never mind that. What did he do next?"

"Best overcoat I ever had and cost me only"——

"Confine yourself to the facts in the case, if you please."

"Yes, sir. Cost me only thirty-four dollars. They are giving 40 per cent. off for cash. Then he relieved me of my watch. It was a gold hunting case timepiece, full jeweled, stem winder and stem setter"——

"You needn't describe the watch."

"No, sir. I got it of Bombshell & Co., 344 Pulsifer place. Best watch I ever owned and cost me only"——

"All this is immaterial. I want only the facts pertaining to the robbery."

"That's what I'm giving you. Cost me only $16.50, and they've got a whole show case full of them. Then he took my pocketbook, containing twenty-six dollars, all bills, and a deed to a piece of land in Hyde Park, drawn up by"——

"I don't care to hear anything about that."

"No, sir. Drawn up by Mulligatawny, the real estate agent at"——

"Once again, sir, I ask you to confine yourself to the facts of the assault."

"Yes, sir. At 69 Soup alley. Conveyances of all kinds executed promptly and loans negotiated on desirable real estate at the most reasonable rates. Then he left me and ran off without taking my hat, which was an elegant silk one, made by"——

"Hold on! I don't"——

Drawing of a New Industry.

Attorney—Describe as nearly as you can the assault the prisoner made on you.

Witness—He threw his arm about my neck, shutting off my wind. Then he pulled me by overcoat, a heavy, first class garment made by Ratchett & Haycroft, 46 Scully avenue, of the very best material and workmanship——

"Never mind that. What did he do next?"

"Best overcoat I ever had and cost me only"——

"Confine yourself to the facts in the case, if you please."

"Yes, sir. Cost me only thirty-four dollars. They are giving 40 per cent. off for cash. Then he relieved me of my watch. It was a gold hunting case timepiece, full jeweled, stem winder and stem setter"——

"You needn't describe the watch."

"No, sir. I got it of Bombshell & Co., 344 Pulsifer place. Best watch I ever owned and cost me only"——

"All this is immaterial. I want only the facts pertaining to the robbery."

"That's what I'm giving you. Cost me only $16.50, and they've got a whole show case full of them. Then he took my pocketbook, containing twenty-six dollars, all bills, and a deed to a piece of land in Hyde Park, drawn up by"——

"I don't care to hear anything about that."

"No, sir. Drawn up by Mulligatawny, the real estate agent at"——

"Once again, sir, I ask you to confine yourself to the facts of the assault."

"Yes, sir. At 69 Soup alley. Conveyances of all kinds executed promptly and loans negotiated on desirable real estate at the most reasonable rates. Then he left me and ran off without taking my hat, which was an elegant silk one, made by"——

"Hold on! I don't"——

"Made by Ratchett & Haycroft, 46 Scully avenue, of the very best material and workmanship. Cost me only thirty-four dollars. They are giving 40 per cent. off for cash. Then he relieved me of my watch. It was a gold hunting case timepiece, full jeweled, stem winder and stem setter"——

"Your honors I insist that this witness shall"——

"Shall be put in a lunatic asylum, if Hon. Stem Winder, one eight dollars, of the best hangover lunatic asylums, can get up a bill. That's all I know about it."

"Sir! your honor, do you mean to state the money was taken from you by this robbery?" (With visible reluctance) "I'm about $2.30."—Chicago Tribune.

A Sweet Revenge.

"Haven't you got anything solid to eat?" said a traveler, discontentedly eyeing the profusion of pies and small cakes on the counter of a restaurant at one of the way stations.

"Shall I give you some beans?" said the proprietor, with his most persuasive smile.

The traveler assented, and making short work of them, asked, "How much?"

"Twenty-five cents," was the bland response.

"What?" cried the traveler; "twenty-five cents for a spoonful of cold beans?"

The proprietor continuing firm in his price, the traveler paid it and left.

But late that afternoon a telegram was handed to the restaurant keeper, for which he paid twenty-five cents. It ran thus:

Some Hope for Him.

"Don't you know it's wrong to smoke, my boy?" said an elderly looking lady in a railway carriage to a young lad who persisted in puffing a cigarette, much to the old lady's discomfort.

"Oh, I smoke for my health," answered the lad, emitting a volume of smoke from his mouth which almost choked the old lady.

"Oh, yes, I have," declared the boy, as he formed his mouth into a young Vesuvius; "that's the way they cure pigs."

Where He Drew the Line.

Three little negroes created amusement for a car filled with people yesterday. One of them had stolen something from a church and the other two were making much of his downfall.

"You stole it, you know you stole it," said one.

"Dey had no business puttin it there," was the reply.

"But makes no difference."

"Well, you steal too," said the erring brother in a tone meant to settle the discussion.

"I knows I do," said the other, "but I don't steal from no church."—Kansas City Times.

Too Bad.

The other day X——, the Bohemian, on receiving some money from a rich uncle, took it into his head to square off some of his most pressing debts. He first called at his tailor's and heard that the poor man had just died. His widow, in tears, declared to know the visitor's errand.

"I have come to pay my bill," he simply replied.

"Ah!" sobbed out the widow, "if my poor husband had only lived till this morning the shock might have brought him round"—Figaro.

Aunt Lucy's Burglar.

Recreations of the common kind may be guided or by a moment's thought, but when the question is one of receiving a burglar the crowbar are dumb, and the surprised, unwilling host must meet not for the "Aunt Lucy Waite, who lives in a lonely farmhouse on the Falmouth road, near Portland, Me., originated a method that others might very well adopt.

The method presupposes presence of mind, courage and truthfulness, but these exercised, the result should be satisfactory, as the event of a recent night in the story is her brief, brisk, decided way.

"Isaac 'n Ruth 'n the young ones had gone to Waterville to spend Christmas 'n' left me all alone," she said to her little dressed rheumatic. That staid right by me, cause it most generally does. Worried me so 't I went to bed at dark.

"A light in my eyes waked me up sudden, 'long the middle o' the night. They was a big feller, with a cloth over his face, stan'in' just inside the door. I ris up he had, 'n we looked at each other.

"'What ye want?' says I.

"'Where's the silver?' says he.

"'Hish! Th' ain't none,' says I, 'n I laughed. 'He havin silver!'

"Seemed to kind o' discourage him, 'n he moved backwards.

"'Stay,' says I, 'latch the door when ye leave! 'N then I shook up my piller 'n turned over 'n went to sleep.

"'N he didn't take nothin."—Youth's Companion.

BREVITIES.

—A band of gypsies encamped in Hyde's woods last Thursday evening.

—The City Common Council will meet in regular session this evening at eight o'clock.

—Entertainment at the Boys' club this evening. All boys and their friends are invited to attend.

—The regular business meeting of the "Y" will be held in their rooms, corner Broadway and North avenue, to-morrow afternoon at four o'clock.

—Hyacinths, wild flowers which grow on the mountains, are out in abundance. A large number of them were gathered yesterday by persons who visited the mountains.

—Anthony Shoder, district deputy grandmaster of the 8th Masonic District, will hold a lodge of instruction in Masonic Hall, First Broad street, to-morrow evening, at eight o'clock. All Masons are invited.

—This morning dog-Catcher Frisby caught a dog belonging to Mr. Samuel Miller, of Watchung avenue. The dog-catcher says the dog was unmuzzled. The canine was taken to the pound, but was immediately redeemed by the owner.

—Every person eats on the average 800 lbs. of solid food per annum, drinks 1,500 lbs. of liquids and breathes 800 lbs. of air. The person may not weigh 100 lbs., but nevertheless, to support life, he consumes over 1,000 lbs. of solids, liquids and air every year. It seems a pity to waste so much good material on some of the specimens one sees in the streets. With the atmosphere surrounding the earth fifty miles deep the waste is in this respect after all a trifling matter.

—Of the better class of productions sent from the Lyceum Theatre, none perhaps has obtained such a signal triumph as "The Charity Ball," that charming play of Belasco & DeMille's, which cannot be accurately described as either a drama or a comedy, but which is a happy mixture of both. It is one of those plays one remembers and is very glad to witness again. And the secret of its popularity may be told in a few words—it is a picture of real life, and as such is appreciated to the utmost by its audiences.—Ex.

—The man who introduced the first cancelling machine in use in the New York General Post Office is employed there now, but he has lived to see his machine surpassed. His invention would cancel 4,000 stamps an hour, less than the present average number for a skilled man working by hand. Then came the other machines, each a little faster than its predecessor, were introduced in turn and finally was added the machine that far exceeded the speed of the swiftest hand worker, and it was used until the discovery was made that it sometimes cut through envelopes and damaged their contents. Then the present machine, which cancels 45,000 stamps an hour, was introduced. The five machines in use at the General Post Office are run by electricity.

—If, as claimed by scientific medical authorities, that there are five diseased persons to every ten sound ones you meet ordinarily, and that much of the disease comes through diseased ancestors, through adulterated food or liquid, and impure air of the over-crowded localities, or thickly populated cities, Plainfield in one respect at any rate of pure air, has a blessing that cannot be too highly prized. If next to the we have water so remarkably free from impurities, it would it appear we have two blessings to be thankful for, and there is very little excuse for having impure food if the people will but intelligent prudence is exercised. If you are so fortunate as to have your home where the air is free to be breathed, where the water is sure to be pure, and your food is wholesome, you have much to make life happy. Good blood makes good dispositions, and people with good dispositions are blessings to any community, as well as a joy unto themselves.

—The beautiful moonlight scene in the third act of "The English Rose," at Proctor's Theatre, in which a real waterfall is introduced, does not affect the water supply of the city in any way. The water is drawn from an entirely independent source. There is a natural spring under the theatre which has caused the management considerable trouble and expense for years, owing to an unpleasant fact that it is needful to pump the cellars from time to time, and Messrs. Proctor & Turner would give a good deal to be able to transfer the water to some part of the town. It is from this source that the water is pumped up to make the waterfall. The theatre managers are congratulating themselves on having at least turned the old enemy to some advantage. The same spring, by the reckless course toward the river, flows under the Grand Opera House, and has already at one time spent over $25,000 in unsuccessful attempts to divert the spring into an other channel than the cellar of the Grand Opera House.

—Elsewhere is an advertisement in which appears a cut of a dress suit. Were that suit published in the days of ancient Judah it would apply to women. It is not generally known that man originally practiced the art of dress in woman by usurping her considerable powers in reforming their costume. This has recently been demonstrated by a young Belgian writer, Miss Webber, who has illustrated dresses worn from first worn by the women of ancient Judah, and that man cannot even support his claim to their invention. Miss Webber also shows that after men had passed laws forbidding women to appear in what they called "male attire," that petticoats were worn by both sexes until the 15th century. Those who visited the lectures of Miss Edwards, the Egyptologist, given in Music Hall a few years ago, will remember that she told a story about a man who signed his wife's name and that she was the head of the family, even commercially. But things have changed.

SHOOTING THROUGH WINDOWS.

The Windows in One Door in Poundrille Shattered.

At about eight o'clock last evening some person, as yet unknown to the police, shot through a window in a store belonging to Michael Watson. It is thought that it was the work of some persons were on a drunken spree.

THE NEW ROOMS DEDICATED.

The dedicatory services of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union new quarters on Broadway yesterday afternoon at four o'clock, were largely attended and were of a very interesting and enthusiastic character.

The Rev. Mr. Fernald made the opening address, which was followed by short stirring remarks by a number of prominent Christian temperance workers in this vicinity from the various churches of the city.

Mr. Moon conducted the singing and sang a solo, which was much appreciated.

The ladies feel very much encouraged with the auspicious opening of their new rooms.

North Plainfield's School to Close.

The North Plainfield Public School is to have no session for four days this week—Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, and the usual Saturday holiday. The reason for this is that on the days named the Institute of Somerset county teachers is to be convened at Somerville. This "Institute" is convened at irregular times, usually about once a year. The object is to bring the teachers together to explain and discuss new educational methods, and the adoption of new books.

The teachers are expected to pay their own expenses while attending the sessions of the Institute, and this always makes considerable inroad into their salaries. They, generally speaking, do not consider this right. Attendance is mandatory, but the teachers usually find the sessions instructive. It is necessary to close the schools throughout each county in which the Institute is being held because of the absence of the teachers. The pupils, of course, don't object to the holidays.

A Rumor that Councilman Ackerman is to Retire.

It is rumored that Councilman Ackerman will tender his resignation at the meeting of Common Council this evening.

He is one of the five Councilmen who composed the minority of last year, because of the treachery of the two Republicans who formed a combine which caused this city so much expense and trouble, as well as involving it in expensive litigation, which might have been more but for the watchfulness and contention of Mr. Ackerman and the four other loyal public officials. Happily the city is rid of the combine now and Mr. Ackerman can retire with the gratitude of the people whom he has so well and faithfully served, whose wishes we are sure will regret to lose his services, should the rumor prove to be a fact.

Base Ball Notes.

The Arlingtons of this city went to Scotch Plains Saturday morning and played a team of that place a game of base ball. The Arlingtons were beaten by a score of 11 to 4. It was a very interesting game up to the fifth inning. The following players on the Arlingtons and Scotch Plains teams:

Is it Sold at Last?

The property known as Washington Rock, situated on the mountain back of Dunellen, has been, it is said, sold at private sale to a company formed in New York. The land was purchased through a New York real estate agency, and it is rumored that the purchasers propose building a hotel on it. It is also said that they propose macadamizing the road leading to the rock.

Some months ago persons have been negotiating for the property for several years past, thinking it a desirable site for a Summer Hotel. The same old story has been going around for two or three years.

The Salvation Army.

The Salvation Army's meeting last night was well attended, every seat in the hall being filled. The captain had secured for yesterday two excellent speakers from their headquarters at New York, to take part in the meetings during the day. Lieutenant Walpole, who was one of the first Salvationist to come to Plainfield, and who was afterwards compelled to leave here for another field, has returned to again take up the work in Plainfield.

Another lieutenant has been added to the corps—Lieutenant Russell of Asbury Park.

A Plainfielder Sees a Man Kill Himself.

Mr. Daniel Crowley, one of the proprietors of the Central Hotel (formerly the post office) says he saw a middle-aged man kill himself by shooting the top of his head off about eleven o'clock this morning, at the corner of Hester street and Bowery, New York. Cause unknown.

An Engine Disabled.

A Central Railroad engine, bound west, drawing an empty coal train, blew out a cylinder head when near the North avenue station at about nine o'clock yesterday. The damage was repaired temporarily and then the engine was taken to the round house at Dunellen. Another engine was substituted and took the train to its destination.

He was an old and respected resident of that place and his death has cast a gloom over a large number of relatives and friends. A widow and daughter and two sons survive him.

Mr. A. B. Dunlap, who has been at Porta Rosas, Florida, for nearly a month, returned last Friday evening, and is now a guest at The Albion, on Park avenue. Mr. Dunlap's pet sport is fishing, and at Port Rasas, the "King of all fish," for sportsmen, the beautiful and gigantic tarpon, is caught. Mr. Dunlap's friend and companion on his fishing trips, Mr. Thomas E. Tripler, of New York, caught the largest tarpon so far this season. It weighed 164 pounds. Mr. Dunlap caught no tarpon, but he did catch quantities of smaller fish, a splendid sample of sunburn and a good stock of health.

It is not generally known that Mr. John Dalziel, of East Sixth street, No. 65, is one of the most skillful wood engravers in the country. The Government has paid him as high as $ve dollars per square inch for his work, and given him all he would do, and 60% of the book illustrations in the recent Century Dictionary, which sells for $60, were made by him. He is in demand with all the leading publishers, including the Scribners, Appletons and Lippincotts, and Dalziel is also an artist of considerable ability, a teacher of art and an author. He has recently published a most excellent book, entitled "Strength and Beauty for Boys and Girls," which ought to be in every home.

Another lieutenant has been added to the corps—Lieutenant Russell of Asbury Park.

SUING FOR NON-SUPPORT.

Harry Gordon on Trial in the City Court To-Day.

The case of the Overseer of the Poor of the city of Plainfield vs. Harry Gordon for non-support of his wife came up for trial in the City Court at ten o'clock this morning. Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh appeared for the city and Borough Counsel Charles A. Reed for the defendant.

Mrs. Gordon testified that she had received support from her husband since July last, that he had on one time given her $200 and promised her more money later on, that she asked him for money in July last and he said he was out of work, that in her opinion $8.50 per week would support her and her child.

Several other witnesses testified, then the lawyers for the plaintiff and defendant summed up.

The case was adjourned until Thursday.

Literary Notes.

"The Civil Service Law: A Defense of its Principles, with Corroborative Evidence from the Works of Many Eminent Americans," is the title of a book written by William Hayward, Esq., and published by Charles T. Dillingham, publisher, 718 and 720 Broadway, New York. Among other matters ably treated are "The Crime of Buying and Selling Offices," "Improved Veiled," "Economical Test," and the "Crime of Business Men Neglecting to Vote." It is a new book and has been so well received that it is now going through a second edition.

The April number of "Romance" contains seventeen complete stories of the highest character and liveliest interest. A remarkable group of famous living writers have among their authors. It is a theory of this periodical that the best work of these writers should be made to contribute to the good of the race, and there is a striking exemplification of this theory in the April issue. The world would be the gainer if much that builds fast, but writing were expunged from literature, but it would be a pity to lose "Povarina", the exquisite fairy tale from his pen which is here given. Here, too, are specimens of the best short story work of Charles Dickens, Guy de Maupassant, Maurice Lefevre, Paul Arene, Erckmann Chatrian, Emilia Pardo Bazan, Grace Ellery Channing, Jessie Benet, Grace Allen and others. A notable feature is the serial story "Catching a Coolie," which describes a thrilling adventure, "Through the Enemy's Lines," by Lieut. J. H. Scott, U. S. R. M. This periodical is issued by the Romance Publishing Company, Lakeside Hall, Aster Place, New York. The price is 25 cents per copy; $2.50 per year.

The April issue of "The Art Interchange" contains many suggestions and designs, both in color and in black and white, that are suitable for the decoration of Easter cards. On the front page of the color supplement shows the head of a sweet little girl in a cowl; the Little Folks' Corner has a study of Moses in bulrushes, and there are several other pictures suitable for Easter cards. Prize Competition No. 1 is for colored Christmas cards, and an entertaining account of the celebrated Julian Hawthorne prize fight in Paris. The Needlework Department has an admirable short lesson on drawing, another on putting on and taking off rubber rings, and a third one also given to embroidery, both in instruction and designs. Art workers in all its branches will find this number of various department has several plans and sketches of attractive interiors, a clever table drawing for a pretty Christmas gift, another, a doorway, decorated with embroidered banner. The motto of "The Art Interchange" is especially rich in its practical matter, and can be commended to all art workers. Price of the April issue, with three colored supplements, 25 cents. For sale by all newsdealers. Published by the Art Interchange Co., 3 Desbrosses street, New York.

A Remedy Wanted.

Plainfield is now afflicted bad with the following song which everybody seems anxious to know and as anxious to get rid of. The music is catchy enough, but looking the words and music are now advertising for a remedy for it. It is as follows:

Te-ra-ra, Boom-de-ay!—Who Wrote It?

I'm a rattling lively song,
Not to be forgot long,
Not too right and not too wrong,
Just the thing to please the throng;
Hear me whistle, hear me sing,
Otrie all think me quite intense,
As to what is innocence
I am rather out of pence.

CHORUS.

Who's my mamma, I don't know,
I say nobody knows me,
Who's my papa, don't know,
You can't most always tell, you know,
But I'm an awful likely boy, I say,
While I'm merry night and day,
I don't give myself a way,
I am Te-ra-ra boom-de-ay.—CHO.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Science has at last invented a worse smell than that from a bad egg. The smell that has added fresh purgatorial experiences to this life is a preparation of sulphide of ammonium, and enough of it to break up a political convention can be carried in a thin glass bulb in the pocket. Science ought to be in better business than inventing this thing. It seems to be an improvement on the Chinese stench balls of warfare.

One of the curious mysteries of psychology will always be the fact of the great contrast between the face and the character of Rev. Charles Spurgeon. His portrait a stranger would naturally take to be that of a bad man, given to all animal pleasures, and without much intellectuality. The character of the man was that of one who is as near being a saint as is often granted to mortals in our time. Socrates, too, had such a face. The greatest teacher and philosopher of the Greeks, whose doctrines remind us constantly of those inculcated in the New Testament, was almost a monster of ugliness in his face. His life was exalted, too, like his teachings, but nothing served to beautify the countenance of the great teacher. It seems a direct contradiction to the dictum of Lavater—"The morally best, the most beautiful."

"Sheeny."

A gentleman, apparently a Jew, writes a paragraph in the New York Sun to explain the real origin and meaning of this word attempting to define which a learned individual got himself into very hot water recently. The writer in The Sun tells us that when an unhappy, green and ignorant Russian Jew in this country is guyed and tormented by street hoodlums he turns in his rage upon his persecutors and utters the exclamation, "Misso mesheeny!" The street hoodlum catches the last part and retorts, "Sheeny, sheeny!" and the word has come in time to be applied to Jews.

The expression misso mesheeny is Hebrew. The word "mesheeny" is simply an adjective meaning different, extraordinary or out of the common. The whole expression is a Hebrew curse, wishing an uncommon, that is to say, a violent, sudden death to one's enemy. So that there is no meaning of any kind in the name "sheeny," reproachful or otherwise. The writer mentioned remarks: "If it proves anything at all, it proves that the Jew can swear in Hebrew as the Christian does in American English."

Where Shall Man Put His Feet?

An Irishman writes a letter to a newspaper modestly asking what is the proper place in which for a man to put his feet. An American criticised the Irishman for standing with his hands in his pockets, remarking severely that an Irishman never knew what to do with his hands anyway. Then, says the Irishman, the American sat down, lit a cigar and lifted his feet upon the table where they reposed to the admiration of their owner.

The Irishman wishes to know whether that is in accordance with American propriety. Why not? There are various favorite places in which the independent American may deposit his pedal extremities. If he be in the street car, especially if it is a rainy day and his boots are muddy, the proper caper is for him to cross his legs and swing one foot far out beyond him in the passageway, so that every woman who passes that way may wipe the mud off with her dress and everybody may trip and stumble. A street car in which men's feet were not wiped by ladies' gowns and stumbled over constantly would make one feel homesick. On the table? Certainly, and every place else where they will sprawl about in the most unsightly manner and in people's way. This is a free country.

There are now colleges enough in the country. Education has been made so cheap that poor but deserving young men and women can get anything in the line of high learning by making just the amount of exertion that is good for them. We have enough libraries to go around, too, and Bibles are so cheap that even a tramp can save his two cent pieces and buy one in a few weeks.

But there is one thing we have not enough of in the United States, and never did have. That is good roads. If any millionaire wishes to immortalize himself and really benefit posterity, let him select the county roads in a region of deserted farms and fix up those highways so that spring mud and summer ruts shall never wipe out or badge them from their beds. With those smooth, hard highways he will build his own road to everlasting fame. He will earn the gratitude of every farmer, milkman and peddler for a hundred years. The system of roads should be named for him—the Brown, Jones, Blenkapp or Largaman road. His name, whatever it might be, would be remembered when that of the founders of our great universities had gone glimmering down into the night of oblivion. Real estate in that county would go up with a boom, and the fame of that millionaire would spread over America by the next day's telegraph. Try it, millionaire.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS

Democrats Urged to Organize for the Campaign.

MINISTER REID IS HOME AGAIN

He Says He Would Not Refuse a New Position for the Presidency and Praises the Administration of Mr. Harrison—Cleveland Confers with Russell.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The following circular by the National Association of Democratic clubs has been made public:

WASHINGTON, April 2, 1892.

About to enter upon a campaign in which the presidency and the house of representatives are immediately at stake, and ultimately the entire control of the general government, which are directed by the executive committee of the National Association of Democratic clubs to urge upon the Democratic people of the Union the necessity of prompt, efficient and generous organization for the impending conflict. If the contest were one for the office alone or for the gratification of the personal ambition of half a dozen leaders, and if the administration to be chosen might be expected merely to "glide through the official routine" of government for the term of its existence, with no impairment of our free institutions, no assault upon the reserved rights of the people, no seizure by taxation of property for profits to be turned over to favored classes, and no restriction of their markets for the benefit of monopolies, it would be a matter of small moment which party might succeed.

But we know only too well that the party in power will not, and by the very law of its existence, cannot regard the limitations of the constitution; that it is irresistibly impelled by its doctrines and traditions from Hamilton to Quay, and by the vast aggregation of private monopolies which it maintains and upholds and by which it is sustained, to break through the confines of the federal charter on every side.

Congress may, under the constitution, tax the people to support their own government. It has, however, just as much right to take their lives or to sell their children into bondage as it has to take a dollar from them for any other purpose. But the Federalist party, purely to create monopolies upon which it may rely for political support, boldly assumes the unpatriotic and forbidden power to lay taxes with no view whatever to public revenue, but with the sole and avowed view to transfer untold millions of money annually from the pockets of the people, who have earned it, to the coffers of the few who are licensed to seize it in virtue of their unconstitutional monopolies.

If this can be done, there is at an end of liberty our federal government is utterly perverted; it is not merely a fraud, but a despotism, and there is nothing left worth a struggle. The power to take and appropriate to others the proceeds of the people's labor is the power to enslave the people. None such can be found in the federal constitution. And the question whether it shall be exercised, though ungranted, and, therefore forbidden, is the question as Mr. Jefferson stated it, "between a limited and an unlimited government, between selfgovernment and corrupt centralization, between the Federalist-Republican and the Democratic parties."

Concerning the Lodge Bill.

The great battle for freedom of elections is the legal congress of the United States—all-dreadful and menacing one—of the dead struggle between the great mass of the people and the united monopolies, fought out with a ruthless political party. The passage of the Lodge federal election bill would have terminated popular representation. It would have insured for an indefinite period the unquestioned supremacy of the monopolists and their political agents; and they would have gone on taxing the people to fill their own pockets, secure in their control of the ballot box and the returns, until overthrown by revolution. The chief newspaper organ of the conspiracy pointed out the plain truth when it declared that the Lodge bill would be the end of all, since it "carried a hundred McKinleys" into its action. Not a Democrat, not a Republican party grasp with one hand the throat of constitutional liberty, while with the other it rifles the people's pockets and transfers a vast aggregate of lawless plunder to its monopolist allies. So the issue stands between us and our liberties. Permit this conspiracy, struck and shattered by the popular indignation in 1890, to retain the presidency, to recover the house, and a Lodge bill as much worse than the last as the McKinley bill was worse than the Morrill tariff, will be enacted to protect the despoilers in perpetual power.

The organization of Democratic clubs all over the country is urged by the circular. The general committee of the National Association of Democratic clubs, consisting of four members from each state and territory, will meet at Chicago on June 21, and the time and place of the national convention and Democratic rally will be determined and the call duly issued. Wherever the Democratic societies of any state shall have formed a state organization, the latter will be entitled to eleven delegates at large in the convention. Democrats are also urged to celebrate in some appropriate manner the birthday of Thomas Jefferson, the founder of the Democratic party.

Minister Reid Talks Politics.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Mr. Whitelaw Reid, United States minister to France, has returned from Paris, accompanied by his wife and two children. His arrival has been looked forward to with much interest in view of the understanding that he had resigned his post.

Mr. Reid had with him the reciprocity and extradition treaties between the United States and France. The obtaining of the signature of M. Ribot, minister of foreign affairs for France, and the attaching of his own to the treaties was the last official act of Mr. Reid. In speaking of the treaties Mr. Reid said:

"The signing of these treaties completes in all but a few details every matter of negotiation pending between the two countries. The reciprocity treaty will doubtless be a benefit to both countries, although the trade in the articles affected by it is not as great as might be supposed. The lifting of the embargo from American pork has created an increase in the quantity exported, although there have been some complaints about the methods of inspection by American shippers."

"What do you think the chances of the success of your party in the next campaign?" he was asked.

"I have always observed that the surest way to put Republicans on their metal is to give them a scare. The revolution in congress at the last election thoroughly aroused them, and I think the Republicans will carry the election this fall."

Mr. Reid said he had seen his name mentioned as a presidential candidate, but thought it more of a mark of friendliness on the part of newspapers than anything else. "I have come home more for the sake of resigning than to seek office," said Mr. Reid. "In case my name should be put forward as a candidate, I need only remark that I am not ambitious of any American great enough to refuse such an honor. I think, however, such a possibility is very remote. I think President Harrison has given the country a clear, wholesome administration, one which intelligent men of either party can indorse. His settlement of various international questions has been wise and statesmanlike, and has given general satisfaction. During his term of office the business interests of the country have not suffered. While I do not think he is adaptability that would render him personally popular, he has conducted his administration by his office head."

The Campaign in Rhode Island.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—The state campaign gets hotter and hotter every minute. People are still talking about the great meetings of Saturday night, when Cleveland and Campbell addressed the Democrats, while McKinley and Reed talked protection to Republicans. Senator Aldrich says: "We are absolutely sure to win. Every vote will be polled. We are thoroughly organized, our people are enthusiastic, they are united as to the importance of the contest, and I cannot believe it possible that the Democrats can win."

This evening the Young Men's Republican club will have a dinner, at which 1,200 people will sit. Secretary of the Navy Tracy, Congressman J. C. Burrows, of Michigan, and Joe Barber will speak. Tuesday night twelve meetings will be held. At these are only thirty-six towns in the state it will be seen that the ground will be well covered.

Governor McKinley has left for Ohio. He has been over every inch of the state, made three and sometimes four speeches a day and everywhere met with enthusiasm.

Before he left he said: "I am thoroughly satisfied as to the result. There has been too much unity in the party, and too much earnestness among the people for anything but victory."

The Democrats Hopeful.

The Democratic leaders say they are firm in their belief, based on the reports which they have received from all parts of the state, that Rhode Island will swing into the Democratic column next Wednesday with a clean majority.

Conservative estimates based on the data taken from previous elections and the canvas of Providence place the majority in this city for Wardwell at 2,000, and Democrats who have made a thorough study of the situation predict a larger majority. Last year Providence gave 8,300 votes for Governor Davis. In this election it is now believed that the city will give between 10,000 and 11,000 votes for the Democratic ticket.

The Democrats have arranged for rallies in the manufacturing village of Georgiaville, in Pascoag, Wakefield, Johnston Valley Falls, East Providence, Warren and in this city. Governor Russell will probably be heard in Providence tonight.

Cleveland and Gray.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 4.—For the first time in many decades the Democracy of this state is divided, and a lively war is now in progress between the Cleveland men and those who wish to see Hon. Isaac P. Gray get the presidential nomination. The trouble began when Hon. J. J. Shanklin, editor of the Evansville Courier and candidate for the nomination for governor, made a speech declaring that 99 per cent. of the party in Indiana preferred Cleveland's nomination.

Cleveland Confers with Russell.

BOSTON, April 4.—Ex-President Cleveland arrived in this city from Providence at 1 p. m. and went directly to the Quincy house, where he was called upon by Mayor Matthews. The mayor and ex-president drove to Governor Russell's residence in Cambridge, where they spent a few hours returning to Boston at 5 o'clock. Mr. Cleveland left for New York by the Fall River line.

THE AMERICAN GIRL.

Her Adaptability to Surroundings Surprises Europeans.

It astonishes Europeans to see the adaptability of the American girl to her surroundings. She makes herself perfectly at home whether it is in London, Paris, or Berlin and when she is in Rome she literally does as the Romans do. At Nice where numerous American families are sojourning, they have a ridiculous custom of holding a battle of "Confetti and Flowers," on the day preceding Ash Wednesday. This battle is raged between the young people who pelt one another with flowers, from carriages as they pass one another and from the balconies. On another day they have a battle of "Confetti," in which thousands of pounds of candy are thrown at one another in the same way. Into all of this the American girl enters with enthusiasm.

AT THE BATTLE OF FLOWERS.

The sketch shows how our girl starts out on the morning of the "battle of flowers." She sits beside her mamma in a carriage with flowers, and her costume is certainly a pretty one. The hat is of tuscan straw, with indigo velvet spots, the trimming being pale blue silk gauze and carmine roses. The corsage is a combination of indigo faille and pale blue crepon, with white silk sleeves so designed, and a plain white woolen bodice pointed and grey gloves. One can understand from this what a stunning effect the whole procession must make, and wonder little that the American captivates all beholders.

BIG FIRE IN NEW ORLEANS

Flames Lick Up $3,500,000 Worth of Property.

THREE FIREMEN FATALLY INJURED

Two Big Conflagrations Rage in the City at the Same Time, and the Fire Department Is Powerless to Check Them—Cotton Goes Up in Smoke.

NEW ORLEANS, April 4.—This city was visited Sunday by two of the worst fires in its history. Eleven blocks of buildings were destroyed, involving a loss of $2,500,000. Both fires were the result of carelessness, and would have been small but for the extreme dryness, which was the result of a long drouth, a high wind and the inadequacy of the fire department. The first and most disastrous of the fires started in the district in which the cotton presses are situated and burned the buildings in the district bounded by Peters, Front, Thalia and Poland streets. A high wind was blowing at the time and the flames spread with appalling rapidity. A cigarette, dropped carelessly, caused the fire, which started in the Fireproof cotton press. Sharpley's cotton press, where 30,000 bales of cotton were stored, was the next to go, and the Orleans compress with 25,000 bales soon followed.

Three Firemen Fatally Injured.

While the firemen were combatting the flames in the Fireproof press the high wall suddenly gave way and Captain Dupree Lieutenant Shaw, and Pipeman Bordeaux were buried in the ruins. All three were seriously and possibly fatally injured. The Independence cotton yards had been engulfed and the fire covered an area of five squares. The Baldwin & Agricultural works and the Louisiana rice mills, four squares distant, were ignited by the masses of burning cotton which filled the air, but after a hard fight both buildings were saved without serious loss.

A panic prevailed in the vicinity of the fire, which was spread across the narrow street, and people living many blocks distant began fleeing for their lives, carrying what few belongings they could gather up in their flames. Sharpley's cotton factory was completely destroyed. The cotton loss is estimated at about 65,000 bales. This would mean a loss of about $2,225,000 in cotton alone. One story of the fire is that it was the work of laborers, who wished to avenge the purchasing of the presses by the trust. The Fireproof press is owned by the trust in the name of Fenner Brothers, managers. The Orleans press is also in the trust in the name of Adam Lorch, manager. The Fireproof press is operated by Boyd & Herrick, who are not in the trust.

Still Another Big Blaze.

In the midst of the fire among the cotton presses an alarm was turned in for a fire in the residence portion of the city in the square bounded by Annunciation, Laurel, Second and Third streets. All of the fire companies left the big cotton fire, and it was some time before some of the engines from the place could be sent to the scene of the new fire. When they eventually reached there ten buildings were already ablaze in flames. Aid was summoned from the other side of the river, the handful of engines in the meantime being powerless to prevent the spread of the flames. Before the fire was finally under control the whole square was in ashes. All around the neighborhood scenes of panic and disorder prevailed, and many persons barely escaped with their lives so rapid was the spread of the flames. Even after residence was wiped out, and the efforts of the firemen seemed to be in vain. Hundreds of people were rendered homeless, and the great majority saved nothing of their effects but the clothes they wore.

Mrs. Valentine caused the blaze by trying to start a fire with coal oil. Explosion followed, and the house was soon in flames. It was reported at the time that two children were killed by the explosion. For half an hour the fire was a perfect terror, but no engines arriving it finally spread to the surrounding buildings, which were all wooden cottages, and in two hours the flames had swept bare an area of six blocks in extent, reaching from Magazine street to Constance crossing. In all 198 houses were destroyed. The loss will approximate $500,000.

The total loss by both fires will be at least $3,000,000. Insurance, $1,500,000. All of the presses destroyed were purchased Saturday by an English syndicate, but the delivery had not yet been made, and the loss, there fore, falls on the presses and not on the syndicate.

At one time during the double conflagration telegrams were sent to Mobile, Biloxi and other towns for assistance, but these requests were afterward withdrawn, as the engines from those places could not hope to reach New Orleans in time. The Algiers fire department came over, however, and rendered valuable assistance.

Detained Immigrants Escape.

FOOD FOR THE STARVING

The Flour Laden Missouri Arrives at Libau.

MANY SNATCHED FROM THE GRAVE

The Second Cargo of Supplies from America Will Save the Lives of Thousands of Famishing Russians—The Czar Lends a Hand with a Will.

LIBAU, April 4.—The Missouri has arrived here with her cargo of flour and cornmeal for the starving Russians in splendid condition after her voyage of twenty-two days. The reception of the Missouri was all that could be desired, showing a keen appreciation of America's succor to stricken Russia. It was evident from the moment the Missouri arrived in the Baltic port that the Russian government intended to co-operate to the fullest extent in expediting the welcome food supply to the sufferers. The Russian government at once placed all its railroad facilities at the disposal of the American commission for the transportation of the cargo. A railway runs from Libau to St. Petersburg, and one from there to Moscow, from which central point of the Russian empire lines go north, east, west, and as far south as the sea of AZOV.

The First Relief Train.

Work was immediately begun to unload the cargo. It is expected that the first relief train of American flour will start for the interior of Russia soon. Others will follow as fast as they can be loaded, until in few days all will be on the way to the most distressed districts.

The plan now is to distribute the flour to the famished people of these provinces through agencies which have hitherto been in operation, and are thoroughly acceptable to the American committee. America can rest assured that her offering to the starving people of Russia will be distributed promptly, with no maladministration on the part of the local officials.

The condition of the provinces where the famine exists is even worse than was imagined. One has to see the intense suffering of men, women and children from the pangs of hunger in these districts to realize the extent and intensity of this terrific scourge. America's gift simply means the snatching of hundreds from the brink of the grave. The ardent gratitude shown by all is the best proof of how keenly the sufferers feel the mercy thus shown them. If all progresses as prosperously as it has up to this stage the result will be everything that the most sanguine could have hoped. Everything has been done that is possible to dispose of the Missouri's cargo so as to secure the best and fullest results.

TO TALK ON THE TARIFF.

That Will Be the Business of the House This Week.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—The house will devote the greater part of this week to the consideration of the tariff. To-day Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, closed the general debate on the Democratic side. It is expected that the consideration of such amendments as may be submitted will not occupy more than two days. It is the desire of the Democratic leaders to send the bill to the senate on Wednesday at the latest. The binding twine bill will be taken up upon the passage of the free wool bill, provided the house should not decide to side track it for an appropriation bill. It is altogether probable that the members interested in measures on the private calendar will make a strong fight to secure the regular order on Friday for that purpose. This the leaders may defeat, as it is the plan of the managers to hasten the consideration of the tariff bills as rapidly as possible.

The prospect for silver legislation in the house is decidedly poor, the bonsts of the free silver men to the contrary notwithstanding, nor is it probable that the ardent advocates of the free silver bill will go so far as to attempt to obstruct all measures except the tariff bills if their efforts to secure consideration for their pet measure are disregarded.

The senate has resolved to devote two uninterrupted days during the coming week to the consideration of bills on the calendar. How far this intention will be interfered with by the "debating school" on the silver question, Mr. Sherman's terms the prospective debate on the Morgan resolution, remains to be seen.

To Complete the Isthmus' Road.

WASHINGTON, April 4.—Mexico has made a contract with E. L. Corthell, the engineer, and others to complete the railway across the Isthmus of Tehuantepec, between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans, which was begun by an English company some time ago. The government has already $2,000,000 dollars in hand for this work.

Orange's Magnificent Altar.

ORANGE, N. J., April 4.—The new altar placed in the Catholic church by Frank C. O'Reilly in memory of his mother was unveiled by Bishop Wigger. Archbishop Corrigan and Bishops Wigger, of Newark, and Wigger, of Newark, were present. The altar is of oak and cost $20,000.

Trouble in Peru.

PANAMA, April 4.—It is reported from Iquique that ex-President Pierola of Peru has imported a large quantity of arms into that city and is trying to raise an army to overthrow the present Peruvian government because it is making no effort to recover the provinces lost to Chili.

SULLIVAN AND CORBETT.

NEW YORK, April 4.—Sullivan and Corbett are sure to fight now, for the articles of agreement between them and the Olympic club, of New Orleans, have been signed. There is now no loophole for either of the pugilists to avoid battling for the world's championship and $25,000 in money on Sept. 7. The first articles of agreement were not satisfactory to either pugilist in one particular. They were returned to Mr. Noel, the objectionable clause was eliminated, and when they were presented to the Californian he signed them without hesitation. James Wakely, who has been acting for John L. Sullivan, signed the papers for the big fellow.

Each side will place a $2,500 forfeit with the Olympic club, guaranteeing appearance in the ring at the time named in the articles, —Wednesday, Sept. 7, at 9 p. m. Corbett's generous will be furnished by a millionaire of this city and Sullivan's by Messrs. Wakely and Johnson. The dates of the next deposits of $2,500 by each party are June 1, July 11 and Aug. 25. Corbett will go into training at Asbury Park June 10. Jim Daly and Jack Delaney will train him.

An Interesting Baseball Rumor.

BOSTON, April 4.—It will be news of a startling nature to the baseball world that the new big twelve club league is governed and controlled by a combination, that four votes absolutely carry the day in all its present actions, and that the four oldest clubs are helped by nearly the fact of the American association element. The formation of this combination was part of the agreement whereby Louisville, St. Louis and this Athletic were won over.

Von der Ahe, Byrne, Phelps and Brush formed a new combination within the combination after the Indianapolis meeting. They secretly agreed to stand together as a unit on all important issues and have the twelve club league by the throat. They will hereafter control all officials and will see to it that the Boston, New York, Chicago and Philadelphia clubs are no longer the dominant parties.

Athletics at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, April 4.—Features of the Yale winter games were the defeat of Rose in the hurdle race, the high pole vaulting of Crane, of Harvard, and the jumping of Lyman, of Yale. Following are the results. Pole vault—won by J. Crane, of Boston A. A. (record), 10 ft. 4 in. Thirty yard dash—won by E. B. Bloss, of Harvard; time, 3 4-5 seconds; Harding, M. A. C., was second. Thirty yard hurdle—won by Van Ingen, of Yale; time, 4 3-5 seconds; Lyman, of Yale, was second. Heavyweight sparring—final round won by W. W. Heffelfinger. High Jump—won by Lyman, of Yale, 5 ft. 6 in.

Gus Sundstrom's Challenge.

PROVIDENCE, April 4.—Professor Gus Sundstrom, champion swimmer of the United States, has issued a challenge to swim from one to ten miles for the championship and stakes of from $500 to $1,000. He expresses a preference for a match with Robert Magee, of Baltimore.

War on Sunday Ball.

CINCINNATI, April 4.—The war on Sunday baseball has begun. Sunday the home team met the Columbus club, of the Western league, here and defeated them by a score of 9 to 2. After the players had left the field the members of both nines were arrested.

HE HAS KILLED FIVE PEOPLE.

Anarchist Ravachol Also Says He Caused Several Explosions.

PARIS, April 4.—The anarchist Ravachol confessed that he killed five men. He adds: "I wanted to blow up the chamber of deputies and the houses of certain of its members. The St. Germain explosion was managed by me and Gustav Matthieu.

"I had nothing to do with the Lobau barracks affair. The bomb in the pastry cook's shop was filled with dynamite was made by Bastan; he and Matthieu put it in its place. I managed the Rue Clichy affair with Gustav Matthieu. I took the box up to the fourth floor while Matthieu kept watch. I tell you this because it is my affair and because I choose to do so; but you need not try to get anything out of me about my colleagues and accomplices. All the dynamite that was stolen from Soissy-Sous-Etiolles I have destroyed."

Eight Hour Sermons.

Boston, April 4.—Reports received at the meeting of Carpenters' District council in Temple hall indicate that many of the clergymen of the state will deliver sermons on the eight hour day on Sunday, April 24. Delegates believe that reductions in the hours of labor will be made in a number of trades during the present year.

Bitten by a Mad Dog.

FLEMINGTON, N. J., April 4.—A large Newfoundland dog belonging to Abner Aber, of Middle Valley, went mad and attacked Mr. Aber, biting him severely on the hand. Josie Knoll, an eight-year-old girl, and Michael Upps were also bitten. The animal bit several other dogs, all of which were killed.

Murder Near Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, April 4.—William P. McLaughlin, of High Spire, this county, died from the effects of a gunshot wound inflicted by Jacob K. McAllister. McAllister says he shot McLaughlin after the latter had blackened his eyes. Both, he says, were drunk when the fight and subsequent shooting occurred.

STREET CAR LINES MERGED.

NEW YORK, April 4.—John D. Crimmins, who constructed the Broadway cable road, has been chosen president of the new combination which consists of the Broadway and Seventh avenue line, the Broadway cable road, the Chambers street, the Twenty-third street crosstown, the Ninth avenue, and the Astoria avenue and Queens C lines. The whole concern is controlled by the Metropolitan Traction company. Henry Thompson was elected vice president, Daniel S. Lamont secretary, and Thomas F. Ryan and Daniel Rathbone directors.

The seven lines in the consolidation cover eighty-one miles and a fraction. That is the largest mileage of any horsecar company in the United States, and the new company has the largest capital of any one company in this country.

Dr. Talmage's Anniversary.

BROOKLYN, April 4.—Rev. Dr. T. DeWitt Talmage celebrated the twenty-third anniversary of his pastorate of the Brooklyn Tabernacle on Sunday. "During my pastorate here," he said, the congregation has raised $600,000 for church buildings and religious work, and it has always been ready to respond to the calls for assistance. I call the attention of the world to the outrages which have been heaped upon the Brooklyn Tabernacle, that there is no more honest, consistent and splendid congregation of men and women ever gotten together outside of heaven."

Miss Murphy's Funeral.

TROY, N. Y., April 4.—The funeral of Miss Mary Benedicta Murphy, daughter of Edward Murphy, Jr., chairman of the Democratic state committee, occurred Sunday, and the entire town is reported turned out to pay the last respects to the dead. Among those present from out of town were Senator Hill, Lieutenant Governor Sheehan, Mayor Grant, Richard Croker, Judge White, Judge Grady, Thomas F. Gilroy, Edward Stokes, and a number of state senators and assemblymen.

Against Reopening Monmouth Park.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., April 4.—Considerable indignation exists here over the prospective reopening of the Monmouth park race track, and mass meetings protesting against the making of books there will be held along the northern New Jersey sea coast. Petitions will be circulated for signatures, calling upon both the state and county authorities for a strict enforcement of the state laws against book making, pool selling and other modes of gambling.

SCOTT'S MINUTEMEN.

THE LIFE GUARD OF THE NEW GOVERNMENT IN 1861.

Some Truth About the Heroes of Washington's Darkest Days Before and After Sumter Fell—The District Volunteers and Their Co-ed Company.

[Copyrighted, 1892, by American Press Association. Some rights reserved.]

WHO were the heroes of the cold, cheerless, material capital in 1861? When high officials quitted their posts to fall in line with their states in the secession movement; when officers and men of the army and navy deserted the flag to join the seceders' ranks; when both sections stood ready to seize the national forts, arsenals, vessels, arms and other materials of war, which was the connecting link between the old, shaky armament that went to pieces over April 14 and the new, firm power that arose in the late days of April and the first days of May?

The question as to who were the heroes of Washington's "dark days" is stuffed up by the plans now under way for a mammoth reunion of war veterans at the capital next September. In the proposed pageants of battle scarred soldiers and battle torn banners on "Washington's chiefest avenue," the place of honor at the right of the line of Grand Army posts has been given to the Sixth Massachusetts regiment. This was the body of volunteers mobbed in Baltimore on April 19, 1861, while en route to protect the capital. It has been singled out for special honor in the great parade because it was "the first to reach the capital after communication had been severed" between Washington and the north. The first northern troops to go through after that event were the Seventh New York and the Eighth Massachusetts. The New Yorkers reached Washington by way of Annapolis at noon, April 25. This was the beginning of the end of the crisis that had hung over Washington, not for days, but for weeks.

When the first step of the war was taken by the dispatch of a naval force to Charleston harbor with an ultimatum about Fort Sumter, President Lincoln began to look to the defense of the capital in case war should break out over the Sumter business. That was about April 1, and after that date Gen. Scott made a daily report to the executive of the state of the defense. The president was anxious not to create alarm or exceed his lawful authority, and the only safe recourse in the absence of regulars, which were widely dispersed, was to call out the District militia. The call was issued April 9, three days before Sumter was fired upon.

On the 15th, the day after the president's call for 75,000 troops at large, Scott reported the state of the forces at hand and afresh addition of eight companies of District volunteers making sixteen in all. "These, I think," he concluded, "place the capital a little ahead of impending dangers, and we will maintain at least this advantage till, by the arrival (in a week) of regulars and abundant volunteers, our relative advantage will, I trust, be more than doubled."

On the 22d, when the crisis was at its height, the route from the north included the Baltimore & Ohio railroad to Annapolis and New York laying helpless at Annapolis, the line of the Potomac and Washington itself menaced by armed batteries, Scott declared, "I feel confident that with our present force we can defend the capital, the arsenal and all the executive buildings against 40,000 troops not better than our District volunteers."

Who and what were these District volunteer troops? Gen. Charles P. Stone, who commanded them, spoke in his Century article in this strain:

"I think that the country has never promptly organized the services of three Districts of Columbia as quickly as these. They did their duty quietly, and they did it well and faithfully. Although not mustered into the service and placed upon the war footing until after the fatal day when the flag was fired upon at Sumter, yet they rendered great service before that time in giving confidence to the United States, to the members of the legislature and also to the president in the knowledge that at least there was a small force ready to repel any assault at the capital. It should be remembered that the first troops mustered into the service were companies of infantry, and that on the morning the dark days when Washington was cut off from communication with the north, when railway bridges were burned and tracks torn up, when 40 men were secured, but only after unanimous blacklisting of doubtful applicants. On the 18th of April the president called for volunteers at large, and the 6th Rifles, fully equipped and carrying twenty rounds of ball cartridges, double quicked to the war department for muster. It was the first body of men present to defend the assailed Union under the president's call. The Twenty rounds of bullets were to guard against an attack in the streets threatened by Washington roughs.

On the 19th the Rifles began their war duties as guards to the home of Gen. Scott and the usual department. On the 20th a detail under Lieut. W. W. Webb seized the steamer St. Nicholas at its wharf on the Potomac, with a cargo of supplies for Confederate use, its first bottle out of the Union forces. The same day a detail seized the telegraph office on Pennsylvania avenue. During the next five days the company was employed in guard duty for various threatened points, and those were the moments when every pulse beat high in and out of Washington. It captured and went over to seceded Virginia. Commodore Buchanan, commander of the Washington navy yard, and "Prince" Murray, captain of one of the two regular batteries in Washington, and other influential officers followed Lee, and hundreds of subordinates went with them.

On the 23d the telegraph was cut at Baltimore and the railroads closed north from that point. Maryland refused to permit Union troops to cross her soil to reach the capital. Its first body was the 7th, and were rumors that volunteer regiments by at Annapolis anxious to make Washington by way of the Junction, but that the railway was blocked, or cut.

On the 23d a detachment of Rifles volunteers for service outside of the District of Columbia, numbering 40 men, went in a sqire and two cars that ran over the route to the Junction. The train hands and armed men were bent to loyalty under the muzzles of the Rifles' weapons, and at the Junction the telegraph guards were managed in the same way. The same was done between the Junction and Annapolis and the train got back. During the 24th the bridges were burned behind the Massachusetts 6th and the District volunteers, who were on the point of guarding the railroad, and the line was cut. The troops in the Junction and took on board the Seventh and the next day the 6th Massachusetts.

GUARDING THE ANNAPOLIS ROUTE.

New York. So the first northern troops to pass through Baltimore after the assault had an open road to Washington guarded by District volunteers.

The Eighth Massachusetts was brought on in the same way, and if danger lurked anywhere or nerve was displayed, was it not when this beautiful run the way out of Washington and opened up the pathway for help to pour in? So the Washington guarded and relieved in the "dark days." One of the duties of the District men was to guard the Potomac and other bridges, and especially Long Bridge, between Washington and Alexandria, Va.

When the invasion of the "sacred soil" took place, May 24, Gen. Scott led the vanguard with his District volunteers. The troops of the invading column were drawn up on Long Bridge, and Boone's men, headed by the Rifles under Capt. Sewell, passed over, secured the Virginia end of the bridge, sent out scouting detachments, pickets and skirmishers to all conceivable and other delicate points.

During the remainder of their three months' service the District men took part in every movement in force. The Rifles were among the volunteers for the defense of the capital in the Gettysburg campaign in 1863, and were first to fall in to meet Early's raid in 1864.

Meanwhile the brief and bloodless, but exciting campaign of 1861 did not surfeit the boys with war. Several volunteered to go to the field of Bull Run, among them E. S. McCook, afterward a general of volunteers. W. O. Stoddard, the author, was one of the Rifles, as were Governor Alexander R. Shepherd, Gen. Louis D. Watkins and many gallant officers of the regulars and volunteers. Out of 63 men on the rolls of the Rifles July 15, 1861, 16 became officers in the active work of the war. Capt. Sewell was killed while handling the guns of his battery at Second Bull Run.

A SCIENTIFIC KITE.

It Can be Guided in any Direction Through the Air.

The kites that Dr. J. Woodbridge Davis had made of bed silk covers. The silk was as heavy as the heaviest lath, and were made of stout wood and with no attention to weight at all. He had three of these boys' kites in the air at once, tied together in the centre by a screw, so that they could be opened out to the regulation shape of a kite or closed up and all banded at once. Then one boy put and headed at once those paper and over he had coiled silk for some kites and took for others. The bridles were arranged much as the bridle of a small horse, and there was no fear for the bridle, which was of knotted clothes line. The beauty of these kites was that when they were rigged and ready to be tested together they stopped up, so that with a moment or two of work, they would be ready for use again. When unfolded each kite stood six feet when resting on the ends of two of its sticks.

HOW THE KITE IS RIGGED.

The rigging of these kites is shown in the cut. Instead of bringing all six strings from the upper and lower parts of the kite to a common centre and tying the string to that as the schoolboys do, Dr. Davis had brought the three strings on each side together, and tied them from one end tied at one junction, and the line from the other tied at the other junction. In addition to these two lines he had a lighter cord fastened to the top of the kite. This cord was to be paid out from a ball in his hands. It will be seen that it requires three boys to fly this kite. Here is the way Dr. Davis managed his big kite.

He had first six young men hold up the big silk kite sails, at a signal, let it go. The rods soon ground and the balls unrolled and the great kite rose majestic in the air, its long tail of 300 feet of looped clothes line hanging far below it. It went up and up and out and out until it was almost as though sailed up to the sky.

"Now, are the advantages of this line to the top of the kite," said Dr. Davis.

As he spoke he gave the word to let. The kite rose still higher until the rod there was almost perpendicular. Then Dr. Davis began paying out from the tail. The kite had been so balanced that when all the end of the tail was touching the ground. The kite had moved neither to the right nor to the left. It had simply fallen straight down from the sky to the ale. As soon as the doctor stopped paying out the line the kite stopped falling and remained stationary. Dr. Davis had the perpendicular motion under perfect control.

"Now, here is the advantage of having two cords," said he.

And he started the left-hand rod and began paying out line from the right-hand rod. As the right-hand line grew shorter the kite swept around to the left until it had described an angle of 90 degrees. Then Dr. Davis pulled in the right-hand line and paid out the left-hand line. The kite, obeying the same impulse, swept steadily back into the eye of the wind and then on to the right, until it had described an angle of 90 degrees. Then Dr. Davis began to do fast lightening the top line Dr. Davis could make the latent motion in an upward or downward curve.

Now that the kite seems is at hand, try this new idea, boys, and you will have no end of fun.

SAYINGS OF BRIGHT CHILDREN.

"I wish it would rain," sighed Tommy.

"Why," said his mother, "I don't like rain."

"No," replied Tommy, "but you haven't got a new pair of rubber boots to wear."

TOMMY'S LITTLE GAME.

"Let's play I was grandpa," suggested Tommy.

"All right," answered May.

"Well then," said Tommy, "you can tan me while I go to sleep."

TOO MANY COOKS.

"Why are you so naughty?" asked Bobby's father.

"I dunno," answered Bobby. "I guess it's 'cause I've got so many aunts and uncles to mind."

A THREAT.

"Keep still," called the watering-pot, "or I'll put you out."

NO BAME.

"What do you call your dog?" asked his uncle.

"Don't call him anything," said Tommy. "He comes when you whistle."—Harper's Young People.

Hope On.

Hope on, though all around be dark,
And steady obscure the way;
Hope for the sun will shine the clearer,
And bring a brighter day.

Hope on though earthly friends may fail,
We still can look above
To Him who is unchangeable,
Who offers boundless love.

Hope on, still trust a Father's love,
Whatever He may do,

Can send the sunshine too.

"My dear sir, we have to go by the meter. If there is anything wrong with it we'll send a man down to your house to look at it."

"You don't go by the meter. That's where the mistake in the bill comes in. I can read the meter as well as you or anybody else can, and I kept track of it last month for my own satisfaction."

"And you find we charged you $6.75 too much this month?"

"No, sir. You have charged me $6.75 too little."

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE REGULAR MEETING FOR APRIL.

The Time for Opening Peace Street Extended—$2,000 Wanted for the Public Library—City Hotel Tavern License Granted—Miller's North Avenue Hotel Petition Granted—Mr. Ackerman's Resignation Accepted—Mr. Charles Fisk Elected His Successor—To Clean the Business Streets Every Day—The New Street Railway—A Grade for West Fourth Street—Mr. Marsh Would Rather Resign than Have the Blunders of the Combine Council Repeated—$100 for Memorial Day—The Council Rebukes a Falsifier, etc.

The City Common Council met in regular session last evening. It was nearly half-past seven o'clock when President Ginna called the meeting to order. When City Clerk Barnes called the roll, the president and Councilmen Bird, Case, Erickson, Johnston, Marsh, Soe and Weber responded. Mr. Frazee came in later.

Councilmen Ackerman and Gallup were absent.

The minutes of the last meeting were read, corrected, and approved as corrected.

A number of applications for hackmen's, cartmen's and hucksters's licenses were read, referred to the proper committees and then disposed of finally.

Mrs. MacDonald and others, in a petition, requested Council to extend the time of taking action in reference to the opening and widening of Peace street.

On motion of Mr. Case the request was complied with.

Hon. Jacob Kirkner and others petitioned for a crosswalk across Eighth street at the intersection of Division. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets with power.

A petition signed by Mr. Hermann Weber and others requesting Council to order two crosswalks laid in the Fourth ward, one across Liberty street at Second and the other across Second street at Liberty was referred to the Committee on Streets with power.

Mr. F. A. Dunham and others petitioned for a crosswalk across Madison avenue at the intersection of Sixth street. The petition was referred to the Street Committee with power.

Henry Eggerding and others petitioned for three electric lights on Arlington avenue. The petition was referred to the Committee on Public Lights with power.

Peter Emmons and others petitioned for stone cross walk across Orchard place at New street. The petition was referred to the Committee on Streets.

The Directors of the Art Gallery and Public Library presented the following resolution:

Resolved by this Board, and this Board doth hereby determine that the amount or sum of $2,000 will be required in the year eighteen hundred and ninety-two for the maintenance of the library and reading room of the City of Plainfield in the city of Plainfield under and pursuant to the Act of the Legislature of the State of New Jersey entitled "an Act to authorize cities to establish and maintain free public libraries and reading rooms" approved March 14, 1879, and the act amending thereof approved March 3, 1885.

Resolved, That the President of this Board forthwith certify to the Common Council of the city of Plainfield that the said amount or sum of $2,000 will be required in the year 1892 for the maintenance of said library and reading room.

The resolution was referred to the Finance Committee.

Wallace V. Miller applied for a license to keep an inn and tavern on North avenue and to sell liquor therein.

The petition to keep an inn and tavern was granted by a unanimous vote.

Mr. Marsh stated that all regretted that Mr. Ackerman had concluded to resign; that he for one did anyhow and that he for one would be loath to accept the resignation had he not seen Mr. Ackerman and understood that it was imperative. In conclusion he said: "Mr. Ackerman has served the city faithfully and has made a good councilman. I move to accept the resignation."

The motion prevailed.

Councilman Erickson moved that Mr. Charles Fisk be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Ackerman.

Councilman Frazee and Johnston were appointed as tellers.

Mr. Frazee stated that he had voted the blank ticket and that he therefore wished to move to make Mr. Fisk's election unanimous. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Marsh moved that a committee of two be appointed to notify Mr. Fisk of his election. The motion was adopted.

The committee met Mr. Fisk, escorted him to the mayor's office, where he took the oath of office, and thence to the Council chamber where Mr. Erickson introduced him.

The president congratulated him and presented him as chairman of the Fire Alarm Committee, third on the Law and Ordinance Committee and second on the Committee on Streets.

On motion the Council then returned to the regular order of business.

In a communication Mayor Gilbert nominated Jas. H. Fristy, Charles Laing and Harry C. Crane as special policemen. The nominations were confirmed.

Street Commissioner Meeker in a communication recommended that the business streets of the city be cleaned every day and further recommended that Council purchase a patrol cart at a cost not to exceed $60. The matter was referred to the Committee on Streets with power.

A communication from W. E. Johnson informed Council that the town clock "no longer strikes." It was referred to the proper committee.

The monthly statements of the city collector and treasurer were read and approved.

The city clerk presented certificates showing that he had served notice on property owners on Peace street in reference to the opening and widening of that street, and that they were notified that if they had any objections to make they could do so at the present meeting. On motion the report was ordered filed.

On motion of Mr. Erickson Mr. Loomis and firm of Loomis & Rice was granted the privileges of the floor to make a statement in reference to the reason why they had built a frame dwelling on East Second street without first obtaining permission of Council.

Mr. Loomis explained that the building had been put up by a misunderstanding, and not with the slightest intention whatever of violating the law, that his partner, Mr. Rice, had sent a petition to the city clerk's office on the next day when Mr. Loomis, called on him and inquired what had become of his petition the clerk had informed him that it had been granted.

Mr. William Rockwell was then given the privilege of the floor. He explained that his objection to the erection of the dwelling was that it was too close to his house, which being a frame would be greatly endangered in case of fire.

Mr. Erickson from the Committee on Fire and Buildings considered the building a hazardous fire risk, and added that Chief Bonnell was in favor to grant permission to erect any building.

Mr. Marsh stated that in order to get the question before Council he would move that the petition be granted.

He then said that Messrs. Loomis & Rice had made a mistake by going ahead with the building before obtaining permission of Council. He thought they had not done it in bad faith but that, he said, they had no business to go ahead, which building will materially increase the fire risk.

Chief Doane stated that he advised Messrs. Loomis & Rice not to drive another nail.

Mr. Frazee thought a precedent should be established that anyone else could go ahead and build a house and after the house was up then ask for permission to build.

A vote was then taken on Mr. Marsh's motion to grant the petition, but the motion received only Messrs. Bird and Soe voting in the affirmative.

Mr. Frazee was of the opinion that if Messrs. Loomis & Rice would erect a brick wall on the side of the house near by, which they had built so close, he would be no objection to then proceeding with the work.

Mr. Loomis said that he did not think any member of Council would want to build a house with one side of it brick and the other frame.

Mr. Marsh retorted that it was the first time he had ever seen story brick and the other frame.

The application of John H. Stants for a liquor license was presented and taken up.

Mr. Frazee moved that it be granted.

A petition requesting Council to lay a sewer on Somerset street from Grant to Arlington avenue was referred to the Committee on Streets with power.

An ordinance to amend an ordinance dividing the Fourth Ward was read for the first time.

Mr. Soe explained that the ordinance was introduced for the convenience of persons residing on the south side of Plainfield avenue in the Fourth Ward.

The ordinance was then placed on its second reading, ordered engrossed and advertised.

The city clerk was instructed to provide a license for Stants to retail as above.

Mr. Marsh moved that when the Council should adjourn it would be to meet again in one week. The motion prevailed.

A resolution offered by Mr. Frazee to the effect that the street laborers be paid semi-monthly was referred to the Law and Ordinance Committee.

A communication from the Plainfield Street Railway Company requested Council to act upon an ordinance to amend an ordinance granting them a franchise. The amendment was to make several changes in the proposed route. The ordinance accompanied the communication. It was read the first time, placed on its second reading, ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Johnston presented an ordinance to establish a grade on West Fourth street near Grant avenue.

Mr. Marsh inquired if the Committee was going at it blindly. He said there were a number of "sore heads" already in Plainfield produced by establishing grades during the past year.

Mr. Case said no, that the matter had been thoroughly investigated and that he thought it would be a benefit to the property owners.

Mr. Marsh inquired as to the cost of the proposed lowering of the grade.

Mr. Johnston said it would not exceed $500.

Mr. Marsh inquired if it passed the Committee on Streets.

Mr. Johnston—"Yes."

Mr. Marsh—"How much will you have to put it through?"

Mr. Johnston—"About one foot."

Mr. Marsh—"Oh, that is all right. I did not want you to lose the new school house in a hole."

Mr. Marsh then stated that he did not wish to oppose anything reasonable, but that he did not want this Council to do what the last one had done. He said "I would sooner resign."

The ordinance was then passed on its second reading ordered engrossed and advertised.

On motion of Mr. Marsh the President stated that he would call a meeting to treat with the property owners in reference to the opening and widening of Peace street.

President Murray of the Y. M. C. A. stated he was there to look after the interests of that association.

On motion a further hearing in the matter was postponed until May 3d at eight p. m.

Mr. Soe moved that $100 be appropriated for the use of Winfield Scott Post, No. 72, G. A. R. to be used for the proper observance of Memorial Day.

Mr. Case stated that as there were two G. A. R. post in this city he thought the money should be divided between them.

Mr. Marsh moved to amend the resolution to read that a warrant for $100 be drawn to the order of the Mayor and that he turn the money over to the proper persons.

The vote on liquor license application of James H. Force was on motion of Mr. Marsh re-considered. The motion prevailed.

He then moved to lay the application on the table. The motion was carried.

Mr. Marsh stated that Council had never refused Mr. Force a license and moved that his communication be taken from the table and returned to him. The motion prevailed.

The Auditing Committee reported the various claims correct and they were ordered paid and warrants were ordered drawn for the amount.

The meeting then adjourned.

BOARD OF EDUCATION.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING LAST EVENING.

Grading Contract Granted—Bills Ordered Paid—Tax Rate Fixed.

The Plainfield Board of Education met in regular session in the High School Building last evening.

Messrs. Hancock, Hurlbut and Probasco of the Board, and principal of the schools, Miss Bulkley, were present.

The tax rate for the year was fixed at 42-100.

The contract for grading the sidewalks and lawn of the school was awarded the lowest bidder.

The fact that Miss Bulkley, the principal of the schools was to resign the position she has so long filled with honor and credit, brought letters by the dozen from all parts of people and places East and West. Some of the letters were amusing. The appointment of a worthy successor will prove difficult.

Routine business was transacted, and then the Committee on Teachers went into executive session.

BREVITIES

—Head Van Emburgh & White's new announcement to-day.

—The Rosnbasi Circle will meet in the Congregational church to-morrow afternoon at 4.30.

—Albert Cook was arrested by the police this morning for drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

—The Borough Street Committee had a meeting for conference last evening, in the Engine House.

—The firm of Windham & Crowley, the proprietors of the Central Hotel, are having the front of their hotel re-painted.

—"Peculiar Ideas, or How to Think" will be the subject of the popular talk to be given at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thursday at eight p. m. All young men are invited.

—Mr. John Peterson has opened a shop at 56 Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, where he will make mantels and other fine carpenter work. His advertisement elsewhere will give further particulars.

—Messrs. Zimmerman & Rumpff, formerly engaged in business in New York, have purchased the interest of the store No. 42 West Front street, vacated by the Pierson Hardware Co. The new firm will conduct a general hardware business, and will no doubt by their energy form a valuable acquisition to the business life here.

—Mr. Beach, agent for the Arnold steam cooker, says he is selling his cookers to some of the best families in the city, which speaks well of the cooker. He will cook a whole dinner on Saturday two p. m., in one of the cookers at 5 Park avenue and invites all to come and see him. The dinner will be on exhibition all the afternoon and evening.

—Roadmasters should trim overhanging branches of trees at least twelve feet above the highway. The town of Wallkill in Orange county, N. Y., is compelled to pay $6,000 damages to a lawyer for one single case of such neglect. The Court of Appeals has affirmed two previous decisions in the case, and nearly all the Highway Commissioners in that vicinity, recognizing that it might have suits for damages brought against them, had slips printed and sent to all their pathmasters, directing great care in removing overhanging branches along the highways.

—This is a great country. While Kansas, almost in the heart of the United States, is suffering from cyclones so terrible in force that they can blow down houses, lift a cow to the top of a tree, raise people into the air and deposit their lifeless remains hundreds of feet away, we on the border of the United States have been amusing ourselves, and under marvelous June-like days here in the beginning of April. Coming last Sunday, so suddenly upon people still wearing their Winter clothing, it was very enervating. Many will doff their Winter flannels too hastily, and for their imprudence never again see the snow fly. It is better to suffer a little than to make radical changes thus early in the season, especially in a climate so fickle as this.

The Coupling Pin Broke.

An empty coal train, bound west, parted near the Madison avenue railroad bridge shortly after six o'clock last evening. The engine drawing the train proceeded some distance before the mishap was noticed. A broken coupling pin was all that resulted from the accident. Travel was not delayed. The train was on the fourth track.

A Concert and Ball.

The members of Plainfield Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., at a meeting held last evening arranged for a grand concert and dance to be held in Music Hall during the latter part of this month. The committee appointed will, it is said, do all in their power to make it a grand success. The concert will be advertised later.

Literary Notes.

Readers of THE NEWS are familiar with the name of William Cushing Bamburgh of North Plainfield, through his scholarly, yet charming contributions to our columns. He has just published a play entitled "Wisconsin: A Vocation Tale," which displays the genius one might reasonable expect from one so gifted.

REUNION OF THE OLD EXCELSIORS.

A Hundred Members of Gen. Sickles' Brigade Around the Camp-Fire

After being separated for twenty-eight years the members of the Seventieth New York Volunteers, of Gen. Daniel Sickles' Brigade, held a re-union at the Lincoln Post rooms, Broad street, Newark, yesterday. The re-union was brought about through the efforts of Comrades John W. Rousmire, of Newark, and William Downing, of Brooklyn.

About one hundred members of old Excelsior were present. They came from as far East as Boston and as far West as Nebraska and New Mexico. An informal reception was given until 4.30 o'clock, when a business meeting was held.

It was decided to form a regimental tion. Col. Thomas Hoyt, of Waterbury, Conn., was elected President; Captain Grant of Newark, Vice-President; John W. Rousmire of Newark, Secretary and Treasurer, and J. W. McCormack, John Crooks and J. B. Shumacher, members of the Executive Committee. It was decided to hold reunions annually.

A banquet was given last night. Col. Hoyt presided. Gen. Sickles was to preside, but sent word that he was unable to attend on account of illness.

Among those who were present and made addresses were Major Mago of New Mexico; Judge Sanderson of Nebraska; Major Tremaine of New York; Comrades Downing, Rousine and others. Recitations and old-time war stories were told and the Lincoln Post Quartet gave appropriate airs.

FELL FROM A TRAIN.

An Old Gentleman Injured at the Main Depot in this City.

An aged gentleman named Woods, who resides at Dunellen, was injured by falling from the 4.30 train on the North avenue station last evening. It appears that he had been to New York and that while returning to his home in Dunellen he had fell asleep in the cars. After the train had reached Plainfield he awakened and thought he had passed his station. He rushed to the platform and jumped from the train. The train had just started ano, although he was rendered unconscious by the fall, he escaped with a few slight bruises and wounds. He was carried to the baggage room and was sent home on the 5.35 p. m. train.

The Scott Pressworks Mutual Aid Society held its annual meeting in the basement of Hedges' hall last evening. Mr. George H. Carpenter, the Vice President, called the meeting to order.

The minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, Mr. John Wilson, and approved as read.

The Treasurer's report, which was read by the Treasurer, Mr. Henry C. Somers was ordered recorded. It showed receipts for the year, $430.47; disbursements, $213; balance, $217.

The election of officers then took place and resulted as follows:

President—James McKenzie.
Vice-President—David C. Allen.
Secretary—William Gluck.
Treasurer—Harry C. Somers.

After the officers were elected, it was agreed to have a petition presented to Mr. Scott for a half holiday on Saturday, and the meeting had the session adjourned subject to the call of the chair.

Henry K. Carroll, LL. D., of North Plainfield, was ordained a deacon of the Protestant Episcopal church by Bishop Bowman, at Morristown last Sunday.

—While it is all right for the dog-catchers to catch all the dogs allowed to run loose without muzzles, arrangements ought to be made to have this done without unnecessary cruelty. A wagon should be provided and the dog thrust into it. Dragging the animal along the street by string is enough to make any decent dog mad. A fine Irish setter was dragged through the streets yesterday afternoon in a way that ought to have been stopped by the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

THE WESTERN STORM.

Rain Here To-night.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 5—(Special.)—Gales are blowing throughout the central Mississippi Valley and the lake regions, and also in Minnesota and Wisconsin. The wind was making forty-four miles an hour at Chicago this morning, justifying the playful appellation which is sometimes given to that city.

The rain area covers the Central States and the lake regions. It was snowing in Minnesota this morning. Warm weather is general in the Atlantic States. It will grow cooler to-morrow.

The local for New Jersey is: Showers this evening and to-night. Weather generally fair during the day. Brisk winds along the coast.

A Terrific Explosion in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 5, (Special.)—This city was thrown into intense excitement last night by a terrific explosion, due to an accident at the State factory for the manufacture of smokeless powder, where five tons of gun cotton had exploded. The shock was tremendous. The whole city was shaken. The building was nowhere to be seen. It had been blown into splinters. Nine workmen were blown to pieces. Some of their limbs were found 250 yards away. The gun cotton was stored in a separate building, and to this may be attributed the fact that the loss of life was not much greater.

The adjoining factories were greatly damaged, and five workmen were injured.

Houses a mile and a quarter away from the scene were made to ocsillate by the shock. Windows were shattered, and crockery and glassware were thrown to the floor.

There is no way of ascertaining how the explosion occurred, as every man in the gun cotton building is dead. It is thought that it was due to carelessness.

The Governor Vetoes the Reading Bill.

TRENTON, N. J., April 5, (Special.)—Governor Abbett to-day vetoed Bill No. 440, known as the Reading Bill, on the ground that it was unconstitutional. In a memorandum he said that had no doubt he could hold the bill for thirty days, if necessary, but as there was no doubt that it was unconstitutional, there was need to hold it any longer.

The object of the bill was to confirm the lease of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Lehigh Valley Railroad to the Port Reading Railroad, a branch of the Philadelphia & Reading Railroad.

As the New Jersey Legislature has adjourned, this stops action on the bill until it meets again.

A Blizzard Out West.

NEW YORK, April 5th. (Special.)—Telegrams from various points show that the terribly fatal cyclone has extended over five States and Territories—Illinois, Kansas, Nebraska, Minnesota, and Colorado. To-day the storm has developed in Minnesota into a furious blizzard. Over a foot of snow has fallen and the storm is growing worse. There are many deaths and much property destroyed.

Republican Victories Almost Everywhere.

CHICAGO, Ill., April 5th. (Special.)—A resume of city elections in Michigan, Ohio, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas and North Dakota shows that in a majority of the places local issues took precedence over politics, and that when party lines are drawn the Republicans had the best of it.

A Big Labor Strike in New York.

NEW YORK, April 5th. (Special.)—To-day 4,000 men, members of Trade Unions, struck in this city against the Pelham Hod-Hoisting Company, whose machines are supplanting the hod-carriers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Recollections of Agassiz.

"He had been a student all his life long, and when he died he was younger than any of them." So wrote Theodore Lyman, one of the great naturalist's old students, about Agassiz when he died. President David Starr Jordan, of Leland Stanford university, was also one of Agassiz's students. He contributes to The Popular Science Monthly an admirable sketch of the man who gave biology its impetus in America.

President Jordan writes especially about Agassiz's summer school at Penikese, the pioneer of summer schools in America. Penikese is a desolate island of sixty acres, eighteen miles south of New Bedford, off the Massachusetts coast. In the month of June, 1873, Agassiz began his school here, the instructions being given in an old barn. Most Ingersoll and Edward S. Morse were among the pupils that summer at Penikese. Perhaps from Agassiz Mr. Morse learned his dexterity with chalk and blackboard, for the master was seldom without a piece of chalk in his hand. Above all things, Agassiz opposed the use of books in natural science. Nature, and nature only, should be the volume the learner studied. For the zoology committed to memory from the printed page he had no respect.

He looked on the school at Penikese as a mission work of the greatest importance. He was an enthusiast all his life long, picturesque in all he said and did. He opposed Darwinism vehemently, perhaps on account of the natural reverence of his character. His sayings are aphorisms in themselves. Among some quoted by Mr. Jordan are the following: "You cannot do without one specialty. Those who have succeeded best have followed for years some slim thread which has once in awhile broadened out and disclosed some treasure worth a lifelong search." "Lay aside all conceit." "I feel less agony at impropriities in churches than in a scientific laboratory."

Perhaps the best evidence of Agassiz's success as a teacher lies in the fact that every one of the men specially trained by him went over to the ranks of Darwin and the evolutionists. He taught his pupils to think for themselves, "not to think as he did," says Mr. Jordan. Consequently they thought out this question for themselves and became evolutionists.

At Penikese that one summer he taught teachers how to instruct their pupils. How they should teach natural history, any kindred topic he illustrated by this anecdote:

In 1847 I gave an address at Newton, Mass., before a teachers' institute conducted by Horace Mann. The subject was grasshoppers. I passed around a large jar of these insects and made every teacher take one and hold it while I was speaking. If any one dropped the insect, I stopped till he picked it up. This was at that time a great innovation and excited much laughter and derision. There can be no true progress in the teaching of natural science until such methods become general.

Agassiz died in December, 1873. In the summer of 1874 there was an attempt made to continue the school, but the master spirit was gone. "The life was gone out from Penikese, and at the end of the summer the authorities of the museum closed the doors of the Anderson school forever." The buildings remain exactly the same to this day, however.

"Study nature, not books."

But while the island of Penikese is deserted, the impulse which came from Agassiz's work there still has life in every field of American science.

With all appreciation of the rich streams which in late years have come to us from Germany, it is still true that "the school of all schools which most influenced scientific teaching in America was held in an old barn on an uninhabited island some eighteen miles from the coast; it lasted but three months, and in effect it had but one teacher. The school at Penikese existed in the personal presence of Agassiz. When he died it vanished."

A man who desires to be a leader should never throw blame on his subordinates when things go wrong with him. That is what Emperor William did, blaming his ministers when his favorite education bill could not be rammed down German throats. He said the ministers misled him so as to the public mind. Thereby he proved that he was not only a small man, but a mean one as well. The ministers could not longer remain with him with any self respect. The beginning of wisdom is to know one's self a fool, and if William can learn this lesson there is still hope for him and his empire.

The judiciary committee of the national house will shortly give a hearing to the advocates of a sixteenth amendment to the United States constitution, "prohibiting any state from passing any law respecting the establishment of religion or to use its property or credit and money raised by taxation for the purpose of aiding any church, religious denomination, religious society or any institution wholly or in part under sectarian or ecclesiastical control."

Speaking of the Drayton-Borrowe scandal, the Duchess of Marlborough, who was a passenger on the Majestic, remarked: "It is much better that scandal should never be printed. This sort of thing doesn't get into English papers at all." This is news indeed.

SILVER IN THE SENATE.

Interesting Speeches by Messrs. Morgan and Sherman.

STRICT EXCLUSION OF CHINESE.

The House Passes a Measure That Absolutely Prohibits Celestials from Entering the United States—Mr. Springer Makes a Speech on His Free Wool Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The silver debate called out by Mr. Morgan's resolutions in the senate had quite a breezy snap to it, and though the resolutions go upon the calendar they are liable to be called up and the discussion renewed by Mr. Wolcott tomorrow. Mr. Teller and others insisted that the question should not be downed, and Mr. Sherman in a vigorous little speech denied that he had any intention of suppressing the debate, only he wished it to proceed in an orderly manner and with some definite end in view. The entire day was occupied by the discussion. Mr. Morgan, in referring to the act of 1890, asked Senators Sherman and Carlisle what they were going to do when the silver bullion piled up in the treasury to the extent of hundreds of millions. Mr. Sherman said the language of the law was very plain. It required the government to maintain the parity of gold and silver coin.

Mr. Teller—No, it doesn't.

Mr. Sherman—Well, of gold and silver metals—the same thing.

Mr. Teller—No, quite a difference.

Mr. Morgan asserted that the last clause of the law could not be interpreted by any rule of construction or inference or any process of reasoning except by a knowledge of what was in the heart of the senator from Ohio (Mr. Sherman).

Mr. Carlisle—The senator from Alabama has referred to me. I desire to say, in response to that allusion, that I did not support the act of 1890, either in the committee or in the senate.

Mr. Morgan—No, I know he didn't support it in the senate, but I have a letter from the senator before me which shows he supported something worse than that.

Mr. Carlisle—It is possible I have supported a great many things worse than that.

Mr. Morgan—Yes, I think you have, and that's the mischief of it.

Resuming the thread of his discussion, Mr. Morgan asked where did the senator from Ohio propose to stop this piling up of silver bullion in the vaults of the treasury. When there were 300,000,000 of ounces or 350,000,000 of ounces in the treasury, what disposition was the senator going to make of it?

Bullion versus Silver Dollars.

Mr. Sherman—I suppose I will make the same disposition of it as we do of those three or four hundred millions of silver dollars which lie in the treasury and cannot be forced out into circulation.

Mr. Morgan asserted that there was not a silver dollar in the treasury today unless collected for taxes or received in some such way that was not represented by silver certificates in circulation.

Mr. Sherman—So is the silver bullion, and it is easier to keep bullion than silver dollars.

Mr. Morgan disputed the statement. The silver dollar had no more power to fly away than had the silver bullion.

Mr. Hiscock interposed with a question about silver certificates, to which Mr. Morgan replied that the silver certificates had served the senator's great metropolis from bankruptcy and ruin within the last nine months. He (Mr. Morgan) believed the silver certificates had a value over and above that any other circulating medium. He would give the owner of silver bullion the option to have it coined into currency and made part of the circulation of the country, or to take silver certificates for it. He would connect this option with it, but Messrs. Hiscock and Sherman would refuse it, because in that case silver would force its way into actual circulation and become the competitor of gold.

Mr. Sherman—I wish to say that this option is now given every man who holds one of these silver certificates; he can demand a silver dollar for it, and if more dollars are demanded than we have coined, of course more will have to be coined. If the senator desires to have this option in any other way I shall be glad to give it to him, although he has it now.

Mr. Morgan then sarcastically referred to the Ohio senator as that great man who now leads a considerable faction of the Democratic party on the silver question and perhaps two-thirds of the Republicans.

Mr. Cleveland's "Congestive Chill."

Reverting to the policy of the national administration on the silver question, he said Mr. Cleveland came in in 1885 and had a sort of congestive chill upon the subject. He apprehended that the people of this generation and threw the whole weight of his administration into the scale to verify his appraisement of it. I hasten to say that there had already encountered a veto from Mr. Cleveland's predecessor on the Bland act and had overcame it. And that bill had rehabilitated silver in the world. (Laughter.)

Mr. Morgan was discussing the price of wheat as being influenced by the silver question when Mr. Mills, acting part in debate for the first time since his admission into the senate, interrupted that the price of wheat had been affected by the famine in Europe.

Mr. Morgan admitted that this was in part true. But he said there was an uneasy feeling now prevailing in Germany; the people had free trade in the palace of the emperor; France was boiling with troubles; Austria had to keep her army on the field, and so it was throughout the world. Money naturally retired under such circumstances. Money became scarcer in Europe and as it became scarcer its purchasing power decreased so that wheat which a few months ago brought a dollar a bushel now only brought fifty-six cents. Make silver and gold what the constitution made them—coin—then let them get hold of them and scatter them through the land in their enterprises and then you negatived the power of the capitalist by bringing two men against one. There would be two men who would have a dollar of silver to one who would have a dollar of gold.

He had been informed by the senator from Ohio in 1873 had had the effect of putting gold out of its proper level of barometric pressure, of which 90 per cent above its fair price and we ought to me niver with it to press it down. He (Mr. Morgan) would let the act of 1890 stand, but would make it compulsory on the secretary of the treasury to coin the bullion. In addition to that he would bring again into operation the provisions of the act of 1837 for the free coinage of both gold and silver, and issue gold and silver certificates against them. If the people had the manhood to carry out this policy they would make New York the clearing house of the world's commerce. Mr. Morgan occupied a little over three hours with his speech.

When he resumed his seat Mr. Sherman said that in other days and under other conditions he would be willing to wait for a general silver debate, he would move to lay Mr. Morgan's resolutions on the table.

Mr. Teller said that Mr. Wolcott had given notice of an intention to address the senate on these resolutions tomorrow and he trusted that he would not be ruled out. Mr. Sherman replied that Mr. Wolcott would be allowed to speak as a matter of courtesy.

Mr. Teller did not care how it was done, so that free coinage was not shut out. Mr. Sherman was flushed, perhaps, with the victory in the other house over the free coinage bill, and thought that he could down a silver debate at any time. He wished to say to the senator that he (Teller) had spent some time last session in preventing him and others who thought like him from securing a rule to cut off debate on this question, and the senator from Ohio might as well come to the conclusion that free silver coinage would be debated either on these resolutions or some other, unless the senate should be driven into the adoption of a cloture rule, which he did not think likely. There was no question which had come up since the war in which the people were more interested than they were in this, and they intended to be heard.

Mr. Sherman, speaking with all his old time force, said he defied any man to show that he had ever endeavored to stifle debate. There was not an iota of ground upon which such an assertion could be made. "I have never in my life," he continued, "and I have been here longer than many of you, endeavored to stifle debate." But the senate was a body with power, and it ought to be able to determine what was an orderly course of procedure. Whenever the senate chose to name a time for discussing the silver question, he would take his part in the debate.

Mr. Morgan had arraigned the treasury for not coining the silver bullion into dollars. It was worth more as bullion than as coin. If coined there would be the added cost of coining, and it would have to be stored up in bags. Why should it be coined in advance of the necessity or demand for its use? The senator had closed his remarks by praising the act of 1890—justly praising it—because that act, with proper amendments, could be made in his (Mr. Sherman's) opinion the fulcrum of the whole financial system of the country.

Senator Sherman on His Mettle.

No bank in the world was so financially strong as the treasury of the United States today, the senator said. Many notes had been issued against a dollar's worth of gold behind it. Some appeared to think that the law of 1878 was still in existence. Instead of that every one of these notes was stripped upon demand to be equal to gold. But there lay behind this act the fundamental principle which ought never to be departed from, and that was that all our money should be of equal purchasing power, not only here but in the markets of the world, and we had declared that the standard of that equality should be maintained at a parity—at a gold standard, if gold were the higher; at a silver standard if, as had happened before and might happen again, silver should rise above gold. And we could do it. The silver dollar was now only worth sixty-nine cents. He asserted that on this principle of maintaining a dollar behind every dollar certificate the United States could maintain a parity between these two metals. By the free coinage of silver it was practically proposed to take off 31 per cent. from every pension granted, to take thirty-one cents from every dollar earned by the artisan who depended on his daily labor for his bread, and to take thirty-one cents in the dollar off all debts contracted in gold. When we were asked to pay one dollar for what is now but sixty-nine cents, every man who had purchased chose rose against it. He repeated that he was not averse to discussing the silver question, but it should be done in an orderly manner. There were the appropriation bills to be disposed of. But it was for the senate to decide. He only asked them to fix a day when the question could be taken up in an orderly way, not by desultory debate, and disposed of.

Chinese Exclusion Act Passed.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—The house passed the Chinese exclusion act by a vote of 179 to 46, and also a bill repealing the law requiring steamers on the lakes, bays or sounds of the United States to be provided with line carrying projectiles and the means of propelling them. The Chinese exclusion bill as it passed the house absolutely prohibits the coming into the United States of Chinese persons, whether subjects of the Chinese empire or otherwise, as well as those who are now here and may hereafter leave, except such persons who may come as ministers or other diplomatic representatives, consular general, commercial agents and other agents of the Chinese government traveling on business.

The general debate on the free wool bill was closed by Mr. Springer, who made his first appearance on the floor for six weeks.

He received quite an ovation. Owing to his physical condition Mr. Byers, of Pennsylvania, read Mr. Springer's remarks. The bill was then debated under the five minute rule and the house adjourned.

Mr. Springer said: The pending bill is in the interest of the wool growers as well as the wool manufacturer, but it is especially in the interest of the consumer. If the report of your committee is carefully considered, it will be seen that the experience of more than a quarter of a century of high protective tariffs on woolen goods has proved to be disastrous to the wool grower, disastrous to the wool manufacturer, and to the American consumer. It may be asked how, under free wool, can woolen goods be cheaper if native wool is higher? The answer is that the foreign wool, which is subjected to a tax of forty-four cents upon the amount of such wool in a pound of cloth, will come in free, and that such cloth as the Arlington will not be permitted to earn dividends amounting to 50 per cent. per annum.

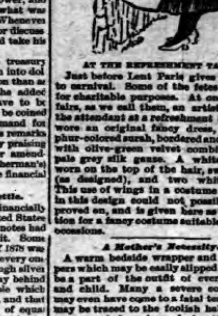
Take off the tax on foreign wool, permit healthy competition and price of woolen goods must fall. Consumers will get the benefit of all that is paid on foreign wool and of all that is charged for protection on cotton, shoddy and other adulterations.

Mr. Springer's Predictions.

Mr. Springer said the passage of the bill would in all probability during the first year after its passage double the number of the 361 more woolen establishments, and will cause the 371 establishments which were idle during the census year of 1890 to be started up. It will demand of the owners of each of such establishments to the amount of $74,000,000, an increase in the capital invested to the amount of $48,000,000, an increase to the amount of $30,000,000 in the product of woolen goods; will add for 67,000,000 pounds more of domestic and for 27,000,000 more pounds of foreign wool; it will give employment in woolen factories to 56,000 more hands and will increase the amount of wages paid annually to such hands to the amount of $18,000,000. With increased demand for wool prices of wool will increase and with increased demand for labor, wages will also increase. Thus this bill will bring hands of fast heretofore bare and thousands of farms heretofore naked or covered with rags will be clothed in good garments and the condition of all the people will be improved.

FASHIONS

An Original Fancy Dress.



AT THE REFRESHMENT TABLE.

Just before Lent Paris gives itself over to carnival, at which the fashions given are for charitable purposes. At one of these balls, as we said them, an artist sketched the attendant at a refreshment table who wore an original fancy dress, with sapphire-colored sarah, bordered and trimmed with olive-green velvet combined with pale grey silk gauze. The white swan is worn on the top of the hair, swan wings (as designed), and two white dusks. This use of wings in a costume as shown in this design could not, possibly be improved on, and is given here as a suggestion for a fancy costume suitable on many occasions.

A Mother's Necessity.

A warm bedside wrapper and soft slippers which may be easily slipped on should be a part of the outfit of every woman and child. Many a severe cold which may even have come to a fatal termination may be traced to the foolish habit which some people have formed of getting up in the morning and going about the room in their bedroom with their own bed. A mother who is compelled to see to her child at night should always have such a warm wrapper and knitted shoes convenient at hand, for nothing makes such a wrapper and slippers are invaluable. The invalid has not strength to bear the weight of a heavier shoe than a light toilet slipper of wool, or to endure a closer dress than a soft woolen wrapper that is warm and light. Such wrappers and shoes are also especially valuable as a bath dress.

Metal Ribbon for Bows.

The latest thing in jeweler's novelties is the fluted enameled ribbon, which comes in all the delicate tints, and is tied up in the manner of the soft ribbon for the hair, for the watch, or for the neck. About every third woman that is seen in these Lenten days at the opera will have a bow of ribbon under her head half hidden in the soft waves of hair, and tied in a pert, upstanding little bow on one side. These ribbons have a satin cross bar effect and most dainty coloring, but the fillet is of metal enameled, r it would never stay in place. Very pretty girdles for summer wear are made of this metal ribbon tied into bows, which are gracefully bent and tinted into soft-looking arrangements quite like the silk ribbons.

BATTLE OVER A BIGAMIST.

Father and Son at Odds Over Count Kochejoy's Case.

CAMDEN, April 5.—Count Kochejoy, who was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for bigamy, has obtained, through the efforts of his counsel, Colonel Scovel, a stay of execution pending an effort to obtain bonds before perfecting an appeal.

Colonel Scovel, his counsel, is father of the prisoner's first wife, and while he is doing all in his power to clear his son-in-law Harry Scovel, the colonel's son, who prosecuted his sister's husband, is still continuing his relentless activity.

What the Census Costs.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Secretary Noble has sent to the house a report of the examination and review of the census bureau submitted March 1 last. The report shows that the total appropriations so far made is $6,075,000; expenditures to Jan. 31, 1892 $5,770,507.91, leaving balance on hand Jan. 31, last, of $304,492.09. NEW YORK'S FINEST ACCUSED.

Foreman Taber of the Grand Jury Says the Police Divide $7,000,000.

NEW YORK, April 5.—There's at least $7,000,000 collected annually from the keepers of gambling dens, saloons, assignation houses and houses of ill repute and distributed among members of the police department. I say at least $7,000,000, for calculation shows that the amount is probably nearer $10,000,000."

Henry M. Taber, foreman of the March grand jury, made the above startling accusation in an interview with a reporter.

"Against what members of the police department do you direct this accusation?" asked the reporter.

"I direct it against the entire force, from the superintendent down to the patrolmen."

"Do you exclude the commissioners?"

"Yes, the grand jury was not able to find any evidence inculpating the police commissioners. We had presumptive evidence enough to warrant the indictment of many police officials, but while this evidence was convincing to the grand jury, we could not rely on its presentation before a trial jury. Whenever who could give satisfactory evidence against the keepers of disorderly resorts were deterred from doing so by fear of calling down the vengeance of the parties exposed—a vengeance in the execution of which the police would afford every opportunity and assure absolute protection."

LITTLE RHODY'S FIGHT.

Closing Speeches in a Great State Campaign.

SECRETARY TRACY ON THE STUMP.

He Praises the Administration of President Harrison and Urges the Return of Senator Aldrich—Democrats Elect a Mayor at Hartford.

PROVIDENCE, April 5.—The skirmish is ended; the heavy batteries have fired their last shell, and today the armies, drawn up in battle line, will pause for a moment before engaging in the hand to hand struggle which will decide the gubernatorial campaign of 1892 in "Little Rhody." It has been a hard campaign. Both sides are confident as to the outcome.

Seldom, if ever, has an election in the smallest state in the Union attracted such general attention. Never have such desperate efforts been made by the great parties to carry it. The significance of the fight as the opening skirmish of the presidential struggle was small until the party leaders took a hand in the fray.

Both Parties Working Hard.

The Democrats of the state have been encouraged with large doses of tariff reform from such men as ex-President Cleveland, ex-Governor Campbell, of Ohio; Congressman McAdoo, of New Jersey; ex-Secretary Whitney and others, while Governor McKinley, of Ohio, and Congressmen Thomas B. Reed, of Maine, were here last week dealing out the doctrine of protection with liberal hands. The campaign for the Republicans was practically closed by Secretary Tracy last night. The vote promises to be heavy. It is no certain victory for either side. The contest will be all the more bitter because it will hinge largely upon the legislative ticket, and is, in reality, many small battles merged into one.

The next legislature will elect surely a United States senator to succeed Nelson W. Aldrich. If the Republicans win, Mr. Aldrich will succeed himself; if the Democrats control the legislature the senior senator from "Little Rhody" will be gently but firmly laid upon the shelf, and a Democrat will take his place in Washington. Senator Aldrich is sure that he will remain in the senate.

The Democratic ticket is headed by William T. C. Wardwell, who was lieutenant governor under Governor Davis in 1890. The other Democratic candidates are: For lieutenant governor, Charles E. Gorman; for secretary of state, John J. Heffernan; for attorney general, Ziba O. Slocum; for general treasurer, Thomas Spencer.

The Republican candidate for governor is D. Russell Brown. The other candidates are: For lieutenant governor, Melville Bull, of Middletown; for secretary of state, George H. Utter, of Westerly; for attorney general, Robert W. Burbank, of Providence; for general treasurer, Samuel Clark, of Lincoln.

Tracy's Appeal for Aldrich.

The big meeting of last night was the one in this city and Secretary Tracy was the central figure of it, though Congressman Burrows was also regarded as a strong card. Secretary Tracy's speech was an appeal in behalf of Senator Aldrich, and he devoted a considerable portion of his time to urging the importance of keeping a man of such experience and ability in the senate. The loss of such a man, he claimed, would be not only to the state but to the nation.

The rest of the speech was an eloquent indorsement of the administration from President Harrison down. The departments were gone into and lauded. Then the speech closed with another appeal on behalf of Senator Aldrich.

Ex-Speaker Reed received an ovation. He came forward and spoke briefly, urging the voters to stand firm, and predicted a sweeping victory. Mr. Reed was much applauded, and as he finished his speech many people crowded on the platform to shake hands with him.

Hyde for Mayor of Hartford.

HARTFORD, April 5.—William Waldo Hyde (Dem.) was elected mayor, receiving 4,607 votes to 3,828 for Henry C. Dwight (Rep.) the present mayor. The Republicans have 12 councilmen and the Democrats 9, a gain of 2 for the Republicans. The board of aldermen stands 11 Democrats to 5 Republicans. The total vote cast was about 1,300 greater than was cast at the mayoralty election two years ago.

The McKinley Men Beat.

NEW ORLEANS, April 5.—The committee of seven appointed to canvass the returns of the late Democratic primaries declared Murphy J. Foster the Democratic nominee for governor, throwing out the returns from some precincts, where there were suspicions of crookedness. The McKinley committee refused to abide by the decision of the majority and bolted.

Anti-Hill Men Meet.

CORNING, N. Y., April 5.—A meeting of the anti-Hill Democrats of Steuben and Yates counties was held in this city. Charles F. Ringsley, a prominent lawyer of Bath, was chosen chairman. All of the speakers denounced the action taken in calling the February convention, and openly announced that Grover Cleveland was their first choice for the presidency.

Strong Quay Resolutions Passed.

SCRANTON, Pa., April 5.—The Republican county convention passed strong Quay resolutions and instructed for W. C. McConnell, of Shamokin, for national delegate. Major Hamilton, of Shamokin; T. B. Bolgbier, of Mount Carmel, and Joseph Logan, of Millton, were elected delegates to the state convention.

The American Girl in London.

Clara (upon the announcement of her friend's engagement to the Duke of Dashbroke)—Did he first tell you that he loved you, dear, and then speak about the passionate yearning in his heart, and all that?

Maud—Why, no.

Clara—Didn't he say something about life's stormy ocean and about his strong protecting arms that would always shield you, and how, ever since he first beheld you, he had been haunted by your pleading eyes, and his love had gone out to you in a great, passionate outburst? Didn't he pay that life without you would be a dreary waste?

Maud—No; certainly not.

Clara (impatiently)—Then I should like to know what the fellow did say.

Maud—He didn't say a word. I did the talking.—Life.

EGAN IS COMING HOME.

Both He and Consul McCreery to Leave Chili.

WASHINGTON, April 5.—Minister Egan and Consul McCreery have been granted leaves of absence by Secretary Blaine and will return from Chili. Assistant Secretary Wharton says: "It is true that Minister Egan is expected to return to the country. He has not been in America since he went into the diplomatic service three years ago, and it is quite natural that he should desire to visit home. His work there has been anything but easy, and I have no doubt that he feels the need of a vacation."

"Does this mean, Mr. Wharton, that the United States intends to sever diplomatic relations with Chili?" was asked,

"Not at all, not at all," he said. "Any such assumption would be totally unwarranted. Our diplomatic relations with Chili are thoroughly satisfactory, and the only question now at issue between the two countries is one of indemnity for the Baltimore affair."

A Bancroft Rumor Ridiculed.

CHICAGO, April 5.—President Hart, of the Chicago club, says that the story that the new twelve club league is governed and controlled by a combination composed of the American association element is all nonsense. He added: "The minutes of the last league meeting show it to be false. In the second place the combination of seven can control the league, as nine votes are the majority. In the third place Byrne has no vote at all in the league councils. In the fourth place Phelps has no vote."

THE FUSE FAILED DEVAT.

His Bomb Would Have Destroyed Spain's Parliament.

CADETS FORM A SUICIDE CLUB.

MADRID, April 5.—The police arrested a Frenchman named Devat just as he was entering a back door of the parliament building. He had excited their suspicion by his efforts to avoid observation and by holding with great care a bundle under his arm. When arrested he tried to throw down the bundle but was prevented. He was taken to a police station, where the bundle was found to contain a dynamite bomb with a fuse ready for lighting. The Frenchman said that he had placed a similar bomb in the lobby entrance, but evidently the fuse had gone out. An examination of the lobby resulted in the discovery of the bomb behind a pillar. Each bomb contained about six pounds of dynamite, enough to have wrecked the whole building.

In the Frenchman's papers were found an anarchistic proclamation containing the statement: "Everything enjoyed by the rich is created by the labor of the poor. The wicked system of modern society prevents workingmen from possessing what they produce. Whatever the form of government, the rich seize the power and rob the poor; and no party dare to oppose them. All the laws serve only to protect the rich in their plundering, let us help ourselves. Let us attack the rich with all conceivable means—with fire, knife and poison. Ownership is theft! Death to the bourgeoisie! Strike now!"

Plans for Destruction.

Other papers contained the details of plans to blow up with dynamite the chamber, the senate, the palace and the opera house, as well as several municipal buildings. The police think that the plots were laid by anarchists in Paris in collusion with members of the Mano Negra in Spain, and that Devat was sent to lead in the execution, as he knew the country, yet was not known to the police.

A Lisbon anarchist named Ferreira was caught lurking near the parliamentary buildings at the time of Devat's arrest and was taken to the same police station. He is thought to be Devat's accomplice. Besides several incendiary placards he had a plan of the palace and the senate chamber. The police think he may have been selected to blow up these buildings in accordance with the plans of Devat.

Each of the bombs seized had a three minute fuse attached to it. Both were made in this city, it is believed, and friends of anarchist suspects are being searched by the police in an effort to find the factory. The news of the discovery was received with grave fears among the wealthier classes. The palace is doubly guarded and extra watchmen have been placed on duty at the banks and municipal buildings.

Mrs. Montagu Convicted.

DUBLIN, April 5.—Intense interest was manifested here in the trial of Mrs. Annie Margaret Montagu, wife of Mr. Robert Acheson Cromie Montagu, of Cromore House, townland of Ballyleace, who was indicted here for the murder by manslaughter for killing her three-year-old daughter Helen. Mrs. Montagu was convicted of manslaughter and sentenced to imprisonment for one year at hard labor. The verdict was accompanied with a recommendation of mercy on the ground that the prisoner was laboring under great delusion and acted under a mistaken sense of duty. The judge ordered that Mrs. Montagu be given labor suitable to her sex and condition in prison.

Five Victims of a Suicide Club.

BUCHAREST, April 5.—Five cadets at the military school in Krajova shot themselves dead in their rooms last night. They were members of a suicide club of nineteen cadets, organized a few weeks ago. Each member then swore on oath to kill himself when his lot was drawn. The government has ordered an investigation into the matter. All the cadets at the school belong to old Roumanian families, and the institution is watched with special interest by King Charles. Other suicides, it is said, will be revealed at the investigation.

MATTER FOR HOUSEKEEPERS.

PRACTICAL INFORMATION AND WELL TRIED RECIPES.

Here You will Find the Experiences of Other Women and You can Profit Thereby—How to be Healthy and Happy.

To break up a very bad cold, bathe the feet and the whole body in water as hot as can be borne, after which drink a cup of hot ginger tea and go immediately to bed.

COMFORT FOR INVALIDS.

A Convenience that Can be Made by Any Furniture Dealer.

A BACK AND ARM REST.

Everyone knows how tedious and tiresome it is for a patient whose illness lasts only a few days to be continually propped up in bed with pillows which require perpetual shifting and re-arrangement. The very ingenious bed or back rest (of which we give an illustration) entirely obviates this difficulty, and gives the greatest comfort possible to the patient. It is, of course, specially valuable in case of asthma or heart disease, or any other complaint which renders a semi-recumbent position necessary, but it will also be found most useful for anyone who is compelled to stay in bed for a short time. For eating or bed to rest, or for using at meal times, it will be found a great boon. As shown in our illustration, with a frame of wood studied with hair and covered with cretonne, this bed-rest costs but little.

Another convenience for the sick is a small portable bed-table, with short legs, which can be placed across the bed to hold either books or a cup of tea, or even a small breakfast tray if required.

FOR COUGHS AND COLDS.

Remedies that are Old-Fashioned but Effective.

As coughs and colds are rampant just now, perhaps some of the following simple and old-fashioned remedies, taken from an ancient manuscript receipt-book, may be found as efficacious as a doctor's prescription costing several dollars: "For difficult breathing and scanty expectoration take three bananas, cut them in small pieces, put them in a bottle or jar, cover with plenty of sugar, and cork the bottle tightly; then place the latter in a kettle of cold water, which is gradually brought to a boil. When the boiling point is reached the process is complete, and a thick syrup will be formed. Take a tablespoonful every hour."

"For an 'all overish' cold, which has not yet become chilly sensations, and if however still to be done, eat it; to a half, fill each half with powdered sugar, and eat while warm. Tea should be taken just before going to bed, and will facilitate perspiration and relieve soreness."

One seldom hears of glycerine as a remedy for a cough nowadays, and yet at one time it was considered a sure remedy for bronchitis. Mixed with rum half and half, or whiskey either, it is a capital medicine, and almost invariably affords relief.

THINGS USEFUL TO KNOW.

Wash the hair in hot water and borax, and let it get thoroughly dry.

For eyes that itch, try bathing them in a weak solution of weak salt water.

The plainest food, like potatoes, vegetables and cereals is the most fattening.

Another mouth wash is warm water in which a little listerine has been dropped.

Brushing the teeth with the finest pulverized willow charcoal will make them white.—Good Housekeeping.

Celery is Very Wholesome.

Another valuable thing is celery. This is soothing to the nerves, and if eaten in time will often avert a serious headache. Keep the roots that are usually thrown away and fry to them for quick relief in the hour of need. Eat celery on every occasion and brace up your nerves in advance for the worries that are sure to come. Then if your digestion is reliable and you can eat a baked potato every day you need fear no bodily ill. A witty and wise woman once said that if the ladies of old had known the value of celery as a nerve tonic and blood purifier, they would have had the pilgrims to Rome, supposing that only there were the two articles named to be obtained.—N. Y. Press.

Women as Inventors.

In a return recently made to the United States government of the statistics of the Patent office at Washington, we learn that from 1790 to July 1, 1888, there were 2,300 patents taken out by women. They embrace all subjects, from dress-improvers to submarine telescopes. For ten years before 1815 there were only two or three female patentees, but every decade since has shown a rapid increase. Probably in last year alone there were nearly 200.—N. Y. Ledger.

Rice Omelette.

Put a quarter of a pound of rice on to cook in a pint of milk; add three tablespoonfuls of sugar and a tablespoonful of blanched almonds chopped fine; cook until the rice is tender; dip custard cups into cold water and fill them with the rice, and set aside to become very cold; turn them on to a flat dish, arrange a border of jelly or marmalade, and serve with powdered sugar or cream.

PITTYPAT AND TIPPYTOE.

All day long they come and go—
Pittypat and Tippytoe;
Footprints up and down the hall,
Playthings scattered all on the floor,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!
Tell-tale streaks upon the door—
By these presents you shall know
Pittypat and Tippytoe.

How they riot at their best!
And, a dozen times a day,
In they troop, demanding lunch—
Only buttered bread will do,
And their butter must be spread
In chinks thick with sugar, too!
Never yet have I said "No,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!"

Sometimes there are griefs to soothe—
Sometimes ruffled brows to smooth;
For—I much regret to say—
Pittypat and Pittypat
Sometimes interrupt their play
With an intermeddle spat;
Fiel oh, fie! to quarrel so,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

Oh, the thousand worrying things
Every day encounter brings!
Hands to scrub and hair to brush,
Search for playthings gone amiss,
Many a murmuring to hush,
Many a little thing to kiss;
Life's indeed a fleeting show,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

And, when day is at an end,
There are little dads to mend;
Little socks are worn in holes,
Little shoes great holes reveal
Little hose, but one day worn,
Ready yawn at toe or heel!
Who but you could work such woe,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

But when comes this thought to me
"Some there are that childless be,"
Stealing to their little beds,
With a love I cannot speak,
Tenderly I raise their heads,
Fondly kiss each velvet cheek.
God help those who do not know
A Pittypat or Tippytoe!

On the floor, along the hall
Baby's playthings scattered lie,
There are proofs in every kind
Of the havoc they have wrought,
And upon my heart you'd find
Just such remarks, if you sought.
Oh, how glad I am 'tis so,
Pittypat and Tippytoe!

—Eugene Field.

JAPANESE HOUSES.

Built Without Using a Single Nail—They Burn Up Quickly.

In the construction of their houses, which are built of wood without an atom of paint, the Japanese, unlike most builders, begin with the roof. This is built on like a gable, and when framed is covered with shingles about the size of two fingers, as thin as a sheet of paper. When it is done they raise it on four upright posts, and it is a pleasure to see. It is so light and yet so strong. The walls are made, like the side-scenes in a theatre, of thin strips of wood, over which are pasted sheets of a coarse, transparent paper. They are slipped into grooves as soon as the roof is raised, and the house is finished without the aid of a nail. In the evenings when the lanterns dispense their soft light round the inside of these white buildings, the spectator seems to be looking at a night picture. During the day time the sides of the houses are slipped out and the house is nearly a roof supported on four posts. Every light movement of the whole interior being then opened to the air. Every part of it is exposed to view and everything can be seen in a moment. The great luxury of the Japanese consists in their mats made of plaited straw. They are of uniform size, about six feet by about three inches thick and soft to the touch. They are never stepped on with shoes, since the Japanese go about the houses either barefoot or in soft slippers they have next to nothing; a small fire-box in one corner, a closet much like the sides of the houses, and a bed to come into the apartments, a small set of shelves on which are arranged the lacquered plates for rice and tea, this is all the furnishing for the dwelling, in which they live, as it were, in the open air. In the middle of each house are two notches or grooves one among all of which a post is placed to support the roof. Being great tea drinkers, great smokers, and great talkers, the Japanese pass a great deal of their time, in groups of seven or eight, seated on their mats around the tea-kettle.—Detroit Free Press.

There is one sweet joy,
Comes to girl or boy
The day on which they look,
For the first time through—
And in a flurry of glee

Ask Maumee to Heed This.

I was suffering from Dyspepsia to a very swell dinner, and when the sweets came on an empty cornucopia was placed at each lady's plate. I could not understand why, and when I asked it was quite the custom to take home something for the children. It seemed such an evidence of sweet thoughtfulness, for what mother so motherly as a dinner, that I did not heard the cry from childish lips, "What did you bring me?"

Nonsense Rhymes.

There once was a fat boy named Ill,
Who was very devoted to pie.
"It's better than bread,"
He frequently said,
And he'd eat till you'd think he would die.

Widely Distributed Animals.

Rats and mice are found almost everywhere. The rabbit is common in the central portions of the African and Australian continents and in the cold regions of the extreme north and south. Bats, too, are widely distributed, and are, indeed, found everywhere in the tropical and temperate portions of the world.

Unbending a Little.

"Do you play marbles?" inquired the little boy from the West.

"No," said the Boston cousin, "when I feel like taking recreation I read a few pages of Aristotle. I tell you," he added, with enthusiasm, "Aristotle was a regular cayuslelle!"—Chicago Tribune.

HOUSEWORK IN HEAVEN.

Haunted Brother Shown Visits of a Trouble With Our Stoves.

A woman cannot work at dressmaking, as many do, without overdoing, and keeping it up many days, or weeks, or months, without overtaxing her constitution, impairing her health, and bringing on a complaint which sometimes proves fatal. Or, if she is not a complete dressmaker, can sew, cook, wash, and do the duties of a well-ordered house, with modern arrangements, and grow healthier every year. The time is fast approaching when all women will look upon housework as a part of every day duties, when all women were healthy. At present, the birthright of vigorous health, and the strong backs, and shoulders, physical life has gone from American women, and is taken up by Irish servants. A startling thing it was I lately heard of myself, a rosy young Irish girl, quite to the horror of his mother and sisters, but delighted himself by the following very complimentary remarks: "If I can get a decent girl, I must have an Irish girl to take care of her, and I cannot afford to support both."—Harriet Beecher Stowe.

WELL WORTH KNOWING.

Mix blacking with kerosene when cleaning Russia iron, and it will look as good as new.

To make glue that will resist the action of water, boil one pound of glue with two quarts of skimmed milk.

The best oil for softening leather and making it pliable is castor oil. It is also good for greasing vehicles.

To banish rats, mix pounded glass with dry corn meal and place near their haunts. Or sprinkle powdered pepper about.

Tools exposed to the sun should be painted with light colored paints, as these reflect, and do not absorb the heat.

Pour dishwater and suds upon the roots of young fruit trees, currant and raspberry bushes. It facilitates their growth.

When cooking onions, set a small pan of cut up vinegar upon the stove and allow the vinegar to boil. It will kill the disagreeable odor.

The Housekeeper's Troubles.

Said a young housekeeper the other day: "You can't imagine," (I can though) "what a task it is to know what to get for dinner. My family likes variety in meats, they won't eat veal or pork, and it keeps me so limited. Sometimes when I go to the butcher's I feel that if he doesn't tell me that he's discovered some new kind of an animal I shall fall in a fit."

It is a puzzle to know what to provide. So few New Yorkers care for the "made dishes" which are the pride and scorn of New England.

Beef and mutton and lamb; lamb and mutton and beef.

Oh, for the advent of some new beast to bring us all relief!

Oh, well for the kind of man who always likes "the same!"

And well for the millionaire, for he can live on it.

But our dinners must go on with the broil, the roast, the stew,

Draining Dishes.

Instead of placing dishes in a pan to drain, put them in a coarse sieve large enough to hold all that are customarily used at one meal. The sieve can rest in the sink, and the water will run through the kitchen drain pipe. When the table dishes are washed, pour over them the hot rinsing water, the soapy water having been thrown away. In addition to the dishes, glasses is washed and your dishes washed and hung up, the rinsing water will have drained off the glasses, leaving not only them, but all clean and sparkly dry.

If this plan is once tried it will be appreciated by every one who has ever washed dishes. It is also helpful in the performance of wiping said wet dishes, as one of leaving the dish water to grow cold in order to wipe the dishes while they are hot.—Good Housekeeping.

The Symbols of Mourning.

Black is by no means the generally accepted form of mourning. Chinese, Japanese and Greeks often in their grief clothe themselves in white. In Turkey blue and violet were worn as the symbols of woe, denoting the happiness the dead enjoy. The Egyptians wore brown, in allusion to the earth to which man returns; the Egyptians yellow, recalling autumn leaves; the Abyssinians, grey. Many royal families morrow in violet, and Cardinals in purple, and up to the time of Charles VIII. in France the widowed queens were white.

How that Nickel Plating is Common.

To polish nickel plating when it becomes dull, use jeweler's rouge and fresh lard, or lard oil, applied to a piece of chamois skin. Rub the parts, using as little of the mixture as possible, and wipe off with a clean, slightly oiled rag, or some cotton waste. In many cases, perhaps in most, no preparation is needed to clean or polish nickel, a simple rubbing with chamois skin or very soft cotton being all that is required.

When Housecleaning.

To take off wall paper previous to painting or papering, wet the old paper thoroughly with a long-handled brush dipped in warm water. Let it rest until the water has penetrated it, and the paper hitherto so tenacious, when you can peel it off with your hands. Do not wet too much at a time. If any small bits are found still adhering, wet them afresh and scrape them off with a strong knife.

Orange Mealy-Pudy.

Make a light paste and roll in an oblong sheet; spread with orange-peel that have been peeled and sliced, and sprinkle well with sugar; sprinkle the grated peel of an orange over all, roll up, place in cake form to secure juice; boil for an hour and a half. Serve with lemon sauce.

Custard Bread Pudding.

Beat four eggs with two tablespoonfuls of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of cornstarch and a small pinch of salt; stir the mixture into a quart of milk, pour over a pint bowlful of grated bread crumbs, put in a greased pudding mold, and steam one hour.

To Make Home Lay.

Fish is an excellent food for poultry, largely increasing the production of eggs. Those who have tried the experiment have discarded all egg-producing foods in the market, and feed fish.

To keep celery firm put it in a tin pan of cold water, also it soon becomes limp.

Carefully Educated.

A popular official in Washington says went fishing with a clergyman. Bites were plentiful, but the official seemed to get more than his share. The clergyman waited patiently and at last was favored with a nibble. Then the line parted and his hopes and a part of his fishing tackle vanished simultaneously. He said nothing for almost a minute, and then turning to his friend remarked:

"John, if my early education had been neglected what do you suppose I should have said?"—Washington Star.

Of Gentle Blood.

He was a gentler specimen of his class than one usually meets, and when he made his appeal for something to eat at the kitchen door of a Cass avenue home he was asked to come in by the fire. As the lady of the house busied about she watched him eating and finally said:

"You don't look as if you had always been a tramp."

"I haven't, ma'am," he replied, without offense at being called a tramp. "I came from a very good family."

She let him eat on without interruption, but after he had finished and was about to go she said:

"You say you came from a good family. May I ask the name?"

"It was Blankleigh, ma'am," he readily responded.

"Why," she said in surprise, "that is the name of the family next door to us."

"Yes'm," he replied, reaching for the door, "I noticed it on the doorplate. That's the family I came from. They gave me the bounce just before I called here," and he got away speedily.—Detroit Free Press.

—By the amended ordinances published in another column it will be seen that the Plainfield Street Railway Company must complete the trial section of their road within six months or forfeit their franchises.

—Some people grumble and say that this warm spell is a "weather breeder"; while others just revel in the enjoyment of the sunshine and wait till bad weather comes before they grumble about it.—Elizabeth Journal.

—The first Indian ever initiated in a lodge of the Red Men in New Jersey was admitted into Red Jacket Tribe of Lambertville, a week or two ago. He is James Meddams, a dry goods clerk, a graduate of Carlisle Indian School.

—"The Charity Ball" at Music Hall fully justified the flattering newspaper notices which preceded it. There is no better play on the American stage today, and it was presented in a pleasing manner last evening, before an appreciative audience.

—Governor Abbett has signed Senate bill 182, by Mr. McMickle, which provides that the township collectors shall be custodians of school moneys in the several districts of their townships and their bonds shall not be discharged until the adjustment of accounts.

—The Central Railroad Company has decided to locate the new station on the south side of the track at White Momentum, and the promise is that it will be be a much more convenient structure than the one recently destroyed by fire, and much more modern in style.

—Two young men from this city undertook to beat their way to New York on Sunday last. They boarded the 4.10 a. m. train and happened to get in a car upon which there was an opera bound for New York. They tried to deceive the conductor by saying that they were members of the troupe. They failed, however, and had it not been for friends they would have been ejected from the train at Fanwood. They are known here as Charles and Pete, "the actors."

—Paris promises to send us something new in the way of a barrel organ which may not be appreciated. The organ grinder sets down his instrument in front of the house he has in view. He winds it up like a clock, after which it will go by itself for an hour, while he adjourns for refreshment to any public house over the way. After the organ has played for a quarter of an hour or so the dwellers begin to find it a nuisance. A servant sent out to see what can be done to stop it reads over the organ the following notice: "If you wish this organ to stop, put a penny in the slot." The penny is dropped in and the organ is silenced. It resumes its melody, however, at the end of five minutes and keeps it up until another penny is squandered.

—Few persons are aware of the fact that the ocean steamship companies, in naming their vessels, have by a simple system made it perfectly easy to connect a given ship with the line to which it belongs. At all events, this is true regarding all the principal passenger lines. For instance, the White Star liners are distinguished by the terminal "ic," as Adriatic, Celtic, Majestic, Britannic, Germanic, Teutonic. Notice that the Cunarders end in "ia," as Aurania, Bothnia, Etruria, Gallia, Servia, Umbria. The Inman lines are all named "City of Berlin, City of Chester, City of New York, City of Chicago, City of Paris, and City of Richmond. The Red Star liners for Antwerp all end in "land," as Belgenland, Friesland, Noordland, Pennland, Rhynland, Westernland, Waesland. The State line boats all have the prefix "the," as State of Georgia, etc. The French line for Havre use "la," as La Champagne, etc. The North German lines have short German names, as Aller, Ems, Lahn, Trave, etc., excepting only the Kaiser Wilhelm II., and can never become confused with the Netherlands whose eight boats all end with "dam," except the F. Ostand, "after the non-profane dams had run out and in ignorance of the Connecticut Hardigam."

He Had No License.

The auction sale of horses which was in progress at the stables of Mr. A. D. Thompson this morning was stopped by Captain Grant because the auctioneer had no license. Auctioneer Tunis J. Carey was employed and the sale proceeded.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

ADDRESSED BY PROMINENT REPRESENTATIVES FROM OVER THE COUNTY.

Hon. Foster M. Voorhees of Elizabeth, Mr. Reese of Westfield, Mr. E. F. Williams and Hon. John Ulrich, the State Organizer, Discuss the Political Outlook for the Coming Year.

Mr. J. Fred MacDonald of this city issued a call calling upon the various representatives of the Republican clubs of this county to meet at Republican Headquarters last evening. A number of the members of the Republican clubs from all parts of the county responded. The meeting was held in the Republican Association Hall.

During the evening an effort was made to discover the ideas of all the politicians present, as to the best methods of effective work in the coming campaign.

Hon. John Ulrich explained in detail the object of the meeting. During the course of his remarks he said that the organization hoped to reach the masses in New Jersey this year.

The reports of the various clubs organized throughout the county made encouraging reports. The question as to the best way of presenting the issue of this county was discussed thoroughly. The unanimous opinion appeared to be that the Republicans could depend upon State issues in their battle for victory.

The Hon. Foster M. Voorhees of Elizabeth was of the opinion that it would be well to discuss topics of interest to Jersey alone. He thought that that would be the best card that could be used during the coming campaign.

Mr. E. F. Williams of Plainfield and Mr. S. W. Reese of Westfield also addressed the members. They both favored tariff and said that it spoke for itself.

At ten o'clock the meeting adjourned and those present say they all felt a personal benefit from what they had heard.

CUT BY JACK THE SLASHER.

At half-past four o'clock yesterday morning Policeman McCracken of Elizabeth was called by a conductor on the Central Railroad to arrest two men who were discovered asleep in a car filled with merchandize on a Broadway siding. The men found there were John Clark and Walter Sullivan, both well known as dissolute fellows. Clark was one of the victims of "Jack the Slasher" in New York some months ago. His throat was badly cut, and for many days his life was despaired of. Sullivan has been wanted on an old warrant issued at the instance of Detective Morris of the Central Railroad. The prisoners were arraigned in police court and sent to jail for 90 days each.

RESCUED FROM DROWNING.

A Fifteen Months' Old Child's Narrow Escape from Death.

The fifteen months' old child of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hausen who reside on Harrison street, North Plainfield, while toddling around the yard near the house this afternoon, fell into a tub of rain water and was nearly drowned. The mother after rescuing the child had much difficulty in resuscitating it.

The Finest in the State.

In speaking of our county roads the Madison Eagle has the following to say:

It is now nearly a year since the completion of the roads that give Union county the finest highways in the county. From Elizabeth, the county seat, they branch out in fan shape through the county, Railway, to Plainfield, to Summit, to Elizabethport and Springfield they join with the Essex county system, that goes through Newark and the famous Oranges, giving fifty miles of first-class road between the extreme points, Elizabeth to Dunellen in Union county. Then the intersecting roads from Elizabeth to Rahway, Rahway to Westfield, Westfield to Fanwood and Scotch Plains on the west, all combined, render any part of the counties accessible at all times of the year. The roads are always in good condition, and has no terrors for the teamster or coachman, and the weight of the load is only limited by the strength of the team.

The rumor that the Central Railroad Company would remove their shops from Elizabethport to some other point along the line of the road appears to be without foundation. The company has bought and paid for nearly eighty acres of land at Elizabethport, north of the Newark Bay Bridge, and will build new car-shops at that point.

The new location is a most desirable one, as it gives the company nearly a mile frontage along the main line, and nearly half a mile along the Newark branch road. The plans for the new shops have been made, and ground, it is expected, will be broken this Spring.

Bicycle Notes.

The racing rules are now broader than heretofore. Wheelmen competing at bicycle tournaments not sanctioned by the Racing Board will be disqualified.

The matter of limiting handicaps in races was not touched upon as was expected. It will remain optional with the managers of race meets to place any limit they see fit upon their races.

The bicycle has been introduced into Central Africa. Two Englishmen arrived at Tabora a few weeks ago with two of the latest improved bicycles. They had traveled a long distance of the way from the coast, more than 300 miles on the machines, and they say they worked finely along the well-trodden native paths.

Racing men commend the adoption of a rule making it compulsory for tournament managers to apply to the Racing Board for dates. Attention to the rule making it necessary for wheelmen to officiate at all bicycle races will necessitate the retention of a bicyclist to have full charge of the bicycle contests at tournaments. According to the new rule his decision upon such races shall be final.

The changes made in the racing rules of the League of American Wheelmen at the meeting of the Racing Board on Saturday and Sunday give general satisfaction. It was expected that some section would possibly be taken to have the L. A. W. recognize road racing, but as the Board made no provision for its recognition among their rules it is presumed that they refused to claim jurisdiction over that department on account of road contests being unlawful.

It is likely that in sections where the racing interests are very active two official handicappers will be appointed. Racing men thought that the League would create twenty-five and fifty mile championship races, such as are held by the National Cyclists' Union of England, but the meagre interest displayed in long-distance contests in this country forbid of their adoption of such events. No handicappers have been officially appointed as yet, but they will be chosen in the course of a few weeks.

The five-year-old daughter of Michael and Jacob Gerard, Camden, was fatally burned, as burned to death yesterday afternoon. She was alone in the house, and her parents were out to visit a neighbor. It is supposed that she began playing around the kitchen stove and that her clothes caught fire. She ran out of the house and was seen by a neighbor, who put out the flames. It was too late, however. She died in a few hours.

The Deadly "Grippe."

The report of the New Jersey State Board of Health for 1891 bears convincing testimony to the fatality of acute lung diseases during the last two years. Consumption, which was the predominant cause of death in all parts of the United States, has taken second place in New Jersey for the ten years ended in 1890 the average number of deaths from consumption was 3,185, and from acute lung diseases, 2625. From July 1, 1890, to June 30, 1891, there died of consumption, and 2232 of acute lung diseases. In the next year, from July 1, 1891, to June 30, 1892, there died 3,204 deaths from acute lung disease, and 3299 from consumption. From July 1, 1892, to June 30, 1893, the deaths from acute lung disease reached the startling total of 4121, and from consumption, 3,043.

This statement shows the excessive mortality from "grippe" and resulting pneumonia, which for the past year is eclipsed under the heading of "acute lung trouble." The statistics for the coming year are not likely to show any diminution in the average mortality from this cause. The severity of the weather for a month past has given the "grippe" a new start, which will doubtless add to the number of victims.

It has been well settled that the spread of the virulent form of influenza chiefly depends upon the non-observance and neglect of precautionary measures. Those persons having charge of the sick should see that the saliva, clothes and bedding are carefully disinfected, even if they do not become soiled. The germs are in the saliva. In coughing few persons are careful enough about spitting. The sheet, the night-gown and the handkerchief are not alone soiled. The dried sputum, which is light, is also much a thing to be dreaded and disposed of as in cases of consumption.—Philadelphia Record.

Officers Elected.

Trinity Commandery, No. 17, K. T., met in regular conclave Monday evening and elected the following officers:

E. C.—R. F. Corbett.
Generalissimo—John Chandler.
C. G.—Asa Collier.
S. W.—C. H. Bogg.
Treasurer—O. T. Waring.
Recorder—F. A. Rogers.
J. W.—Henry Woodland.

—Union county, N. J., has built admirable county roads, and has thereby excited the ambition of adjoining counties whose people have grown ashamed of their mud-holes. If the city of New York would only build a decade of Union county in dealing with the public highways that run through and by its new parks its influence in Westchester county would be very much more wholesome than it is.—N. Y. World.

IN the great contest men work too hard and too long; they fret and worry over-much: Work is good: striving is good: but "the first rule of the game" is this—

Have some H-O for breakfast.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Beware of the polite stranger who hands you a cent which he tells you you have dropped, his pal meanwhile "making" your pocketbook.

This year the University of Michigan, at Ann Arbor, has 2,691 students, the largest number ever in attendance at one time at an American school.

The doctors said that Emperor William's recent ailment was emphysema of the lungs. The general opinion was that the emphysema was in his head.

One signing herself "A Married Woman" remarks that if rich society ladies had to do all their own housework and take care of their family bowldes, they would not have time to think of evil doings. Still, there are not wanting on the record cases where the "mechanics' wives," whom she holds up as models, have gone wrong. Even farmers' wives break out sometimes.

New York City's Industries.

Counting in Jersey City there is gathered about the one center not less than 3,000,000 people, of whom all the adults either work for their living or subsist on the money they inherited, thus getting it in what Dundreary says is the only respectable way. As yet New York is the greatest manufacturing center in the Union. The leading industry is clothing, of which is made there annually nearly a million dollars' worth. Next comes the manufacture of malt liquors. One of the largest of New York's beer factories is euphoniously named Hell Gate brewery. The industry third in rank is the printing business—the making of books and newspapers. Half a million newspapers would be a moderate estimate of the number consumed in Greater New York every day. Thus New Yorkers demand first something to put outside, second something to put inside, and third something for their brains.

Dr. D. Hayes Agnew, of Philadelphia, Garfield's physician in his last illness, and one of the most distinguished surgeons America has produced, is another one of the victims of the Russian influenza. Dr. Agnew took such good care of himself that up to the age of seventy, three years ago, none of the signs of age were manifest in him. He fulfilled all the duties of his practice, and also those that devolved on him as professor of surgery in the University of Pennsylvania. But when grip first appeared in this country he succumbed. The second year he was seized with it again, and the weakening influence of the disease began to be manifest. This winter for the third time he had it, but although visibly failing in health he continued his surgical duties as usual. The fatal stroke that brought his death fell on him while he was performing an operation. Three attacks of grip, followed by a severer one, proved the weakness of the strong, cheery man whom, up to the age of seventy, time could not conquer.

German-American Marriages.

It is a curious paper that which Baroness von Wedel writes in The Cosmopolitan about how marriages between American girls and German noblemen turn out. Mme. von Wedel was herself an American girl, married when very young to a German nobleman. She therefore understands her subject. As to the prospects for happiness of American girls in a German marriage, she says such matches may safely be contracted if the bride is either a worldly minded, practical woman who will not let her emotions trouble her, or in case of very young and very gentle tempered girls. "Wives who possess little sentiment or only soft sentiments yield readily to their environments."

It is quite the proper and right thing for German noblemen to look for rich wives. Why, the baroness explains:

It is a false prejudice to suppose that the titled gentlemen who take American wives are mere fortune hunters and degenerated specimens of nobility. They are often men, it is true, who could not marry women without dowries; for gentlemen on the Continent, as it must be kept continually in mind, are excluded from the chance of making money. The best of these changes in the trade or manufacture and tradition binds them to service under the king as the head of their caste. They are brought up for the royal army or the royal civil service, where the honors they may attain to are the highest in the land, but where the salaries attached to rank or office are small and long in coming. Dowry giving and taking has remained under the circumstances a hoary, unquestioned custom, so that the lover who looks for a wife with money may be totally unconscious of his expectation being an unworthy one.

The German nobleman thinks that the honor of an alliance with his noble name is quite compensation enough for any woman alive, no matter how brutal or extravagant in himself may be. He cannot marry a rich German girl from the trade or professional class, for he would sink to a social depth beyond which he could never rise. If he marries an untitled woman, she must be an American, for, "through having no classification at home, Americans are received into any class abroad." If the noble German husband proceeds to squander and ruin the fortune his American wife brought him, what then? That was what he married her for. The properly trained German wife will immediately begin to economize on her own expenditures as her lord and master grows extravagant. But this is not quite what American girls expect to do. Hence there is misery.

TO CONTEST AT CHICAGO

Mr. Fairchild Tells What the Cleveland Men Will Do.

RHODE ISLAND'S ELECTION DAY.

The Excitement Intense and Every Vote Gotten Out by Both Parties—Report That Ex-Secretary Bayard Will Nominate Mr. Cleveland for President.

BUFFALO, April 6.—A large and enthusiastic meeting of anti-Hill Democrats was held in Music hall. Nearly 2,000 men from heavily organized clubs, and headed by the Cleveland Democracy escorted the speakers, ex-Secretary Fairchild and ex-Mayor William B. Grace, of New York, from their hotel to the hall. The meeting was called to order by John Ireland, chairman of the anti-Hill county committee, and Mayor Charles F. Bishop was made chairman. The resolutions adopted state that of the 29,000 men who voted the Democratic ticket in Erie county last November, less than 1,000 were represented by the delegates to the "Albany snap convention." The Albany convention was denounced, and the call for the convention to be held at Syracuse on May 31 was ratified. The resolutions concluded as follows:

Senator Hill Assailed.

Resolved, That we disclaim in connection with the movement in favor of the Syracuse convention any desire to disrupt or in any wise injure the Democratic party; but we insist that our participation in such movement is based upon the most earnest desire to preserve its integrity and insure its success in the coming national contest, and upon the reliable and well warranted belief that such will be the result.

Resolved, That whatever may have been the estimation in which Senator Hill has been held in the past by the Democrats of this state, it is now evident that the course he has pursued with reference to the vital issues of tariff reform and honest money; his unscrupulous political methods in this state since last November; his unmanly and unsuccessful efforts to obtain the presidential nomination, and his continued and contemptuous neglect of senatorial duty, has estranged from his support nine-tenths of the Democratic voters in the state, and his nomination, or the nomination of any man supposed to be subject to his influence or control, would result in the overwhelming defeat of the national ticket in the state.

Ex-Secretary Fairchild Speaks.

Ex-Secretary Fairchild was the first speaker. In the course of a long speech he said:

We claim that the organization of the Democratic party in this state has violated its trust. We claim that it has so used its powers as to produce a convention which did not represent the wishes of the people of the state. We further claim that the action of the convention which met in Albany on Feb. 22 was not or product of the will of the Democrats of this state. You will remember that instructions were unanimously given by the delegates to present the name of David B. Hill to the national convention as the sole choice of the Democracy of New York for the presidential nomination.

You will remember that this last Democratic president was not nominated, nor was his administration sanctioned, in that convention. Surely, this was not the expression of the wishes or the feelings of the Democracy of this state. We claim that we can go to the members of the Democratic party in this state, and get from them such an expression of opinion, such an authorization to their delegation, which shall be sent to Chicago from Syracuse, as will convince the world that the convention of Feb. 22 does not represent the Democracy of the state, and that the delegation of May 31 does represent it.

The ex-secretary said that the only way to fight the Hill men was to send a contesting delegation to Chicago.

We propose to present our case to the national convention in the way in which it invites us to do—to make our arguments, to address ourselves to the reason and judgment of those who sit in judgment upon our case, and then we propose to abide the result loyally and faithfully; and all we ask of our opponents is that they recognize our right to present our case, and that they be prepared, as we are, to abide by the decision of the last tribunal of the party.

We will not only urge that the state Democratic committee of New York, in calling a mid-winter convention, overstepped its authority and were in technical error, but, in addition to this, we will show that the whole proceedings of that convention, and that the action of the snap convention not only misrepresents the Democracy of the state of New York, but that it was not authorized to misrepresent that Democracy, and that every action taken by that convention is a nullity in conscience as well as law.

Ex-Mayor Grace Talks.

The next speaker was ex-Mayor Grace, of New York, who said that Tammany Hall was unfit to represent the sentiment of true democracy. He described at length the efforts made by the provisional committee to form a true Democratic organization and said the result had exceeded its utmost expectations. In conclusion he said: "That the process of awakening has been going on around us the signs of the times abundantly prove, and these all such signs fail we will see our efforts crowned with success in the nomination and election to the presidency of Grover Cleveland."

Frank M. Thorn, of this city, created some laughter by referring to David B. Hill as "Young Chicory," and devoted the greater part of a clever speech to a scathing attack upon his political methods.

The Rhode Island Election.

PROVIDENCE, April 6.—The battle for supremacy in this state is being waged fiercely. The excitement is intense, and every vote is being gotten out by the Democrats and Republicans. It has been a campaign of wonderful enthusiasm. Nothing else but the election is thought of. Business is suspended, and you can't get the people to talk of anything else. All this, of course, tends to make the feeling run high, and is the best evidence that the entire vote will be cast.

Rhode Island today elects governor, other state officers and the legislature. The total vote of Rhode Island is only about 62,000. The Republicans carried the state in 1888 by 3,173 plurality, but the Democrats had a plurality in 1889 of 4,419; in 1890, 1,500, and in 1891, 1,254.

Close of the Campaign.

Last night a great meeting of all the colored Republican clubs was held in Rhode hall, under the auspices of the Thomas B. Reed club. At Pawtucket Congressman Dolliver held a big meeting. At Providence Roswell G. Horr had an audience of nearly 2,000, while a telegram from Newport tells of a magnificent demonstration which was addressed by Speaker Reed, Melville Bull and Rhode Island's present senator, Nelson W. Aldrich, while in Woonsocket Senator Frye wound up the campaign.

Bayard to Nominate Cleveland.

WILMINGTON, Del., April 6.—The Democracy of Delaware is said to be solidly for the renomination of Cleveland for the presidency. Hon. Thomas F. Bayard has put on his political harness and will head the Delaware delegation to Chicago in the ex-president's interest. A close personal friend of Mr. Bayard says that the ex-secretary will do all in his power to defeat Cleveland's renomination, and will work early and late for the success of his candidates.

Democrats in Caucus.

ALBANY, April 6.—The Democratic assemblymen held a caucus last night for the purpose of committing certain of the country Democrats to the Hill ticket, as well as to some of the other measures that the Democrats expect to pass. Messrs. Laing, Ladue, Hall, Fisher, Norcott and Cole were absent. As they were the very ones that were to be labored with the caucus was a failure.

Brice for President.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The following dispatch has been sent out to many newspapers: "The Democratic political situation is altered to the extent that a new presidential combination is being pushed to the front. It is to be all-powerful at Chicago and nominate ex-Chicago Senator Calvin S. Brice for president and Congressman W. J. Bryan, of Nebraska, for vice president."

Peace in Louisiana Again.

NEW ORLEANS, April 6.—The differences between the Democratic factions has at last been settled. When the majority of the canvassing committee declared Murphy J. Foster the nominee the McEnery committeemen bolted, but later decided to submit. Senator Foster will undoubtedly be the next governor.

Ex-Speaker Reed Denies It.

NEWPORT, R. I., April 6.—Ex-Speaker Thomas B. Reed, who is in this city, was shown the Washington dispatch which said that he contemplated retiring from congressional life after the end of his present term. Mr. Reed dwelled the report, and laughingly said, "I haven't heard of it myself."

Elections in Chicago.

CHICAGO, April 6.—At the aldermanic and town elections the council changed but little in complexion, remaining strongly Democratic. A number of independent candidates were elected, but the loss of seats is about equally divided between the Republicans and Democrats.

Women Not Anxious to Vote.

KANSAS CITY, April 6.—Elections were held all over Kansas, but little interest in party lines were not drawn. The woman vote, which has been a factor in past elections, was conspicuous by its absence.

Harrison and Reid.

WASHINGTON, April 6. "The Star says: There is some talk in political circles here of Whitelaw Reid as an associate of Mr. Harrison on the presidential ticket, and it is believed that he will work for that honor in New York.

Prohibitionists Against Fusion.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 6.—Chairman Hall, of the Prohibition state central committee, is out against fusion with the People's party. He says the Prohibitionists could gain nothing by it.

WHITE ELECTED PRESIDENT.

New Circuit of the Eastern Baseball League Formed at Albany.

ALBANY, April 6.—At the Eastern league meeting C. D. White was elected president, secretary and treasurer of the organization. The claims of the Syracuse and Rochester clubs, which were in arrears with their guarantee money, were considered. The representatives from both cities when called upon in the meeting produced the $1,000 guarantee money. The league will be composed of ten clubs. The circuit as adopted is as follows: Northern district—Buffalo, Rochester, Syracuse, Albany and Hamilton. Southern district—Philadelphia, Providence, New Haven, Troy and Binghamton.

The Exclusion Bill Denounced.

PITTSBURG, April 6.—At a meeting of the Pittsburg Board of Trade in this city, a motion was unanimously adopted denouncing the Chinese exclusion bill just passed by congress as a menace to Christianity and commercial intercourse, and likewise with the civilization of the Nineteenth century.

TONAWANDA, Pa., April 6.—A. W. Johnson, of Akron, shot himself near the Central track, on Minerva street, at 6 a. m. An hour later, at the same place, Godfried Kenyll was struck by a Michigan Central train and probably fatally injured.

Shot His Paramour's Husband.

BRISTOL, Tenn., April 6.—J. R. Jordan, a farmer living near Bristol, killed N. C. Adams, the husband of his paramour. Adams was endeavoring to keep Jordan from forcing an entrance into the woman's bedroom.

Cogswell Named Again.

CONCORD, N. H., April 6.—Governor Tuttle, with the consent of the executive council, has nominated Colonel Thomas Cogswell for railroad commissioner. Last session he had several times rejected Cogswell's nomination.

Revolution in Hawaii.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 6.—Admiral Brown, stationed at Honolulu, is said to have notified the secretary of the navy, in cipher message, that a revolution is pending in Hawaii, and asking for instructions.

THE COAL COMBINE BILL.

Governor Abbett Vetoes It to Protect Consumers.

HE DENIES THE LEGISLATURE

New Jersey's Chief Executive Says That the Members Thought the Measure Would Enable Railroads to Reduce Expenses and Lower the Price of Fuel.

TRENTON, April 6.—The veto of the Reading coal combine bill by Governor Abbett is the sensation in political and business circles here. The principal reason for not signing the measure that was to have made the coal combine legal was because the bill does not contain provisions for the proper protection of the consumer from the advance in the price of coal.

"I have grave doubts of the constitutionality of the bill," writes the governor. "The fifth section purports to suspend the operation of an act entitled 'An act respecting the leasing of railroads' in its application to certain operations. The wording is that the act referred to shall not apply to such railroad corporations as shall within twenty-four hours after the passage or approval of this act file in the office of the secretary of state a copy of their lease and the corporations may thereafter enter into any further or other leases. This appears to be its contravention of article 4, section 7, paragraph 4 of the state constitution, which provides as follows: 'No law shall be revived or amended by reference to its title only, but the act revived or the section amended shall be inserted at length.'"

Not a Novel Scheme in New Jersey.

The governor observes that the scheme of the proposed act was not a novel one in New Jersey. All the great railroad companies crossing the state, except the New Jersey Central, are in the control of and operated by foreign railroad companies, which are largely the leasing of domestic corporations. The Central railroad was formerly operated by the Reading until the chancellor set aside the lease.

Under this general policy the state has not suffered any injury, unless the fact of the foreign control of domestic corporations is an injury. It is quite plain that the members of the legislature considered that in passing this bill they were pursuing the settled policy of the state, which has been the policy of the state for years, to encourage the consolidation of railroad corporations. A careful examination of the act fails to disclose any authority conferred by it which would assist any combination to control the necessaries of life.

There is nothing in the bill which authorizes a control of prices. It is upon the natural rule of supply and demand. Experience shows that consolidations have increased the price of the article transported.

Why the Bill Was Passed.

The governor says that the combination of all railroads carrying coal across the state might place it within the power of these corporations to control the price of coal, but there is nothing in the act or in joint resolves proper that would injure the state or the public.

The governor gives the reasons that induced the members of the legislature to vote for the bill. The legislature thought the new combination would create a strong competitor to railroad consolidations of corporations already existing. Others of the members thought it would decrease the expenses of bringing coal to the state.

Still others thought to reduce expenses and the cost of coal. The question is, however, open as to who would get the benefit of the consolidation, the company or the consumer. It is quite plain to be understood to reduce the price of coal. The fact that the bill was not delivered to the governor until the last day, showed that it was regarded by the chief executive would see that the interests of the people were protected. The governor is satisfied that the bill was not intended to increase the price of coal.

If wrong in this belief, he had power to call the legislature together in special session and repeal it. He did not think it wise to pass legislation in such a shape that would make an extra session necessary.

At the Combine's Mercy.

In conclusion Governor Abbett says: "The wisdom of insisting upon legislative protection for the consumer in any bill authorizing a consolidation of the character contemplated has been deeply impressed upon my mind by the fact that since the passage of this act the market price of coal has been increased to retail dealers, and in addition the officials of the consolidated companies have stated that there has been no agreement made that would prevent a further advance in the price of coal, and prices will continue to advance without any such agreement. The question as to whether the price of coal will be advanced is, therefore, left almost absolutely with the consolidated companies. Additional legislation would be necessary, in my judgment, to protect consumers from the exercise of this power to increase prices if the corporations should deem it to be proper or necessary to increase prices for the benefit of their stockholders.

"The fact that the consolidation of the railroads engaged in the transportation of coal and other freight across the state of New Jersey will materially reduce the cost of the transportation to the companies is certain. The consolidation of the roads affected by this bill will reduce the expenses of bringing coal from the mines of Pennsylvania to tidewater, and the cost of the individual consumer should be correspondingly reduced. It is here that the most serious defect in the proposed legislation is found. This reduction in cost is to be the direct outcome of privileges granted by the state, and as the power comes from the people, the saving to be effected should be placed at least in part to their credit.

To Protect the Consumer.

"The bill does not provide for this, and it seems to me that the proper legislation is that, as a condition precedent to the approval of this legislation, enforceable agreements could be made between the state and the common carriers affected whereby the cheapening of the cost of transportation would appreciably reduce the price of coal to consumers.

"I have carefully examined this question, and I am satisfied that such a contract, unless its provisions were recognized and approved by legislation, could be made binding upon the parties and could not be enforced. Until proper steps have been taken for the regulation of the cost of transportation and the protection of the consumer, I would not be inclined to confer the powers sought in this bill. In view of the failure of this bill to contain provisions which will absolutely protect the consumer, and my conviction that a valid agreement for this purpose cannot be entered into without additional legislation, I have constrained to withhold my approval of this bill."

CHINA WILL RETALIATE.

Her Diplomatic Relations with America to Be Broken Off.

FILIBUSTERING IN THE HOUSE.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—It is said that the Chinese minister has indicated to Senator Sherman, who is chairman of the foreign relations committee, that if the extreme Chinese exclusion bill becomes a law in the form that it passed the house the Chinese government will sever all diplomatic relations with this country. With his usual reticence concerning pending legislation, Senator Sherman would say nothing for publication. Representative Hitt, who led the opposition to the bill, said to a reporter:

Only One Sequel Possible.

"There is, of course, only one possible sequel to the enactment of such a law as the Geary bill. The Chinese minister and his entire suite would at once quit the United States, and all relations between the empire and this country would be terminated. Such intimations have come to me pretty directly, although not, of course, in an official form. There is even fear that the Chinese government, fearing of the radical action of the house of representatives, might cable the Chinese minister here to at once ask for his passports without waiting for the action of the senate. The Chinese minister has been endeavoring to make his government understand that it is the general wish of the executive branch of this government, while restricting undesirable immigration, not to violate treaty obligations, but it is a difficult task.

The Chinese Leaving Us.

"If I had but a few minutes more Monday I think I could have made it plain to the house that there was nothing in the cry that an army of Chinese was along the Canadian border waiting to descend upon this country. It could have been shown that instead of Chinese coming to this country they are actually leaving it. There have been 18,000 departures in excess of the arrivals since Oct. 1, 1888. Last year the arrivals in British Columbia exceeded the departures by only 994."

"Ways That Are Dark."

Representative Geary, of California, in an interview on the subject of the Chinese exclusion bill, passed by the house, condemns the system of taking bail in Chinese cases. He says:

"There are now 8,000 Chinese habeas corpus cases on the docket in San Francisco. A ship comes in with 500 or 600 Chinese. A Chinaman swears he is the owner of real estate, his bond is taken, and the newly arrived celestial departs. When the case comes for trial the immigrant has disappeared, and the Chinaman who went bond has transferred all of his property. The district attorney at San Francisco has $200,000 worth of bonds on which he cannot collect a cent."

"Cannot China expel Americans from her territory?" Mr. Geary was asked.

"Certainly. But what would that amount to? There are in China today exactly 1,092 Americans. Of this number twenty-eight are in trade, and the remainder are missionaries, seamen and stragglers. Suppose these people are expelled. Then we can retaliate by expelling 130,000 Chinese who are in this country, according to Mr. Porter's census. Do you think China wants to go into the expulsion business? Hardly, especially when her citizens who are here send more than a million dollars back to China annually as the result of their interference with American labor."

"Will the bill pass the senate?"

"I have no doubt of it."

In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The senate settled down to the consideration of the Indian appropriation bill. The discussion was kept up mainly by senators understood to be unfavorable to present action on the silver question. If their object was the consumption of time so as to shut out further silver debate, it was successful for the day.

Filibustering in the House.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—The session of the house was entirely consumed in filibustering on the free wool bill. The Democrats refused to allow one hour on each side for debate on the first section when Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, made a motion to that end.

The speaker decided that Mr. Burrows was out of order when the latter attempted to effect an arrangement of time respecting the debate. This caused Mr. Burrows to resort to filibustering methods which, under his leadership, were successfully carried out until 5:20 o'clock, when the house, finding itself powerless to transact business, adjourned. There is no telling now when the free wool bill will reach the senate.

To Sue the Erie for $45,000.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Four suits for damages, aggregating $45,000, will be brought against the Erie Railroad company at the next session of the Rockland county court. The suits grow out of the collapse of the Erie coal sheds at Piermont last fall, when three men were killed and several injured.

World's Fair Buildings Damaged.

CHICAGO, April 6.—A heavy gale damaged the Illinois state building at the World's fair grounds to the extent of $15,000. A large portion of the main dome was blown down. The new brick power house adjoining Machinery hall was also damaged to the extent of about $2,000.

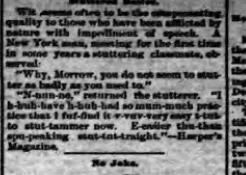
Scattered Buttons.

"We seem often to be the corresponding quality to those who have been afflicted by nature with impediment of speech. A New York man, meeting for the first time in some years a stuttering classmate, observed:

"Why, Morrow, you do not seem to stutter as badly as you used to."

"N-nun-no," returned the stutterer. "I h-h-h-have h-h-h-had so mum-much practice that I for-for-for-forget how t-t-t-to stut-tammer now. E-enjoy the-then eye-peaking stut-tut-tut-tut-tut-taught."—Harper's Magazine.

No John.



Party Behind Screen—Oh, you may laugh as much as you like, but I tell you it's no joke to wake up and find you've been robbed of everything you possessed—clothing, money, valuables, all gone, even my wig and false teeth, and I am to be married in a couple of hours too; that's where it hurts me most.—Life.

CONGRESSIONAL REAPPORTIONMENT

ALBANY, April 6.—The senate has passed the congressional reapportionment bill. Twenty-two districts are figured to be Democratic; twelve are Republican. St. Lawrence county was taken from the Twenty-third district and put with Fulton and Hamilton and Saratoga in the Twenty-second. Warren, Essex and Washington were moved from the Twenty-second to the Twenty-third, and are now with Clinton and Franklin in that district.

Senator Erwin made an ineffectual speech against the change. Tompkins county was taken from the Twenty-eighth and put in the Twenty-sixth with Delaware, Chenango, Broome and Tioga counties. To the Twenty-eighth instead of Tompkins were added Ontario and Yates from the Thirtieth district. Niagara county was changed from the Thirty-third district to the Thirtieth to replace Ontario and Yates.

Buffalo is now divided into two districts—the Thirty-second and Thirty third. The bill was passed by a party vote of 17 to 14. Mr. Edwards, the independent from Cattaraugus, voted with the Republicans.

Three Republicans, voting with sixteen Democrats, passed the Huckleberry road bill in an amended form. Twelve Republican senators counting Mr. Edwards, the Independent from Cattaraugus) and one Democrat, Mr. Walker of Elmira, voted against it.

The supply bill, as changed by the senate ways and means committee, was passed.

Young Silliman Stabbed.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 6.—Conrad M. Silliman, Jr., son of the late C. B. Silliman, insurance agent and coal operator, was fatally stabbed at noon by his uncle, John Metz, who is a resident of William Penn, and who during the life of the elder Silliman was employed as superintendent of the Silliman coal operations, which were at a demand for a settlement for service, which resulted in an altercation. Metz has been arrested.

Rooming Grant's Monument.

NEW YORK, April 6.—A new movement to complete General Grant's tomb received a great boom. Two meetings were held at the Holland House, at which large subscription committees were appointed, representing the furniture and wall paper manufacturers, decorators, street car makers and other important interests. A meeting of the Brooklyn committee was held in the city hall, at which General Slocum was elected chairman.

Chief Rylands Wins.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., April 6.—Judge Prentice has given a decision instructing Chief John Ryland as to the command of the police force pending the application to the supreme court. He took that office in the morning when the formal order was issued. The chief's victory over those who fought to remove him is now regarded as complete.

She Wants $10,000 Damages.

NYACK, N. Y., April 6.—A suit for $10,000 damages has been brought by Mary Kinsella, a chambermaid at the Prospect House, against Francis South wick, a prominent citizen of Brooklyn. Mr. South wick's family lost some jewelry, and the chambermaid was locked up, but afterward discharged because of a lack of proof.

Banta May Be Reinstated.

NEW YORK, April 6.—E. C. Stanton, the successor of Theodore M. Banta as cashier of the New York Life Insurance company, has resigned, and it is considered probable that Mr. Banta will be reinstated. Ex-Governor Thompson, of South Carolina, has been appointed comptroller of the company.

Another Fight for Gibbons.

NEW YORK, April 6.—Austin Gibbons, of Paterson, N. J., and Stanton Abbott, of England, lightweight pedestrians, have been matched to fight to a finish before the National sporting club, London, Eng., for a $2,000 purse and $1,000 a side. The fight will take place in October.

For Newark's Public Building.

WASHINGTON, April 6.—Bids were opened at the treasury department for the iron work ceiling and floor contracts, etc., of the Newark (N. J.) public building. The Tacony Iron and Metal company, of Philadelphia, was the lowest bidder at $20,985.

Coal Strikers Weakening.

LONDON, April 6.—The last of the coal strikers are beginning to weaken. The Staley Bridge miners offered to resume work and give £50 to charity in case the employers would take back all the men. The offer was refused.

Dr. Henry A. Cannon Dead.

ELIZABETH, N. J., April 6.—Dr. Henry A. Cannon, aged seventy-one years, died at his home in Elizabeth. He was grand master of the Masonic fraternity of New Jersey for two terms, and was the state historian of the order.

A Kiss Would Have Saved Her.

WHEELING, April 6.—William Mater, a baker, twenty-five years old, had a quarrel with his wife, whom he married several months ago. He asked her to kiss him and "make up." She refused and he shot her dead.

MURDERER DEEMING'S FURY.

He Fiercely Attacks Several Men Who Identified Him.

MELBOURNE, April 6.—The inquest upon the body of Mrs. Deeming, formerly Miss Matlock, which was found buried beneath the floor of the house occupied by the Deemings at Windsor, and for whose murder Deeming is now in custody, opened in the city court house.

To place the question of Deeming's identification beyond all doubt he was placed in the courtyard of the jail with twenty other prisoners. Here he was identified by fifty-two persons who had known him under fifteen aliases. As he was walking through the corridor where several of the men who had identified him had assembled, he became wild with rage, and breaking away from his guards he rushed upon them and struck one of them. He attempted to hit others, but the guards dragged him to his cell.

In the Rubber Trust Now.

NEW YORK, April 6.—At a meeting of the directors of the United States Rubber company, the purchase of the New Jersey Rubber company was consummated. The board of directors was increased and Henry L. Hotchkiss, president of the L. Candee company, of New Haven; Charles L. Johnson, treasurer of the same company; M. C. Martin, president, and James Dashiel, secretary of the New Jersey Rubber Shoe company, were elected directors of the United States Rubber company.

Monitor Winslow Ericsson's Will.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., April 6.—The will of the late John F. Winslow, of Monitor fame, was opened in the surrogate's court here. The estate is worth between $3,000,000 and $4,000,000, the bulk of which is left to the widow, Harriet W. Winslow, and her only daughter and an adopted son, in trust. The American Bible society gets $10,000, and the Presbyterian church, Poughkeepsie, $30,000.

Egner Was Insane.

GREENFIELD, Mass., April 6.—Miss Caroline Pfink, the surviving member of last Sunday's boating party, which ended in the death of five persons at Willis Mills, says that Joseph Egner was violently insane and tried to swamp the boat when it reached the middle of the river. Failing in that, he let it float down the river until it went over the falls.

Liberty to Have a Brighter Lamp.

GIRLS EAT HAPPILY.

A Unique Restaurant in a Busy Portion of New York City—An Unpretentious Place That Has for Its Customers a Large Number of Working Girls.

From a narrow entrance on Greenwich street well worn stairs lead to a room where Mrs. Smith gives a hot meal to twenty cents. No outer sign above or below indicates anything to minister to inner comfort, but the odor of cabbage is apparent at times in a manner too strong to be really prepossessing. The room occupies the whole floor of what evidently had been a large loft. Half of the front of the room is divided off by a light partition that misses the ceiling by several feet. The other half, carpeted with a Brussels carpet, has an easy chair, several rockers and other chairs.

The back part of the room is separated by an apology for a partition that does not pretend to hide from view the high priestess of the establishment, Mrs. Smith, who is busy continually preparing vegetables, cooking or talking to some of her "girls" at four tables in the center of the room and another table that occupies the whole rear precinct of the kitchen in the demand for more room.

"You must just help yourselves here," a rosy cheeked young woman remarked to a newcomer. "I always go out in the kitchen myself and get my hot plate and help myself to the meat and vegetables I like best."

She called a little girl, however, to wait at the table, and from the choice of steak and corned beef the latter was chosen. All helped themselves liberally to some apple sauce and nearly white potatoes that contrasted very favorably with the same vegetables that are served in more pretentious restaurants.

"I wonder if I could have some hot cabbage?"

In spite of remonstrance she returned with a liberal dish, the odor of which was not so disagreeable after all. Of course almost everybody had a piece of Mrs. Smith's genuine homemade mince pie, with a cup of tea or coffee.

On the tables was an unusual collection of napkin rings. A pretty straw ring, a wooden one, and other were considered by the worse for wear.

"We bring our own rings and then we are sure to have the same napkins every time," was the explanation.

"Don't you have fresh napkins every day?"

"Well, you might not if you didn't know where the clean ones are kept, but we have our rings and put the napkins away in the drawer, and no one touches them. You don't mind using your own napkin more than once."

"I thought it very funny the first day I came, but the second time I went right out to the kitchen and waited on myself, as I do now, and I come all the time. Gus brought me here."

Gus is the owner of the pretty straw ring, and is very pretty, with soft brown hair and eyes, oval face and dainty mouth that closed over nearly perfect teeth.

The most expensive part of the meal is paying the bill. Mrs. Smith's method does credit to her heart and good faith in woman kind, but it would not recommend itself to the average business man. Luncheon for the week are one dollar (kept account of by the girls and paid for when they get it), or twenty cents for a single meal. Mrs. Smith couldn't charge a five dollar note for the newcomer. "Oh, never mind. You can pay it when you come again."

On another visit the scene was different. The tables were all cleared, but Mrs. Smith was equal to the occasion. In a few minutes plates, knives and forks had been laid, tea had been made and fish cakes in a spider on a gas stove gave out an appetizing odor.

Mrs. Smith is a remarkably pleasant woman to look at—plump and pretty, with wavy hair that is growing lovingly white. She is bright and motherly. Her husband is the janitor of an office building in Broadway, and the family live there. Some years ago a young man who was employed in an office in the building and visited Mrs. Smith's rooms occasionally after much coaxing persuaded Mrs. Smith to give her hot luncheon at noon. Soon afterward the mother of another young woman inquired if Mrs. Smith would make a like delicate daughter a cup of hot tea at noon. Others ensued one after another. One girl who was a telegraph operator wired to a friend in another building, "Don't you come up to Mrs. Smith's to luncheon?"

"Does she have pickles?" was the query.

"Yes."

"Well, I'll come."

Within a year forty girls went to Mrs. Smith's room for luncheon, but in the meantime the manager of the building refused pleasantly but firmly to have forty girls use his elevators just at the noon hour. Mrs. Smith was told that she might have a few girls, but serving forty was stretching the point.

"Which ones shall I tell to leave?" she asked despairingly. Then she said, desperately, "I'll keep them all."

New quarters were rented in Cedar street, and afterward in Greenwich street. The girls at times a single meal during the moving. One girl has told another, until from eighty to ninety customers go regularly to Greenwich street for lunch soon, and Mrs. Smith looks out for all. The girls almost without exception are pretty, ladylike and well dressed, and are stenographers or telegraph operators.

One of Mrs. Smith's girls was chilled by a long ride on a winter's day, she runs down to Mrs. Smith, and after getting a hot drink and something to eat was like another woman, or, if in the summer she takes a vacation of an afternoon and a trip to Coney Island, she sends word that she would like to have supper on that particular day, and she doesn't enjoy it any the less after a breath of salt air.

A few days before Christmas Mrs. Smith prepares the very best dinner that she knows how to prepare, and the girls revel in turkey, pie pudding, fruit, wines and other good things of a regular Christmas dinner. "Of course some of the girls won't take wine," Mrs. Smith explained, "but I want them to have everything that is long to such a dinner. The girls look thoroughly enjoy the dinner and show their appreciation in a substantial manner. One Christmas it took the form of a Rogers statuette with a diamond in the center. Mrs. Smith's assistants, of whom there are five or six, also share in the remembrance.

Mrs. Smith is a philanthropist in her way. Her assistants are well paid, and after the luncheon is cleared away they take home the food that remains. One of these women, a widow with five children, gets almost enough provisions for her family.—New York Sun.

SAYINGS OF CHILDREN.

Our little Jarvis, four and a half years old, was petting our cat. He is always fond of the cat, and said to me, playfully, "See the bell around her neck," he said. "do you know what that is for? That's where she rings when she wants to tell the mouse dinner is ready."—E. F.

A little girl of two and a half, on first seeing the side of a kitten's face, said, "Grandie's dot a kitty's head on his side." She also spent of his hair on the thin cushion and exclaimed reproachfully, "Dan pa's losing he hair, too."—F. B. D.

The five-year-old son of a friend was recently informed that his aunt, a widow, had married again. A few days later, wishing to speak of the new uncle, but not knowing his name, he bashfully left a statement and then said, "You know, I mean Aunt Gertrude's stepfather."—L. L.

The first time my little Miss, aged twenty-six months, saw the girl drawing the fish for dinner, she came running to me, her eyes sparkling with excitement. "Mamma, mamma! Come and see Mary comb fishes' hair wid de knifs and it all come off!"—C. H. B., Tecumseh, Mich.

My oldest boy, who has not yet reached the mature age of four, I think, is apostic way of expressing himself. Thus the other day, on noticing the ripples on the bay as several row boats passed by, he exclaimed, "Mamma, look! see how the water is laughing."—E. Y., New York.

My little five year-old girl was so unruly the other day that I finally tried to bring her back to the paths of wisdom by exclaiming, "If you behave like that no one will have anything to do with you." "Papa, dear," she replied complacently, "satan prefers naughty children."—R. M., New Jersey.

Children love to propound philosophical problems, and I must say I do not find it easy to give satisfactory answers to those which fall from the lips of my three year old boy. One of the simplest, and yet a question which even a wiser mother could not have answered at a moment's notice, was: "Mamma, why can't we see our own faces."—L. I.

I know a lady who had a little daughter whom she was very partial to have my her pet name for her every day. One time when the child ran out in a great hurry to play, her mother called after her, "Mary, Mary, you look to take care of yourself like a good little girl!" "No, mamma," she answered, "Mary tought she would take care of herself today."—N. J. R., New York.

Frederic, six years old, was telling Walter, three years younger, of a pleasant trip which he, the narrator, took with mamma three years before. "Walter, you weren't born then," he said. Walter meditated awhile upon his loss in not coming sooner upon the scene, and then said, "Dear Fred wick, I was wishing then that God would make me!"—G. W. G., New London, N. H.

Eddie was very fond of raspberry jam. One evening when the garden dropped in to tea mamma opened a new pot, and, with emphatic instructions to Eddie not to ask for some more jam after getting his share. His papa, not knowing the circumstances, helped him twice, and the child, when finally mortified his mother by saying, "Mamma, said I mustn't ask for any more, 'cause that is all there is."—F. B. D.

We recently had occasion to reprove our little Tommy, not quite three years old, and told him as seriously as possible that some one must have to have an obedient little boy. The little fellow listened very patiently, and then asked, with an earnestness which completely disarmed us, "Don't you think you had better get a better boy?"

Evening Bobby—Mamma, what's the meaning before asking to bed by giving us the following improvised version of his usual prayer:

Now, under Shepherd, lead me
Since the little lamb tonight.
And everywhere that Mary went
The lamb was sure to go.

—J. S., New York.

—All from Babyhood.

They're having a picnic in the woods. "Oh, papa," exclaimed little Fritz, running up with a cheerful leer in his head, "look! I've found the egg of a porcupine!"—Flegende Blatter.

A little Boston girl, who is going to a private school, wants to go to a public school. "I am tired," she says, "of going to a school where the teacher calls us dar ling."—New York Tribune.

Mrs. Jayesmith—Freddy, how did you get those chicken pox on your eye blacked like that? Now, don't deny it, you've been in a fight. Freddy (ruefully)—honest, I wasn't in it.—New York Sun.

Grandfather Dean, who is very old indeed, was holding his little granddaughter Helen on his leg, when she suddenly asked very seriously, "Grandpa, why don't you wear a necktie?"—Rodolfo Blade.

A little boy, the son of good Presbyterian parents, was asked the question in catechism, "What is the chief end of man?" and he answered, "Man's chief end is to glorify God and annoy him forever."—New Moon.

"No, Bobby," said his mother, "one piece of pie is quite enough for you. It's very rich, you know." responded Bobby, with an injured air. "You say you are anxious for me to learn to eat properly, and yet you won't even give me a chance to practice."—Washington Hatchet.

There was once a mother who was fond of pointing her moral lectures with practical illustrations drawn from the daily life of her children. She always showed that they understood the force of this method of instruction. One day a discussion arose in the nursery. Will said a thing was so, and Mabel said it wasn't. "But if I say it's so, it is so," said Will. "Saying a thing is so doesn't make it so," answered Mabel stoutly. "Now, suppose you say you're a good boy, that doesn't make you one, does it?"—Harper's Young People.

One day on a railroad car a lady allowed her little boy, who could hardly speak distinctly, to play about the car, and by and by, to the horror of all of us, she discovered him companionably sitting outside on the steps. She brought him in, and although the punishment inflicted was mild, his little heart seemed to be completely broken. When presently the train stopped at a station street, choking sobs could be heard distinctly all over the car, and suddenly we were all comforted by a grieving, reproachful and utter desolate little voice exclaiming, "Mamma, when you laughed old—trainman leaves—a door wide open, how can—a baby help going out?"—West Shore.

All or Nothing.

"No," said Charley Cadgo, "I would never try to break my father's will. I don't believe in it."

"Humph," growled his father, "I should say you didn't. You believe in breaking the old man himself and having done with it."—Wall Street News.

PLAINFIELD'S MARTINS.

THEY ARRIVED THIS MORNING A WEEK EARLIER THAN USUAL.

Their Visits are Remembered by the Oldest Inhabitants to Have Been Made, For Forty Years at Least, with the Same Remarkable Regularity.—The Record for Eight Years

Those graceful, courageous, beautifully plumed martins arrived this morning, after an absence of about six months, at their old quarters, 29 West Front street, opposite Music Hall.

They at once began house-cleaning. Among the first tasks they are compelled to perform is to drive away the pugnacious sparrows which take possession of the bird-house when the martin's vacate in the Fall, and by right of possession consider their own. Their fights are sometimes quite fierce, as the sparrows do not yield very graciously. There is no lack of courage on either side. Sometimes several sparrows will attack a martin, but the latter's superior strength, and the fact that help is always nearby, makes it invariably a winner. We saw a martin in one of these fights catch a sparrow by the wing, and shake it in the air, something as a terrier would shake a rat, although there is but little difference in the sizes of the birds. When released, the sparrow flew off in a somewhat irregular way, as if he had got enough. We have given a full account of the habits of these martins, which seems to have interested our readers very much.

1885	April 21
1886	" 16
1887	" 20
1888	" 13
1889	" 11
1890	" 12
1891	" 13
1892	" 7

Two or three martins arrived in advance of the others by three or four days. It is believed that their object is to see if everything is all right. They do not remain long, usually about a day, and then disappear, returning later. It is supposed, in the company of the first or fifth others. The proper names of this species of the bird is "The Purple Martin of America."

It is a great favorite in the United States and Canada. Naturally breeding in hollow trees, it readily adapts itself to the conditions which these very commonly set up for its accommodation.

The limits of its range in Winter are not determined, chiefly owing to the difference of opinion as to the validity of certain supposed kindred species found in South America, but, according to some authorities, it reaches the border of Patagonia, while, in Summer, it is known to inhabit lands within the Artic Circle.

It obtains its name Martin from the French, who named it The Martinet, because of its precise habits and place. Its ornithological name is Chelidon Urbica.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Howard Hummer, formerly of this city but now of Newark, is visiting her mother, Mrs. Albert Hedden of East Fifth street.

On account of the illness of one of his assistants, Mr. Frederic Dean had to postpone the last of his "Stabat Mater" lectures last week, which was given today, at eleven o'clock, in the Schamenka Conservatory of Music, 51 Fifth avenue, New York. Mr. Dean was detained at his lecture by the following artists, whose names are too well known to need any further recommendation. Mlle. Clemenine de Vere, Miss Emily Winant, Signor Italio Campanini, and Mr. Albert Averschon. Mr. Paul Ambrose at the organ and Mr. Isidore Luckstone at the piano. In the evening at a quarter past eight, a testimonial concert was given to Mr. Victor Kerzdo, who was assisted by Mme. Albani and other eminent artists. Cards of admission to this concert were $1.50. The audience were all in evening dress. On Saturday, at the noon hour, Mr. Dean will give his first lecture in Course F. This course of lectures will treat on "The Nineteenth Century Composers," and will be given in the following order: April 9, "Schubert and Von Weber"; April 16, "Spohr and Meyerbeer"; April 23, "Mendelssohn and Schumann"; April 30, "Frederic Chopin": May 7, "Berlioz and Liszt."

STILL WINNING.

The Park Club Defeats the Union Co. Club Three Times Successively.

The series games at bowling between the Park Club of North Plainfield and the Union County Club of Plainfield were concluded last evening at the Park Club's alleys. This makes the Park Club a winner of all three games.

The score last evening is as follows:

The Union County Club was led last evening from the start. It has been its misfortune hard luck. The second game of the series it led in until the last player of the Park Club got to bowling and snatched the victory, although it was only 24 pins.

A new series is to be begun on April 18th, with only five men on a side, instead of ten men, as hitherto.

—Mr. George H. Fountain will give the regular talk on "Peculiar Ideas or How to Think" at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening.

—A well-known physician warns sufferers from neuralgia not to drink tea. They may drink freely of coffee, with plenty of lemon juice in it.

—Albert Cook, who was arrested yesterday for drunkenness and disorderly conduct, was this morning sentenced to the county jail for forty days.

—Mr. Geo. H. Fountain will give the popular talk on "Peculiar Ideas or How to Think" at the Y. M. C. A. rooms tonight. All young men are invited.

—The Young Ladies' Missionary Society of the First Baptist church will hold its regular meeting to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock in the lecture room of the church.

—A man who was arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct yesterday was this morning given the choice of paying a fine of $20 or spending twenty days in the county jail. He paid the fine.

—Messrs. Doane and Van Arsdale, Plainfield's shoe-dealers, are making a special sale of Bluchers. This is, they say, the fashionable shoe, and also the shoe for comfort. See particulars in their advertisement.

—You will find THE NEWS in almost every home in Plainfield, and suburbs. That is why it is such a valuable advertising medium. And do you notice that the side it takes on public questions always wins. That is the record for the past seven years.

—The leather bags, which have so long been used for the transportation of the United States mails, are to be replaced, as soon as worn out, by canvas bags with leather bottoms. The canvas bags cost less than the leather ones, and their weight is barely half as great as that of the old style pouches.

—A large number of children who are practicing singing to give an entertainment in a Camden church had a rehearsal in the rooms of the Board of Freeholders in the county jail building Tuesday night. The effect of the music on the couple of hundred prisoners in the building was noticeable. The dissolute women, who are a constant annoyance to the jailers while their time, came to the cell doors and listened to the hymns, and there were tears in not a few eyes. A woman who is known as Fighting Sally, on account of her viciousness, cried bitterly. The male prisoners were likewise deeply affected by the hymns.—The Advance.

—Dr. A. Woerck, of St. Petersburg, who is engaged in investigating the cause of the famine in Russia, says that it is due chiefly to droughts from August to October, 1890, thus injuring the Winter crops. Added to this was a partial and insufficient snow fall which melted in the early Spring, and was followed by an April frost, while in addition to all this were droughts and hot winds from May to July, 1891. In Samara the prospects up to June 10th, were good, but the harvests were destroyed by two days of hot winds on June 10th and 15th. In the southern central provinces, hot winds on four days in the middle of July were fatal to the crops.

—At this season the true value of boiled "greens" should be appreciated. After the heavy diet of Winter, especially in the country, where there is a lack of green vegetable food, the homely wild herbs, dandelion, ragweed and purslane, plantain and other greens, which come before the garden spinach is ready, should be sampled. Dandelion is especially valuable as a tonic, and either bleached as a salad or as "greens" for boiling, it is extensively raised by gardeners in the vicinity of New York City for the market. Without guidance to select wild greens promiscuously from plants that you know nothing about, there are a great many wild plants, comparatively unknown, which are valuable in green. Sorrel is sold regularly in our markets, and is very much used by our French cooks. It is simply a variety of sheep sorrel of our country fields, but it is not to be confounded with the oxalis, also called sorrel, which is quite a different plant.—Ex.

THE M. E. CONFERENCE.

BISHOP BOWMAN MAKES PUBLIC HIS APPOINTMENTS.

The Newark Conference Declares the Work of the Last Legislature Is Full of Danger to the People, Dominies Will Seek to Overthrow the Political Power That is Responsible for Such Proceedings.

The thirty-fifth annual meeting of the Newark Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church adjourned yesterday morning. Bishop Bowman announced the appointments for the coming year.

The only change in the Presiding Elders is that of Dr. D. E. Lowrie, whose term of six years as Presiding Elder of the Jersey City district is ended, his successor being Dr. J. B. Faulks, of Haverstraw, N. Y. Dr. Lowrie was offered a flattering invitation to go Denver to take charge, but at the solicitation of Bishop Bowman and the Presiding Elders he accepted a much smaller salary as pastor of the Emory Church, Jersey City.

Among the important appointments in the Elizabeth district are:

Perth Amboy, W. E. Blakeslee; Plainfield, C. B. Mitchell; Rahway, First Church, T. C. Mayhew; Somerville, W. M. Trumbower; Westfield, Wesley Martin; Hackensack, Asbury Church, Richard Jolliffe; First Church, S. D. Jones; Port Jersey City; Hoboken, First Church, C. B. Barnes.

Little, from Newfoundland; Linden avenue, W. S. McCowan, from Mariner's Harbor, N. Y.; St. Paul's, W. Eakins, from Simpson Church; Simpson, D. Halloran, from St. Paul's; Trinity, John Krantz, jr; Westside Avenue, John Atkinson.

Baldwin, from Union street; St. Mark's Henry Palmer, from Philadelphia Conference; Union street, N. Brooks, from Stanhope; Arlington, E. S. Jamieson; Chatham, G. H. Winans, from Lafayette.

East Orange—Calvary, E. B. Kendig, from New York Conference; Sanford street, J. S. Parker; Maplewood, C. Waldron; Mendham, C. S. Cookman.

The report of the Committee on Public Morals made its report at the opening of the conference session yesterday morning. The report was in part as follows:

For two years the legislation of the State has been accomplished by a majority which has carefully regarded the demand of even a very low conception of morality. By the most objectionable methods known in American politics the very worst classes in society have been pandered to, while more dangerous than the heavier taxes, and those upon the taxpaying citizens are the barries which they have deliberately and systematically set across the pathway of all righteousness.

Among the acts of the Legislature deemed objectionable by the committee were the Race Track bill, the Excise License bill, the refusal to pass a bill providing that no saloon shall be conducted within 300 feet of any building where religious services are statedly held, the bill establishing Excise Boards in towns and cities; the bill to appoint a State superintendent of the public school census, which the committee said placed the enumeration of the public school children of the State in the hands of the Roman Catholic Parochie church; the bill making the fine for being drunk and disorderly in the case of a known citizen $1. The report continued:

In view of this and similar legislation we deem it to be our bounded duty as teachers of righteousness and morality to express in clear and unmistakable protest; therefore,

Resolved, That the Newark Conference puts on record its declaration that the moral conditions established by this legislation give just occasion for grave apprehension.

Resolved, That judiciously separating ourselves from all partisan feelings and expressions, we will in future oppose all to these dangerous results and their still more dangerous tendencies, and that we will by our votes and every other opportunity shall offer, seek to arouse the people of this State to a sense of their responsibilities as Christians and to such exercise of their rights as citizens as shall speedily end the supremacy of these dangerous forces and men.

The report and the resolutions were adopted by a unanimous standing vote.

The report of the General Conference, offered by Rev. H. A. Butts, to so change the regulations respecting the mode of electing the various church officials now elected by the General Conference, that they may be elected by the annual conferences instead of the General Conference directly, was adopted. The change is not intended to apply to Bishops.

A resolution was offered that the Newark Conference memorialize the General Conference to consider the advisability of so changing the discipline as to organize two mission societies, one as a Foreign and the other a Home Missionary Society. Also to memorialize the General Conference to so consolidate our benevolent societies as to decrease their number.

Annual Meeting of the Ramabai Circle.

The fifth annual meeting of the Ramabai Circle, which was held yesterday in the Congregational church, was an interesting one. Mrs. S. J. Taylor, the president, occupied the chair.

After the reports of the secretary and treasurer were presented, a report of the annual meeting of the Ramabai Association of Boston, of which the circles are branches, was read. It set forth the gratifying progress which the Pundita's school for child-widows is making. The pupils have increased fifty per cent. during the year, and the Excise Board has been assured of a permanent home by the purchase of a suitable piece of property.

A letter from Ramabai was read which showed how the prejudice of the Brahmin caste is weakening, yielding as the school was demonstrating its practical usefulness. Outside testimony from a writer in a newspaper of India was also produced, showing the progress which Ramabai is making in placing her way to the hearts of her people.

The Plainfield Circle will make special efforts to increase its membership during the year. New names will be greatly received by the president.

The Annual Meeting.

The Union County Medical Society held its annual meeting yesterday, at Elizabethport. The following officers were chosen: President, Dr. W. A. M. Mack, Elizabeth; vice-presidents, Dr. Charles B. EDITORIAL NOTES

Walt Whitman.

If present indications are correct the man who had Shakespeare arrested for deer poaching will be scarcely more famous than Hon. Thomas Harlan, the United States secretary of the interior who turned Walt Whitman out of a clerkship in his department because the poet was the author of "Leaves of Grass." This was in July, 1865. Another officer of the government, however, was of a different mind and gave Mr. Whitman a moderately well paying place immediately. From this time till 1873 the man whom many critics in Great Britain consider the greatest poet America has produced had his happiest years, although his genius was not appreciated in his own country till very recently.

In 1873 the evil fate which seemed to follow him all his life touched him and paralyzed him. While nursing wounded soldiers after the bloody fights of the Wilderness, in 1864, Whitman contracted hospital malaria and never was himself again. The trouble which began here finally culminated in the paralysis. Whitman was forty-two years old when he went into camp and hospital to nurse soldiers. He was a magnificent specimen of manhood physically, a perfect picture of strength and natural grace. Since 1873 he has been simply a broken down man, waiting for the death which was all too long in coming. Only the fewest number appreciated him at home; but foreigners brought in the merest pittance, yet still the brave soul struggled on, writing because he could not help it. Meantime his fame grew wider and wider abroad. In England there would have been astonishment had it been known how poor and neglected he was at home. His poems most admired and best known are "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloomed," "Captain, My Captain" and a welcome to "Sweet Death."

Sweet death tarried long. Persons of extraordinary vitality live in spite of themselves under wasting disease, even when it is their dearest wish to depart. The strong, deep breathing body fights mechanically and yields only inch by inch. A weak physique would have succumbed years ago to the infirmities under which Whitman suffered and lingered nearly twenty years, writing marvelous poems when his disease gave him respite enough. The most remarkable fact in connection with these years is that during all the time the poet would have been glad to escape from the stricken body, which never-theless was so strong that it detained him unwilling. "If I could take you with me I could make you young again," said Edwin Arnold to him last fall. But he could not take him.

It is worthy of note that the last lines printed from his pen appeared in Harper's Magazine the day before he passed away, and they were still in praise of "lovely death." Following is a portion of this poem, "Death's Valley:"

I have seen many wounded soldiers die,
After dread suffering—have seen their lives pass off with smiles;
And I have watch'd the death-hours of the old—and seen the infant die:
The rich, with all his ostrex and his doctors:
And the poor, in meagreness and poverty:
And I myself for long, O Death, have breathed my every breath
Amid the nearness and the silent thought of thee.

And out of these and thee,
I make a song, brief (not fear of thee,
Nor gloom's nor any's else), nor bleak, nor dark—for I do not fear thee,
Nor celebrate the struggle or contention or hard and long;
Of the broad blessed light and perfect air, with meadows, rippling tides and trees and flowers and grass,
And the low hum of living breeze—and in the midst God's beautiful eternal light hand.
Thee, boldest minister of heaven—thee, envoy, saboror, guide at last of all,
Rich, full, lavish, lessener of the stricture knot call'd life,
Sweet, peaceful, welcome Death.

During the World's fair in Chicago there will be held a psychical science congress that will bring together students of hypnotism, telepathy, clairvoyance, ghosts and other matters which the Society for Psychic Research has been investigating for years. The projectors of the congress are Professor Elliott Coues and Colonel John C. Bundy, editor of The Religio-Philosophical Journal at Chicago. Some of the chief topics for investigation will be the connection between psychics and physics, the bearing of psychical science on human personality, particularly on the question of future life. This will be one of the many conventions held under the auspices of the World's Congress Auxiliary. The World's fair directors distinctly approve of the aims of the auxiliary. Clairvoyance, "whispered words without a sound," apparitions, trances and other strange phenomena are becoming so commonly accepted that this investigation of whether there is anything in them or not will approve itself to the popular mind.

In his final message to the people of Ohio ex-Governor Campbell congratulated the state on the excellent condition of her benevolent penal reformatory and educational institutions. This is something the whole country will congratulate Ohio on, for it seems to point the way out of a great deal of trouble for the state.

We have not many torpedo boats in our navy, but in a few months we shall have one that experts say will prove the best of the kind afloat.

ALDRICH'S SEAT SECURE

BROWN WILL BE HER GOVERNOR.

The Exciting Campaign Called Out the Largest Vote Ever Polled in the State. Sensational Fist Fight Between Two Prominent Politicians.

PROVIDENCE, April 7.—D. Russell Brown, Republican candidate for governor, has a plurality, and the next legislature will be Republican. The ballot boxes were kept open till 7 o'clock, and returns came in very slowly. It is impossible to give an accurate estimate of Brown's plurality. It may reach 2,000, against 3,173 in the last presidential year. This does not give him a majority, and consequently the legislature will elect. Owing to majority requirements there were no elections in many senatorial and assembly districts, but there is practically no doubt that the legislature will be Republican by a reduced majority.

The Largest Ever Polled.

The total vote is the largest ever polled in the state. The city of Providence gives Wardwell (Dem.) 10,393 and Brown (Rep.)

D. RUSSELL BROWN.

9,899—a plurality of only 494, against 1,218 last year and perhaps 1,000 this year. Woonsocket gives Wardwell 1,256 and Brown 1,338, a plurality of 82 against 161 last year. Pawtucket is reported solidly Republican. Last year it gave Democratic plurality of 340. Newport is claimed by both Republicans and Democrats. Last year Republican by over 400. Last year it gave a Democratic plurality of 236. This shows a net Republican gain in the cities of between 1,000 and 2,000 votes.

The Vote for Governor.

The total for governor is:

Slocum (Dem.) for attorney general is running so far ahead of his ticket, however, that Bartlett, his opponent, may not secure more than a plurality. The assembly also is now believed to be Republican by 25 majority, the Providence delegation being probably about evenly divided. As the combined People's party and Prohibition vote seems likely to reach 2,000 in the state, it is difficult to tell whether the Republicans can possibly have more than a plurality for their ticket.

Senator Aldrich a Winner.

Shortly before midnight Senator Aldrich said: "I have without Lincoln 48 votes and all is a majority."

The senator had counted thirty-three doubtful districts in the Democratic column in making his estimate. A little later the vote was announced, adding seven votes to the Republican column—one senator and six representatives. If Senator Aldrich's private advices are to be trusted, the Republicans have won the day.

Gloucester elects two Democratic assemblymen. They were Republicans last year. In Warren a Republican senator and Democratic representative were elected. There is no election for assemblyman in Exeter. A Republican was elected last year. The Democrats gain an assemblyman in Foster, a Republican stronghold.

Chilian Minister Montt was here during the day watching the working of the Australian ballot system. He will report on its working to his government.

D. Russell Brown, the Republican gubernatorial candidate, said to a reporter: "I am elected. The legislature is overwhelmingly Republican. Senator Aldrich will succeed himself, and the state will choose Republican presidential electors. We have fought the party how to win and have demonstrated again in spite of tremendous difficulties that the great heart of the people is true to protection, to honest money and to the Republican party, which espouses the cause. If Cleveland and the free silver congressmen had been here and spoke offense we would have had a walkover."

The town of Lincoln elected six Republicans to the assembly, thus insuring the Republicans at least 57 votes on joint ballot and giving them control. The Republican state ticket will be chosen by the legislature, and Nelson W. Aldrich will be returned to the United States senate. The Democrats made legislative gains in several towns, but the result is a surprise to the Democrats. The ordinary stay-at-home voters came out and overcame the heavy Democratic registration.

Maryland Knocked Insensible.

Dr. Charles H. Howland, a prominent Democrat, and John B. Landers, present representative of Jamestown, were in Watson's grocery at Jamestown arguing about the election, when Landers accused Howland of selling out the Democrats to Senator T. Cary Wilson. When Howland said this was a lie Landers struck Howland on the back of the neck, and Howland, who is subject to heart failure, immediately fell to the floor, insensible. A special engine was sent from Conanicut to Newport for a physician, who, after an examination of the injured man, said he could not make any statement for a time, as the case was very serious and the man might die.

At Newport the Republicans claim that a Democratic supervisor, who is also president of the common council, violated the ballot law by giving unsolicited assistance to voters. They collected evidence and placed it in the hands of Ex-City Solicitor Peckham, who has promised to prosecute. The Republicans propose to bring a criminal suit against the supervisor and Supervisor Boyle, and perhaps the warden of the ward as well, and also, if necessary, appeal to the supreme court and contest the seats of members of the legislature elected here.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—The Star says: "For some time past rumors have been in active circulation which insisted that Mr. Morton would not, under any circumstances, allow his name to be used in connection with a presidential nomination. Within the past twenty-four hours Mr. Morton has announced to political friends in this city that he will accept the honor if it is tendered at him."

They Want Harrison.

LITTLE ROCK, April 7.—The Republican convention to select delegates to the Minneapolis convention was held here. The delegates are numerous and active. Ex-Mayor W. G. Whipple, of this city, and Colonel George A. Gracy, of Fort Smith, are talked of for the gubernatorial nomination. The presidential preference is nearly all for Harrison. A few delegates are for Alger.

CINCINNATI, April 7.—Miss Bettie Fleisch man, daughter of Charles Fleischman, the millionaire distiller of this city, has broken her engagement with Count Lagothetti of Hungary, the reason given being that the count would not relinquish his foreign title and become an American citizen, as requested by the Miss Fleischman. The news of the matter with Miss Fleischman. His spirit was aroused and she declared to him that she was an American and would always remain an American, and that he might consider the engagement at an end.

In referring to the matter Mr. Fleischman said: "My daughter has refused the suit of Count Lagothetti. He adheres to his opinions as a subject of the crown. They are not well mated. I have left the whole matter to the daughter, and she has tried to get the count around to her ideas, but he does not agree with her. He made the declaration to her that he would never give up his title and would never as long as there was breath in his body become an American citizen."

THIRTY THOUSAND SAINTS PRESENT.

Capstone of the Great Mormon Temple Laid at Salt Lake City.

SALT LAKE CITY, April 7.—Every state in Zion and every Mormon camp of the world was represented at the laying of the cap stone of the Mormon temple. Over 30,000 saints were here. The Tabernacle choir of 500 sang the temple anthem. President Woodruff then laid the capstone by touching an electric button. Hosannas by the faithful shook the temple. The day was the greatest in Mormon history since the settlement of this valley.

On the fifth spire of the great Mormon temple rises the bronze figure of the Angel Moroni, a design by C. E. Dallin, the Boston sculptor, and a native of Utah. Just thirty-nine years ago the corner stone of the structure was laid. On the south and east corner of the temple block, between the temple and the tabernacle, a heroic statue in bronze of Brigham Young will be erected.

TOOK $70,000 AND FLED

Daring Robbery of a Wall Street Banking House.

HE BURIED THE CASH IN A CELLAR.

Clerk Carpenter, One of the Conspirators Who Robbed Dix & Phyfe, Has Confessed Where About $52,000 of the Plunder Was Secreted.

NEW YORK, April 7.—A systematic robbery of the banking house of Dix & Phyfe, 45 Wall street, has just been unearthed. The exact amount of the stealings is not yet definitely known, but it is believed they will reach between $65,000 and $70,000. About $53,000 of the amount stolen has been recovered, and the loss to the firm will not therefore in any event be very heavy. Oscar Creamer, nineteen years old, of 328 Hicks street, Brooklyn, the assistant book-keeper, was the promoter of the scheme. He had as confederates W. E. Carpenter, aged thirty-five, a clerk for Dix & Phyfe, and James L. White, of Brooklyn, an ex-sister. Carpenter is under arrest, but White and Creamer have disappeared and are supposed to be on the ocean on the steamer Oakland, which left this port for Copenhagen on Monday.

Creamer's Nerve Was Aroused.

The failure of Creamer to appear at the banking office on Monday precipitated the discovery of the robbery. Mr. Phyfe, one of the firm members, became suspicious and examined the cash in the safe. Everything was found to be rightfully mutilated condition. Besides that, $20,000 in bonds of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad were missing. Inspector Byrnes was notified, and the clerk, Carpenter, was arrested. He broke down and made a clean breast of the affair. Creamer, he said, was acting as bookkeeper in the absence of the regular bookkeeper, who was in California for his health. He had been in his new position but a short time when Carpenter discovered that he was related to the firm. Creamer admitted it to his accuser, and said he intended to get all he could before the bookkeeper returned. He then induced Carpenter to enter into the schemes. Creamer also induced an outsider, James L. White, of Brooklyn, to enter the conspiracy.

White was given a letter of introduction to the First National bank, signed by Dix & Phyfe, and immediately began making deposits. Five checks, aggregating $25,000, and all signed by Dix & Phyfe, were deposited by him. On April 1 White drew out $10,000 and on the following day $15,000 more. The checks deposited by White were not forged, but simply filled in by Creamer, who had the handling of signed blank checks.

Buried in His Cellar.

A great deal of the money was secured by the conspirators and the bonds were handed over to Creamer, who when he was forced money to Creamer whenever he sent for it, Creamer and White having decided to leave the country. Creamer buried the money and bonds in the cellar of his home, 427 Quincy street, Brooklyn. This ended Carpenter's confession. Detectives went to the house named by Carpenter as the place where he had hidden the money and bonds, and after a brief search found the property as described by him. There were $23,130 in cash and $30,000 in bonds. It is certain that Creamer and White have taken some of their stealings with them, but how much cannot yet be determined. The police say they will capture the fugitives.

LIVE WASHINGTON NEWS

Senator Wolcott's Sensational Anti-Administration Speech.

THE AMERICAN JEW IN RUSSIA.

Important Resolution Asking for Information Concerning the Czar's Treatment of Hebrews from the United States Favorably Reported.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Mr. Wolcott's forcible anti-administration speech on the silver question and the further discussion of the army clause in the Indian bill occupied the senate all day. In the course of his speech Senator Wolcott said: "At the moment it is apparently probable that the party in power will, with negative unanimity, renominate the present magnetic executive not because he is the choice of any considerable body of his party, but because, since the letter of retirement of the great secretary who holds his party bound by ties of deepest affection and regard, no man of greater stature than the present incumbent is willing to stand."

The vote on retaining the house provision in the Indian bill to authorize the president to detail army officers as Indian agents was not taken on strict party lines. Messrs. Call, Gorman, Morgan and Palmer (Dems.) voted with the minority, to strike out, and Messrs. McMillan, Manderson, Peffer, Proctor and Quay (Reps.) voted with the majority to retain the army provision, which was kept in the bill by a vote of 28 to 25. The bill was finally passed.

To Limit Debate on the Wool Bill.

An amicable arrangement was reached as to limiting debate on the first section of the wool bill, and the entire session was devoted to the discussion of the measure under the five minute rule. The following members opposed the measure: Otis, F. A. (Kan.), Johnson (N. Dak.), Henderson (Ills.), Bonville (Mo.), Dingley (Me.), Buchanan (N. J.), J. D. Taylor (O.) and Milliken (Me.) Those speaking in its favor were Lanham (Tex.), Alexander (N. C.), McKeighan (Neb.), McMillin (Tenn.), Breckinridge (Ky.), Mallory (Fla.), Moore (Tex.) and Butler (Ia.) The bill was reported to the house by the committee.

Mr. Breckinridge (Dem.), of Kentucky, made an impassioned appeal for the bill's passage. Free wool, he said, would make goods better, which was more advantageous than making them cheaper.

He said that when he was a boy a pair of trousers could be patched and now it was impossible to patch them—they were not strong enough to hold a patch. (Laughter.) The bill would make good material as cheap as poor material. It would also raise the manufacturer to a place he had never yet held. With our labor, our skill, with free wool, free salt, free coal, free dyes, the manufacturer would be benefited and the workman would be in a happier condition than he ever had been. The sheep grower and the manufacturer would be brought in closer relations and each would be benefited. In that happy day we would send goods all over the world under our own flag, in our own bottoms. [Laughter.] He would repeal the McKinley bill, the administrative bill and start afresh with the entire tariff, no matter whether the bill met with a veto at the hands of the president or not. He was ready to follow the man who carried the flag of reduction of taxation. To him, he would say, "God speed." [Prolonged cheers.]

American Jews in Russia.

WASHINGTON, April 7.—Mr. Chipman, from the committee on foreign affairs, reported favorably to the house joint resolution directing the president to inform congress whether, by the laws and regulations of the empire of Russia concerning Jews, any American citizens of that faith are subject to restrictions as to residence and business in that empire which violate the provisions of the treaty of 1832 between the United States and Russia, and whether the laws and regulations are held by the government of Russia to supersede so far as American citizens of Jewish faith are concerned, the treaty permitting sojourn and residence of inhabitants of the United States in all parts of Russia, in order to attend to their own affairs. The report states that this subject is one of great concern to the people of the United States, as it seeks to ascertain the status of American citizens of Jewish faith in Russia.

THREE MONTHS ON LIGHT DIET.

A Huntingdon Reformatory Inmate Who Lived on Bread and Water.

PHILADELPHIA, April 7.—James B. Scott presided at the session of the state board of charities, which is investigating the charges of cruel and inhuman treatment of the inmates at the Huntingdon reformatory. Deputy Superintendent Smith was examined as to the temperature of the rooms in which the boys were compelled to work. He said the temperature was always kept at 65 degs. and he had never heard any complaints. On cross-examination he said there was no general complaint, but that once in a while a boy would say that the room was too cold, and on one occasion, when the heating apparatus gave way, the room did get too cold and the boys in chair shop No. 2 had been taken back to their cells.

Deputy Smith said this was the only time that the room was too cold, but he also acknowledged that he was frequently away from the institution.

The testimony showed that severe punishments were inflicted. In the case of Harry Anderson, a discharged inmate, who was put on the stand, the record of the institution stated that the great part he had been placed in solitary confinement was on Dec. 13, 1890, and he had been there for twenty-three days. Anderson, who resides at 3231 Carey pl., Philadelphia, testified that he had gone into confinement Oct. 19, 1891, and had been there for three months. In that time, with the exception of Christmas Day, he had received nothing but bread and water, and he was in chains for that period. He said the last week he was so sick that he hardly knew where he was or how he came out, and that he was put to breaking stones.

The witness has only a half right foot, with running sores, and he testified he had to stand from morning till night on the lame foot, his request for a stool to kneel on being refused. The offense for which he was committed to this punishment was for changing books with another prisoner.

DEMOCRATS IN CAUCUS.

ALBANY, April 7.—The Democratic members of the assembly met in caucus last evening. For over two hours they were closeted in the assembly parlor, and it is said that excited and at times fiery discussions were had. The proceedings were strictly executive, and the members absolutely refused to disclose a syllable as to what was done.

It is well understood, however, that it was agreed to support the constitutional amendment bill, the Tammany inspectors' bill and the congressional apportionment measure. The excise bill was taken up for consideration, and a hot fight was waged over its provisions. Some of the members refused to support it under any consideration. After much discussion it was agreed to not make it a party measure, as that would be practically impossible under the circumstances.

The City of Cordova Shaken as by an Earthquake.

MADRID, April 7.—Several bombs were exploded in Cordova last night. One burst near the bishop's palace and the other at the famous stone bridge. No one was injured. The whole city was shaken as if by an earthquake.

People ran from their homes and windows were shattered several hundred yards from the spot where the bomb, evidently intended for the bishop, was placed, and plastering fell from the walls. No arrests have been made.

ST. JOHNS, N. F., April 7.—In the assembly, Morine's resolution for a modus vivendi with Canada was defeated by a strict party vote. Mr. Bond declared he would prohibit the sale of bait to the Canadians till the Bond-Blake convention had been assented to. He also said that New Foundland had been promised concessions by the United States that had not yet been made public.

Are We at Odds with Spain?

PARIS, April 7.—The Journal des Debats publishes a statement that a serious difference exists between the United States and Spain relative to the appointment of Mr. H. Rand as consul at Tonque, one of the Caroline islands. Spain has refused to accept Mr. Rand because he is a brother of the Rev. Mr. Rand, the missionary who figured in the recent trouble with the Spanish authorities. The United States refuses on the other hand to withdraw Mr. Rand.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., April 7.—A jury decided that Henry L. Betts, charged with the murder of Hotel Keeper Bilsky at Pochill, is insane. COFFEE; ITS PLACE IN THE HOUSEHOLD AND HOW TO USE IT.

Writing on coffee and its uses in the New York Independent, Katherine Armstrong says: "This delicious berry can be utilized in many ways besides for the 'morning cup.' It is a pleasant, agreeable change in flavoring for ices, creams, jellies and the like, and it has medicinal properties as well. It is a tonic, if only reasonably and sensibly indulged in, but like all other drinks, it can be abused in the use. Too much or too strong coffee causes palpitation of the heart and often more serious trouble with that organ. A clear, strong infusion is often prescribed by physicians as a sedative, and it is a powerful one; but the same cup, with milk or cream added, is at once changed in its chemical properties, and becomes a genuine stimulant instead. To make a perfect cup of coffee is a simple process, if we have proper implements and the very best materials for it. According to our own experience, it ruins coffee to boil it, for thereby it parts with its delicious aroma.

"Professor Blot, or some other famous chef, says by boiling it 'the aroma can be found in the attic,' while presumably the dregs only are left for drink. We believe all stimulants in a mixture or drink like tea and two-thirds of coffee makes the best coffee. It should be well and evenly roasted and recently and finely ground, and then the pot used that fills the boiling water upon the coffee, while it drains it clear as crystal for use at the same time. The pot is comparatively a recent invention, but judged by the coffee and expense it stands at the head on its own merits; the whole principle is sound and correct. The boiling water must pass through all the coffee and at once thereafter be cleared to be perfect.

"Pew, we imagine, use the repulsive old way of using fishskin or eggshells or even eggs nowadays to clear their coffee. We have heard it said that this new invention requires more coffee for a satisfactory cup than some of the old ways, but who that loves good coffee cares for a little difference! It is a true old adage, and true here, too, that 'if we expect to have a good horse we must feed him well.' A little coffee will for home use is about an indispensable. Coffee should be ground, and finely ground, in the kitchen if it is had. Sometimes such a mill becomes clogged by particles of coffee that adhere to the inside. In such a case a handful of raw rice put in and ground will clean it perfectly. We know it is clear coffee, not adulterated, if ground in our own kitchen."

The Inventor of a Dish-washing Machine.

The patron saint of the emancipated woman of the future will be Josephine Garis Cochrane, the inventor of the dish-washing machine. She will be enshrined in the grateful heart of womankind when the memory of Susan B. Anthony and the rest is lost in oblivion, and at the base of every column erected to commemorate the noble achievements of free and happy women her name should be written in shining letters. Josephine Cochrane was once extremely rich, a society girl, eagerly interested in the most flippant affairs of society, with all the money she wanted to spend, all the pleasures she desired, with no dishes to wash for herself and nonanxiety about the women who did have to roughen their fingers in the ends. In due time she married, like other pretty girls, but it was not until after the death of her husband that the idea of the machine came to her. She doesn't know exactly how or when it came—the only trouble she had proved a hard and tormented her until she began to work it out.

She did not know the name of a tool or the principles of a transmitted power, and she had no idea of drawing or constructing a model. She had to get the elementary books and study it over. Like a child and study before she could make her ideas tangible to the mechanics who carried them out. She worked at her models nearly eight years, spent her entire fortune, $50,000, on the device, and finally succeeded in perfecting this wonderful dishwasher that never nicks or chips your precious plates, and yet washes and polishes them so that they are left for drink. We believe all stimulants in a mixture or dish-rag. She

A RUNAWAY MATCH.

A Very Young Couple Married After Much Difficulty.

Henry H. Roberts and Miss May B. Hughson, both of this city were united in wedlock at the Presbyterian parsonage at Westfield Saturday evening, by the Rev. N. W. Cadwell.

They first visited the residence of the Rev. Mr. Fernald, the pastor of the Hope chapel, Fair St. Mr. Fernald to marry them because they were not of age. They visited another minister and requested him to marry them. He also refused for the same reason. Finally Mr. Roberts hired a hack and the couple drove to Westfield and were married as stated.

The young man is about nineteen years of age and is a son of ex-Councilman Daniel S. Roberts. His wife is said to be about seventeen years of age.

It is a State Prison Offence.

When great pains have been taken to beautify a garden by the growing of choice flowers, as many do, nothing is so annoying as the depredations of the malicious "flower fiend" whose ruthless grasp takes the whole plant, or branch, with the flowers.

Complaints are already coming in of gardens trampled and plants destroyed.

Base Ball.

The Arlingtons of this city will play a game of base ball with a team from South Plainfield on the Park avenue grounds to-morrow morning at 10.30 o'clock. WHITE CAPS.

Masked Men Horsewhip Two Westfielders.

There was a sensation in Westfield Wednesday evening by the appearance on the street of a band of "White Caps." They were disguised with white masks over their faces, and some of them were armed with horsewhips. They made their appearance suddenly on the main street, and before the village constables could be summoned, accomplished what was their supposed purpose by surprising two different individuals who have been the subject of recent comments because of their indolent habits. One of these is a man with a family, who refuses to work, but loafs about the taverns while those who should be dependent on him are supported by charity. The "White Caps" applied the whip until the fellow pleaded for mercy.

The other victim was a single man, conspicuous in the village because of aversion to work. He received several lashes, but took to his heels. There were no arrests made.

AN OLD TIME SPEECH.

SHOWING INGERSOL A BELIEVER IN THE CHRISTIAN SPIRIT.

His Title "Why I Am a Republican" —The Speech Justifying Boecher's Reference to the Speaker as the Most Eloquent Orator of Any Age.

I am opposed to the Democratic party, and I will tell you why. Every State that seceded, seceded to establish and form a Democratic State. Every ordinance of session that was drawn was drawn by a Democrat. Every man that fired a gun to tear the old flag from the heaven that it enriched was a Democrat. Every man that tried to destroy the nation of heroes while those who should be dependent on him are supported by charity. The "White Caps" applied the whip until the fellow pleaded for mercy.

The other victim was a single man, conspicuous in the village because of aversion to work. He received several lashes, but took to his heels. There were no arrests made.

with crimson leaves. We see them planted by hills and torn with shells to the trenches, for they are filled with whirlwinds of the storm, where men lie down to sleep with nerves of steel.

We see them in the prisons of hatred and famine; but human speech can never tell what they endured. We see them in the fields of war, and some of them are dead. We see the soldiers in the shadow of their last sorrow. We see the silent tents of the dead, and hear the wind with the last grief.

Then the pomp and circumstance of war fade from the battle-fields, and in place of the grand marshaling of the legions, we see the silent tread of broken men. We see the remnants of contending armies marching side by side, without swords, with their tattered flags trailing in the dust. We see the living picking their way among the dead, and we see home, and firesides, and fields, and forests, and cities, and villages, and workshops, and books, and all that we want, and arms, and grief, and sorrow, and fathers, we see the faces of the fatherless, and mothers, and widows. They died for liberty; they died for us. They are at rest. They sleep in the land they loved. They died for the right, and they rose from the battle-fields, and they rose from the stainless, under the solemn pines, and the hemlocks, the tearful willows and the sighing grasses. They sleep beneath the shadows of the clouds, careless alike of the sunlight or of storm, while over their graves the grass grows, and flowers spring and wither, and their graves are pressed by the feet of children. Their dust was mingled with other wars—they are at peace. In the midst of battle, in the roar of conflict, they found the serenity of death. I have one sentiment for the soldiers living and dead—cheers for the living, and tears for the dead.

Now, my friends, I want you to vote for the Republican ticket. I want you to swear that you will not vote for any enemy of human progress. Go and talk with your neighbors. Reason with them. Get him by the coat collar; talk to him. Hold him like Coleridge's Ancient Mariner, with your glittering eye. Hold him; tell him all the mean things his party ever did, and then kindly; tell him in a Christian spirit that you will kill him.

I want you, every one, to swear you will vote for the glorious Republican party. I tell you we have a grand country. It is a glorious country. It protects you and me to be free. It is the only country in the world where labor is respected; let us support it. It is the only country in the world where the useful man is the aristocrat. The man that works for a dollar a day and goes home to his wife and children and takes his little boy on his knee, and he thinks that boy can achieve anything that has been one of the wealthy man can achieve. The five schools are open to him; he may be the governor, the president; and that thought awakens every drop of sweat that rolls down the honest face of toil. Vote to save that country.

THE INITIATED MAY UNDERSTAND THIS.

[Courier-Journal.]

The members of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men, will be favored with a choice and select entertainment this evening, at their wigwam, in Music Hall building. The chiefs will assemble around the Council fire, fifteen breaths, after the eighth run, setting of the sun.

The business of the evening will begin with the adoption of a pale face, who will be initiated into the arts and mysteries of the Improved Order of Red Men, in the most approved Indian fashion.

The most important feature of the evening will be the reading of the unpublished manuscripts of Columbus' report to his sovereign (translated from the Spanish) delineating in his own language his first and second voyage to America, describing the customs and habits of the people he came in contact with, portraying the individual characteristics of the Indian dignitaries of the various tribes he visited.

The manuscript mentioned has been treasured for nearly 400 years in the Royal Archives of Spain, and has only recently been given to the public, and its contents are of great interest to the Indian race. Owing to the indefatigable efforts of our Minister to Spain, and the Spanish Ambassador to this country, the manuscript was resurrected from its resting place and the translation made.

The evening's entertainment will conclude with an elaborate programme of singing and recitations, and last but not least a sleigh-ride collation, which has been tendered to the brothers by one of the Chiefs of the Tribe.

EDITORIAL NOTES

I believe that skepticism expresses more accurately than infidelity the state of men's minds at the present time.—Archbishop Ryan.

In New York city, and within a radius of twenty-five miles of it, more people are living today than the whole thirteen colonies contained at the time of the Revolution.

In the United States at present there are about 1,250,000 Jews. There are 323 Hebrew congregations, divided between the orthodox and reformed Jews. In the orthodox congregations the men still sit with their hats on, and the women occupy seats apart from the rest. No women singers are allowed in the choir. In the reformed or liberal congregations the usages are much the same as prevail in Christian churches in reference to such matters. It is more a difference of rite and ceremony than divides the two branches than a difference of radical doctrine. There are more reformed Jews than orthodox in the United States.

How the Chinese View It.

Tsin Kwo Gin, the Chinese minister at Washington, has granted an interview to a reporter of The Evening Star, of that city. Chinamen have not often been interviewed, though all of the rest of the world has frequently. Mr. Tsin Kwo Gin's ideas are especially interesting, as giving the Chinese opinion on our treatment of immigrants from that country.

"Chucked Into the Sewer."

Mr. Funston said that he had been "chucked into the sewer," and he was in his own defense that he spoke. He would make his own speech without aid from the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. Lewis, of Mississippi, asked Mr. Funston if he did not know that the author of the article was a lady.

Mr. Funston replied that it made no difference to him whether the person was a lady or a street walker. (Hisses in the galleries.) The correspondent was not a lady. He knew his name and he should be kicked out of the press gallery. (Continued hisses.)

The house seemed to enjoy the undignified proceedings, and finally the article was struck from the record as being beneath notice. The house quieted down and the cotton tie bill was taken up, Mr. E. B. and J. D. Taylor (Democrats of Ohio) speaking against and Mr. Lane (Democrat of Indiana) in favor of the measure.

Mr. Wilson's Speech.

During his speech on the free wool bill Mr. Wilson said:

Under the sections of the laws which the present bill is intended to supersede and correct, something more than $1,000,000 collected in taxes from the people of this country every day. I do not believe that it is within the power of statesmanship to gather any such sum from the people without a popular revolt. Taxes upon them and lessening their usefulness and their profitable trade. This is a tax upon the health, the vigor, the energy and the very life of the people. Over $61,000,000 were gathered last year as taxes on an importation of $692,000,000 worth of wool and woolen goods. One dollar out of every five dollars collected in taxes came from wool and woolen goods.

Mr. Miller, of Wisconsin, inquired whether this bill was satisfactory to the woolen manufacturers. Mr. Wilson replied that it was framed in the interest of the consumers of woolen goods.

Under this system of taxation we have already built up a full equipment of manufactures. You might start the fires today in the mills, the factories, the furnaces and forges, and within the existing number of workmen before the end of the year there would be a cry of dire and complete all over the United States. If the stimulation of manufactures is to continue foreign markets should be opened, and the protection we have had in the past is a failure in consummation. The foreign pauper labor which we hear so much about from the other side of the house is the product of protective tariffs, and in making the articles which compete with the protected industries of the country, but it is employed in producing articles for export that the American farmers desire to sell abroad.

The bill went into committee of the whole (Mr. Bland in the chair) on the bill to admit free of duty bagging for cotton, machinery for manufacturing bagging, cotton ties and cotton gins.

Mr. E. S. Taylor (Republican of Ohio) addressed the house in opposition to the bill. He said that cotton ties were cheaper now than ever before. There was nothing in the bill which was in the interest of the producer.

FREE WOOL IS FAVORED

The House Passes a Very Important Measure.

MR. FUNSTON BECOMES FURIOUS.

A Very Undignified Discussion Started in the House Over a Prohibition Paper's Charge That Senators and Congressmen Drink Intoxicants in the Restaurant.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Mr. Wilson, of West Virginia, closed the debate on the free wool bill in the house with a masterly speech and the bill was then passed without amendment by a vote of 180 to 93. Spice was added to the routine proceedings of the day by Mr. Funston, of Kansas, who produced an article from The Voice, a prohibition paper published in New York, containing a statement that certain senators and members were in the habit of drinking intoxicating liquors in the house restaurant. This brought to their feet the various members mentioned, who either acknowledged or denied the charge. Mr. Funston said that the publication, so far as he was concerned, was utterly without foundation. He denounced the article as a malicious lie as to himself personally.

Mr. Cummings said that he had no memory of the circumstances mentioned in the article (Laughter.) He had been introduced to the decoction called "cold tea" by Senator Edmunds, of Vermont. [Renewed laughter.] Mr. Fellows and Mr. Finch, of New York, Mr. Bland (Mo.), Mr. McMillin denied the impeachment. Mr. Funston denounced the writer of the article as a "low down, dirty sneak."

Mr. McMillin objected to such language, and said that the record could not be made a sewer through which the member from Kansas could carry his vituperation of others.

"Chucked Into the Sewer."

Mr. Funston said that he had been "chucked into the sewer," and he was in his own defense that he spoke. He would make his own speech without aid from the gentleman from Tennessee.

Mr. Lewis, of Mississippi, asked Mr. Funston if he did not know that the author of the article was a lady.

Mr. Funston replied that it made no difference to him whether the person was a lady or a street walker. (Hisses in the galleries.) The correspondent was not a lady. He knew his name and he should be kicked out of the press gallery. (Continued hisses.)

POPULATION OF NEW ENGLAND.

The Fifty-Two Communities the Largest One by Over 70,000.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The census office has issued advance sheets of a bulletin containing tables of the population of the states of Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut. The population of the New England states as a whole in 1890 was 4,700,749, which, compared with the population of these states in 1880, or 4,010,529, shows an increase during the decade of 690,216, or 17.21 per cent.

The males in New England have increased 358,023, or 18.13 per cent, since 1880, the whole number of males now (1890) being 2,333,735, as against 1,975,723 in 1880.

There has been an increase of females in the New England states since 1880 of 332,194, or 16.54 per cent, the whole number of females in 1890 being 2,366,960, while in 1880 they numbered 2,034,807. For the New England states as a whole, the males in 1890 numbered 2,333,735, or 49.39 per cent. of the total population, and the females 2,366,960, or 50.78 per cent. There were in 1880 in New England, therefore, 73,225 more females than males. In Massachusetts in 1890 there were 67,323 more females than males; in Rhode Island, 9,456; in Connecticut, 7,138, and in New Hampshire, 3,220. The males exceed the females in Maine by 4,004 and in Vermont, 6,232.

In Connecticut the increase in foreign born since 1880 numbers 53,516, or 41.17 per cent. The whole number of foreign born persons in the New England states as a whole in 1890 was 1,354,980. In New Hampshire there has been at each census an excess of females, the per cent. of females in 1890 being 50.45. In Vermont, on the other hand, there has been constantly an excess of males.

In Connecticut there has been a slightly less excess of females than is shown for Massachusetts. In Rhode Island, 51,295

HE MARRIED HER MAID.

Thes Pollock Tired of His Mother's Ex-Servant.

DIVORCED HER FOR DESERTION.

The Wife's Story, However, Was That Her Husband Abandoned Her and Their Children—The Elder Pollock Dead Six $50,000—Young Pollock to Marry Again.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The decree of divorce in favor of Edward K. Pollock in the suit against his wife, Ellen, finds that Mrs. Pollock was not guilty of the infidelity charged by her husband, but that she deserted him. She is granted fifty dollars a month for the maintenance of two children, who are given into her custody. Edward K. Pollock is a son of Colonel Alexander Pollock, a wealthy ship chandler at 15 Cortlandt street and 212 West street. The wife from whom Edward has secured a divorce was, until their secret marriage in 1887, Mrs. Alexander Pollock's maid. Eben was highly thought of. In the fall of 1887 she announced her intention to accept other employment.

This was part of the scheme devised by herself and young Pollock to conceal their relations. She started for this city from Nyack on Sept. 27, 1887. Edward also left on the same day and they were married.

Young Pollock's Charges.

Edward was then twenty-one years and Ellen was two or three years older. This latter fact, the lawyer for the husband will claim, bears out their contention that she influenced him to marry her. Young Mr. Pollock alleges that Ellen told him she was about to become a mother and enjoled him into the marriage to save her good name. She denies it and avers that he was a willing principal in the match. Their first child, a pretty girl, was not born until Sept. 7, 1888.

After the marriage they lived in a flat in One Hundred and Thirty-fifth street that had been furnished by Edward.

It was not until the summer of 1890, three years after the secret marriage, that his parents learned of the marriage and one grandchild had been added to their family. For some time before that Edward had not been attentive to his wife. One day she called at the elder Pollock's place of business and told about the secret marriage.

Colonel Pollock was furious and declared that his son should not live with Ellen any longer. Very soon thereafter the son left his wife.

He Deserted Her, She Says.

The son in his suit for divorce alleged that Ellen deserted him and went to her old home to live. She, on the other hand, asserts that the desertion was all on his part and that when he went away she was left in destitute circumstances.

Pollock alleged in his complaint that he was not the father of his wife's second child. The court found that this charge was untrue.

The case will be appealed to the supreme court of Dakota, and Mrs. Pollock's lawyers say they have no doubt the recent decision will be reversed. Meanwhile Mrs. Pollock is maintaining herself and children in this city from what money she earns sewing. It is rumored in Sioux Falls, according to dispatches from that place, that young Pollock is soon to marry a Mrs. Cuthbertson, a former member of the large divorce colony of Dakota.

A suit brought by Mrs. Pollock, Jr., against Colonel Alexander Pollock is now pending in the supreme court of this county. She asks for $50,000 for the alienation of her husband's affections.

FRAUDS IN SAN FRANCISCO.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The president has dismissed from office C. M. Leary, appraiser at San Francisco, for complicity in custom house frauds. The extent of the frauds practiced on the government is not known, but they are believed to have been extensive and to have extended over a long period. Secretary Foster, speaking with a reporter, said that from what evidence had come to him he was afraid the frauds were extensive. Already one importer had returned $60,000. How many more had availed themselves of the complicity of Leavy he was not advised. There were other employees implicated, but as these were appointed by the collector he would attend to them.

A vigorous policy would be pursued, and the office cleared out of all who were in the least way, either by guilty silence or active participation, concerned in the frauds. He cited one instance as illustrative of how the frauds on the revenue were perpetrated. The law required one out of every ten packages to be sent to the appraiser for inspection to fix the rate of duty. The one package sent to him contained cotton goods from Japan, the other nine silks, and all were appraised as cotton goods. The extent of this class of fraud it was impossible to determine, and others equally glaring, the secretary said, he feared had been perpetrated. It could only be successfully accomplished by the collusion of government officers within the custom house, with importers and their agents on the outside.

DR. PARKHURST'S CLOSE CALL.

The Police Tried to Raid the Resorts He Was Investigating.

NEW YORK, April 8.—The jury in the case of Hattie Adams, prosecuted by Rev. Dr. Parkhurst on the charge of keeping a house of ill repute, failed to agree. Justice Lachman discharged the jury and fixed April 15 as the date for the new trial. The jury stood 4 to 3 all through their balloting in favor of Mrs. Adams. It is said that the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst had a very narrow escape from falling into the hands of the police during his recent trip among some of the disreputable houses in the city to collect evidence to substantiate the charges that he had publicly made to the great prevalence of crime.

The story has it that the police knew of Dr. Parkhurst's intended expedition, and that a very high police official gave orders that the revered gentleman must be caught in one of the houses and the place pulled while he was there. On the night of March 11, when Dr. Parkhurst made his famous visit to the house kept by Hattie Adams, the police had the tip that he was about. The belief was that he was in one of the dives in the vicinity of Bleecker street and all the resorts in that neighborhood were thoroughly searched. As Dr. Parkhurst was in a house further uptown, the police, of course, failed to find him and he was saved from the humiliation to which, it is said, they intended to subject him.

The inquiry will be concluded some time next week by the presentation of two reports—a majority report, exonerating Maynard from any criminal or unjustifiable act, and a minority report, filled with astonishment that the prison doors have not been closed behind him.

Senator Saxton made an effort to introduce testimony in the Dutchess county case. He wanted William A. Sutherland, who was present, to be called to the stand. The majority voted to exclude the testimony. An adjournment was taken subject to the call of the chair. The counsel of the committee will prepare the report, Chairman Roesch says; Hill will prepare it, the Republicans say.

Hard to Get At.

Inquisitive city people in the country sometimes find small satisfaction in extracting little country boys about their names and affairs. A "summer boarder" once met a small boy dressed in a broad straw hat, a gingham waist, long trousers and bare feet.

"Hello, little boy! What is your name?"

"Name as pa's," said the boy.

"What's your pa's name?"

"Same as mine."

"I mean, what do they call you when they call you to breakfast?"

"They don't never call me to breakfast."

"Why don't they?"

CURED BY MORMON ELDERS

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., April 8.—The second day's session of the world's conference of the reorganized Mormon church was attended by an increase of 800 delegates, representing 35,000 people. Many saints told their experience as to the laying on of hands by the elders of the church and the miraculous cures performed by them.

One elder testified that he had been sick with the grip and was about to die. The ministering elders laid their hands on him and told him that he would not die as there was a great work for him to do. He got well.

Another saint wanted the prayers of the church to cure deafness of long standing. Several years ago he asked the church to pray for him and he got better, but after ward, backsliding from the faith, his hearing left him, and in consequence he was deaf again.

Bev. Blakeslee, of Michigan, cautioned the saints as to their conduct. Tobacco and whisky were decried as evils and no true saint would use them, he said. The prophet Joseph will at this session give a revelation to the church on baptism of the dead as taught by his father, Joseph, the Martyr.

In the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The senate devoted the entire day to the District of Columbia appropriation bill. There was a hot debate on the proposition to appropriate $100,000 to help defray the expenses of the visit of the Grand Army encampment to Washington. Mr. Stewart explained that the reason why he held a lot of California mortgages payable only in gold was because the mortgages were made out on blank forms complying with the special contract act passed by the legislature of California during the war in 1863.

Nettleton Will Resign.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Nettleton has left Washington for three weeks, at the expiration of which, it is said, he will enter into private business.

Accused of Many Crimes.

NEWARK, April 8.—William Ambrust, arrested in Newark for theft, is wanted in Brooklyn for one crime and in Germany for many. He is only twenty-three years old.

Investigating the Senate Leak.

WASHINGTON, April 8.—The senate held a session on Friday to consider the case of Executive Clerk James R. Young, charged with betraying executive secrets.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

How a Party of Hebrew Tradesmen Met a Troop of Russian Soldiers and How a Mountain Pass Came by the Name "The Jews' Leap."

[Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association.]

There is a pass in the Caucasian mountains, along which runs a trail that no animal can turn on and no two animals can pass each other on. Below the trail there is a chasm 700 feet deep, and this place within the last few years has come to be known as "The Jews' Leap." This is the reason:

In the spring of 1878 a party of Jews, ten in number, were on their way with a pack of heavily laden mules to the Don country, where they were to attend a fair. It was over the custom for parties coming over from the north to send a man ahead on foot to see if the way was clear, travelers from Circassia having the right of way.

If the road was all right, the man sent in front fired off a bomb, the explosion of which told as it echoed along the pass that the way was clear.

Captain Blatzky, who was going south with a small escort of mounted Cossacks, wholly ignoring this precaution, said to his guide:

"There are no soldiers coming this way. The only party we can meet is some Jewish peddlers, and if they get in my way I will hurl them over the cliffs."

There was nothing left for the soldiers but to obey, so they rode on and at length entered the pass, Captain Blatzky bringing up the rear.

The rising sun was pouring his level rays through the pass when the Russians reached the highest and narrowest point, and here they were brought face to face with the Jew party, who by the custom of the place had the right of way.

When Captain Blatzky saw the party that opposed him he drew his sword and shouted out:

"Curse the dogs! Hurl them over the cliffs and ride on!"

The Jews heard the savage order and held a hurried consultation. To go back was impossible, for all were leading their mules, as the Russians were their horses.

"We have the right of way," replied the foremost Jew, whose only weapon was a stout staff.

"Have no rights!" roared the Russian.

"No rights in the valleys and towns," replied the Jew resolutely, "but up here, nearer to God and man to man, we are equal."

"Pitch him over and stop his talking!" yelled the officer.

"Try it and take the consequences!" was the spirited response.

The guide leaped forward with drawn sword, and the master, a stalwart young man, raised his staff and stood on the defensive.

After fencing for a few seconds the Jew's staff was cut in two, but before his assailant could strike him with the sword he leaped forward, caught him in his arms, and the two fell over the cliff and dashed in a bleeding mass on the rocks below.

IT WAS TOO LATE.

SUCH parties were now wrought up to a frenzy that blinded them to all considerations of life.

The Jews lost their habitual prudence and were stung to a desperate resistance by the memory of many generations of outrage and rapine.

In the dense settlements the Russians might be massacred, but they must needs be few, with all the advantage of arms on the side of the transgressors.

The fourth Jew picked up a sword that a Russian had dropped before he went over and down to death. He was a young man, unskilled in the use of such a weapon, but even if he had been the wall of rock to the left would have balked all sword play.

With the fury of a tiger he buried over his opponent and sent his horse after him. The Jew had lost a brother and his gray haired father was behind him.

With such a war cry as never burst from Jewish lips since the days when Joshua led Israel to victory, the young man swept every living thing from his path till he came face to face with the last man, Captain Blatzky.

The Russian fired his pistol straight into the young man's face, making a serious but not a fatal wound. Certain it is it did not stay the irresistible onset.

The officer's sword leaped up, but it was too late. He felt the wet blade at his throat, and the next instant he had joined the men whom he had so ignominiously led to death.

The surviving merchants hastily made their way into Turkish territory, where they were safe, leaving behind them in peace and a memory that will last as long as the mountains.

"The Jews' Leap."

The Nature of an Oath.

At a recent trial a growling fight of a pair of game birds up in the district of New York state an Irish boy of fourteen was one of the witnesses called for the prosecution, and strongly, for reasons best will be obvious, his evidence was not taken, it was generally felt that he was a mark for cross of the lawyers.

He was small for his age, the judge decided to learn for himself if the boy knew the nature of an oath; so assuming a manner never seen off the bench, and never if Emery on his knees, he asked:

"Daniel Horan, do you know the nature of an oath?"

"Do you mane swearin'?" asked the boy.

"I do."

"Faith I do. Shure no man could live drivin' mules on a dump for two years and not know all about swearin'. Would you honor loike to hear me?"

"No, sir!" said the judge angrily. "Do you know why men are brought in here to swear on the Bible?"

"Bekase they can't help themself's."

"Perhaps that; but do you know what a lie is?"

"Do I know what lies is?"

"Yes. Come, answer. Well, what are lies?"

"Things that ain't thrue."

"And what will happen to you if you tell a lie?"

"Nothin, if it ain't found out. If I was to lie to the boss above I'd have a mule and he found it out he might give me the ground bounce."

At this juncture the audience laughed, the judge rapped and the officers shouted:

"Silence in the court!"

"What is your religion?" asked the judge when he could get his breath.

"I believe I'm a Catholic," replied Daniel Horan.

"Are you not sure?"

"No."

"Do you ever go to mass?"

"No."

"Did you never see a priest?"

"Oh, yis."

"Ever speak to one?"

"No."

"Did a priest ever speak to you?"

"Yis."

"What did he say?"

"He said, 'Come here, you little rascal,' and hould my horse, and if you let him get away I'll lick blazes out av you!'"

"Remove the witness!" shouted the judge. "He is not fit to be sworn."

And Daniel Horan stepped down, with his left eye shut and his tongue in his cheek, and there was a general feeling that the case for the prosecution had not been strengthened.

—The production by Wm. H. Crane at the Star Theatre, New York, of Prof. H. Potter's new comedy, "The American Minister," has created as much genuine interest and as hearty an original presentation of "The Senator" in that city. Both the play and Mr. Crane have made an immediate hit, and what is more, perhaps remarkable, the critics for once, coincide in the goodness of the play and players. As Benjamin Franklin Lawton, the American Minister to the court of King Humbert of Italy, Mr. Crane is supported by a part new to the American stage. It is a character of decided virility, combining with the humor of comedy by the comedian, stray dramatic elements which the actor portrays faithfully and effectively. It is unlike any character which Mr. Crane has hitherto attempted, and develops his acknowledged abilities as an artist to their fullest extent. The story of the play is of absorbing interest, and illustrates the methods of Diplomacy as they are never before treated by an American playright.

EXPRESS EMPLOYEES OBJECT.

They do not Like the Bonding and Personal Liability System.

The United States Express Company's employees are complaining about the new rules the company is enforcing. The complaint is chiefly against the bonding system and section 4, which provides that the company shall not be held liable for injuries in accidents to men working for the corporation. Many employees have signed the contract, thinking it useless to protest. Others propose to ask for a change in these regulations, and it is hinted that if it is not made there may be trouble.

The contract sets forth that the employee is not addicted to drink, will observe all regulations and releases the company from all claim in case of accident. The bonding clause provides that employees shall pay premiums into a fund to be used in repaying losses arising from negligence, default or fraud of employees. The company is empowered to discharge a man without previous notice.

The company explains the bonding contract by saying it is a more satisfactory system than surety company bonds and will probably mean lower rates of premiums for the employees. The premiums are put in a trust fund, and when this is considered large enough to protect the company from all loss through employees, the surplus shall be distributed among the latter in proportion to the premiums paid. The company has full control of this system.

The clause chiefly objected to is the one which declares that while the employee's work is surrounded with danger, he assumes all risk of accident, thus relieving the express company of any responsibility.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Bushnell, formerly of East Sixth street, has removed to 99 Madison avenue.

Miss Bertha Fisher is visiting Miss Mary Rockafellow of Grove street, Somerville, N. J.

Mr. Scoty Edsall will load at the Third street station, 37 East Third street, tomorrow night.

Rev. Chas. B. Mitchell, a young man himself, is announced to speak to young men to-morrow night in the Methodist church on "The Visions of Young Men."

John Diehl a well-known resident of this city, died at the German Hospital in New York city last evening. A large circle of friends and acquaintances mourns his loss. He was about thirty years of age at the time of his death.

Mr. W. E. Brock of Mountain avenue is perfecting a new tricycle, which is operated by both hands and feet, and is steered by the seat. He is quite ingenious and displays considerable ingenuity in this invention, with which, when perfected, he expects to eclipse anything in the line now in the market. Mr. Brock's inventions have usually proved very profitable to him. It is said that $80,000 was realized from one of his inventions alone.

Dr. John F. Griffen, the medical electrician, of East Second street, was stricken with paralysis at his home yesterday afternoon, and has remained in a precarious condition since. It was thought this afternoon that he would not survive until morning. He is well advanced in years, and is a physician of considerable skill. He has several sons in business, Mr. A. M. Griffen the hardware merchant being one of the number.

THE COUNTY LEGISLATORS.

The Chatham to Springfield Road Added to the County System.

The Union County Board of Freeholders met in regular session Thursday afternoon. There was very little business for the members except the auditing of bills.

Mr. Howard surprised some of the Democratic members by offering a resolution to appoint Alfred T. Crane keeper of the Milton avenue bridge, at a compensation of $600 per annum, to begin May 1.

It was suspected that the resolution filled an office which might be filled by the incoming board, but Mr. Howard showed that Mr. Crane's term expired before the new board organized, and there was no political significance in the resolution.

The reappointment was made by a vote of 14 to 3.

Mr. Briant offered a resolution that the board as a committee of the whole view the roads between Springfield and Chatham to act upon the proposition to adopt them as a part of the county road system.

There was some discussion when the resolution was adopted with an amendment to the effect that Union county would make the improvements after Essex county had improved the section of the road in that county.

S. 200, extends the police tenure act to policemen in townships having 600 inhabitants or less, provides that incorporated boroughs may construct and maintain sewers and drains; S. 222, permits the consolidation of gas and electric light companies.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Mr. Anderson's Daughter Attacked by a Dog.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—My little girl when riding on her bicycle yesterday afternoon was attacked by a large dog on Second street, causing her suddenly to spring up in her seat. In falling back she severely injured her spine and is now suffering excruciating agony.

Is it not time that some action be taken to prevent such incurs? There are dozens of them all round and their nature by the dog catchers is an utter farce.

In passing near Pond's factory the other day I was attacked by a bull dog and but for my walking backward holding my heavy coat to ward off his rushes, I should have been torn to death.

I shall take legal proceedings against the owner of the dog which has so severely injured my daughter, but I think the city ought to be held responsible if its officers so palpably fail to carry out its ordinances. JOHN L. ANDERSON.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

If Mr. Fox will challenge Mr. Bonsowo, and Mr. Milbank the Duc de Morny, and the Duc de Morny challenge Mr. Arnellen Schloll, and they all kill one another off, it would be a good way to settle present questions of "honor."

Have the Germans solved the problem of aerial navigation, and are they keeping the secret for war purposes? This is the startling question other nations may well ask. Certain it is that German balloons have been able to travel high in air over the Russian frontier in Poland, take observations of the fortifications of Warsaw and other places, pour an intense electric light upon whatever spot seemed dark, examine it leisurely and then steer away again to wind home, or in any direction desired, the balloon being under perfect control. It is said that storage batteries supply electricity for the motor, but these batteries are necessarily very heavy. If the Germans have the secret of utilizing them in an airship and steering in any direction, then there is nothing that can prevent Germany from conquering any nation in Europe. A shell or two dropped from a balloon would destroy a whole city, and it would be helpless. There is no gunnery science at present known that can train a cannon to fire straight up in the air.

A Columbian Speech.

Meeting to devise ways and means for an exhibit at the Columbian fair. Orator Driggles takes the floor and speaks:

My Friends—Columbus discovered America. It was not Galileo or Shakespeare or Nero or Queen Victoria that discovered America; it was Columbus. My friends, it was not John Columbus or William Columbus or Eli Columbus that discovered America; it was Christopher Christopher Columbus. Why did he discover America? Was it because he had nothing else to do? No. Was it because there was not land enough already known to the people of that time? No, it was not. Was it because the rulers of Europe wanted him to find it? No, it was not. He discovered it because he wanted to find a new world, and he set sail westward and kept on till he found it.

My friends, Columbus discovered America. Nobody told him it was there. He did not invent it. He did not fall over it in the dark. He did not find it when he was looking for something else. He did not pick it up. He discovered it.

Finally, my friends, Columbus discovered America. It was not England he discovered. It was not Africa or Ireland. It was not Utah. Where he wanted to discover America he did not go to the Feejee islands or to China. Where did he come? He came straight to America. That was the reason why he discovered it.

A Hunted People.

No darker blot will stain the closing quarter of the Nineteenth century than the persecution of the Jews in Europe in Germany the well known "Judenhetze" breaks out at intervals with re newed ferocity. The latest evidence of its existence is an imperial decree forbidding Jews fleeing from Russia to cross German territory. The decree is rigorously executed. Even when permits of this unhappy race have paid their passage for German steamships and are amply provided with money besides, they are driven back, losing both passage and ticket money. What becomes of them—who knows or cares?

The emperor of Russia drives them out of his realm with cruelty and persecution; the German emperor says they shall not even pass through his country on their way out of Russia. There are now 400,000 Hebrews waiting to get away from Russia, forced out by imperial decree. At a recent municipal riot in Prague, when the mob had been scattered by the police, they gathered again and afraid to attack the police, exclaimed, "Let's go for the Jews," which they did accordingly. The manner in which Jews are treated reminds one of an American rabbit drive in the Pacific states, in which hundreds of these creatures are closed in on, hunted, driven into a corner and slaughtered.

Vengeance will certainly overtake the nations that are guilty of such inhumanity. It is charged that Russian Jews are exterminate that they make the stupid blunder to resent drunk and then get all his property. Even so, there are civilized ways of dealing with rascals, and civilized nations dare not resort to inhumanity. But is it fair to call Russia a civilized nation? Hardly.

There is one thing both Germany and Russia will do well to remember. It is that persecuted and downtrodden people always rise in the long run to triumph over their oppressors. It is the law, and it has never failed where the crushed race had elements of strength. If the lesson of history is true, the Jews will rise from this persecution a more powerful and influential race than even the fears of the czar ever pictured. What they will do then, whether they will continue to be that unusually, a people mingling with and being citizens of all the civilized nations, at the same time keeping rigidly to themselves, or whether they will form a country and a nation all their own somewhere on the globe, the Twentieth century will unfold.

BLAIR AND THE CHINESE

His Rejection Was Retaliation Against Uncle Sam.

MONEY FOR THE GRAND ARMY MEN.

WASHINGTON, April 9.—The correspondence in relation to the nonacceptance of ex-Senator Blair as minister to China by the government of that country, which has just been made public, opens with a note from Minister Tsin Kwo Yin to Secretary Blaine, dated April 25, 1891, stating that he had received two cablegrams from his government, the nature of which made it necessary for him to see Mr. Blaine without delay. The cablegrams are as follows:

In regard to Blair's appointment as minister plenipotentiary to China by the United States this man in 1882 and 1885 bitterly abused China in the senate. The facts have been published in the newspapers. This coming in China simply might be detrimental to the intercourse of the two nations. Please discuss the matter with the honorable secretary of state according to the laws of the United States and ask him to stop his coming and retake the words.

Blair abused the Chinese laborers too bitterly while in the senate, and was conspicuous in helping to pass the Chinese exclusion act. The United States government having always maintained friendly relations would do better not to appoint him as minister plenipotentiary to China. According to the usages of the western nations and international laws China would be deemed at liberty to receive him. I have consulted with the foreign office on the subject. Communicate Blair's name to the honorable secretary of state without delay, and request him to have a persona grata appointed instead

Mr. Blair Called Back.

The first note was dated April 25, and was sent by the foreign office; the second was dated two days later, and was signed by the viceroy. On the receipt of these dispatches, Secretary Blaine telegraphed Mr. Blair, who was en route to China, to return to Washington, which he did. On June 12 Assistant Secretary Rice had a talk with the Chinese minister and asked him entirely confidentially and unofficially whether it was not possible that his government had made its decision in the matter without being in possession of all the facts of the case, and requested him unofficially to telegraph his government in an entirely informal manner, inquiring whether upon Mr. Wharton offering to present all the facts of Mr. Blair's action exactly as they happened, the Chinese government would be willing to reconsider its decision. The Chinese minister said he would telegraph his government what Mr. Wharton proposed.

At the suggestion of Mr. Wharton Mr Blair sent to him a summary of his record in connection with legislation upon Chinese immigration in the Forty-seventh and Fiftieth congresses. Mr. Blair says that his record shows that at no time did he abuse China or the Chinese, either by word or by act, but on the contrary, while opposing, as he always expected to, further immigration of Chinese laborers to this country, he was a friend of the Chinese nation in the senate.

He adds: "I have never charged the Chinese government or nation with tyranny and oppression nor with any wrongful conduct whatever. If the test applied to my conduct in this case is to be acquiesced in by our government freedom of discussion in and out of the halls of legislation will be ended on the one hand, or on the other, representation of our country abroad by men who have taken part in public affairs must cease."

Li Hung Chang Says "No."

On the same day Mr. Blair sent the following note to the president:

I have the honor hereby to tender my resignation as minister of the United States to China. I have today placed on file in the department of state the means of disproving the false and scandalous newspaper reports which have been cited by the Chinese government as the reason of my rejection as persona non grata. If I were allowed an opportunity to use if the truth should be made known to the Chinese government and to my own countrymen.

On the 23d Viceroy Li Hung Chang replied to Mr. Wharton's request to be allowed to send to China more facts about Blair's record, that while some of the newspaper reports might not be correct, Blair was unpopular in China, and as the senator had voted for the Exclusion law and in his speeches had compared the Chinese in the United States to "yellow fever" and to "pestilential disease," and had said the government had the same right to keep the Chinese out of its territory as these diseases.

The viceroy desired to ask the president if it was reasonable to request China to receive such a man. China wanted to be friendly with the United States, but in this matter of the viceroy believed the president could understand the situation in China and would see that it was not possible for China to take any other course.

Mr. Wharton forwarded to Mr. Blair the telegrams received from the Chinese government, and on July 9 he received a message from Mr. Blair withdrawing the tender of his resignation. On July 15 Mr. Blair wrote Mr. Wharton that he believed the Chinese government did not object to him personally, but that the United States was persona non grata, and suggested that China might become more friendly and withdraw her objection to him if President Harrison in his reply should propose to negotiate a new treaty upon the subject of Chinese immigration as favorable as American public opinion would sanction, including other important matters now requiring adjustment. Mr. Blair believed the president would have to meet the whole subject of Chinese immigration, because new legislation would come up in the next congress that would greatly increase the ill will of the Chinese unless the administration even worse than was that of Mr Cleveland's four years since.

In conclusion Mr. Blair said:

But I am sensible that my department with no further suggestions at this time, since it is now the avowed position of China that it is the person which is persona non grata to China's government, by whom, if the president asks it, I shall be still received when the United States has purged itself of offense.

The President Protests.

On Oct. 6, 1891, the president accepted Mr. Blair's resignation. He said:

I assure you that it has been a source of great regret to me that what I believe to have been a misunderstanding has led to an ratenable objection on the part of China to your acceptance as a representative of this government. I have directed the secretary of state to protest to the Chinese government against the sufficiency of the objections advanced by it, and to say that the dispatch will be laid before the Chinese government. Mr. Wharton says:

The objection to receive Mr. Blair because he cast a vote for the Chinese act is in reality an objection to receive any person as minister of the United States who, in the discharge of any official duty, has cast a vote or uttered a word displeasing to the Chinese government, and that to put the matter in the most favorable light for China, it amounts to the propriety of legislation by the United States at the time of the passage of the act of 1882 and which recommends that whatever legislation was within the United States. Any person who may be duly appointed United States minister to China is bound faithfully to observe and aid in the execution of the existing laws.

The ground of objection to Mr. Blair the president could not take into account in selecting another envoy. It is, moreover, illogical in that it makes the objection of China to a person against the existing legislation rather than the legislation, the very act of friendly intercourse between nations by the United States without China discovering that the existence of the law itself was a bar to the reception of an envoy to whom objection was taken. The fact that Mr. Blair may not be received as minister while the law remains unrepealed and inoperative of its own force as a law, is by no means to remove that position with the continued friendly reception of the persona non grata by the United States at Pekin. In this aspect, as in every other aspect, the objection raised by China is unsupported and indefensible.

As I have said the incident is in fact closed by the action of Mr. Blair in placing his commission in the president's hands. That circumstance, however, does not make it less incumbent upon the government of the United States to frankly state the facts of the case. Silence would ill comport with our own self respect or be just to the government of China.

BAY STATE DEMOCRATS ON RECORD

They Cheer the Names of Cleveland and Declare That the Country Demands His Re-election, and That Under His Leadership the Democracy Will Again Win.

PITTSBURG, April 9.—The Times prints the following from a correspondent in Washington: In the course of conversation with the writer and one of the leading physicians of the country, who has occasionally attended the secretary, the physician remarked: "I see some of the newspapers continue to connect your name with the presidency, Mr. Secretary." Promptly, an answer to a question upon which he has been deliberating, Mr. Blaine responded:

"The presidential office is a most laborious and exhausting one. He has no alternate, no substitute upon whose shoulders he can throw responsibility. There is a vice president, but our scheme of government does not permit him to assume the powers and duties of the president, except in case of the death, removal, resignation or disability of the president. It does not contemplate that the president as an occasional acting president for a day or two or a week or two when the man who has been elected to that office may need rest and recreation.

It Would Be Suicide.

"The presidency is an office without sleep. I am now sixty-two years old, and although you have told me and I believe that in heart, lungs, kidneys and otherwise I am free from organic diseases, suffering only from torpidity of the liver, I do not believe that if I were to be inaugurated president tomorrow I would live out my term. I find life too full of congenial work and too full of happiness to feel called upon or inclined to throw it away. If I were assured, therefore, of a nomination and election to the presidency I could not accept it. At my age and with my temperament, and knowing what the effect of a long life of exhausting labor has been upon my vitality, it would be constructive suicide."

The secretary spoke with the emphasis of perfect candor, and with an apparent desire only to make himself definitely understood.

Bay State Democrats Meet.

BOSTON, April 9.—The Democratic state convention to nominate four delegates at large to represent Massachusetts in the Chicago Democratic national convention was held in Tremont temple. Edward Avery, of Braintree, unanimously chosen chairman, delivered a speech of the Cleveland, hard money and tariff reform stripe, and was frequently interrupted with cheers for Cleveland. When cheers for Hill was requested they were mingled with hisses.

The resolutions denounced the high tariff and approved the various tariff reform bills introduced in congress; declared for 'honest money and condemned the Sherman silver act of 1890, and concluded thus:

"While adhering to our time honored custom, we do not specifically pledge our delegation, we yet declare our conviction that the best interests of the party and of the country demand the nomination and election of Grover Cleveland as president, and we are confident that under his leadership all the principles of Democracy will again win a glorious victory."

He Rather Liked the Family.

A good story is told in Missouri at the expense of its once famous governor, Claiborne F. Jackson. Before he solved the enigma of wedlock he had married five sisters—in reasonable lapses of constitutiveness, as a matter of decency. After one wife had been lost and appropriately mourned he espoused another, and he kept his courting within a narrow circle of his own relations. Finally he rather liked the family. Some of his predilections were widows see to again transformed them from Nioben into willing, if not blushing, brides, but it was all one to the conquering hero.

The antiquated father of these girls was almost deaf, and when the governor went to the old gentleman to ask for his surviving daughter the following conversation ensued:

"I want Lizzie!"

"Eh?"

"I want you to let me have Elis-a-beth!"

"Oh, you want Lizzie, do you? What for?"

"For my wife!"

"For life?"

"I want—to—marry—her!"

"Oh, you do! Just so! I see you, boy."

"I'm peculiar glad you do!" muttered the governor.

"Well," slowly responded the veteran, "you may be glad to get her, but the whole neighborhood knows it! Yes, you can have her. You're got 'em all now, my lad; but for goodness sake, if anything happens to that 'ere gal, don't come and ask me for the old woman!"

CHINESE INSECT FUNGUS DRUG.

Through the courtesy of Mr. A. C. Jones, United States consul, stationed at Chin Kiang, China, and the somewhat scanty contents of that port, the editor of Insect Life have received specimens of the officinal preparation of the parasitic fungus, Cordyceps chinensis. This Cordyceps is parasitic on a native Chinese caterpillar, and is not unlike a congeneric North American species, Cordyceps (Torrubia) sphecocephala Berkeley, known as the White grub fungus. The accompanying letter of transmittal, containing interesting notes of this insect fungus, is reproduced herewith:

Cordyceps chinensis is in winter an insect, in summer a plant. It grows upon the head of a caterpillar as a disease of the insect. It is sold in small packages, generally tied together with red cotton. Each of the many pieces forming the small bundles consists of two distinct portions—the larger portion belonging to the insect of a yellowish brown color more than an inch long, showing rings, joints and grub, and the upper fungus portion, consisting of a spiral filament of a grayish brown color, flexible, more or less twisted and internally of a light color. In former times it was esteemed even more highly than ginseng as a medicine. It comes from the provinces of Hupeh, Szechuan and Thibet.

Hollow Stay Bolts.

The rolling of hollow stay bolts is an industry eminently intelligent and claimed to possess special advantages, says The Age of Steel. In this process two pieces of iron rolled in flat bars of section are laid together and wound in that position, these parts being then heated to a welding heat and run through rolls, and as the welded tube issues from the rolls it passes over a mandrel, which fills the interior; before reaching the second pair of rolls it cools slightly and shrinks upon the mandrel, and in this pair of rolls it is drawn from the mandrel and the interior cleaned. In this way, by five repeated operations, a hollow stay bolt is obtained which has a uniform interior diameter. The material must necessarily be the very best quality of charcoal iron; the bolts are made in lengths of six feet, and it is alleged that a considerable saving in expense is made by using hollow stay bolt iron instead of drilling the ends of the bolts after they are in position.

What Is Steatite?

Probably no mineral has so many nontechnical names as steatite, which is also known by the old-fashioned soapstone, potstone and lardstone, and which is itself merely a compact granular variety of talc —a soft mineral, soapy to the touch, of a greenish, whitish or grayish color, usually occurring in foliated masses and a hydrous silicate of magnesia. Steatite can be formed into almost anything; beautiful fireplaces are made of it, and stationary washtubs and sinks are important products. Not an ounce need be wasted, says the Industrial World; the dust is used to adulterate rubber goods, giving so called gum rubbers their dull finish; and in paper, too, it is used to give weight, while all waste can be ground up into a flour, which can be made into a fireproof paint for coating the interior of mills or the roofs of buildings.

Durable Lead Pencils.

A correspondent writing to The Manufacturer's Gazette says that by immersing a lead pencil in a jar of linseed oil until it is thoroughly saturated—lead, wood and all—it will be found that the lead has been toughened and softened, and the pencil will outwear two of the untreated.

The Longest Continuous Fiber.

The longest continuous fiber known at the present time is that of silk. An industrial journal states that a cocoon of a well fed silk worm will often yield 1,000 yards long, and in one instance one has been produced which contained 1,295 yards without a break.

Self Purification of Water.

Professor Pettenkofer, of Munich, holds that there is no danger of sewage pollution in the river if the volume of sewage discharged does not exceed one-fifteenth the volume of the flow of the river, and if the sewage enters at a greater velocity, so as to prevent basking ap.

A Relief for Burns.

Equal parts of linseed oil and lime water, mixed and poured over the burn. A cotton or linen cloth wrung out of this mixture and laid upon the wound. If this preparation is faithfully used it will be found to remove pain and give a great deal of comfort.

JEWELS AS MEDICINES.

Popular Superstitions Which Once Indicated Wearers of Precious Stones.

Although popularly supposed to be itself a medicine, the ruby of the ancients is by some now been credited with the power of protecting the wearer from the evil effects of other poisons, a reputation which it retained until comparatively recent times. According to Pliny, it also keeps off insanity. Amber, too, was supposed to possess the latter virtue. Besides the diamond, several other stones were supposed to possess medicinal virtues.

The ruby was considered good for the ailments of the liver as well as for bad eyes.

The sapphire and emerald were also credited with properties which rendered them capable of healing ophthalmic diseases, and there is a superstitious belief that serpents are blinded by looking at the latter stone.

The turquoise, although not credited with either remedial or protective properties so far as disease was concerned, was supposed to possess a mysterious kind of sympathetic indicator, the intensity of its color being supposed to fluctuate with the health of the wearer. The latter, moreover, by virtue of the same mysterious monk, it was said, fell from any insight with impunity. The Marquis of Villena's foot, however, was somewhat unfortunate in that when he reversed the popular superstition in his assertion that the wearer of a turquoise might fall from the top of a high tower and be dashed to pieces without breaking the stone.

The opal was looked upon as a thunderstone, and although many women now appear to have a strong superstitious prejudice against wearing one, it was in bygone days held in the highest estimation, for it was supposed to combine the virtues of several other gems. On the other hand, the onyx—so named on account of its resemblance to the color of the finger nails—would appear to have been a safe stone to wear, for, according to medieval superstition, it rendered one particularly susceptible to annoyance from nightmares and demons.

Temperance advocates, if they have any regard for the beliefs of the Greeks and Romans, might, according to Chambers' Journal, seriously consider the advisability of distributing amethysts among drunkards, for it was supposed that these stones prevented intoxication. Opal was much use of by the Romans as a protection against the evil eye, and popular superstition has survived the topaz with the power of depriving boiling water of its heat.

The Origin of the Side Saddle.

The horrified opponents of the movement for women's riding on cavalier may be interested in learning that had it not been for an accident of fashion the gentler sex would be striding their horses still, and that the side saddle is not an invention due to the advanced modesty of civilization. It appears that one Anne, of Bohemia, eldest daughter of a German emperor and wife of an English king, introduced the custom; not from delicate repulsion to the old method, but simply because she was afflicted with some sort of deformity that rendered it impossible for her to ride upon the saddle in common use, says the New York Sun. In those days it was imperative that a woman should ride, accordingly the first side saddle was invented. Royalty had them, as now, snobbish followers ever on the alert to adopt fashions favored by its patronage, and in a few months every woman of place in England possessed a side saddle and the custom was established.

Lucretia.

Every age and every country have their heroines, whose deeds or sufferings are recorded in history, and who, under the influence of time, became symbols of typical feminine virtues. Painters delight in perpetuating the forms of their ideals in ethereal portraits and historical pictures. Thus it was with Lucretia, the symbol of heroic virtue and purity in ancient Rome. She was the wife of Collatinus, a Roman noble. Not to survive the insult which had been offered to her by Sextus, the son of Tarquinius Superbus, she stabbed herself, after having exacted from her father and husband to acquaint them with the indignity she had suffered. The Romans rose in revolt at the sight of the lifeless body and her death was speedily avenged by the expulsion of the Tarquins from Rome, the abolishment of royalty and the established ment of a consular government (B. C. 509).

The Dog Days.

According to one of many explanations we owe the notion of the dog days to the old Romans. These days embrace the period between the 3d of July and the 11th of August. Falling then in the height of summer, it need not have surprised the Romans that July must naturally be a very hot month. But this explanation was untenable. So they made out that the heat and the diseases that it gave rise to were due to the fact that the star Canicula (the Little Dog) rose and set at the same time as the sun. This was a blazing superstition, for the Little Dog does not rise with the sun now till the end of August, and yet July remains as hot as ever it was. But popular errors are hard, and the "dog days" will be a favorite phrase for ages.

Rev A. W. Mann, the deaf mute preacher, says that there are 40,000 deaf mutes in the United States and upward of a million in the world. The ratio of deaf mutes to the rest of the population, according to latest computation, is one to every 1,000

THE FOX AND STORK.

A Fox once asked, (on mischief bent)
His friend the Stork to dinner,
"Come take potluck with me to-night,
And you shall not be thinner!"
But wicked Fox! he only served
Soup in a shallow plaster;
The Stork could not pick up one drop,
And went away no fatter.
He went away now showed his rage,
But presently invited
The Fox in turn—
Which much the Fox delighted.
He fasted all the day before,
That he might be more alert,
To do all justice to the meats
The Stork would serve at table.
But ah! for once the witty Fox
Had found a friend to cheat!
The food was in a long necked jar,
Nor could poor Bayzard ever
Get deep enough to catch one bite!
(And while he drew near looking.)
The Stork meanwhile said, "Dearest Fox

PATIENT MOTHERS TAKE HEART.

The Stockiest Children Often Live to be the Strongest Men.

Mothers with delicate children may well take courage from the fact that many of the sickly lads of some of the exceptionally long-lived men. Whether it is the extreme care given them that strengthens their constitutions, or whether the elements of the system are worked off in their many illnesses, it is certain that not a few who were particularly frail as children have outlived many of their more vigorous companions. A notable instance of this was the Emperor William I, of Germany. For many years he was frail and delicate, giving great anxiety to his mother, and it was only through unremitting care that he was safely brought through his allotted span of years. Many have a superb appearance of manhood, a veritable king among men in stature and physique. No mother, therefore, who goes through the anxiety of rearing a delicate and beloved child need despair of seeing him in the end strong and vigorous.

Promotion a Slight Step.

Anybody can have it who will be at the pains to set the foot down right. In that lies all the difference between a thumping, tramping gait and the light tread of the nimble people call you "velvet footed." The whole art and mystery lies in a single sentence: Put the ball of the foot down first, throwing the weight upon it, and letting the heel come to the floor the hundredth part of a second after. Treading fast forces all the nerves at once—the weight comes with a jar that is about equally destructive to quiet, to grace and to shoe leather. By stepping first on the ball, you break the jar the toes, the cushion and the arch as a spring, and make of walking a double pleasure.—Harper's Young People.

Not a Heavy-Handed Son of Toil.

Little Johnnie R., who in his city home had learned to be polite enough to our fellow collie brother as the "honest, horny-handed farmer," showed an unexpected side desire, on visiting the country, to see a "son of the soil;" and when the family was met at the depot by Deacon Smith and chariot, the child glanced eagerly at his hands, and then, in a tone of disappointment, whispered:

"Papa, he is not a farmer, is he?"

"Yes, my son."

The Mystical Seven.

7 years in childhood's sport and play - 7
7 years in school from day to day - 14
7 years to trade or college life - - 21
7 years to find a place and wife - - 28
7 years to building upward given - - 35
7 years to business hardly driven - - 42
7 years for reaping what is sown - - 49
7 years for wealth and bootless woe - 56
7 years for hoarding for your pile - - 63
7 years in weakness, pain and care - 70
Then dies a person—you should know where.

BREVITIES

—Next Sunday will be Easter Sunday.

—The new Seventh-day Baptist church is now entirely enclosed.

—The city Common Council will meet in its adjourned session this evening at eight o'clock.

—A bill signed by the governor recently makes it illegal to kill pheasants for the next three years.

—The Christian Endeavor Society of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting to-morrow evening.

—As a matter of record we mention the fact that there were seventeen degrees of cold yesterday and the day was very cold.

—The mechanical drawing and bookkeeping classes of the Y. M. C. A. will meet this evening as usual. Every member of these classes is requested to be present.

—Sunday a week ago people might go about feeling very comfortable in light summer clothing. Yesterday they would not feel too comfortable in heavy Winter clothing.

—An amendment to the school law requires a more rigid enforcement, and increases the responsibilities of teachers and district clerks in the matter of school attendance.

—There will be an entertainment next Thursday evening at the Boys' Club. A very nice programme is being arranged and all members are urged to be present. The exhibition of the scroll saw work will be held on that night.

—"The Burglar" was given Saturday evening, for the second time, in Stillman Music Hall, and had a fair-sized audience considering the play and the night. One would scarcely believe that gem of a play, "Alabama," was written by the same author.

—Policeman Giese had set the time for the funeral of the dog he had shot, for to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock. During Saturday evening, however, some practical joker confiscated the body of the dead animal and consequently the funeral had to be postponed.

—Evidence increases that the universal language will be English. It has already taken its place of French and German in Russia. All the deliberations of the recent conference concerning Samoa were conducted in English instead of French. A gentleman in Liberia says that English has driven out every other foreign language in the west coast of Africa, where once Portuguese was dominant. This progress in India is ahead, it is said, in Japan.

—The NEWS is delivered to all parts of the city and borough at ten cents per week, and reaches nearly every home. For the convenience of those coming on trains whose homes carriers cannot reach conveniently, and transients, a few papers are left with the Union News Co. at the depot. We cover the city so thoroughly that we have occasion to reach very few in this way. Another paper, having little more than half the circulation of the NEWS, but depending largely on this transient business, undertakes to make comparisons in its usual deceptive style. The impression it intends to convey may succeed with the unthinking, or those who may not happen to know its reputation—the lack of which makes even leading citizens of its own party refuse to allow it into their homes at all. The paper has been proven in every local contest for the past six years of as little character and influence as to be always on the losing side, just the opposite of THE NEWS, which has invariably won. The other paper depends largely on its ability to deceive rather than upon straightforward methods which we believe are the best in the long run. THE NEWS can afford to ignore such a sheet, and has done so for years.

OLD GRACE CHURCH.

THE FINAL SERVICES HELD IN IT YESTERDAY.

Dean Rodman Reviews Its History—The Corner Stone Laid 38 Years Ago—The New Edifice to be Occupied Next Sunday.

The services held in Grace church yesterday were of peculiar interest to the worshipers, who have for so long assembled in the modest little structure, Being Palm Sunday, and the beginning of Holy Week, all the services of prayer and praises were clothed with a special tone of solemnity, which was intensified by the knowledge that the congregation were worshiping for the last time in the little church, endeared by so many hallowed associations.

While fully conceding the necessity for a new and larger building, and rejoicing in the near completion of the substantial and beautiful church, to be occupied for the first time on Easter Day, few in the congregation did not feel pangs of regret at the thought of giving up their places in the bright little sanctuary, where so many spiritual blessings had been enjoyed.

The rector, in his touching sermon, dwelt upon the solemnity of crises like the present through which so heart with cheering joy are the regular services being taken thankfully ill. The Ordinal, Resolution and Courtesy Committees were next appointed.

Mrs. Raphael Ocean Grove, was requested to open a short memorial service in memory of Mrs. Downs who died in the Lord, on Friday last. Mrs. Ellis most of her life to the temperance work.

Mrs. Ellis was then called upon, as she had been with Mrs Downs at the end. Mrs. Ellis told of the work done by Mrs. Downs and said she was one of those few individuals who were never too busy to have a kind and courteous word for every one, no matter how rushed she might be. Her last message to the Temperance women of New Jersey was: "Tell them I love them every one and to work as hard as they have been to help them on." Mrs. Ellis then showed a watch which Mrs. Downs had given her with the request that she would always wear it as she traveled through the State.

Mrs. Barnes was called upon next, and said that she gladly responded for any similar event which happened some time ago.

When Ole Bull was dying away from home, he called an old friend to him and handing him his watch, said, "Dear friend, Take this and when it is, and, for my name and influence may remain the same through the years to come, I pledge you to see that this timepiece never runs down. Always wear it as you go about doing good. Upon your death bed, bequeath it to your children as instructions." "So," continued Mrs. Barnes "I think the best word for the New Jersey Temperance Unions will and should be 'watch'."

The discussions of the "I" presidents on "How to Win" were extremely interesting and useful. The principal work taken up by the different unions being the Loyal Legion Temperance Drill, Colored Temperance Work, and the Flower Mission. Besides these general branches different societies are making special departures in the interest of the Soldiers and Sailors, Progressive Boys' Clubs, Physical Culture and Hygiene Classes to teach girls and women how to care for themselves and families, police, mercenary work, and all circles in which they they think they can do any good.

It was also strongly advocated to unite with and secure the earnest co-operation of the Epworth Leagues and other societies of all churches, besides the King's Daughters and Sons. Many how much can be accomplished by forming such a combination.

Mrs. C. A. Robbins of Hightstown gave an instructive talk in regard to the Juvenile Work.

The afternoon meeting closed shortly after five o'clock, and the delegates were each assigned to their respective places where they were to be entertained.

The evening session began at 7.45 and was opened by the "I" song, "The I' is Marching On."

The devotional exercises, which were led by Mrs. E. M. Thatcher of Burlington county, and Superintendent of the W. C. T. U., were followed by singing, after which Mrs. E. Heller, president of the Trenton Y. W. C. T. U., extended hearty words of welcome to all the delegates and friends. Miss Florence G. Carter of Blairstown responded.

The evening address was made by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, National Superintendent of the Y. W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Barnes said that because of the beautiful bright day which had just passed, accompanied as it was by the bright faces and flowers which surrounded her, she would have liked very much to tell only of the bright side. However, on account of some recent experiences she took her talk from the evening text, which was about the widow of Nain, who was following the bier of her only son, when Christ met them.

How many widows only soon to-day are worse off than if on their way to their graves? Mrs. Barnes then urged the necessity of having the outside influences stronger and better. Most of the temptations to boys are from outside that most of the young people took their first downward steps.

"Girls," continued she, "let us resolve never to stay our hands in this grand work until God bids us. Young girls should be so interested that they would not need anything to spur them on. God bless the girls. Don't wait until the victory is won and then be like the man who climbed the tree and let his wife kill the bear and then boasted that "he and Mary did it."

The evening closed with the singing of "Bands of White Ribbon" by a quartette, and the benediction.

The third and last session began at nine o'clock Saturday morning. The principal features of this being the reading of the minutes, reports of committees, a paper on Medal Contests by Miss A. M. Fell of Trenton. This paper was followed by a discussion which was opened by Miss G. Eugenie Pfeiffer of Hightstown.

Miss Ada Belger of Trenton, State Superintendent of Physical Culture, gave an instructive and interesting talk on Physical Culture.

Miss Annie Miller of Westfield read a paper on "Our National Delegate" in Boston, which will be presented by Mrs. S. J. Taylor, Mrs. Harder, Miss Mary Mosher, Miss Brown, Miss Louise K. Green, Miss Mary E. French, Miss Ross and others.

The conference were opened at two o'clock Friday afternoon with singing, followed by scriptural reading by Mrs. Emma Bourne, the president. Mrs. Ellis of Newark, led in prayer after which Miss Campbell, of New Brunswick, gave the girls a very interesting and encouraging talk. Miss Campbell is the daughter of the late Dr. Campbell, for many years president of Rutgers College.

The conference called to order, Miss Carrie Busby of Moorestown was elected secretary pro tem, the regular secretary being taken thankfully ill. The Ordinal, Resolution and Courtesy Committees were next appointed.

Mrs. Raphael Ocean Grove, was requested to open a short memorial service in memory of Mrs. Downs who died in the Lord, on Friday last. Mrs. Ellis most of her life to the temperance work.

Mrs. Ellis was then called upon, as she had been with Mrs Downs at the end. The principal work taken up by the different unions being the Loyal Legion Temperance Drill, Colored Temperance Work, and the Flower Mission. Besides these general branches different societies are making special departures in the interest of the Soldiers and Sailors, Progressive Boys' Clubs, Physical Culture and Hygiene Classes to teach girls and women how to care for themselves and families, police, mercenary work, and all circles in which they they think they can do any good.

It was also strongly advocated to unite with and secure the earnest co-operation of the Epworth Leagues and other societies of all churches, besides the King's Daughters and Sons. Many how much can be accomplished by forming such a combination.

Mrs. C. A. Robbins of Hightstown gave an instructive talk in regard to the Juvenile Work.

The afternoon meeting closed shortly after five o'clock, and the delegates were each assigned to their respective places where they were to be entertained.

The evening session began at 7.45 and was opened by the "I" song, "The I' is Marching On."

The devotional exercises, which were led by Mrs. E. M. Thatcher of Burlington county, and Superintendent of the W. C. T. U., were followed by singing, after which Mrs. E. Heller, president of the Trenton Y. W. C. T. U., extended hearty words of welcome to all the delegates and friends. Miss Florence G. Carter of Blairstown responded.

The evening address was made by Mrs. Frances J. Barnes, National Superintendent of the Y. W. C. T. U.

Mrs. Barnes said that because of the beautiful bright day which had just passed, accompanied as it was by the bright faces and flowers which surrounded her, she would have liked very much to tell only of the bright side. However, on account of some recent experiences she took her talk from the evening text, which was about the widow of Nain, who was following the bier of her only son, when Christ met them.

How many widows only soon to-day are worse off than if on their way to their graves? Mrs. Barnes then urged the necessity of having the outside influences stronger and better. Most of the temptations to boys are from outside that most of the young people took their first downward steps.

"Girls," continued she, "let us resolve never to stay our hands in this grand work until God bids us. Young girls should be so interested that they would not need anything to spur them on. God bless the girls. Don't wait until the victory is won and then be like the man who climbed the tree and let his wife

AND THE HOSPITALITY EXTENDED TO THEM BY TRENTON SISTERS.

The Experiences, Successes, and Ideas of the Various Societies—The Plainfield Ladies, Like the Others, Delighted with Their Visit.

There were nineteen unions represented by sixty-five delegates at the Young Women's Christian Union third annual conference, held in Library Hall, Trenton, N. J., Friday and Saturday, April 8th and 9th.

The delegates from this city were Miss Amey B. Green and Miss Eleanor B. Morrison, who were accompanied by Mrs. S. J. Taylor, Mrs. Harder, Miss Mary Mosher, Miss Brown, Miss Louise K. Green, Miss Mary E. French, Miss Ross and others.

The conference were opened at two o'clock Friday afternoon with singing, followed by scriptural reading by Mrs. Emma Bourne, the president. Mrs. Ellis of Newark, led in prayer after which Miss Campbell, of New Brunswick, gave the girls a very interesting and encouraging talk. Miss Campbell is the daughter of the late Dr. Campbell, for many years president of Rutgers College.

The conference called to order, Miss Carrie Busby of Moorestown was elected secretary pro tem, the regular secretary being taken thankfully ill. The Ordinal, Resolution and Courtesy Committees were next appointed.

Mrs. Raphael Ocean Grove, was requested to open a short memorial service in memory of Mrs. Downs who died in the Lord, on Friday last. Mrs. Ellis most of her life to the temperance work.

Mrs. Ellis was then called upon, as she had been with Mrs Downs at the end. Mrs. Ellis told of the work done by Mrs. Downs and said she was one of those few individuals who were never too busy to have a kind and courteous word for every one, no matter how rushed she might be. Her last message to the Temperance women of New Jersey was: "Tell them I love them every one and to work as hard as they have been to help them on." Mrs. Ellis then showed a watch which Mrs. Downs had given her with the request that she would always wear it as she traveled through the State.

Mrs. Barnes was called upon next, and said that she gladly responded for any similar event which happened some time ago.

When Ole Bull was dying away from home, he called an old friend to him and handing him his watch, said, "Dear friend, Take this and when it is, and, for my name and influence may remain the same through the years to come, I pledge you to see that this timepiece never runs down. Always wear it as you go about doing good. Upon your death bed, bequeath it to your children as instructions." "So," continued Mrs. Barnes "I think the best word for the New Jersey Temperance Unions will and should be 'watch'."

The discussions of the "I" presidents on "How to Win" were extremely interesting and useful. The principal work taken up by the different unions being the Loyal Legion Temperance Drill, Colored Temperance Work, and the Flower Mission. Besides these general branches different societies are making special departures in the interest of the Soldiers and Sailors, Progressive Boys' Clubs, Physical Culture and Hygiene Classes to teach girls and women how to care for themselves and families, police, mercenary work, and all circles in which they they think they can do any good.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Author of "Self Help."

Many who have read Dr. Samuel Smiles' "Self Help" will be surprised to know that the brave, gentle author is yet alive, at the age of eighty, working away as though he expected to live eighty years more and fill each day with some good achievement. The old gentleman lives near London. His hair and beard are white, but he is as vigorous and rosy as a man twenty years younger. His old age is graceful and beautiful.

"Self Help" has been one of the most successful books ever printed. It has been translated into as many languages as Mrs. Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Dr. Smiles was the friend of Garibaldi, and in an address voted to him in Italy two years ago it was said that Dr. Smiles' "Self Help" had done more to make Italy than Cavour or Garibaldi ever did, which was probably a pardonable extravagance of statement on the part of enthusiastic Italians. King Humbert invested the old man with the cross of Cavalier of St. Maurice, and the French minister to Italy declared he had educated his children by having them begin with reading "Self Help." Hundreds of thousands of copies have been bought by readers, yet the volume still has a ready sale, like Shakespeare and the dictionary. But Dr. Smiles had been writing twenty years before he had any success at all, and the strangest part of it is that he could scarcely find a publisher for "Self Help" at first. Dr Smiles said to a correspondent of the Philadelphia Press:

The first publisher to whom I submitted the work sent me word, after a time, to come and take it away. He said there was no earthly use in publishing it, as people wouldn't read it. I finally got Mr. Murray, of Albemarle street, to issue it. He allowed me two-thirds of the profits. Probably he never thought that there would be any. Well, that book was an instant success and my reputation was established. Not long after I met at a dinner the publisher who had refused the book. The success of the work was discussed and the publisher said to me that, while other houses were well enough, his was the one to publish a book. "Why, Mr. ——," I said, "don't you know I brought 'Self Help' to you and you would not touch it?" "You don't mean to say that our house had the offer of 'Self Help?'" "That is just what I mean and I can show you the letter in which you refused it."

He has been a great worker, but says he has never overworked. He believes that young people have far better opportunity for success than they did when he was young. It is odd to meet a man who remembers the battle of Waterloo and can recall a time when there were no railroads, steamboats or telegraphs "Your life he is, hale and strong, "frosty but kindly." This sort of an old age can have no terrors. Mr. Smiles lives simply and takes long walks.

"I shouldn't be alive if I didn't walk," he said.

Sugar Beets.

A writer in an agricultural paper recommends farmers generally to go to raising beets. It will be a good change, and they will realize at the present low price of sugar at least thirty-five dollars to the acre clear profit, which, if he raised fifteen tons of beets to the acre, would give the farmer $2.33 to the ton. Then the romance proceeds with seductive pen to follow the ton of beets from the time the hayseed dumps it at the factory till it comes out best granulated, five cents a pound. The second profit made on the ton of beets will be ten dollars. It goes into the manufacturer's pocket.

This figuring is the interesting part of the story. The farmer who certainly does not jump into the business of beet raising after he reads it will certainly be ungrateful to the statistician. Beet raising is a lot of fun. It breaks a man's back, stoops his shoulders, dirties his clothes and wears them out as nothing else does. Then the digging! Set the statistician at it by all means. After he has worked at it for three days he will see the point to advising farmers to go into beet raising in order that the manufacturer may make a profit of ten dollars a ton, while the agriculturist, who does the work, gets a profit of $2.33 a ton.

What is the reason it takes so much more to bury a congressman than anybody else? His brother congressmen mourn so immoderately that they exhaust themselves apparently, and require to be brought to by copious drafts of champagne and a cold bite or two of the most expensive lunches in the market. The bites are not small either. One bill for traveling expenses and refreshments of a few congressmen who accompanied the remains of one of their number home from Washington to an interior state was over $8,500. A congressman's tears over a brother congressman cost four times as much as other people's tears.

Science has indeed discovered a new use for electricity, since it has invented the electric spur by which a jockey can shock a horse during a race and make him run for all there is in him. The horse thus prodded would be quite apt to pass the others not thus admonished, if terror could make him travel. The electric spur was used on the sly, to gain an advantage not shared by other jockeys at Gutthenburg. To what depths will avarice and dishonesty sink mankind!

The largest cannon ever made in the United States is not quite half the size of the heaviest Krupp gun, which weighs 110 tons.

SHERMAN AND STANTON

Gorham Replies to the Ohio Senator's Attack.

OLD TECUMSEH'S GREAT MISTAKE.

According to Gorham the Buckeye Statesman Is Not Consistent in His Views Regarding Mr. Stanton's Attitude on the Sherman-Johnston Terms of Surrender.

WASHINGTON, April 11.—George C. Gorham has written an open letter to Senator Sherman respecting the latter's statement about the terms of Johnston's surrender in his recent eulogy of General Sherman at New York. Mr. Gorham says:

In your recent address in New York on the character and public services of your illustrious brother, General W. T. Sherman, you made the following reference to the terms proposed by him for the surrender of the forces of General Joseph Johnston and other commanders at the close of the civil war:

General Sherman believed in and sought to carry out the policy of Mr. Lincoln. The terms of surrender were tentative, and the conditions were entirely subject to the supervision of the executive authorities, but instead of being submitted to the generous and forgiving patriot who had fallen, they were passed upon in the shadow of a great crime by stern and relentless enemies, who would not have consented to the conditions imposed by General Grant upon General Lee, and who would have disregarded them had not General Grant threatened to withhold their resignations if he cut his terms. When the arrangement with General Johnston was submitted to President Johnson and Mr. Stanton it was rejected with the insulting intimation that it proceeded from either cowardice or treachery. The old cry against General Sherman was again started. It was even imputed that he would attempt to play the part of a Cromwell or a military usurper. The generous kindness of Grant came to his relief New terms were agreed upon and the war closed.

You would have it understood that while General Sherman was engaged in a praiseworthy and purely military act, which President Lincoln would have desired him to perform had he lived, he was set upon and insulted and his arrangements set aside by President Johnson and Edwin M. Stanton then secretary of war, in a mean and narrow spirit of revenge, because of the assumption that Mr. Lincoln died that at that juncture the generous kindness of General Grant interposed between him and these alleged enemies, and that the two generals agreed on new terms and ended the war. You state all this as though you had approved General Sherman's course.

Whatever policy Mr. Lincoln might have recommended to congress for the restoration of the Confederate states to the Union none know better than you that he would never have undertaken to usurp the powers of congress, much less to allow a military subordinate to guide him in the work by a unauthorized arrangement made under the supervision of Jefferson Davis and his cabinet. Mr. Lincoln left no room for doubt on this point, for he gave the following direction to General Grant a fortnight before the Sherman-Johnston negotiations:

Lincoln to Grant.

Lieutenant General Grant:

The president directs me to say to you that he wishes you to have no conference with General Lee unless it be for the capitulation of Lee's army or on solely minor or purely mil tary matters.

He instructs me to say to you that you are not to decide, discuss or confer on any political question. Such questions the president holds in his own hands and will submit them to no military conference or conventions.

Meantime you are to press to the utmost you military advantages. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War.

You will say that General Sherman had not seen this order of Lincoln's when he made his arrangements with Johnston, but it is none the less absolute proof that Lincoln would have disapproved the arrangement. The general needed no such admonition to satisfy him that the discussion of public policies in a military convention was an invasion of the civil authority and wholly outside the powers and duties of a military commander. He frankly admitted this, and in a letter to Secretary Stanton, dated April 25, the day after receiving the government's disapproval of his terms, he said, "I admit my folly in embarking in a military convention any civic matters.

The Sherman-Johnston Agreement.

Mr. Gorham says that the day Grant concluded his negotiations with Johnston for the surrender of all the Confederate armies General Sherman wrote Grant as follows:

"I have agreed with General Joseph E. Johnston for a suspension of armies and active hostilities, to lay before our government at Washington the agreement made between us, with the full sanction of Mr. Davis, and in the presence of Mr. Breckinridge Jefferson Davis, the Confederate president, and John C. Breckinridge, his secretary of war."

Continuing, Mr. Gorham says that while Senator Sherman endeavors to make the public believe Grant came to General Sherman's relief, it is a matter of history that Grant condemned General Sherman's act before consulting either President Johnson or Secretary Stanton, and at his suggestion a cabinet meeting was called, the result of which was "the disapproval by the president of the basis laid down and the disapproval of the negotiations altogether, except the surrender of the army can be demanded by General Johnston, and an order for the termination of the armistice and the resumption of hostilities."

Under this order Sherman gave notice that hostilities would be resumed, whereupon Johnston's army was surrendered upon the terms offered by Grant to Lee.

Why It Was Rejected.

Mr. Gorham says that as a matter of prudence and necessity, Mr. Stanton telegraphed to General John A. Dix, with permission to publish the same, a copy of the Sherman-Johnston agreement. To it was appended these reasons for its disapproval:

First—It was exercise of some authority not vested in General Sherman, and on its face shows that both he and Johnston knew that General Sherman had no authority to enter into any such arrangement.

Second—It was a practical acknowledgement of the Confederate government.

Third—It undertook to re-establish the Confederate state governments that had been overthrown at the sacrifice of many thousand loyal lives and an immense treasury, and placed the whole people and resources of the state in the hands of the Confederates at their respective capitals, which might be used as soon as the armies of the United States were disbanded and used to conquer and subdue the loyal states.

Fifth—It might furnish a ground of responsibility for the federal government to pay the Confederate debts, and certainly subject the loyal citizens of Confederate states to debts contracted by Confederates in the state.

Sixth—It would put in dispute the existence of loyal state governments, and the new state of West Virginia, which had been recognized by every department of the United States government.

Seventh—It practically abolished the confiscation laws and repudiated the Constitution of every degree, who had slaughtered our people because they loved the Union.

Eighth—It gave terms that had been deliberately, repeatedly and solemnly rejected by President Lincoln, and better terms than the Confederates had ever asked in their most prosperous condition.

Ninth—It formed the basis of true and lasting peace, and required the Confederates from the pressure of our victories to set forth them in conditions to secure their obedience to the Constitution and laws of the United States, government and subdue the loyal states whenever their strength was recreated and enabled them to safely act.

His Words Turned Against Him.

Mr. Gorham says no one questions the good intentions of General Sherman in agreeing to the terms, but they were rejected by the Union people at the time as unanimously as they were by the president. In conclusion, Mr. Gorham quotes a letter of Senator Sherman to Stanton, dated April 27, 1865, in support of Mr. Stanton's view and in condemnation of General Sherman's mistake. It reads in part as follows:

"I have received by last mail a copy of the terms granted Johnston by General Sherman. They are inadmissible. There should now be literally no terms granted. * * * Yet I feel that great injustice has been done General Sherman. The most that can be said about him is that he met the Confederates too liberal terms. The same may be said, but to a less degree, of Mr. Lincoln and myself in their last arrangement with Lee. General Sherman has not understood the political bearing of that question. * * * It is natural that he believes the promises of those men, and looks upon the whole contest in a simply military view. He knows not the disloyalty of their hearts is the end of the war, while we knew that to arm them with the elective franchise and state organizations is to lose the war.

I do not wish General Sherman to be unjustly dealt with, and I know that you will not permit it, and especially I do not want him driven into fellowship with the copperheads. His military services have been conspicuous to the country to be stained by any such fellowship.

Mr. Gorham adds: "I cannot find in this letter any reference to the result with which you now assert that General Sherman's terms were rejected by President Johnson and Mr. Stanton. But I do find in it an assurance from you to Secretary Stanton that you knew he would not permit General Sherman to be unjustly dealt with. You could not have said this had you thought Mr. Stanton himself had allowed him to be unjustly dealt by, by publishing the reasons above quoted. I honored and admired General Sherman. No more patriot or statesman, no braver or more faithful soldier, ever lived. But I also honored and admired Mr. Stanton, whose biography I have undertaken, and I cannot remain silent when one of the greatest services of his official acts is misstated and perverted in a useless effort to show that General Sherman was right, when he himself admitted (with the concurrence of Senator Sherman) that he was wrong."

FASHIONS

Signs of Summer.

In the first sketch are seen quite an original and novel sort of gown. It has a short coat bodice of pale chestnut-brown, worn with a skirt of white and grey striped faille. The stripes are very broad, as may be seen in the sketch. Round the hem of the petticoat there is a ruche of the same silk, which has a very pretty effect as the wearer walks. The ceinture is of white silk. With this is worn a very novel and becoming hat of chestnut-brown straw, trimmed in the most original fashion with coques of white ribbon, forming a kind of turban, which is open at the back.

WHAT WE MAY EXPECT.

The gown shown in the second sketch is a good example of the way in which fur is now being used by the best French modistes. The bodice is of very pale tan cloth, with an open coat and fully-pelted short sleeves, trimmed with broad bands of beaver fur and short chestnut-brown buttons. The skirt is of very pale grey pekin silk, striped with chestnut-brown, and bordered with a band of beaver to correspond. The full sash is of soft white surah. The hat in this instance also is of cinnamon brown straw trimmed with white ribbons, and having a quaint arrangement of big jet stars all round it.

HARRISON AND QUAY OUT

The President's Alleged Attack Upon the Senator.

PATTISON IS NOT A CANDIDATE.

Secretary Harrity Says the Name of Pennsylvania's Governor Will Not Be Presented at Chicago—Keystone State Democrats to Meet at Harrisburg.

NEW YORK, April 11.—A special to the New York Sun from Philadelphia says: There will be no reconciliation between Senator Quay and President Harrison, and as a result Mr. Harrison may eventually not be a candidate for renomination. A few days ago Congressmen Bingham, O'Neill and Reyburn, accompanied by Postmaster General Wanamaker, called upon the president to urge him to forget the past and to receive Quay. This was with the idea that the Pennsylvania Republican convention, to be held on April 20, would decide for Harrison and to assure him of the sixty-four delegates from this state to Minneapolis.

The surprise of the delegation was great when the president turned to Mr. Wanamaker and said:

The President's Alleged Attack.

"The less you have to do with Mr. Quay the better it will be for yourself. He is not a fit man to associate with."

Then the president said that he was not so certain about accepting the renomination, unless he was assured that the party was united, and that it would be well to get together on all questions. He said he saw here and there evidences of dissatisfaction, and that he preferred to stand aside rather than to mingle in the party quarrels of Mr. Quay and some other men who had attempted to dictate terms for renomination. The president told the congressmen that he would not be a party to the purge of Pennsylvania in Quay's hands, because the men Quay had recommended to him were no better than himself, and were not fit to hold office.

He May Decline.

The president said that if it depended upon Quay whether he should get the Pennsylvania delegation, then he would not get it. Mr. Wanamaker talked in his most persuasive manner but it was of no avail, and Mr. Lincoln, the chief postmaster general to keep away from Quay.

When this was told the senator he was angered. He immediately began to discuss with his fellow senators the availability of Blaine as a presidential candidate, and the boom in the interest of the secretary last week is due to Quay's work. The men who were present at the interview with President Harrison say that unless Quay, Platt, Clarkson and the rest are solid for him, Mr. Harrison will withdraw from the contest. To this time Quay has refused to tell his most intimate friends who is his president tial choice.

Pattison Not a Candidate.

PHILADELPHIA, April 11.—When spoken to in reference to the reported declaration of Senator Wallace in favor of having the Democratic state convention indorse Governor Pattison as a candidate for president Secretary of State William F. Harrity said "I know whereof I speak when I state that Governor Pattison has not consented to have his name placed before the coming Democratic state convention as a candidate for president, either as the first or second choice of the Democracy of Pennsylvania. I question whether the governor would for any such purpose would not meet with his approval.

"Governor Pattison is unquestionably very strong in the affections and confidence of the people of this state, and if Mr. Cleveland were not a candidate I believe the governor would receive the united support of the Pennsylvania delegation to the Democratic national convention, as he would of the delegations from some other states. But the Democrats of this state favor Grover Cleveland.

"I think you may depend upon it that it will be a Cleveland-Pattison convention that will assemble at Harrisburg Wednesday next, for Cleveland will be heartily indorsed as the Democratic candidate for president, and Governor Pattison's administration will be cordially approved."

Harrity and Anti-Harrity Men.

HARRISBURG, April 11.—The delegates to the Democratic state convention on Wednesday will be divided into Harrity and anti-Harrity men. Mr. Harrity is the secretary of the committee on rules, Governor Pattison, and wants to be re-elected a member of the Democratic national committee from Pennsylvania. Mr. James Gaffey, of Pittsburg, is Governor Pattison's political boss, and his friends are called the anti-Harrityites. The friends of Harrity have made claims that their candidate would obtain nearly two-thirds of the state convention, but the anti-Harrity leaders announce that the list of delegates elected to the convention show being in favor of Gaffey outside of Philadelphia, and this gives them a fair chance of winning.

The entire number of delegates is 403. The anti-Harrity people are trying to make capital of an alleged declaration of Governor Pattison that he is opposed to instructing the delegation for Cleveland, as nearly all the Democratic county conventions have instructed their delegates to vote for no candidates for national delegates except pronounced Cleveland men.

Campbell for Vice President.

COLUMBUS, O., April 11.—The favorable mention made by some influential Democratic newspapers of ex-Governor Campbell in connection with the national ticket leads some Ohio Democrats, in spite of the governor's repeated declaration that he "could not afford to accept" the nomination for the vice presidency, to think that he stands a very good chance of recognition at the Chicago convention.

Wants Russell to Run.

BOSTON, April 11.—Colonel John R. Jewett, of Lawrence, Kas., a prominent Democrat, and a firm believer in Governor William E. Russell for president, says that the Cleveland boom in Kansas is hopelessly and superficial. He believes that Governor Russell would be triumphantly elected president.

Ex-Senator Emery Defeated.

BRADFORD, Pa., April 10.—Full returns from the municipal primaries entirely change the complexion of the ticket. Lewis Emery, Quay's most bitter enemy, is not elected national delegate, but his opponent, Colonel W. W. Brown, is.

Victory for Quay.

LANCASTER, Pa., April 11.—Returns from Saturday's primaries show that on the popular vote on the senatorship Senator Quay has a majority of more than 5,000 over Congressman Dalzell.

TORTURED BY BURGLARS

Miss McDowell's Eye Put Out at Hollidaysburg, Pa.

VETERAN DALY BADLY BURNED.

HOLLIDAYSBURG, Pa., April 11.—Two atrocious outrages were committed in this town during the night by masked burglars. John Daly, an old soldier, was awakened shortly after he had retired for the night by three burly men. They demanded his pension money which he was supposed to have concealed about the house, and he refused to give it up. They then bound him hand and foot, tied him to a chair, and began a horrible system of torture. First they jabbed him in the neck with a knife, beat him over the head with a revolver, but still he would not tell the hiding place of his money. Next they took a lighted lamp, held it under his ear, burning that organ completely. The old soldier yelled with pain and begged for mercy but the burglars only renewed their torture. Daly was resolute, however, and would not divulge the whereabouts of his wealth. Seeing that it was useless, the burglars then beat the man until he became unconscious.

Put One of Her Eyes Out.

After thoroughly searching the house the burglars left and proceeded to the home of Miss Olivia McDowell, an aged woman, who is reported to have a little money. They dragged her from her bed, bound and gagged her. She was tortured in a similar manner as old Daly, but she refused to tell where her money was concealed. She was hit in the left eye, and the sight destroyed. They also burned her shin with the edge of a knife, and beat her in such a brutal manner that her life is now in danger. The robbers secured nothing. There is no clew to their identity.

MORE THAN TWENTY DROWNED.

BIRMINGHAM, April 11.—After five days of absolute isolation from the world, communication with Columbus, Miss., was restored by wire. The river has risen nearly three feet higher than ever before, and the whole country is under water.

More than twenty people have been drowned, as far as heard from, and it is feared that the list will grow enormously when the wide territory flooded can all be heard from.

In one case a colored family of nine persons were rescued. They took a pig in the boat with them. The pig jumped out of the boat, and one of the women grabbed for it and overturned the boat. All the family were drowned, the rescuers narrowly escaping.

Five hundred persons in the town are being fed by charity. An appeal has already been drawn up to the government for help.

A dozen persons were seriously injured. No strangers were seen to enter the church after services began, and it is supposed that the bomb was set with a slow fuse earlier in the evening. No arrests have been made.

DETROIT, April 11.—The nameless submarine boat that has been building here the past winter has had a thorough trial under water. While a crew of three on board the boat was submerged, going down gradually and under perfect control of the pilot. Under water the boat was able to attain a speed of over ten miles an hour and to turn around, rise or sink with the greatest ease. The boat was submerged several times under different circumstances, and proved that the peculiarly constructed propellers were well adapted to their purpose It was also proved that in sinking or rising the boat maintained a horizontal position, a matter of great importance in a submarine boat.

The boat is equipped to run by steam power while on the surface, but underneath the water the motive power comes from a powerful electric storage battery, the cells being charged by the same engine that runs the boat on the surface. The trial was a perfect success, and showed that a submarine boat was not only possible but practicable. The present boat was built only as an experiment. It is of the shape of a thick cigar, with pointed ends, being 40 feet long, 14 feet deep, and 9 feet beam. Its inventor is George C. Baker, of Chicago.

ARSENIC IN THE WHISKY.

NEWARK, N. J., April 11.—Frank Dantisco, who keeps a saloon on Market street, has been arrested charged with attempting to poison his wife. But for the good work of the police he would have accomplished his criminal design.

Early last week Superintendent of Police Bonnell received a call at the wholesale drug house in New York that two men from Newark had purchased five pounds of strychnine. The names did not ring true to the ears of the clerk, but from their looks, although they said they were purchasing the poison for manufacturing purposes. Detectives met the men at the Market street depot of the Pennsylvania railroad and followed them to Dantisco's place, where the men parted. Dantisco's companion taking the package with him. He took it to Waverly, one of the suburbs of this city, where he hid the arsenic in an old and uninhabited building.

After he left the officers took the package to police headquarters, leaving in its place a similar package containing tartar emetic. The next day Dantisco's companion was seen to go to the package and take out a quantity of the supposed arsenic, which he went directly to Dantisco's place. There it was placed in a bottle partly filled with whisky and, according to Mrs. Dantisco's story, the man left her ten cents and could not drink two glasses of it. Mrs. Damiano drank the stuff and was immediately taken very sick.

A WOMAN YOU ADMIRE

THE NEW YORK MATRON AS SHE APPEARS TO WESTERN EYES.

Of Course She Has Plenty of Money, for It Takes Wealth to Carry Out Her Position—She Is a Nice Person to Meet and She Is Always Presentable.

There is a chastened elegance about the American matron that her English sister sometimes lacks. The mannish of the truly refined classes in Gotham are of an exquisite finish and completeness that are not often seen across the pond. They have been lovely young girls; they are still handsome women, study their complexions and give serious attention to their figures. One never sees an American matron whose skirt hangs at a defective angle. Their corsets are things sacred and solemn, manufactured only by artists of the toilet. The mysteries of "makeup" are still a lofty height to them. They have penetrated to the heart of the secret of how to look thirty when you are fifty.

When you meet them on the avenue, at the theater, at the summer hotels, on the steamer you may always know them at a glance. American matrons by the score will pass under your unresisting gaze, but they will not be the real American matron, the one which is spelled with capital letters and enrolled on the list of the elect

The application of Mr. A. D. Thompson for an auctioneer's license was read, referred to the proper Committee and subsequently granted.

Irving Stelle petitioned Council for permission to enclose the rear end of his building on West Sixth street with corrugated iron. The petition was referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings.

The attorneys employed by the Plainfield Water Company, through C. H. Moore, in a communication, insisted upon the Council returning to their client the $6,000 paid to the city by him while he was under contract with the city to put in a system of water-works. The communication inferred that in case the city did not do so a law suit would result. The matter was referred to the Corporation Counsel.

Mr. Frazee moved that it be referred to the Committee on Fire and Buildings with power. The motion prevailed.

Mr. W. V. Miller requested permission to withdraw his previous application for a liquor license for the hotel on North avenue and to present a substitute. The request was granted.

The substitute was then presented and referred to the License Committee.

The joint committee appointed to investigate in reference to the poor house and the advisability of erecting a poor house, through the chairman, Mr. Bird, reported in favor of raising $6,000 for that purpose.

Mr. Case moved that the report be received and tabled. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Fisk from the Finance Committee presented the following report:

To the Honorable Common Council City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—Your Finance Committee to whom was referred the matter of determining the amount of money required for the needs of the city to be raised in the tax levy for the year 1892 reports as follows:

1st—That the Alms Committee will need, in addition to the balance to their credit, the sum of $4,500, and in addition to this, for the erection of a proper building, as called for in the Mayor's message, and recommended by their committee, the sum of $6,000, making in all $8,500.

2d—We find on consultation with the Committee on Fire and Buildings, in order to properly maintain the department and replace apparatus that is absolutely necessary to put the department in shape for the proper protection of the city, that there will be needed at least $12,000.

3d—For general purposes we find the needs of the several committees to be as follows:

Finance Committee to cover salaries, rents, election and incidental expenses	$11 500
Police	8,000
Fire	9,000
Printing and Stationery	1,500
Water and Sewer Committee	1,000
Streets	13,000
Making a total of	$43,500

We estimate with the amounts already received and covered into the treasury, that the city will receive from

Licenses	$6,500
Railroad	650
Sewers	150
Fines	500
Poll Tax	1,500
Board of Education	800
Miscellaneous	2,000
Total	$13,500

Leaving a balance of $30,000 to be raised.

The above estimates have been made after very careful consideration, and are as low, in the judgment of your Committee, as present needs of the city will allow.

4th. The Directors of the Public Library and Reading Room call for $5,000 to be levied for the use of the Library and Reading Room. The Committee, therefore, respectfully submit the following amounts to be inserted in the ordinance calling for the levy of taxes:

Poor	$6,000
Fire Dep't	12,000
Library	2,000
General Fund	30,000

Included in which last named sum shall be the sum of $12,000 for the improvement of streets.

Your Committee desires to call special attention to the fact that the adoption of the recommendation will increase the taxes for the current year as compared with 1891, $10,700.

$6,000 of which is for the purchase of land and erection of a suitable building for the city poor. The wisdom of making this appropriation can be determined by your Honorable Body.

$6,000 is for the Fire Department, and as stated above is absolutely necessary for the proper maintenance of the Department and the protection of the city. This matter is one of great importance and should receive your most careful attention.

Your will also note that the amount received from liquor licenses for the present year will be only $6,500 against $11,547 in 1891, a decrease of $5,047.

Another matter we particularly call attention to at this time is the work in street cleaning. Many times the appropriation come definite and the work could be carried upon and most carefully considered. During the last ten years a large amount of money has been spent in the improvement of our streets. The greatest portion of this money has gone into the city benefitted, but, through misjudgment and bad management a large amount has been wasted. The estimate for the year 1892, little or no attention seems to have been given to grades, and, in some instances the work has been done with stone, which will all have to be removed when the streets are graded and the stone spread anew in order to properly grade the city. The question of grade should be settled at once, and no further street work should be done until the question is definitely settled.

Should a system of sewerage be decided upon as now seems probable; during the construction of the sewers the streets will have to be dug up, and thus disturbed, for this reason also we feel that the interest of all demand that we should do only such work as is necessary to keep the streets in repair, and little or no work should be done until the matter of sewers is fully determined upon.

We therefore recommend that the appropriation for streets be made only $12,000 instead of $15,000, which amount under the circumstances seems all that is needed.

Respectfully submitted,

Finance Committee.

Mr. Erickson moved that the report be received and the recommendation adopted.

Mr. Marsh thought that it would be wise to adopt the recommendation of the Committee, that the present quarters were not a fit place for the city poor; that the city should take care of its poor properly and treat them in a humane manner that to build a substantial building was the city could do so, and that he therefore favored the report. He also referred to needed improvements in the Fire Department and he said that although he was an advocate of lower taxation, in his opinion it was the duty of Council to adopt the report, and therefore he favored its adoption.

Mr. Case did not favor the appropriating of $6,000 for the erection of a poor house. He said: "We are not now worse off than we were in years past; in years past the poor matters were miserably managed and mismanaged, bringing discredit upon the city, and public feeling was aroused. We do not want a new poor house, but we want a good poor master; a man who will look after our poor; a majority of our city poor are poor because they make themselves poor; they trade off orders for groceries for whiskey and an order for a quart of milk for a glass of beer; what we want is a careful manager, and I think we have one this year; under the management of the present Overseer and the Alms Committee, I think that next year Council will be satisfied and that the members will bear nothing more about a poor house." In reference to the extra appropriation for fire department purposes Mr. Case thought it would be wise to find out how to preserve hose before purchasing any more.

Mr. Frazee moved that the appropriation for Fire Department purposes be made $15,000 instead of $12,000. The motion was lost.

Mr. Weber moved that $6,000 be added to the appropriation for street purposes.

Mr. Frazee said that if the committee would only repair Liberty street he would not hesitate voting for the motion. The motion was lost.

Mr. Case moved that the appropriation of $6,000 for the erection of a poor house be not concurred in. His motion was lost by a tie vote.

The original report of the committee was then adopted.

Mr. Fisk presented an ordinance fixing the assessment of taxes for the ensuing year.

Mr. See moved to amend the ordinance reducing the appropriation for the use of the poor fund to $4,500. His motion was lost by a tie vote.

The amendment to place the ordinance on its second reading was lost by a tie vote.

Mr. Marsh then changed his vote from aye to nay and moved that the Council take a recess of ten minutes. The motion prevailed.

Upon re-assembling Mr. Frazee stated that he had a bill in his possession by which he saw that the city was paying rent for people in other parts of the city and he thought that all the city poor should be treated alike and be compelled to either live in the city poor house or pay their rent themselves. He said the bill amounted to $28.50.

Mr. See moved to reconsider the vote on the tax ordinance.

He then moved to make the appropriation for the General Fund $30,000, including into it the $15,000 to be used in the macadamizing of streets. The motion prevailed.

He then moved to reduce the appropriation for the poor fund from $6,000 to $5,000. After some discussion his motion was adopted.

Mr. Frazee moved to amend the ordinance by making the appropriation for the use of the Fire Department $15,000 instead of $12,000. The motion was lost by a vote of 4 to 5.

The ordinance was then adopted on its second reading, ordered engrossed and advertised.

Mr. Marsh moved that the matter in reference to securing other quarters for the city poor be referred to the Committee on Alms and that they report to the Council at as early a date as possible.

Mr. Bird as chairman said that the committee had been looking for other quarters for the poor, but were unable to find any and that they did not see any necessity of looking any further.

The motion of Mr. Marsh prevailed.

Mr. Johnston called to its third reading the ordinance appropriating money to repair Farragut road. The ordinance was read and adopted.

The meeting then adjourned.

FOURTEEN NEW LAWS.

Bills Approved by the Governor—The List Completed.

Governor Abbett on Saturday approved of fourteen more bills, making a total of 208 measures passed by the present Legislature, to which he affixed his signature. Those signed on Saturday are as follows:

A. 51, repeals the old Union Turnpike Company's charter; A. 108, provides that the boundary lines of Bergen, Hudson, Union, Middlesex and Monmouth counties shall be so fixed by the Joint Boundary Commission of New York and New Jersey; A. 175, authorizing third class cities to lay out, improve, alter and repair streets; A. 181, authorizes towns, villages and other municipalities to acquire lands to be used as sewerage receptacles. A. 198, authorizes trustees to sell and convey lands; A. 211, exempts the benevolent and charitable association act; A. 213, authorizes executors, etc., to invest trust funds in municipal bonds, provided that the act shall not apply where wills or court orders specially direct otherwise; A. 253, increases the amount that may be raised by bonds for armories to $40,000; A. 327, amends the act relative to laying out streets in towns; A. 454 and 497 were also signed. The latter was approved on April 8. The Senate bills signed were:

S. 44, provides that assessors in first-class boroughs shall be elected instead of appointed by mayor or Common Council as now; S. 120, provides that $200,000 road bonds may be issued by second-class counties; S. 128, amends the law for reclaiming swamps and marshes near New Brunswick.

This batch is the last of the bills which can be signed within the prescribed thirty days. Fifty-five bills remain unacted.

FEAST OF THE PASSOVER.

Jewish Households will Closely Observe the Ceremonials.

The Jewish Easter time, the Festival of the Passover, began last evening and ends with moonrise next Sunday. This is the Hebrew month of Nisan. While the Catholic church appoints Easter by the day of the week, the Jews cut out all by the fourteenth day of the moon, and whereas the Christian festival is in commemoration of the crucifixion of Christ as the Paschal lamb and the resurrection, the Jews celebrate their exodus from Egypt.

The Passover lasts for seven days and consists of abstinence from leavened bread. They read the story of the Bondage instead of the Paschal, and after this giving of the Order of reading of the Haggada, they gather the Cakes, unleavened breads, and burn it, when the fast begins. The Paschal lamb is represented by the shank bone of the animal roasted upon the coals, and in every Jewish household the mortar of spices, almonds and wine is seen, symbolical of their making of old the bricks without straw. The Afikomon or dessert of unleavened bread is divided and eaten.

NO ROUND DANCING.

Bishop Wigger Determined Catholic Societies Shall Not Permit it.

Bishop Wigger, of the Newark diocese is enforcing with great strictness the rules which prohibit round dancing at social affairs given by Catholic societies, and which also taboo dancing of all kinds after 11 p. m. The Bishop thought that a neat scheme had been concocted to evade these regulations when he heard recently that Dalton Circle, of Newark, intended giving a reception and ball Tuesday evening of next week. There is a Dalton Council in the Catholic Benevolent Legion, and it was learned that some of the members of this organization were prominent in organizing the circle.

The Bishop wrote several letters to Rev. Father Toomey, of St. Joseph's church, asking him to make an investigation and Father Toomey has replied to the Bishop that he can find nothing to justify him in bringing charges against the council.

INJURED AT MT. BETHEL.

Mr. Spencer Meets with an Accident while Hauling Manure.

A farmer named Spencer who resides at Mt. Bethel, while carting manure at that place yesterday afternoon, painfully injured his left hand. He had an unusually heavy load on the wagon and one of the wheels sank into a deep rut. Mr. Spencer, to assist the horses in getting the wagon out, attempted to lift the hind wheel, at the same time starting the team. His hand was caught between the crossbar on the wagon and the rear wheel, and when the wagon started the skin and flesh were torn from the back of the hand and the bones exposed. A physician dressed the injuries. Mr. Spencer visited Plainfield this morning and again had his hand attended to.

—Ladies should be careful how they use vaseline on the face, for the result of a number of experiments has introduced the suspicion that a persistent use of it will cause hair to grow on almost any part of the face. There have been instances known of ladies inducing a heavy growth of hair on the upper lip and chin by using vaseline to drive away pimples. Like some other medicaments, vaseline is too new to allow of all its properties being yet known, but the fact that it will induce a growth of hair if persistently used seems to be fairly well settled.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"The best faith cure in the world is dry cure," says a writer.

It is a thankless job, this prophet business. That wild eyed man of prophecy, Professor C. A. L. Totten, fixed a certain day in March for the sudden appearance of a star, "the long sought for star hiding behind the sun." As might perhaps have been truthfully predicted, if one had wanted to drop into prophecy, as it were, the star did not come to time. But that did not shake the lieutenant's faith. He still solemnly affirms that we are on the borderland of the threshold of an era. Doubtless.

The Pennsylvania fish commission, with small annual appropriations, has worked to such purpose that in the Delaware river, in spite of increasing competition and consumption, the shad catch has actually increased from a value of $60,000 in 1881 to over $70,000 in 1891. Salmon are reappearing in the Delaware and interior streams are being stocked. The prohibition of fish baskets, the distribution of young fish and the removal of obstructions to the passage of fish in streams were the measures resorted to.

It seems curious on the surface that the workingmen of Great Britain should favor solidly the payment of members of the house of commons, while the Conservative party now in power oppose it with all their force. But under the surface the reason is easy to find. If members of the house of commons could receive pay, say at the rate of five dollars a day, then men from the laboring classes themselves could become members of the house and legislate in the interests of working people. This in the eyes of the tough old Conservatives would be sacrilege. A tanner or a carpenter making law for the English people would be something the old fogy of Great Britain would rather die than see. Hence as long as there is a Conservative left he will vote against a salary for members of the house of commons. He says in effect, "Keep the working people out."

For Annexation.

The annexationists of Canada are growing bolder and more aggressive with each election campaign, we of the United States sitting meanwhile in the attitude of the woman in the traditional bear fight. It would probably make Sir John Macdonald turn over in his grave could he know that a man bearing his own name, one Ernest Albert Macdonald, candidate for the Ontario legislature from Toronto, makes his run on a square out and out platform of annexation to the United States.

Ernest Albert is earnest without the Albert when it comes to talking about Canada. He says Canada, naturally the grandest country on earth, has been steadfastly hampered and impoverished by the attempt to make her a part of Europe when she is a part of America. That is why Canada is poorer than the United States, and this Mr. Macdonald proposes to remedy by making the dominion a part of our republic.

He makes his conditions, too, does Ernest Albert. One is that the Union shall assume all Canadian debts, "provincial and municipal." Mr. Macdonald has a queer idea of this government if he thinks it will ever go into the business of paying town debts. Other demands are the construction and improvement of certain ship canals connecting the mouth of the St. Lawrence freely with the lakes. Then, too, each Canadian province must be admitted as a sovereign state of the new United States. In that case we shall have to build an annex to the senate chamber at Washington.

Some Brooklyn Poetry.

People brimful of emotion are given to slopping over, whether the cause be politics, religion or the tenderer sentimental affinities. It is not strange, therefore, that Brooklyn, the City of Churches, should also be deeply impressionable to the sentimental affinities. In point of fact, this is the reputation Brooklyn enjoys. A glance at the poet's corner of the Brooklyn Eagle bears out this conclusion. Most of a column is devoted to the woes of lovers, and it is plain that the gallant editor of The Eagle is sympathizer with suffering hearts. There is one poet in particular who has it bad, very bad. We take it to be a young lady. The name of the poem is "No Word as Yet," and it is signed by the initials B. T. J. It seems that B. T. J. has lost a lover, whether by death of him or by the still crueler death of his love is not plain. But, at any rate, lost him she has, and she makes plaint thus:

Birds day by day say,
"No word as yet."
Do they believe
That I can so soon
Forget?

B. T. J. asks the stars to send her word about her beau, and the stars don't do it. She asks the seagulls and the fishermen, and they are alike disobliging. Then she cries in despair to the public through the poet's corner of The Eagle:

My thoughts are wild.
Heart sore opprest;
I cannot think.
But long to be
At rest.

Gone forever,
Can it be true
That I am left?

We are sorry, but we fear it is, B. T. J.

CLERK YOUNG DEPOSED.

The Senate Thinks He Gives Away Its Secrets.

TRYING TO STOP THE PANAMA LEAK.

Senators Sherman and Hale Succeed in Their Effort to Disgrace Mr. Young. Other Statements Denounce the Action of the Senate in Making Him a Scapegoat.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Mr. Chandler proposed a resolution against the election of United States senators by the people was cut off and postponed for a day by an early call for an executive session on the subject of the leakage of executive session proceedings. Mr. Stewart introduced some resolutions obviously designed to get at the facts upon which Mr. Sherman based his recent statement that silver certificates were not issued dollar for dollar for silver dollars, but that there was a dollar's worth in gold behind every dollar of silver certificates issued. This resolution went over, as also did a resolution of Mr. Morgan's calling for information about the German reciprocity treaty. A characteristic memorial was received from ex-Senator Blair asking an investigation of his rejection as minister to China, and was referred to the committee on foreign relations.

In secret session the senate executive clerk, James B. Young, was deposed from office on the charge of betraying to the press the secrets of the senate's executive sessions. The subject was taken up when Mr. Sherman called up the resolutions declaring vacant the office of executive clerk, reported favorably from the committee on foreign relations. Mr. Sherman made a personal appeal to the senate in behalf of the committee, holding that the committee's recommendation in favor of the resolution was sufficient evidence that it should be adopted.

To Stop the Senate Leak.

Mr. Sherman said that the committee had reasons for believing that the office should be declared vacant; that it had evidence of Mr. Young's guilt, and that the committee's word had been given that Mr. Young was not the proper person to hold the office. He contended that the executive secrets were confided to too many persons not members of the senate and that it was not strange that secret proceedings had come to the knowledge of newspaper men. Mr. Sherman urged upon the senate the necessity for sustaining the committee and hinted that if it were not sustained that those senators who voted against the adoption of the resolution would be guilty of a violation of senatorial courtesy.

Mr. Hale, who introduced the resolution for Mr. Young's removal, made an earnest appeal for its adoption. He contended that the betrayal of executive secrets had reached a point where stringent methods for its stoppage should be resorted to. He was particularly severe on Mr. Young and made the charge that he was guilty of the allegation brought against him. Mr. Hale is not a member of the committee on foreign relations.

Senators Manderson and Paddock made earnest appeals for the rejection of the resolution. They stated in substance that the committee on foreign relations was going too far in attempting to secure the removal of an honorable gentleman who was known never to have betrayed the trust imposed in him.

In Mr. Young's Defense.

Senators knew only too well where accounts of executive session proceedings come from. They knew that they did not emanate from Mr. Young. Senator Manderson was particularly severe in his denunciation of such a course as the committee would have the senate pursue, to make a scapegoat out of an innocent man. Secrecy like purity, he said, was the world and cast upon him a stigma which he did not deserve. Senator Cameron read a letter from Mr. Young claiming the right to be heard, requesting an investigation and asserting his entire innocence. Mr. Cameron made a short appeal in behalf of Mr. Young's reelection. Other senators also spoke in behalf of Mr. Young, some of them urging an investigation, but Mr. Sherman's personal appeal for the exercise of senatorial courtesy in sustaining the committee on foreign relations had its effect and the resolution was adopted by a majority of ten. It was then declared that Young be informed of the action of the senate.

The session waxed warm at times and was interesting by reason of its personal aspect. Many senators privately expressed themselves in conversation with colleagues after the trial vote had been taken that the action of the senate was outrageous, and some senators who voted for the resolution acknowledged that they had been actuated in so voting by the appeal for the independence of the committee on foreign relations more than by the merits of the case.

Newspaper correspondents in Washington were treated without gloves by Mr. Hale and some others in favor of the resolution. An effort will be made by senators who believe Mr. Young has been treated unjustly to have the detailed vote on the resolution made public.

In the House.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—The house passed a bill to make West Point, Va., a port of entry and delivery; and also to repeal the act authorizing the secretary of war to lease the pier at the entrance of the Chicago river, Chicago. The remainder of the day the house spent in the consideration of bills relating to the District of Columbia. Four bills were passed.

Minister Egan Saved Their Lives.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—Washington is entertaining just now two distinguished Chilian gentlemen, Juan R. Machenna and Julio Bamadeo Espinoza, members of Balmaceda's cabinet, which was overthrown in the revolution of last year, and who later were unsuccessful in accepted the security of the American legation in Santiago. Their visit to Washington is for the purpose of expressing to Secretary Blaine their gratitude for the favor shown them by Minister Egan at a time when his protection was the means of saving their lives and their property.

BUFFALO POOLROOMS RAIDED.

BUFFALO, April 12.—Every turf exchange was raided simultaneously in the afternoon and the hall of the "cigar" was invaded as "Gypsy Joe" was about to start. It is now the way to wear stripes that ever. Every place was closed up like a bank, and the owners, bosses and employees taken into custody. The legal staff of the council decided that the exchanges were illegal and that they could not be licensed. This being the case the police set to work securing evidence. The police operatives, who failed to visit the rooms and listen to the telegraph instruments for the purpose of obtaining evidence, when the police broke down the doors, and the bets were immediately to the tracks. They reported that no messages of such a nature were sent and the police prepared for the raid.

The grand jury found the necessary indictments, and bench warrants were at once issued. The exchanges were in full blast when the patrol wagons dashed up to the doors and a squad of police marched in and locked the doors behind them. There was no time to escape, and the poolroom men and their patrons were caught like rats in a trap. The operators were calling off the positions of the horses to the third race at Gutenberg when the raid was made. The greatest confusion followed. The "talent" yelled, the cashier gathered the "boodle" and the police gathered in everything they came after.

The money, the tally sheets and the tickets were scooped up, the blackboards tipped down, and all these, with the proprietors and their clerks, were hustled into the wagons and over to the city hall. In all five rooms were closed and forty-one persons arrested. Among those indicted is the well known baseball pitcher, Bob Barr. The poolroom men say they will open up as usual, and the police say they will raid them again if they do.

FASHIONS

HANDKERCHIEFS.

Handkerchiefs are very much to the front, and women are spending their incomes upon them as of yore. The simple dainty bits of filmy lace and insertion are the highest priced ever.

A new spring importation is "the lily of the valley." The centre is a square of crepe de Chine with a border of delicate green crepe, and the edge of the handkerchief is outlined with embroidered lilies of the valley. It should be as fragrant as the real flowers themselves. Fine linen handkerchiefs with narrow hemstitched borders have the initial, which is embroidered in the corner much smaller than of old. Handkerchiefs of fine linen have borders of delicate colored bow-knots. More expensive handkerchiefs of tinted mousseline de soie will have a wreath of butterflies for the border. A dainty creation in the handkerchief line is baby-blue crepe with a long border of embroidered lilies forget-me-nots, each tiny flower being outlined with a silver thread. Handkerchiefs of varied colored crepes have deep borders of lace which are first dipped in starch and lined with a ruffle of the crepe. To be at all in fashion, the handkerchief must blend in color with the gown worn.

HE IS NOT FOR PATTISON

Ex-Senator Wallace Has No Presidential Favorite.

CLEVELAND READY FOR ANY FATE.

The Ex-President Says He Doubts the Wisdom of His Proposed Renomination and Declares That He Will Be Happy Whatever the Convention May Do.

HARRISBURG, April 12.—The Democratic state convention Wednesday will, from all appearances, be an unusually large and interesting one. Among those here are Secretary Harrity and a number of senators and representatives who are known as friends of the state administration. The other side is represented by William H. Singer, formerly secretary of the commonwealth under Governor Pattison, ex-Senator Wallace and others. The latter are favorable to the election of James M. Guffey as a member of the national committee from Pennsylvania as against Harrity, the administration candidate. Mr. Wallace has made the following statement to correct misapprehension that has arisen out of several interviews recently:

"In the beginning of March neutral friends brought together at the Aldine hotel, Philadelphia, Messrs. Hensel, Harrity and John R. Read on one side and Messrs. Mutchler, Guffey and myself on the other. The avowed object of the meeting was to endeavor to reach a basis of harmony so that no contest could occur at the state convention if it were possible.

To Unite on Pattison.

"It was then suggested by myself that harmony could be best secured at once by uniting on Governor Pattison as the candidate of the state for Pennsylvania. This proposition was antagonized by the gentlemen who thought the state was for Cleveland. No other suggestions were made as to a basis and nothing came of that meeting. About the last of March I was asked by a friend if I thought Governor Pattison and I called on him. We had a pleasant hour over the situation, and I expressed my fear that something was done to create bitterness that was being aroused we would be much hurt as a party and the result would be disastrous to his administration. I said he could be made the basis for harmony, and that if we acted together peace would follow. He asked what detail I had to suggest as a basis. I said divide the delegations at large equally between the two factions, let Mr. Harrity withdraw in favor of Mr. Guffey, or if he declines so do this, leave the selection of the national committee to the national delegation, let these remove this bone of contention; then settle the Philadelphia troubles by agreeing that contested delegates giving their votes second each one-half a vote and appoint a committee outside of Philadelphia to whom the question of adoption of a division pro rata of contested seats be referred, whose finding might be referred. He agreed to the reasonableness of the proposals, but as Mr. Harrity and Mr. Hensel were both absent, he desired to confer with them, stating me to call again. I called on him last week and I again talked generally.

United Action Appeared Impossible.

"I told him I came to ascertain the governor said the proposition as to the Philadelphia difficulties could not be entertained, and he regretted that no basis of united action appeared possible. The other propositions were not then discussed. I have, so far as these statements go, assented to the candidacy of Governor Pattison. I have not authorized any one to say that I was for him for president since these interviews. I wanted to obtain a basis for peace. I have failed to do so, and I am unconcerned to any one, but will try to serve my friends. A fight is to be deprecated, as the convention is by no means a unit. I believe that Governor Pattison will be nominated if delegates are opposed to the control of the delegation or the official places by any individual."

Cleveland Ready for Any Fate.

CLEVELAND, April 12.—The following letter from Grover Cleveland has been received by James H. Bible, a prominent Democrat in this city:

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, N. J., April 5, 1892.

MY DEAR SIR.—I desire to thank you for the report of the meeting at Chattanooga, which you have sent me, and for the very friendly words you spoke of me on that occasion.

I am exceedingly anxious to have our party do nothing in the coming fight to bring on contention, and I hope that the delegates will be free from prejudgment and actuated by true Democratic spirit and the single desire to secure success.

I should be frank if I did not say to you that I often fear I do not deserve all the kind things such friends as you say of me, and I have frequently said things as to the wisdom of again putting me in nomination.

If, therefore, an opinion that contest and bad blood in the party prevails should be reached when the delegates to the convention assemble, I am willing that any one of the many there will be no disappointment for me in the result. Yours very truly,

GROVER CLEVELAND.

Another Rumor About Blaine.

WASHINGTON, April 12.—A devoted friend of Mr. Blaine's told a reporter Monday that Mr. Blaine would not, and for the last time would accept the nomination for the next decay if it should be offered to him by the convention. He said he had talked long and earnestly with Mr. Blaine, and that he could say positively that he would not decline the nomination if offered to him. Mr. Blaine's friends, he said, would not seek it. The new impetus that is being given to Blaine talk is a matter of great interest to politicians of both parties.

Boyd's Presidential Views.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 12.—Governor Boyd has made public his position relative to the Democratic presidential nomination. He says: "I am not and never have been opposed to Grover Cleveland. I am for a man who can carry New York, New Jersey and Connecticut, and I would, if my hands be, Cleveland if he can do it, or Hill if it is plainly evident that he is the only man who can lead the Democracy to victory."

To Disorganize the Party.

SYRACUSE, April 12.—In an interview with a reporter State Committeeman W. B. Kirk said that in his opinion the effect of the Cleveland State convention to be held here in May would be to disorganize the Democratic party in the state of New York, and that it would probably cost the party a great many votes.

New Britain Democrats Win.

NEW BRITAIN, Conn., April 12.—The Democrats elected the entire ticket. Mayor John Walsh, for mayor, received 1,200 majority. This is the first time in the history of the city that the Democrats have elected their ticket.

POISON WAS IN THE PLOT

Damiano Offered Mullin $500 to Kill His Wife.

THEN GAVE THE NOTE IN PAYMENT

Mullin Informed the Police, Tartar Emetic Was Given to the Woman in Place of Arsenic, and the Bloodish Husband is Now in a Newark Jail.

NEWARK, N. J., April 12.—Patrick Mullin, the companion of Frank Damiano, who is under arrest on the charge of attempting to kill his wife, has confessed that Damiano agreed to give him $500 if he would poison Mrs. Damiano. Mullin accepted the proposition and suggested arsenic as the best poison to use. Damiano wanted to get his wife out of the way as he is in love with a French woman whom he wished to take his wife's place.

Mullin Told the Police.

Mullin became frightened after he had made the bargain and went at once to police headquarters and communicated the facts to the superintendent of police. Mullin was instructed to carry out his part of the scheme and report to the police. Damiano bought two pounds of arsenic at a wholesale house in New York to avert suspicion. Mullin, who was given charge of the poison, took it to police headquarters and told Damiano that he had hidden it in an old building at Waverly. The police then instructed Mullin to go back to the murderous Italian and demand part of the money for the job. Damiano, after much grumbling, gave him a note for forty dollars, to which he signed his name.

On the following day Damiano sent Mullin after some of the poison and he secured some tartar emetic from the police. This was mixed with whisky, and last Friday it was to be given to Mrs. Damiano, as her husband wanted her to die on that day.

She Took the Bet.

Accordingly on that day Damiano went away early, leaving Mullin to give the poison to his wife. Mullin bet the woman ten cents that she could not drink two swallows of the whisky without becoming drunk. Mrs. Damiano accepted the bet, and after drinking some of the whisky immediately became ill. Damiano was arrested, and he tried to make the police believe that Mullin was on bad terms with Mrs. Damiano and wanted her out of the way. Damiano is an ex-convict.

WOHLMAN'S TWO WIVES.

He Deserted One Forty Years Ago, but She Wants His Estate.

NEW HAVEN, April 12.—As the result of an elopement which occurred nearly forty years ago the courts here will be called upon to decide an interesting legal question in regard to the disposition of the estate of Israel Wohlman, who died last September, leaving about $7,000 worth of property to Rebecca Wohlman, whom he claimed as his lawful wife. A son, Louis Wohlman, now appears and will make a contest for the property on the ground that the woman who lived with his father was not the latter's legal wife.

Proof has been forwarded from Warsaw which shows that Wohlman's wife, whom he deserted forty years ago, is living there in destitute circumstances. Wohlman and the woman with whom it is alleged he eloped from Warsaw have lived in this city for nearly forty years.

Thousands of Armed Settlers to Occupy New Indian Lands.

GUTHRIE, O. T., April 12.—Governor Seay is now at Kingfisher, receiving the reports of the surveyors sent out to lay out the town sites in the six new counties in the Cheyenne and Arapahoe country. Four of the towns are ready for the opening. An examination of the settlement plans shows that the Indians have taken all of the land in a continuous body on both sides of the principal streams, shutting the whites out from the bottoms and water supply. This shows the work of the cattlemen, who expect to lease the Indian lands during the twenty-five years that they are inalienable. The whites are the settlers learn of the action of the cattlemen the more they become incensed, and already many have formed an organization to fight any cattlemen who attempts to come into the reservation. Immense crowds are preparing to move to the line and get in readiness for the rush at Lincoln. Two thousand southern negroes are in readiness, but will not move to the line until next Sunday. They announce that they will go to the reservation in a body and fight for their land if necessary. Every man of them is armed.

At Falkwith a posse of officers and section men started in search of the robbers, who were met near town. The negroes refused to surrender and drew pistols.

A fight occurred, both sides firing several shots. Tom Wright was killed and Tom Randall was captured. The other two fled. Conductor Redden, of a construction train, boarded his engine and pursued them, capturing Head, after a desperate resistance, on Sand mountain.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

The Exciting Adventures of a Federal Captain and His Orderly Who Ventured Into the Mysterious Labyrinth of Mammoth Cave Without a Guide.

(Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association.)

Captain Poe, of Cincinnati, with his troop was sent north from Bowling Green and ordered to remain "in or near Cave City till further orders."

As every one should know, the limestone region of southern Kentucky is honeycombed with caves, and during the late war these caves were frequently the hiding places of friend and foe.

Mammoth cave, one of the natural wonders of the modern world, is only an hour's drive from the railroad at Cave City, and Captain Poe, who had long been anxious to see this famous "hole in the ground," decided to avail himself of his proximity to it to pay it a visit.

"I will go over early in the morning," he said to Pilot Lieutenant Pratt, who was to remain back in command of the troop, "and I'll be back before sundown."

"There are no guides at the cave now, so you must be careful," said Lieutenant Pratt.

"Oh, I'll not go in very far. I know all the curiosities of the place, and will go in but a short distance. Mike Flinn, my orderly, is the only man I'll take along; he has been through Diamond cave and knows all about such places," said the captain confidently.

The next morning he and Orderly Flinn rode off in the early morning, carrying with them, in addition to lights and food, their arms, for John Morgan was at that time showing a most pernicious activity along the line of the Louisville and Nashville road.

On reaching the entrance to the cave Captain Poe and his man dismounted and concealed their horses in the woods some distance away. Then they cut poles on which to fasten the candles they had brought with them and started in, confident they were about to enjoy one day's pleas

A man who has climbed one great mountain is certainly better qualified to climb another than a man who has not. A man who has had no such experience, but in the matter of caves former experience counts for little. A man who has climbed a mountain for a good local guide, but evidently Captain Poe and Mike Flinn were not of this opinion.

The provisions and lights were divided, candles were fastened to the poles, and then the two men left the warm sunlight and disappeared within the narrow and unpromising mouth that gives access to halls vaster and grander than were ever carved by human hands.

"We can do a few miles of the cave by noon," said the captain as they went down; "then we'll get lunch and return in time to get back to camp before sunset."

"Faith, that'll be nice as falling off a log," said Mike Flinn. "Shure I was down in Diamond cave for more'n six hours, wid no'r a nigger fur a guide, and I knew it like well before I came out that I'd not be skart to go through from ind to ind blindfolded. Thim caves is like iv'rythin else—it's all in bein used to their ways."

This mood encouraged the captain greatly, for as the cold air beat into his face and he saw the light of his torch forced back into a thin pathway through the awful blackness that rose before him like a wall, his confidence was not so keen nor his confidence in himself so great as when he started out that morning.

They passed the entrecom, with its smoked walls and its floor littered with the debris of a thousand convivial parties who had preceded them in the good old days before the war.

Then they started down the grand avenue, but before doing so Captain Poe, who was noted in the army for his prudence and forethought, had the end of a big ball of wrapping twine to a rock and paid it out as he went on.

"It was by just such a contrivance as hat string," he replied to Mike Flinn, that the mysteries and intricate convolutions of the famous Labyrinth of Crete were discovered."

"You don't tell me so, sor," cried Mike, with all the earnestness of a man just in receipt of a thrilling item of news.

The fall of their feet woke up the sleeping echoes. Bats dropped from the roof and their cold, clammy wings brushed the bronzed faces of the troopers and made them grow pale.

On to the Great Hall, whose ceiling was lifted too high to be reached by the light of their torches, save where here and there from the dripping arch of the grey stalactites the light flashed back as if refracted into prismatic lines by mighty diamonds.

To again call it a hall is to fall far of a log," said Mike Flun. "Shure I was down in Diamond cave for more'n six hours, wid no'r a nigger fur a guide, and I knew it like well before I came out that I'd not be skart to go through from ind to ind blindfolded. Thim caves is like iv'rythin else—it's all in bein used to their ways."

"You don't tell me so, sor," cried Mike, with all the earnestness of a man just in receipt of a thrilling item of news.

The fall of their feet woke up the sleeping echoes. Bats dropped from the roof and their cold, clammy wings brushed the bronzed faces of the troopers and made them grow pale.

On to the Great Hall, whose ceiling was lifted too high to be reached by the light of their torches, save where here and there from the dripping arch of grey stalactites the light flashed back as if refracted into prismatic lines by mighty diamonds.

To again call it a hall is to fall far short of the grand sweep of the dome, carrying as it does the eye to the roof of some unknown cavern.

They crept through Fat Man's Misery, of which the captain had often heard; then they rested their torches against a rock, and as it was high noon in the upper world they ate their lunch, ate everything—for as they were going back immediately it would be foolish to burden themselves with what was left.

At length they reached the Star Chamber, so called that was what the captain called it, and here they came literally to "the end of their rope."

The string was fastened to a rock in a place which they agreed they could find very easily and then they started in to explore this wonderful chamber. At length the captain looked at his watch.

"Three o'clock, Flinn!" he exclaimed. "By Jove, we must be getting back or night will catch us!"

Then they set to find the string. They searched and they searched and they searched without success, till there were only two candles left. Then Mike Flinn voiced the general horror that started down an avenue that "looked as if it might lead in the right direction."

Up a succession of sharp rocks they clambered; then down the other side, till they came to a sudden halt and drew back with their hair on end, for the awful black depths of the bottomless pit yawned before them.

At this juncture the last quarter inch of the last candle fell and was extinguished.

"May all the devils protect us, captain dear!" groaned Mike Flun, "for it's no use and you is o a devil of a host"

Our language was constructed in a world where there is a great deal of light, and so it has no terms at all adequate to describe the impenetrable blackness in which these two men found themselves.

They were away from the world; buried in a Stygian darkness far down in the bowels of the earth, and there was no guide within reach that their companions could see in their absence.

The captain discharged his pistol and the caves rang with the deafening sound, and the echo was prolonged through far away caves like the ceaseless discharges of receding artillery, till swallowed up in profound, far away depths.

The men were afraid to move, for a stone, loosened by their advance, had leaped into the bottomless pit, and no no sound came to tell they reached that it had at last falling, and they did not care to risk themselves near the awful edge.

No pen could give a fair picture of the long, black hours that followed. The captain's watch ran down. Hunger and thirst tortured them. Time came an irresistible yearning for sleep, and as they closed their heavy lids they shook their heads like men who are never to wake again.

But fifty-eight hours after the last light went out they did wake up to find torches flashing in their faces and Lieutenant Pratt and a colored man who "knew the cave" leaning over them.

Then every lost light got on to the light, and Mike Flun echoed the captain's sentiments when he said:

"Be jabers, yo'll niver joind me in a hole in the ground agin—till I'm buried for good!"

The Origin of "Crop."

"Yes," said the old captain, as he laid down his pipe and took a swig of the steaming punch he conveniently near his right elbow, "the navy has given some very comforting words to the English language. Ever hear the phrase 'tapping the admiral?'"

"No, I don't think I've ever heard it quite sure.

"Well, to this day in the navy, when one sailor taunts another to come off and have a drink of rum with him, he is apt to say, 'Let's go tap the admiral.'

"And this is how it came about: When Admiral Nelson was killed at the sea fight of Trafalgar there was no means of embalming the body, for the rule was to bury all dead sailors at sea; but every one knew this wouldn't work in the case of Lord Nelson. Now, down between decks there was a hogshead of prime old rum that had been captured by the allies aboard, so after some debate the doctors decided to put the body into this.

"While living the admiral liked his grog as well as the next man, but as he was dead this could not account for the fact that when the ship that bore the body home reached London it was found that the sailors had broken into the hogshead and drunk all the rum that was in it.

"After the matter was discovered it was decided that the sailors should as a ground atone the sin by regularly tapping the admiral's cask and by giving a tot to each of his men. From that day to this every old sailor knows what 'tapping the admiral' means."

"Then where is the word 'grog,' and a fine asked it has just like figure appearing from the neck of a bottle and laughing to get out. Look in all the dictionaries and you'll find it, proud as you please, among the words of a hundred and forty languages of this town. From that day to this every old sailor knows what 'tapping the admiral' means.

Look in all the dictionaries and you'll find it, proud as you please, among the words of a hundred and forty languages of this town. From that day to this every old sailor knows what 'tapping the admiral' means.

"Ever hear of Admiral Vernon? No? Well, I think you will say 'Yes' when I tell you he was the early friend of George Washington, and Mount Vernon was afterward named in his honor; so you may be sure he was a great man. Admiral Vernon loved him, for it was he who insisted on giving them a double ration of rum in cold weather, but he also insisted that it should be diluted with water.

"Admiral Vernon used to wear a big grogram coat in wet weather, and so the sailors, in punning allusion to his favorite beverage, called him 'Old Grog,' and gradually the name was changed to designate his favorite beverage—rum and water.

"In a few years, perhaps, the navy has contributed its share to the comforting words of the English language, and if you give her time she'll add some more," and the captain finished his glass and resumed his pipe.

A Grammatical Point.

Judge Wilson, of Kentucky, is a fine lawyer, a purist in the use of English, and withal very fond of a joke, particularly if it is on some one else's grammar.

Tom Roberts practices a good deal before Judge Wilson, and rather prides himself on being a correct speaker. So he was pushed his way to the front without a college education, he is apt to look upon scholars as entirely "too finicky and theoretical."

"And now, may it please your honor, I'll conclude with a few remarks, and I trust you will kindly consent to set into enough to hear me out this evening."

Here was a fine opportunity for chance, and he could not let it slip without notice.

"Hems set, sir, and judges sit."

"Very well," laughed Roberts, "I stand corrected, and I hope your honor will sit long enough to hear me out."

Not long after this the judge, while giving an opinion, remarked:

"Under the circumstances, as stated, I do not think an action will lay."

"I beg your honor's pardon," said Roberts, quick as a flash, "up in the mountains what I was riz we allur that hone lay and actions lie."

"And in saying so," responded the bluish judge, "you have hit the nail on the head, for the truth then at any time since you began this case."

ALFRED H. CALHOUN.

The Stone of the Tortoise.

The brain of the tortoise was supposed at one time to contain a wonderful stone, which was efficacious in extinguishing fire, and when placed under the tongue would produce prophetic inspiration.—Queries Magazine.

Jane Scrimshaw lived in London during the reign of eight sovereigns, from Elizabeth to Anne. Of her 107 years eighty of them were spent in an almshouse.

ABOUT THE HOUSE.

FACTS WHICH EVERY CAREFUL HOUSE KEEPER SHOULD KNOW.

Receipts Believed With Care That Will Save Much Worry, and Make Home the Happy Place It Should Be—Useful Furniture.

There has been a decided change in the bill of fare for breakfast. Until recently the best thing for taking a weak stomach at night, just before going to bed, was a glass of cold ice water, and the best thing for refreshing after a night's rest was directly to bed, the table is kept ready for several hours, and the unappetizing meal is eaten by those who have to be at work as it undoubtedly is by the Queen's family. It is not safe, however, to take a cup of very weak coffee during the day, for it is more frequently productive of dyspepsia than nourishing. A cold bath, on the contrary, may be taken daily, with benefit to the person in a state of perfect health. The best time to be taken is the morning, fasting, and should be followed by a good rub of the friction towel. It is not safe for persons with any form of heart disease to be benefited by this friction.

From the Left Over Turkey.

A turkey croquette, which is almost as nice as a chicken croquette, may be made of the cold meat of roast turkey. Mince fine enough turkey meat to make a solid pint. Add a large even-tea spoonful of salt, a saltspoonful of white pepper, a saucerful of onion juice, and a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Heat a large cup of cream over the fire with about a gill of white sauce, and when it is boiling hot, stir in a tablespoonful of flour mixed with a little of the cream which has been reserved cold for the purpose. Add then the even tablespoonfuls of butter and finally the seasoned turkey meat. Mix in two beaten eggs after boiling the turkey. Cook for two minutes. Take from the fire and when after the eggs are added and spread it on a platter to cool. When it is cold form in to oval balls, roll in egg and sifted breadcrumbs, and fry it in hot lard like other croquettes.

A Protest Against Pie.

Don't, dear, busy wife and mother, stew and pudding yourself and family to death, when you can get fresh fruit and plenty of it. Are you fond of berries, food fit for the gods. Just imagine Apollo or Venus sitting down to eat pie!

And then what is the use of piling those beautiful crimson or purple berries, or crisp white spheres of apples, between folds of greasy flour, to ruin both your fruit and your digestion?

Of course such things are all right to eat occasionally, when you really crave them—as if you are like the man whose wife said to me, "John would eat pie made of puppy-dogs' tails, if it was only pie!"

But for common folks and common times our common sense and unspoiled fruit and see if you don't find life better worth living.—Arthur's Home Magazine.

Mixed Bean Soup.

Soak a pint of black beans over night. In the morning put them on to boil in a gallon of cold water. Let them boil until thoroughly soft, rub them through a strainer or sieve, season with salt, pepper, ground cloves, allspice, a little nutmeg, or mace if liked. Return to the stove and Tea and Relish Your Breakfast.

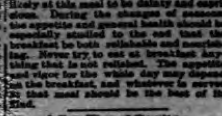
For breakfast cut cards a great variety of sandwiches. Of the latter a most delicious meal to be dainty and appetizing. During the changes of seasons, when the appetite is poor, it should be specially studied to the end that the breakfast be both palatable and nourishing. Never try to eat at breakfast any food that is not thoroughly cooked. The appetite and vigor for the whole day may depend on the breakfast, and whatever is served for that meal should be the best of the kind.

A New Piece of Furniture.



THE INVALID'S TABLE.

Mr. Stimpson's very useful portable food-table, intended for standing on an invalid's bed, and arranged with a reading desk, which folds down flush, so that the table may be used for holding a tray, cups, etc. The legs unscrew, so that the table will pack quite flat, and may be put by or sent to those who are fortunate enough not to have an invalid in the house—they will find this a treasure to the bed-ridden when to play on. And even older people will find it restful to use such a table, in certain kinds of work, as it is not necessary to raise the arms so high.

A Simple and Excellent Plan to Preserve and Strengthen the Eyes is This:

Every morning pour some cold water into your washing bowl; at the bottom of the bowl place a few coins or some other bright object; then put your face in the water with your eyes open and fixed upon the object at the bottom; move your head from side to side gently, and you will find that this morning bath will make your eyes brighter and stronger, and preserve them beyond the ordinarily allotted time.

Sponge Pudding.

Scald one and a half pints of milk and add it to four tablespoonfuls of flour; stir in the yolks of three eggs and a little salt. When ready to put into the oven add the whites, beaten to a stiff froth; bake half hour and serve immediately or it may fall.

Snowflake Potatoes.

One-half pint of milk, one apple, pared and chopped very fine; a cup and a half of flour, one egg, half a teaspoonful of salt, a teaspoonful of baking powder. Mix to a smooth batter and fry a golden brown.

A damp towel thrown over a stationary wash-basin is said to prevent danger from sewer gas.

She Asked Too Much.

They had been married a month and the world had been turning for them upon an axis of gold lubricated with honey.

The harmony of happy hearts filled their souls with a divine rapture and the honeymoon flew by on motionless wings.

This day they had come and breathed with grey the rose leaves on their path.

"No, Ethel," he said firmly, yet kindly, "I cannot do it."

"Then," she pleaded, "I—your Ethel—your bride—ask you to do it for her sake," and she came and laid her soft white arms about his neck and turned her appealing eyes to his.

"I know, I know, Ethel," he said in tender, despairing tones, "but this I cannot do. You should not ask it; you who are more than all the world to me."

The bride's head fell back and to her eldest, she shook under a storm of sobs and a shower of tears wet the sweet pink rose in her cheeks.

The young husband was not less moved, but the determined look did not leave his face.

"And you will never, never grant your Ethel's request?" she asked, stepping back from him.

"Never, Ethel, never," he replied in a voice more than he had yet used. "I am willing, only too glad and willing, to do anything you ask in reason, but never will I consent to call your father papa, and that ends it."

BREVITIES

—Miss Maggie Percival of East Fifth street has gone on a month's visit to friends at Pittsburg, Pa.

—All members of the Boys' Club are invited to attend the meeting of the Boys' Club Association to-morrow evening at the club rooms.

—Vice Chancellor Bird was in the Chancery Court room at Trenton yesterday to listen to motions made by counsel in cases pending.

—Free hand drawing will be graphically described by Mr. John Dalzell at the Y. M. C. A. rooms to-morrow evening. All young men are invited.

—Free hand drawing will be graphically described by John Dalzell at the Y. M. C. A. rooms on Thursday evening. All young men are invited.

—Edsall announces a new and complete stock of new Spring shades in Foster and Harris kid gloves and all the pretty things needed for Easter wear.

—There is to be an entertainment in Reform Hall to-morrow evening for the benefit of the Plainfield Reform Club. The entertainment is under the management of Mr. John H. Carney.

—To-morrow being Holy Thursday it reminds us all of the near approach of Easter, and Hallock & Davis call your attention to their selection of fine derbys and neckwear for that most memorable day.

—The regular monthly business meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held Thursday afternoon at 3.30 in the Crescent Building, corner of Broadway and Fourth street. A large attendance is desired.

—Church of our Saviour, Netherwood. The Rev. S. P. Simpson will conduct Good Friday services as follows: Morning prayer, litany and sermon, 10:30; three hours service, 12 to 3; evening prayer and lecture, 7.45.

—The New Jersey Commissioners of the World's Fair will leave for Chicago on Saturday next, in which city they will remain for several days and look after detail work concerning the representation from this State.

—There seems to be a few Republicans left in New Jersey. In the election in Jersey City yesterday the Republicans elected their mayor by 3,149 majority, and three councilmen, the Democrats electing but three councilmen, but they have six holding over. A fire was started in the City Hall and some of the records are burned. In Rahway the Republicans, for the first time in fourteen years, elect a Republican mayor, and also all the rest of the ticket, and the Republicans win in Paterson, usually regarded as a Democratic stronghold. This seems to be the result all over this State.

WORKERS FOR MISSIONS.

The Woman's Presbyterial Society's Annual Meeting.

The twenty-first annual meeting of the Middlesex Branch of Foreign Missions was held at the Westminster church in Elizabeth yesterday. There was a good representation of the ladies from the churches in this city, Elizabeth, Rahway, Metuchen, Roselle and other parts of the county.

The pulpit decoration of plants and flowers was elaborate and tasteful. Mrs. Dr. Gillespie presided. The morning session opened with devotional exercises from 10 to 10:30, conducted by Mrs. W. P. Stevenson, of Roselle, and at 10.30 o'clock the regular business session began. Prayer was offered by Mrs. J. R. Wardell, and the reports of the secretary and treasurer were read.

Mrs. F. H. Pierson who was the delegate to the Dayton assembly made a very interesting report, after which Rev. Dr. Teal made the address of welcome.

Mrs. Gillespie named the committees and an entertaining and instructive address was made by Mrs. William Watters, of the Philadelphia Board. This closed the morning session, and a basket lunch made the interval pass pleasantly, and at two o'clock the meeting was re-opened with a hymn, and reports of committees.

Features of the afternoon meeting were the addresses of Mrs. J. R. Howell, of Brazil, and Mrs. Wilson, of missionaries to Rev. Dr. Gillespie.

THE WHITE CAPS MUST SETTLE.

John Donaldson, a Victim, Demands One Hundred Dollars.

As reported in THE NEWS recently White Caps chastised two residents of Westfield who would not work and support their families. One, of the men whipped was John Donaldson, and in attempting to escape he fell and injured one of his arms.

Donaldson, however, recognized members of the party and yesterday went and had a talk with them. He demanded that they should either pay him two hundred dollars, or he would prosecute them. They compromised the matter by agreeing to give him $100 next Saturday evening. The affair caused quite a sensation in Westfield at the time. One of the White Caps is said to be a prominent young butcher who resides in that village.

THE Y. M. C. A. RECEPTION

HELD LAST EVENING IN THE ASSOCIATION ROOMS.

Ladies Serve Supper, and Remarks are Made by Mayor Gilbert, ex-Councilman Clark and Messrs. Titsworth, Kissam, Andrews and Taggart.

A reception in the interest of the Young Men's Christian Association extension work was given to the active members in the Association rooms last evening.

Supper was served by the "Ladies' Nine," after which toasts were proposed and responded to as follows: Mr. D. E. Titsworth spoke on "the young man in politics," taking for examples the young men of the past and present who have taken high rank in that field, showing conclusively that the young man has opportunities of succeeding even beyond his elders.

Mr. C. P. Kissam followed in response to "Business", giving the young men wholesome advice in relation thereto.

Mr. F. H. Andrews came next with a retrospective upon the vicissitudes of "Youthful Love," remembering the perennial boot, the unmuzzled dog and the pickerel fence.

Mr. E. B. Clark followed "The Young Man in Religion," taking for his thought that religion must be first in the young man before he can be of use in religion.

Mayor Gilbert—under title of "Father Gilbert," he being one of the two inaugurating the movement for the establishment of the association twenty-two years ago, and was its first president—closed the speech-making. He admonished the young men to cultivate the physical as well as the mental and spiritual man; and urged the value of time and a proper appreciation of it, and the importance of cultivating habits of industry and application.

At the conclusion of the speeches Mr. S. S. Taggart, one of the secretaries of the International Y. M. C. A. Committee described the extension work.

This work is carried on by a fund given regularly in small sums by members of each association who form themselves into a bond to give in this way. The money has been used in some instances to pay a general secretary at Tokio, Japan, or at Madras, India. Some has been given to work among young men in this land.

The work has been considerable money for the work. A good many men have found that by giving systematically though they have little from which to give, that they can do much. An important definite outcome of the meeting was a considerable addition to the number of systematic givers to the extension work of the Association.

Roselle's Water Supply.

There was a large and enthusiastic gathering of representative citizens of Roselle at Trimmer's Hall Monday evening, the Roselle Journal says, to consider the question of water supply.

The meeting was organized by the selection of Mr. H. P. Baldwin as chairman and Mr. DeWitt C. Smith, secretary. Among those present were Mr. William H. Peddle, superintendent of Central Railroad. Mr. Miller F. Moore, Col Fogg, Freeholder W. T. West, and many other well-known residents of the place.

Hon. John Kean, Jr., president of the Union Water Company, and Mr. Frank Bergen, the company's counsel, were in attendance, and Mr. Kean explained the plans and purposes of the company. The supply of water is drawn from Nethermood. A twelve-inch pipe will be laid to Cranford and from Cranford down a fourteen-inch main. Mr. Kean said that the company had the capital of $1,000 subscriptions and the pipes would be immediately laid so that the supply could be given to Roselle on July 1.

The chairman appointed Freeholder West and Messrs. W. P. Stevenson and W. H. Peddle a committee to solicit subscribers. Those present subscribed $620, and the balance of the guarantee fund will be raised in a few days. The people are enthusiastic in the matter and greatly pleased with the progress made.

In Memoriam.

At the semi-monthly meeting of the Royal Arcanum Council of this city, held on Monday evening last, the following minute on the death of Hon. Robert L. Livingston was adopted:

Plainfield Council, No. 711, Royal Arcanum, has heard with deep regret of the sudden death, on March 26, 1892, of brother Robert L. Livingston, and desires to place upon record a memorial of its appreciation of the manly and generous character.

He was one of the early members of this Council, having joined it nine years ago, and was a loyal advocate of its methods, aims and purposes.

He was not only an esteemed member of the Council but was an honored member of the community entrusted by his fellow citizens with high political positions. He was elected a member of the Common Council of Plainfield and, subsequently, a member of the Senate of New Jersey, and held other places of public trust—all of which duties he filled with honor and integrity.

He was a husband kind and generous. To the demands of charity he always responded with a willing heart. In all the walks of life he exemplified the principles of virtue, mercy and charity, the chosen motto of our association. In the home circle, in public and in private life, he was always the same genial companion and trusted friend.

Resolved, That we tender to his family that he was an affectionate husband, a devoted father, a good citizen and an honest man, and we cast upon his new made grave this little wild-flower, wet with our tears and consecrated by our loving remembrance.

Resolved that the foregoing memorial be spread upon the records of this Council, and that a copy thereof be sent to the family of our deceased brother, and be published in the daily papers of the city of Plainfield.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO THE FRONT.

They Shall Lead in Celebrating Columbus Day Next October 12.

Public school pupils will take a leading part in the celebration next October 12, of the four hundredth anniversary of Columbus' landing at San Salvador. This has been decided upon by President Bonney, of the World's Congress Auxiliary of the Columbian Exposition and the National body of the State Superintendents of Education.

This committee has been appointed by the foregoing:

Francis Bellamy, of the Youth's Companion, chairman, and State Superintendent of Education J. W. Dickinson, of Massachusetts; T. B. Stockwell, Rhode Island; W. R. Garret, Tennessee; W. C. Hewitt, Michigan.

The duties of this committee are manifold, and it has already begun work by a declaration of its intentions. These, too, each State superintendent of education is a sort of sub-committee for his work, and is relied upon largely to work with the appointed committee.

Of course the public school pupils will not have the whole celebration of Discovery Day to themselves, for it will be generally observed, but the managers of the affair propose to give the children of the land the first part. In Chicago there will be a grand observance which will practically open the Columbian exposition. But on that day, at a given time, it is intended that the 13,000,000 children who go to American public schools shall in their respective villages, towns and cities give the needed youthful vim and force to the occasion.

Mr. Bellamy, the manager of the movement, said recently that while the exercises in the different schools would necessarily be varied they would all include an ode, a popular carol and a brief oration. The committee, of which Mr. Bellamy is chairman, will ask President Harrison to make October 12 a national holiday, and will also ask each governor of a State to proclaim that day as thenceforth set apart for observance.

THEY WANT MR. DILL BACK.

The Presbytery Refuse the Petition Because of a Threat.

At the afternoon session of the Presbytery of Morris and Orange, held in the First Presbyterian church, East Orange, yesterday, a petition, from Sterling, presented a petition asking that the Rev. Arthur Cushing Dill, who was recently censured by the Presbytery, be reinstated as pastor of the church. The petition bore 278 names, forty-four of which were members of the church. The Sterling church has but forty-nine members. The petition asked for the reinstatement, and threatened, if Mr. Dill were not returned, to organize a new church in Sterling. Each signer declared that he believed Mr. Dill to be "an exemplary, Christian minister."

Because of the threat implied in the communication the Presbytery returned the petition. Rev. Dr. Storrs of Orange, called attention to the fact that Mr. Dill had never been regularly installed as the pastor of the church, under the circumstances it would be impossible to reinstate him in a position he had never really occupied. In the course of the discussion on the matter it was brought out that there was really no organized church at Sterling. Of the three members who composed the regular session, two are dead and one is in an insane asylum. A commission was named by the Moderator, to act as a session for the church until an organization was effected. The commission appointed to report upon the expediency of having cases similar to Mr. Dill's investigated by a judicial commission instead of by the whole Presbytery presented an overture favoring such a movement, but it was not accepted.

COAL BY THE QUART NEXT.

An Invention to Carry Pulverized Coal Through Pipes.

Wallace C. Andrews, President of the New York Steam Company, has a plan to bring coal direct to New York from the Pennsylvania coal fields. Pulverized coal, through an immense pipe line 400 miles long. The coal is to be ground to atoms, mixed with water and pumped into pipes by tremendously powerful engines. The accompanying plan of travel through the pipes at an average rate of five miles an hour. At this end the fluid will run into immense pens, probably on the Jersey meadows. After the coal has settled to the bottom the Livingston water will be drawn off, and then be collected, and even in its atomized state can be most advantageously used for many purposes, such as making steel. For household use it will be compressed into what Mr. Andrews calls "briquettes." &c.

The first through train for Mobile on the Mobile and Ohio went out Monday night, but rain began falling again, and it looks now as if the flood would be greater than before.

They were of a size sufficient, had they exploded, to have blown the train to atoms. Each of the bombs weighed 45 pounds, and considerable confidence is confided in as to the purpose for which such great bombs were intended.

Spanish Anarchists Writing Menacing Letters

The latest dynamite affair reported is an attempt that was made to cause an explosion at the School of Architects in the city of Madrid. A bomb was found a petard with a burning fuse lying in the entrance of the school. He extinguished the fuse and no harm was done.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Our National Dumping Ground."

The above is the highly suggestive title of two papers on Immigration in The North American Review, one by Commissioner of Immigration Weber, the other by Charles Stuart Smith, president of the New York chamber of commerce.

Both take the ground that immigration is desirable, and that the right kind of people, instead of being hampered about by restrictions, should be encouraged. We want new foreigners, for one thing, to do the heavy and rough labor which the American, German and Irish-born have successively turned their backs on. Mr. Smith says the earnings of foreigners in the republic, even at the rate of a dollar a day, amount to $6,000,000 a year. There are 10,000,000 foreigners in the country, and Mr. Smith declares that if restrictions such as are now talked of had been placed on immigration years ago the public works of the United States would have been retarded a quarter of a century. Andrew Carnegie has given millions of dollars to his adopted country in benevolent works, besides enriching it to an even greater amount in his manufacturing business, yet not so many years ago Carnegie was a poor lad in Scotland.

Mr. Weber says it is a mistake that the slums of Europe pour their population upon us. "The constitutional vagabond of Europe does not emigrate," and the slums there are seldom stirred up so that their filth is flung across the seas." Two thirds of the immigrants go to farms in the west. At the labor bureau in New York there are three women seeking servant girls for every one that arrives, and letters asking for such help come constantly from all over the country. If the line were drawn as tight as some persons already in wish it to be, then at the next census, instead of congratulation at our rapid growth, a national howl and wail would rise.

But conditions ought to be fixed for those entering our borders either through Canada or the seaports. The leading ones Mr. Weber designates below:

Perfect existing statutes where they are weak.

Continue a rigid inspection at our ports, guard the frontiers, especially on the north, for the putting up of bars at our seaports will drive the vicious classes undetected to Canada only to come across the border.

Place the expense of all returned immigrants upon steamship companies, whom self interest will force to look for reimbursement to their employers, to whom they owe allegiance for the qualifications of intending immigrants better than any one else, and who would have a direct pecuniary concern in the return of ineffective make subagents in this country responsible for the sale of prepaid tickets, and hold them to be $50 per case of default, then up to the time of their acquiring citizenship all citizens should be compulsory return to the country to which they owe allegiance or to the ports from whence they came after finding those convicted here, after such conviction; those convicted here, after such conviction; and paupers, as soon as they reach the limits of the state to which they are consigned until the burdens of our citizenship have been assumed and its privileges obtained. At present an alien may enjoy about all the benefits and protection of our citizenship, while avoiding its heaviest obligations.

An American Negro Settlement.

The exodus of negroes from the south to Oklahoma set in early this spring. Lately a colony of 100 families from Mississippi county, Ark., was gathered at a station on the Iron Mountain road, near Helena, waiting for transportation. Large numbers of the colored people settled in the new territory when it was first opened to occupation. The movement to this one spot has been more general among the negroes than to any other one place recently. There must now be many thousand negroes in Oklahoma.

Meantime at a mass meeting of Chicago negroes, called to denounce the lynchings of their people that have lately occurred in various localities, a number of those present refused to sing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee," because they said this was not a land of liberty for them. Why not let the blacks have part of a state to themselves, where they can show, unmolested by white people, of what civilization the negro is capable? In a black settlement all would be equal, and all would have a chance to work out the negro problem for themselves. This is a large country, and white men would not grudge to the blacks the room, ample room, to make this experiment.

It is a dangerous thing for a king to meddle with the government, as young Emperor William of Germany is finding out. Old Emperor William knew better. He simply appeared at public pageants, looked fatherly and left all public affairs to his ministers. Thus he lived to be ninety-one years old, and died peacefully in his bed, lamented by all his people.

We have now in this country $490,000,000 in silver currency. Four hundred million dollars were coined under the Bland act of 1878. Under the act of July, 1890, $4,500,000 a month in silver currency has been produced steadily. Since at present the silver coin and notes put into circulation under this law amount to $200,000,000.

We agree altogether with The Globe-Democrat. The editor gives it as his judgment that if no more books were published in a century no serious bad effect would follow in the matter of arrest of intellectual energy and progress. But if new papers were to be stopped, society could scarcely hold itself together. Just so.

IN THE POLITICAL ARENA.

Keystone State Democrats in Convention at Harrisburg.

ELECTION RIOTS DISTURB COHOES.

Ballot Boxes Alleged to Have Been Stolen, Heads Broken by Clubs and Pistols Flourished Recklessly by Excited Politicians.

HARRISBURG, April 13.—The Democratic state convention was called to order here today by J. Marshall Wright, chairman of the state committee. Congressman Bailey, temporary chairman, and Secretary Shiras and State Senator Ross was chosen to preside permanently over the convention. It is said that four of the delegates at large will be William M. Singerly, of Philadelphia; Attorney General Wm. U. Hensel, of Lancaster; Charles Robinson, of Scranton, and State Senator Hall. A vigorous fight for the control of the convention has been going on for two days. National issues and many important state issues have been dwarfed by the fight for the control of the state and for the place on the national committee. The delegates and their friends are divided into Harrity and anti-Harrity men, or boss and anti-boss factions, as the enemies of Mr. Harrity delight in calling them.

To Indorse Cleveland.

It has been largely a silk ribbon campaign. Every man in Harrisburg wears a pale crimson badge, with Cleveland's name in big letters, and an infinity of local badges of different colors. It is to be closed with the overwhelming Cleveland enthusiast here, although there is a respectable Hill following, but wherever the national issue is agitated the cry is raised whether the Cleveland cry of the Harrity men is not a cloak for a Pattison boom. There is a grave doubt of the convention instructing for Cleveland. That it will indorse him is determined.

"The indorsement of Cleveland will be unequivocal," said Secretary of the Commonwealth Harrity to the United Press correspondent. But the exact form of the indorsement, Mr. Harrity said, has not been determined upon. He would not say, therefore, whether the convention would instruct or not. Mr. Harrity said there would be no contest in the delegation to Chicago in connection with the presidency.

A Boom for Pattison.

"The convention will indorse Governor Pattison's administration of state affairs," said Mr. Harrity. "His friends are not going to use him as a club to hammer any one."

Until the delegates began to gather, the anti-Harrity men, led by ex-Senator Wallace and James Guffey, claimed to have control of the convention, but there was no evident majority for Harrity and the Guffey men began to talk about a possible compromise. They finally sent over to the Harrity headquarters and proposed that Mr. Wallace and Mr. Guffey be sent as delegates at large to the national convention. The proposition was rejected. The anti-Harrity men then got together and began to discuss the possibility of hiring another hall and taking their delegates into it for an independent convention. When the United Press correspondent was told of this, that this proposition was under discussion he smiled. "I had not heard of it," he said, "but I should say it was an evidence of weakness."

Mr. Harrity said further that while he had heard some talk of a compromise, no direct proposition had come to him. "We are going right ahead," he said, "there is no programme, but we shall carry out the wishes of a majority of the convention."

Late last evening Mr. Guffey discovered that the Harrity men had taken possession of the Opera House and proposed to occupy it all night. Mr. Guffey said that he did not know why it had been done, unless it was with the purpose of "committing some overt act."

The Harrity leaders were in conference all evening, and at midnight the following slate was agreed upon: Temporary chairman, the Hon. F. E. Beltzhoover; permanent chairman, Hon. Senator George Ross; delegates at large, George A. Allen, of Erie; ex-United States District Attorney and the Hon. Thomas P. Merritt, mayor of Reading; electors at large, Morrison R. Elliott, of Tioga; John C. Bullitt, of Philadelphia; Colonel Thomas B. Kennedy, of Franklin, and Henry Myer, of Allegheny county; delegates to the state Senator George Ross, of Bucks county; Attorney General W. U. Hensel, of Lancaster; W. J. Singerly, of Philadelphia; Sheriff Charles Robinson, of Lackawanna; State Senator Harry A. Hall, and Patrick Foley, of Allegheny; and either State Senator Grant Weaving, of Warren, or S. L. Mesteret, of Lafayette. The list of delegates at large, however, is subject to revision.

Rioting in Cohoes.

COHOES, N. Y., April 13.—Riot reigned in this city last night and a drunken, howling mob had virtual possession of the town. The chief police and his force labored to with some trepidation, and the hottest political contest in years has ended in a manner disgraceful to the community. Three candidates were in the field—Garside (Mayor Democrat), Herrick (Dem.) and Strong (Rep.)

All saloons were forced to close early in the day. At a late hour in the afternoon two men armed with clubs and revolvers entered the saloon of Joseph Stopi, of the Fourth ward, to sign blank returns at the point of their pistols. The returns were then taken to the police station.

Men armed with clubs and pistols were parading the streets in all directions, and the street in front of the police station was in possession of an excited and angry mob. A man named McDonough, of the Ward Three, who attempted to vote in the First ward, said his head was split open by a policeman's club. William Henry, candidate for supervisor in the Fourth ward, was driven from the polls by an officer armed with two revolvers.

Three of the five wards show that they have been carried by Republicans. The fourth ward, from which the ballot boxes were stolen, is strongly Republican and a majority for Strong if the votes are properly counted. Returns from the First ward have been held back.

Connecticut's Convention May 16.

NEW HAVEN, April 13.—The Democratic state committee have named May 16 as the date of holding the convention to elect delegates to the national convention. The convention will convene at the Hyperion theater, in this city. The committee is pretty nearly evenly divided as to whether or not there shall be a platform adopted by the convention. The committee also showed that the majority of the delegates to the convention are for Cleveland, the committee showed that the majority of the delegates to the convention are for Cleveland, [illegible] and [illegible] are for free coinage of silver.

Wanamaker Declines to Run.

JERSEY CITY, April 13.—Republicans met last night and nominated Colonel Peter F. Wanser for mayor, defeated by at least 2,000 majority by Colonel Peter F. Wanser, the Democratic candidate will receive the Democratic for the next six. Democrats holding over. Colonel Wanser will be the first Republican mayor the city has had in six years.

Just after it became generally known that the Republican candidate for mayor was elected, the broke out in the offices of the city comptroller and city treasurer. They contained all the city records, including the reports of all financial transactions.

Many Republicans attributed the fire to the recent April 2d Democratic convention evidences of the alleged corruption which has characterized the city's government.

Manning Re-elected Mayor.

ALBANY, April 13.—The municipal elections in this city resulted in the re-election of Hon. James H. Manning (Dem.) for mayor over General Warner (Rep.) by a majority of 2,582. Manning's majority last year over Fuller (Rep.) was 7,098. The board of aldermen stands: Democrats, 15; Republicans, 7.

The board of supervisors of Albany county is estimated at 19 Democrats and 13 Republicans.

Nebraska Democrats Meet.

OMAHA, April 13.—The Democratic state convention, which met in this city today, is one of the most exciting that the party has has held for years. The lines of battle are Pattison and anti-Pattison. The latter have no second choice. They wear enormous ribbons of pink with pictures of Grover Cleveland and the inscription "Cleveland and No Boss." Then there is a pale crimson badge, with Cleveland's name in big letters, and an infinity of local badges of different colors. It is to be closed with the overwhelming Cleveland enthusiast here, although there is a respectable Hill following, but wherever the national issue is agitated the cry is raised whether the Cleveland cry of the Harrity men is not a cloak for a Pattison boom. There is a grave doubt of the convention instructing for Cleveland. That it will indorse him is determined.

"The indorsement of Cleveland will be unequivocal," said Secretary of the Commonwealth Harrity to the United Press correspondent. But the exact form of the indorsement, Mr. Harrity said, has not been determined upon. He would not say, therefore, whether the convention would instruct or not. Mr. Harrity said there would be no contest in the delegation to Chicago in connection with the presidency.

Bloody Battle Between Cattlemen and Desperadoes.

FIFTY PEOPLE REPORTED KILLED.

CASPER, Wy., April 13.—Fighting between cattle men and sheriff's officers on one hand and rustlers on the other has been going on for a day or two past, and according to reports at least fifty men have been killed so far. The most sanguinary combat is said to have taken place not far from Riverside, between the posse of Sheriff Angus, of Johnson county, numbering 150, and a large party of rustlers, during which the latter are said to have lost twenty-eight and the former, eighteen men killed. Many were wounded on both sides, but the number is not known.

The Rustlers Surrounded.

The fighting was altogether with rifles at long range. Sheriff Angus went to the aid of Fred Hesse and Charles Ford, who, with the 100 men, had fifty rustlers, under command of "Nate" Champion, surrounded at the T. A. ranch, on the Powder river, not far from Gillette, but were cut off from the town. Champion was killed in the fight.

About forty rustlers have left Gillette for the scene of battle to help Champion's men. Crow Indians are said to have left their reservation to help the rustlers.

CHANDLER ATTACKS PALMER'S BILL.

Popular Election of United States Senators Assailed.

WASHINGTON, April 13.—Shall senators be elected by direct vote of the people instead of by legislatures? was the question discussed in the senate. The resolution providing for submitting to the state legislatures an amendment to the federal constitution to that end, offered by Senator Palmer, of Illinois, was the subject of a caustic attack by Senator Chandler, of New Hampshire.

Mr. Chandler's main point was that Mr. Palmer's proposed amendment was merely designed to tickle the Farmers' Alliance by keeping millionaires out of the senate. The fact was that the direct vote of the people did not keep millionaires out of public office because several of them had been elected governors of states.

A better amendment to the constitution would be by empowering congress to take away by legislation the riches of persons and corporations. The senate laughed heartily over this proposal as it did at Mr. Chandler's suggestion that all federal judges, marshals and postmasters be elected. There was some feeling caused when Mr. Chandler reproached Mr. Palmer for implying that General Logan had been elected senator from Illinois by a trick.

As a result of Mr. Chandler's attack the resolution looking to the election of senators by popular vote was referred to the committee on privileges and elections, where it is likely to remain for the rest of the session.

Want Maynard to Resign.

ALBANY, April 13.—The report of the committee in the Maynard investigation will be presented either Friday or Monday. The Republican members of the committee adopted a minority report. The report concludes by asserting that Judge Maynard should be asked to resign his seat.

THE SPRING GAME OPENS.

Big Clubs Witness the Opening Games of the New Season.

PHILADELPHIA, April 13.—The great fight for the National league pennant of 1892 is on. In six cities of the Union twelve of the greatest teams that ever met in battle on the diamond jumped out on the field yesterday, and before a total of 80,000 people engaged in a conflict for the supremacy that promises to be the most exciting as well as the most interesting in the history of the game. Baseball's two great centers of the country have been divided between the National League and American Association clubs.

Today they are enrolled under the one banner. There is not one king but many kings now, and what the result of the struggle will be none can predict. A month hence the conflict will be at its fiercest. For the opening no brighter auspices could be desired considering the early season. From Baltimore, Washington, Cincinnati, Louisville, St. Louis—to the city where the gauntlet was thrown down and so eagerly taken up—comes news of clear, bright weather, and attendance, each, that is to be more desired than all, good ball. The day's games resulted as follows:

INSPECTOR BYRNES NO LONGER.

The Great Detective Is Now Superintendent of the New York Police.

NEW YORK, April 13.—Inspector Byrnes has been made superintendent of the New York police, vice William Murray retired on half pay—$3,000. Murray and Byrnes, the outgoing and incoming superintendents, began their careers together as side partners in Company C of Ellsworth's Zouaves. They marched to the first Bull Run together, and upon that field Murray was shot down and half killed. He was carried out of the battle and back into it on a gun, and only his own determined opposition saved him from having his wounded leg cut off. When Murray joined the police force on May 24, 1863, Byrnes had already been a policeman three years. Both advanced rapidly.

In 1872 Murray was Captain Byrnes' sergeant in the Mercer street station. In 1876 he became a captain himself, and inspector a year later. Three years after that, in 1880, Captain Byrnes' successful pursuit of the Manhattan bank burglars made him inspector.

Inspector Murray was not so successful with his celebrated case, the Stewart grave robbery. The robbers were never caught. On June 9, 1885, Murray became superintendent, succeeding Thomas C. Walling. Mr. Murray was always a Democrat of the stanchest. Then followed his harrowing illness and long vacation. Recently it became apparent that he would never recover, his left arm being permanently palsied. Hence his retirement.

Inspector Steers will probably succeed him as senior inspector. It is altogether probable, though, that Superintendent Byrnes will remain, as before, the managing spirit in the detective bureau, where he earned his golden laurels.

HELEN.

I am Helen, and my name
Is a story and a song;
For the Greeks went o'er Earth's ocean,
And my dear sake slew them.

Oh, the days, and oh, the dances
When I was queen!
By the light of my own glances
And the splendor of my spleen!
My life was all remotion,
And no dull days between.

From the golden dais
Where I reigned alone,
As a woman's way is,
I descended to a throne.
And my life, that lately
Leapt as a mountain stream,
Now crept still and shady
As a river in a dream.

He came;
In his eyes was flame
And a new desire,
Unknown by name,
The godhead dire
So great a shame.
Took all my frantic
With fire.

The years, the ten swift years, are fled;
Troy is fall'n, and ash-strewn
Lies the guilt. Her princes dead
In the darkness throng me round,
Shrouded in their bloody wounds.
No word speaking,
No wrath wreaking.
They pass still, one by one;
And when I think the dream is done,
Lo! the white-haired king appears,
Kneeling, as he bathes in tears
The hands that slew his son.

HOUSEHOLD ECONOMY.

The Prevailing Fault Among Americans of All Grades Is Extravagance.

If the question were asked what one quality in a woman most conduces to a happy household, I should answer, economy; and if what quality in a man most conduces to home happiness I should speak—economy and frugality. The great majority of cases in want of national economy. The woman wastes in the parlor and kitchen. The man wastes everywhere. There is no end to the catalogue of crimes. Is a man or woman in one hundred steps an account of personal expenses. If our schools, instead of the rule of three, would teach every boy the simplest elements of plain bookkeeping, mathematics would be of some value. The farmer who sees pots down in figures his expenditures for the year, and knows of trifles down he loses by bad management—carelessness—will be on the road to amendment. So, likewise, he should have a slate hanging in the kitchen, on which to jot down daily expenses, and a pocket account book to see how quickly $100 slips away. What statistics prove that average life is provided with far more comforts than fifty years ago, and I look about at the amount expended in a year compared with what was formerly needed, I wonder how much it will take to satisfy the wants of a family fifty years hence. There is not question but half of our boys and girls are harmed by too free use of money and the other half by being jealous and dissatisfied.

Where will be the end of indulgence? The antidote is twofold. We must educate them to restrain their desires and very early to cause to prosper to their expectations. Every child should be brought up to feel a responsibility for the household. I see girls daily that are surely preparing for misery. Heaven help a man who is inveigled into marrying such a woman. She has and can have no idea of economy or saving. She only considers a husband as a purveyor and provider. He in time loses his freshness of heart. He is a hopeless man never to be gratified. His ideals drop down. He becomes a clubman if rich, a second man if poor. This one thought ought to be uppermost in training—to make our young people helpful, and the girls to comprehend the duty of being helpful.

But almost necessary: It is true that most of those who are supposed to be above the necessity of kitchen work really are not. I know the ladies about whom I have spoken. Her, and the slave, in the majority of cases, is the husband. He has no interest in life from money making. We women are creating a false class of idle—money makers. On a moderate income they know that their family is not constituted to be happy. The outgoes are from one-fourth to three-fourths for things that could be spared without suffering.

Their is nothing so honorable as toil, and this every one admits, and yet we create a false standard of life. The work of the world should be evenly distributed as a privilege and a joy. As for menial work, it is generally made by inferiors. It is that which shows skill. Why should so many thousands of our women consider cooking and cleaning as out of their province? A woman that does not prefer to serve a flavor should nevertheless do it, and do it well.

Into Vassar and into our common schools must go the inculcation of a noble spirit. It is made a very little matter whether it be in a rich home or a poor one, but a complaining spirit and a wasteful one spoils all round. I think I may safely say that one-half of the production of the United States gets wasted. He laid special stress on the bad habits of those who cultivate the soil and handle crops. My special wish is that with those of us who waste in the household. I am not urging penuriousness, but economy there is no escape from. Used in Place of the Tidy.

The day of the tidy is over. In its place is the silken scarf, which may be just as troublesome, but which has this good feature, that it is not the result of the toil of hours, perhaps days, of the old fashioned embroidered affair often was. Many women find great comfort and pleasure in doing piles of fancy work, though it seems to be a fact that embroidery is not such a hobby as a few years ago. So beautiful for decorative purposes are the manufactured fabrics, designed solely for that purpose, that women are finding out is is foolish to spend their time in counting stitches and cross stitches when they might be reading a book or riding a bicycle. Men never seem to like to see women stooping over intricate patterns of fancy work. They think it is wasted time.—Brooklyn Eagle.

Beautiful Mailbox Verses.

The Malbox women are among the pleasures of their sex, both on account of their personal appearance and their sociability. He is a hopeless man never to be gratified. His ideals drop down. He becomes a clubman if rich, a second man if poor. This one thought ought to be uppermost in training—to make our young people helpful, and the girls to comprehend the duty of being helpful.

But almost necessary: It is true that most of those who are supposed to be above the necessity of kitchen work really are not. I know the ladies about whom I have spoken. Her, and the slave, in the majority of cases, is the husband. He has no interest in life from money making. We women are creating a false class of idle—money makers. On a moderate income they know that their family is not constituted to be happy. The outgoes are from one-fourth to three-fourths for things that could be spared without suffering.

Their is nothing so honorable as toil, and this every one admits, and yet we create a false standard of life. The work of the world should be evenly distributed as a privilege and a joy. As for menial work, it is generally made by inferiors. It is that which shows skill. Why should so many thousands of our women consider cooking and cleaning as out of their province? A woman that does not prefer to serve a flavor should nevertheless do it, and do it well.

Into Vassar and into our common schools must go the inculcation of a noble spirit. It is made very little matter whether it be in a rich home or a poor one, but a complaining spirit and a wasteful one spoils all round. I think I may safely say that one-half of the production of the United States gets wasted. He laid special stress on the bad habits of those who cultivate the soil and handle crops. Judging a Girl by What She Eats.

There is not any great test of opportunity, if not greater, to judge a woman's mental standing by the meals she enjoys when in a public eating place as if you undertake to write a book of her personal traits through the medium of her dress. Fashions in eating change as well as in everything else. The quiet, well groomed girl in the cloth suit and plain linen collar who is putting away her great slices of underdone beef with evident relish is the society girl of the period. Time was when the dainty bit was very short, the dinner wine and pleasant luncheon has become a wise and healthful fad, and the most hard and fast rule of fashion.

At another table a girl who has not the opportunities of her more favored sister to indulge in fads gives her self away to the keen and observing eye. She is not at home in every day of her life, but is not often out of her depth in the knotty problems of the less ambitious has an opportunity of tasting. She belongs to the upper middle class, as they say in England.

In a corner she can see and observation, but where she may see and hear all that goes on, the shy country maiden is intensely interested in the new sights and sounds, and when she gets the only things she is quite sure of on the bill of fare.—Philadelphia Times.

A Marshtown Beautiful Hair.

There have been many questions as to the identity of the late Marshtown beauty, Wedded, and whether it was she whose wonderful hair brought her into so much notice. She was one of the greatest beauties of her day. One day Lord and Lady Stewart de Rothesay, took her to the court painter, Mr. Hayter, who was greatly struck with the rare golden beauty, her divinely tall figure and her rippling hair rippling on her forehead. On his expressing his admiration Lady Stewart de Rothesay quickly untied the confining bonnet and let down the magnificent hair stream over her figure.

The man was shining into the studio, and Mr. Hayter immediately began to paint, and by the vision of loveliness before him, clad, as the artist's vision told him, in a vesture of gold. The lady paused for hours for her knees. Soiled years afterwards when the wife of the handsome Marquis of Waterford, she lay at death's door in fever. The doctor ordered that the magnificent hair to the shears, and Lord Waterford allowed no hand but his own to execute the sentence. Those locks were buried with him, twined around his neck.—Hearth and Home.

Chicago Girls and Gotham Maidens.

The difference, notable or plainly on the surface, between the in-bounds Chicago girl and the same type in New York are an interesting study. So h are Easily alive to every passing impress of both and the clever, observ, well dressed. Both are practical and in a measure generous to their fellow creatures. But the young woman who buys fresh bulbs of a bright morning on State street could be told among a thousand people in a Paris crowd from the one who goes to Arnold & Constable's. Our townswoman has distinctly more of an eye to the main chance. She will be likely to expend as much a yard for her spangled tissue, but she will carry with her an indefinable impression of that amount of money, while Miss Knickerbocker will get the stuff she wants, thinking only of her shape, putting aside the consideration of money. The Chicago girl is more earnest, the other more nonchalant.—Chicago Post.

Barebacked Tuscan Girls.

Bonnets and hats are never worn here. The young ladies wear veils arranged gracefully, and the elderly ladies wear shawls over head and shoulders to church only, and are barebacked during their walks and drives.—Yucatan Cor. Pittsburg Dispatch.

A presumptuous little boy, named Johnny Gilpin, lived in Chicago. He thought he knew it all. He spoke a little man if he had a plated. In the night it went off, and Johnny had a narrow escape from going off at the same time, as he received a serious wound in the chest.

The Chase to the Store.

"Only three pins!" cried little Ray,
"To get into our barn to-day.
And see a circus with a clown;
A horseback rider, Pamela Brown,
And tumblers, a pin a piece.
Bill Jones will sell it on the grass.
I'm going to be the ticket man,
I want to sell all that I can;
One for mamma, one for Dan,
And six for all her dolls, I guess;
And then, you know, Jane must come, too,
For she's my friend and Grace, and you."
I'd not a pin, and so I went
To mamma's cushion—some were bent
And would not pass—I let it quite
A time to make the change just right.
Then when we all got to the door
A downcast look my lot's face wore;
The circus men only had prizes,
As to who the ringmaster should be;
The trapeze boy had hurt his heel
And should not work, his mother said;
The clown's Aunt Kate forgot that day
The circus came and went away,
And did not sew the silver stars
Upon his trousers, nor the bars
Of blue of red. It was too bad,
And so I told my little lad.
He said he wished he was a man,
Then he could go and get each plan;
But I wished much that I could be
A lad again, and once more see
Those old days when pins were made
The lawful currency of trade.

An old lady living in a certain New England village was going down a flight of bend stairs when she fell and went rolling to the very bottom of the stairs, where she burst open the door and came rolling out into the kitchen. Her servant girl, first, screamed in affright, and various members of the family came running into the kitchen, breathless with alarm. Before any of them could speak a word the old lady lifted herself to a sitting position on the floor and holding one finger up warningly and sniffing at the air, said calmly: "Jane, them biscuits in the oven are burning and I know it!"—Success Register.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Charles W. Wilson of Pamrapo is visiting friends on East Second street.

Mr. Alfred Compton of West Front street expects to start for the West this week.

Mr. Myers, formerly of East Front street, has removed to No. 32 Arlington avenue.

Mr. J. C. Pierson, Jr., will start for the West within a few days, to engage in business. Success to him.

Miss Florence Potter and Mr. Alex ander Ross are to be unitited in marriage at the residence of the bride's parents on Tuesday evening, April 26th.

Mr. and Mrs. T. W. King of Sanford avenue, left Plainfield to-day to spend a short time in New York. They will then go to Europe and spend several months there.

The funeral of the late Dr. J. F. Griffen took place from his late residence on East Second street yesterday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock. Interment was made in Hillside Cemetery.

Captain Frank L. C. Martin of the Plainfield Bicycle club has appointed the following aids: First Lieutenant, George Mahon; Second Lieutenant, E. V. French; Bugler, A. T. Heinrichs, Color bearer, Geo. W. Moreton.

The choir for next year at the First Presbyterian church is, soprano, Mrs. F. L. Knight; contralto, Miss A. M. Stacy; tenor, Mr. F. L. Knight; bass, Mr. Robert Gorton. These vocalists are well and favorably known and will no doubt prove most attractive.

At the home of the bride on West Second street, at 7.30 last evening, Mr. Charles C. Lister of Philadelphia and Miss Emily Putnam of this city were united in marriage. The Rev. Dr. Yerxes, the pastor of the First Baptist church, performed the ceremony. Only the immediate friends of the family were present. The wedding was a pretty one. Mr. and Mrs. Lister left on a short wedding trip. Upon their return they will reside in this city.

Mr. Allen, an athlete of New York, was the guest of Mr. Geo. P. Mellick, of Broadway, yesterday. Mr. Mellick who is a prominent member, brought his friend to the gymnasium of the Bicycle Club during the evening. Wednesday is "practice night" and a number of the boys were out getting in tune for the April entertainment. Mr. Mellick's friend proved to be an adept on the apparatus and joining in the classes showed a splendid finish and style about his work. As a finale, which received a hearty applause, he did the "giant swing" a most difficult gymnastic feat on the horizontal bar.

The Metopota.

Conductor Mr. Wm. R. Chapman, of the Metopota Society, is just at present hard at work preparing the various societies he leads for their own concerts, and incidentally for the great jubilee concert in New York in May in which they will assist Mme. Adelini Patti, or, perhaps, as a Metopota member put it, "Mme. Patti will assist them." A chorus of about 1000 trained voices will thrill all hearers on those concert nights. By the way it might be remarked that the Metopota membership has largely increased.

The Farmers' Weekly Crop Bulletins.

The Weekly Crop Bulletin of the New York State Weather Service will be resumed for the season of 1892, on Friday, May 6th. All interested and who desire their names placed on the mailing list should send their P. O. address, at once to the Director of State Weather Service, New Brunswick, N. J.

—Gov. Abbett has designated Friday April 22d, as Arbor Day.

Of Interest to Bicyclers.

By a recent decision of the Supreme Court of New Jersey, bicyclers have no rights on the sidewalk in this State, but on the highway they have the same rights and privileges of any other vehicle. On the first point the law says that sidewalks are for the use of pedestrians, not persons in vehicles, and that a person has no more right to propel a bicycle on the sidewalk than he has to ride a horse or drive a team there. The court holds that bicycles have the same right as teams on a highway, and hence a wheelman is not liable for damages caused by riding there unless he is shown guilty of negligence.

Information for Plainfield Wheelmen

The following conversation reported by a friend was recently overheard between two brothers, aged four and six years:

"Sissy," Winny, what is the difference, anyway, between a bicycle and a tricycle?"

Elder (with patronizing air)—Why, Ray, don't you know that? If a man takes the thing home to see how he likes it it is a tricycle, but if he keeps it it is a bicycle.

An Engine Carrying Electricity.

Engine No. 870 on the Central Railroad has been equipped with an arc electric light which is used as a head light. The electricity is furnished by a storage battery. The engine draws one of the Royal Blue Line trains which is due in this city at 9.55 p. m., bound east. There was a large crowd of people at the depot last night awaiting the arrival of the train which was a half-an-hour late. The test appears to be a success.

Base Ball Saturday.

The Athletics are to play a game of base ball with the Stars next Saturday afternoon at three o'clock. The captain of the Athletics is Sandford Robinson. The captain of the Stars is George Scribner.

—Ex-Editor Shrope of the defunct N. J. Telegraph, of Bridgeton, has found fame, the street of a number of persons who sold his paper. At their trials it is expected that the names of the subscribers will be made public, and there is already, in anticipation, a boom in the local feather industries in those sections.—Ex. It is a disgrace to the profession to call one who would publish such an obscene sheet an editor.

—When Albert A. Drake was Captain of a company of the 7th N. J. he received a delicately-scented note from a young lady, "Yourself and company are invited to Garfield Park Sunday," etc. With pleasure. Anything that the boys were in search of this, or orders were issued accordingly, and at the time stated Captain Drake, at the head of his company of three dozen parasols, moved up to the house. The young lady was nearly thrown into spasms at the sight of Captain Drake's company, and explanations followed. The young lady was not aware of the dashing Captain's military connections.—Trenton Gazette.

—A beautifully executed memorial window—a tribute to the noble qualities of Theodore De Groot Jones—will be unveiled on Easter morning, in the Church of the Heavenly Rest, Clinton avenue and Fourth street. It shows the risen Redeemer in judgment and the design is a cross resting on rocks that are partly hidden by lilies and other white Easter flowers. The cross is surrounded by a dove, and the colors of the whole, while rich and pleasing to the eye, are subdued. Jones was in the Church of the Heavenly Rest that Mr. Jones labored for many years, and his noble qualities are remembered by every member of the congregation. Mr. Jones was an athletic young man of about thirty-five years of age at the time of his death in August 1891. He contracted a heavy cold from an overheated bath, and died of pneumonia after a two days' illness. He was a son-in-law of Judge Beebe of Clinton avenue.

UNION COUNTY COURTS.

JOHNNY GOBLE SAYS HE DID NOT TRY TO BURN A HOUSE.

Several Cases in the Special Sessions Yesterday Morning—John Ham Convicted.

There were three prisoners arraigned in the Union County Court of Special Sessions yesterday morning. One was little Johnny Goble, an 11-year old lad, who is charged with attempting to burn a house in Rahway.

The little fellow wore very big boots, and as he sat in a big easy chair very little more than his boots and his head, the latter the same shade as Prosecutor Marsh's, greyish brown, could be seen. A woman whose eyes were red from weeping, sat outside the railing. She was Johnny's mother.

Prosecutor Marsh spoke tenderly when he called for the little chap to stand up. The big boots slid out of the chair, stood upright and the rest of the boy that was not seen before, was revealed between the boot-tops and the fazzes head.

The charge was read, and the child boldly answered that he was not guilty. Mr. Marsh said he believed the boy was not guilty, and he thought he was too young to be kept in jail until the case could be tried.

Mr. Marsh suggested that the bail of Mrs. Goble be accepted, as she was a widow and a property owner. Judge McCormick acquiesced, and the Prosecutor said: "Come here, boy!"

The boots chased one another across the room, the fazzes head sooo spanying them. The Prosecutor then repeated the charge against the boy, which reluctantly the little fellow and his weeping mother indebted to the State of New Jersey in $600 in failure of the young prisoner putting in appearance next week when the trial will take place.

John Hagele, the nineteen-year old son of Mrs. Barbara Hagele, who was arrested for assaulting John Spowkoskey and cutting him with a knife, pleaded guilty, and stated to the court that Spowkoskey was choking him and he used the weapon in self-defense.

Judge McCormick sentenced Hagale to the county jail for three months.

The trial of John Hass charged with stealing a copper boiler from the residence of Mr. H. F. Ham in Cranford was continued. The case opened last Wednesday with the testimony of Mr. Ham.

Two of Mr. Ham's employes testified that they found Hass in a junk-dealer's wagon in front of the house. He was under some blankets. His companions took out of the house with the boiler. Hass gave himself up, but the other man escaped.

Hass in defence testified that he was not implicated in the robbery, but was taking a ride with the junkman.

The jury found Hass guilty. Mr. Marsh said the young man was assisting the State in the capture of the other man.

Judge McCormick, after consultation with his associates imposed a sentence of five months in jail.

Song of the Seven-Years-Wed.

JOHN GOLDBY ORMSBY, OF THE EVENING WORLD.

"Darling, seven years have sped
Since the day when we were wed.
Seven years, the doctors say,
Change the whole constitution of clay;
All the atoms that composed
My physique at this be tried
Now are different from those
That I stood before and sighed
Seven years ago to-day.

"These are not the lips, you see,
That vowed love and constancy.
This is not the beating heart
That from yours was never to part,
Nor the soul, I'm sorry to say,
Vanished like the ocean spray,
Which I swore to you on the Darling, on our wedding day,
Seven years ago to-day.

"What remains unaltered?
Love's a thing ethereal
Love that's genuine contains Nothing that's material.
Darling, listen to my vow:
Changing as the years may,
I will love you ever so now—
Seven years ago to-day,
Seven years ago to-day.

A Cradle Song.

BY J. E. CARSON.

Sleep, sweety sleep, my baby dear,
While evening winds are softly blowing
Dream, darling, dream with delight to hear,
And way to find the land of Nod.
The twilight is gone
And the moon is on,

Play, dear one, play, in guileless glee,
While here young mom on thee is beaming;
Sing, young one, sing, for thou art free
From the cares of evening's coming.

More Truth Than Poetry.

I love to ramble about in the Spring,
When the birds are building their little nests and thrushes sing;
When the pasturing cattle are chewing the cud
And the lambs are rioting around in the mud,
And that's why I've mulleins in my blood.

PROF. SYMONS, F. R. S., has found a new elixir of life in the study of meteorology. Having H-O for breakfast is just as satisfactory and twice as popular as "star-gazing."

Opposed to Sunday Opening.

At the recent State Conference of the Young Women's Temperance Union, the following resolution was adopted:

Whereas, The object of the great Chicago Exposition should be to illustrate the progress of the world in morals as well as in arts, science and industries, we, the young women of New Jersey, in conference assembled,

Resolved, That we are unalterably opposed to the opening of the Columbian Exposition on the Lord's day, and to the sale of intoxicating liquors on the grounds, and should the petitions of the Sabbath and temperance people be ignored by the commissioners, we recommend that young women not to attend the Exposition.

Besides resolutions on the death of Mrs. Boyce, the following were also adopted:

That a vote of thanks be tendered to the W. C. T. U. of Bayonne, for the use of Library Hall, and to the "Ty" for their very courteous and agreeable entertainment on Tuesday.

Resolved, That our young women be impressed with the necessity of wearing their white ribbons at all times, believing that much good is done by the silent example following without words just where we stand.

Resolved, That we do earnestly try by every possible means with God's help to make our positions as Prohibitionists stronger and to this end endeavor to increase the membership among members and friends in their votes.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Woman Is Enlarging Her Sphere.

We are always glad to chronicle progress on the part of the fair sex. Wherever they seem to be rivaling men in any of the industries, or when they seek out entirely new avenues to the pursuit of happiness and prosperity, we endeavor to give them full credit.

We call attention, therefore, to the fact that six women, sisters, have recently been arrested as stage robbers. They were dressed as men, however. This was a concession to prejudice which is unworthy a strong minded female robber. The women wore trousers so that their appearance might suggest that they belonged to the awe inspiring sex. We must infer from this that they had no confidence in petticoats when it came to an emergency like this. The thought of six women holding him up and robbing him would have so maddened a stage driver that probably sixteen women could not have held him. So the girls took refuge in trousers as a sort of scarecrow.

Another act of theirs was unworthy. When the detectives of Salmon Falls, Ida., traced the six girls to their lair and arrested them, they whined at once and said their father made them follow stage robbing for a living; that they did not want to do it at all. Now that story is mean, as well as improbable. Girls that could stop a stageful of passengers and rob them, holding a pistol at their heads meanwhile, are hardly the sort of ladies that an old man of any kind could compel to do what was distasteful to them. The tale is gauzy.

Meantime, on the other side of the world, Behanzin, king of Dahomey, sends 6,000 of his women warriors to fight the French, because the women are fiercer and more fearless than his men soldiers. All Dahomey is filled with the lamentation of husbands whose wives have thus been ruthlessly torn from them to go and fight in the cruel war. An Amazon warrior's lot in Dahomey is not a happy one. If the French kill her, then she gains glory; but if she comes back alive and the war has gone against the Dahomeyites, she is beheaded for cowardice. There isn't much choice either way.

But straws show which way the wind blows. We mention these items as proof of how woman is distinguishing herself in 1892. Well, this is leap year.

Ex-French Communists.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune mentions the fact that many of the active and rabid communists of 1870 are now among the most honored and devoted citizens of the republic of France. The French minister to Denmark, M. Camille Barrere, is one of them. In 1872 he was sentenced to death at Paris, but managed to escape to England, where he became a journalist. Another communist who escaped the death sentence passed on him is M. Ranc, now a rich man, a senator of France and proprietor of an influential newspaper.

There, again, is Paschal Grousset, known to the literary world as "Philippe Daryl." He was minister of foreign affairs for the brief government of the commune, and was sentenced to penal servitude for life. Now he is chief editorial writer for Le Temps, the organ of the moneyed interests of Paris. How things change! A little prosperity is the infallible antidote for anarchy.

A dozen of the most influential members of the Paris common council were communists. So were the novelists Mathey and Hector Malot, and the famous sculptor Jules Dalou, and a rich and fashionable Paris doctor named Goupil. All are most conservative citizens.

Goodby, Drayton-Borrowe duel! Now the common, coarse soil of America will never drink any of the aristocratic blood of the gentlemen in high life who were talked about for at least a month. Mr. Borgowe and the honorable Mr. Milbank have folded their tents, like the Arabs, and "sneaked." They literally sneaked, for they sailed under false names. This side of the Atlantic knows them no more. It was a fit ending to them and their "honor." Mr. Milbank found this the most disgusting country he had ever visited; he did indeed. Instead of making a lion of this gentleman who had killed an indefinite number of husbands, brothers and fathers-in-law, the people of this beastly republic only laughed at him and his "honor." They sent him anonymous letters making fun of him. Not an American wife fell in love with him; not one. He will never visit our cold, unfeeling shores again. 'Tis sad.

The Boston Herald calls attention to a notable change in the administration of our colleges and universities. All the older institutions of learning were founded and controlled by some particular religious denomination, and at the head of each was in all cases placed a prominent clergyman of that denomination. The change is in the direction now of securing laymen instead of preachers for presidents of these institutions. Michigan university, Cornell, Harvard and Columbia, as well as Johns Hopkins, are marked instances of an in*stitution of learning attaining distin*guished success with a layman at the head. The duties of the president of a college are becoming more strictly administrative and such as require a keen knowledge of business.

THE HARRITY MEN WIN.

Lively Times at the Keystone State Convention.

CHEERS FOR GROVER CLEVELAND.

The Ex-President Indorsed by the Pennsylvania Democratic Convention, but Not Instructed to Vote for Any Particular Candidate—The Platform in Full.

HARRISBURG, April 14.—The Democratic state convention, one of the most exciting ones held here for years, closed at 7:25 o'clock Wednesday night. During the convention there was almost a riot at the stage entrance of the Opera House.

State Printer Meyer was in a scrimmage. He was struck with a cane and had a revolver drawn on him by Jack Fogarty, a Philadelphia pugilist, who was guarding the door. Fogarty thought Meyer had no ticket to the hall. Fogarty was arrested for assault. The resolutions adopted by the convention were as follows:

The Platform.

We, the Democracy of Pennsylvania in convention assembled, join with our political associates of other states in the effort to restore the control of the executive branch of the federal government to the party of the people. We pledge anew our fealty to the principles so declared by the illustrious men who founded our free institutions and established the Democratic party to protect and preserve them. We believe in the doctrines which has been taught and the practices which have been enforced in the administration of the government of Thomas Jefferson and Andrew Jackson by Samuel J. Tilden and Grover Cleveland. We believe in and we declare for honest and economical administration, for local self government, for honest money, the gold and silver coinage of the constitution and for a currency convertible into such coinage without loss; for that genuine civil service reform which recognizes public office as a public trust, for liberal but not reckless pensions and for the speedy abatement of all forms of needless and oppressive taxation. With special relation to the pending political conditions in the country and commonwealth we resolve and declare:

First—That we demand a tariff reform now demanded of the federal legislature is the reform of the tariff laws upon the basis of the Democratic principles of tariff for revenue to the end that no money shall be needlessly exacted from the industries and necessities of the people; and that our industrial interests shall not be prejudiced by excessive taxation, false systems of taxation, or extravagant modes of collection. To this end the McKinley tariff bill should be repealed, the essential raw materials of American manufactures should be put upon the free list and a revised tariff should be adopted, with due regard for the rights of American labor and the preservation of our manufactures.

Second—That, consistent with this issue and with the demand, the sentiment of the Pennsylvania Democracy is overwhelmingly for the renomination to the presidency of the man who gave to his party intellectual and political leadership and to the country a pure and elevated administration. We declare our convictions that the best interests of the party and of the country demand the nomination and election of Grover Cleveland as president, and we are confident that under his leadership the principles of Democracy will win a glorious victory; and to the end that the vote and influence of Pennsylvania may be most effectively heard and felt, the delegates this day chosen are directed to act as a unit in all matters intrusted to their charge, and action to be determined by the vote of the majority of the delegates.

Praise for Pattison.

Third—That the honest, courageous and efficient administration of Robert E. Pattison, governor of Pennsylvania, merits the approval and confidence of the people of the commonwealth, and has the hearty commendation of the party whose standard he bears, and we declare, victory, that his efforts to enforce the constitution and the laws are praiseworthy and patriotic and have our unqualified approval.

Fourth—That the action of the Republican state senate in evading the duty of pronouncing judgment upon faithless state officials was a cowardly subterfuge and a disgraceful violation of public duty.

Fifth—That in accordance with the recommendation of the national Democratic committee, the Democratic state committee and city committees are advised and directed to further by every means in their power an organization of regular Democratic societies in every district and the union of such societies in one Democratic society of Pennsylvania and the national association of Democratic clubs.

Resolved, That we cordially approve the action of the Democratic national committee in selecting William F. Harrity to fill the vacancy in the Democratic national committee caused by the death of the late William L. Scott; and we hereby declare Mr. Harrity to be the choice of the Democracy of Pennsylvania for the term of two years, and the Democratic national committee which begins a June next.

Cheers for Cleveland.

The reading of the platform commanded respectful attention and there was great cheering at the mention of the names of Cleveland and Pattison. When the platform had been read John M. Garman, of Berks, took the floor and on behalf of the minority offered a motion to strike out the second resolution and insert one giving instructions for Cleveland. He said that by agreement Mr. O'Brien, of Erie, would speak for the minority.

Mr. O'Brien said that he was opposed to the unit rule because his people were opposed to it. His people were for Grover Cleveland. They were for Robert E. Pattison for a second choice. But if Cleveland and Pattison should decline then the people of the northwestern part of the state wanted a chance to vote for their choice. Chairman Reid, of the resolutions committee, replied. He said no one could question his sincerity for Cleveland. The platform followed that of Massachusetts, whose fidelity to Cleveland no one could question. He thought the platform could be trusted more safely to Mr. Cleveland's friends than to the friends of Governor Hill.

AN APPEAL TO HARRISON.

Report That He Will Be Asked to Withdraw.

GEN. ALGER'S TERA IN MICHIGAN.

He Wants the Republican Delegation to Go to Minneapolis Uninstructed—Two-thirds Republicans Indorse the President—Whitney Wants Cleveland.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—One of the senators who are working for the nomination of Blaine said to a reporter: "Prominent Republicans, among them not only anti-Harrison men, but men who, while desiring Harrison, believe that even if nominated he cannot be elected, are preparing a letter asking the president to withdraw. The letter will be perfectly friendly and most respectful. It is a delicate subject, but we are honest in our belief that Harrison cannot be re-elected and for the reason we shall give in the letter the president will see it too, we believe. I can't tell just when the letter will be presented, except that it will be soon; upon that you can depend."

Vermont Republicans Meet.

MONTPELIER, Vt., April 14.—The Republican state convention re-elected the following delegates to the national convention: Hon. H. Henry Fowers, who will head the delegation to Minneapolis; L. D. Hasen, of St. Johnsbury; Colonel George Childs, of St. Albans, and Colonel F. E. Smith, of Montpelier. A platform favoring protection, honest money and indorsing President Harrison was adopted. At the close of the convention Hon. Thomas B. Reed was introduced and spoke briefly in his usual sarcastic manner. He said: "I don't believe the Republican party need fear defeat at the next election. The country is becoming every day more and more prosperous and prosperity can only be made sure by adherence to the Republican party.

"The Republican party believes in the average sense of the people of the United States—grand old common sense, the sons of the Republican party. Don't talk of Andrew Jackson and dead patriots, but living possibilities for the glorious future."

Bay State Democrats Celebrate.

BOSTON, April 14.—The Young Men's Democratic club celebrated the anniversary of the birth of Thomas Jefferson by a banquet at the American House. General John J. Corcoran presided. Governor Russell received a tremendous ovation and in response to calls for cheers for "The Next President," he was given cheer after cheer. Great applause also greeted the name of Cleveland, which Governor Russell was first to pronounce.

The governor spoke ably for tariff reform and in advocacy of lifting campaigns up to a serious discussion of public questions, dividing people upon principle and making victories mean something.

The governor was followed by Congressman Harter, whose speech was punctuated with frequent applause and his pointed reference to Senator Hill as a "political mountebank" was loudly cheered.

Whitney and Cleveland.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Ex-Secretary of the Navy William C. Whitney has started on a six weeks' trip to Europe. Just before his departure he said to a reporter:

"The only trouble with the Democratic party is the dissensions and possible bad blood. For good or ill, the issue of the Democratic party at the present time is tariff reform. The battle of 1892 has to be fought upon this issue, which was framed and put to the front by Mr. Cleveland. It seems to me from looking over the field that the people will not be satisfied without he is made their leader in the campaign."

Assassination Threatened.

COHOES, N. Y., April 14.—Candidate John T. Gorman, one of the Democratic candidates for mayor, claims that he is elected by 300 majority, which includes the Fourth ward, the one from which the ballot boxes were taken. There is a sense tional rumor that if Mayor Garside, the present incumbent, attempts to act at the last meeting of the common council next Tuesday evening when the vote will be canvassed, he will be assassinated. It is said that Garside will vote with the Republicans to seat Strong, the Republican candidate for mayor.

This action will be taken for the purpose of testing the law. General Alger will make a speech, as it is his desire that the Michigan delegation be sent to Minneapolis next June uninstructed.

COELHO GOES TO WASHINGTON.

He Will Fight the Brazilian Minister for an Alleged Insult.

NEW YORK, April 14.—Colonel Antonio Hilario de Paula da Coelho has gone to Washington with the avowed purpose of acting up Brazilian Minister da Mendonca if he does not retract the statement that he was a negro, and if he succeeds in getting into the official presence of Minister da Mendonca that gentleman is likely to have a very large sized fracas on his hands. Senator da Coelho's lawyer, Henry M. Heymann, also of Temple Court, tried to dissuade his client from his journey, but the big Brazilian's honor demanded his presence in Washington.

"You try to keep me back," he cried. "Not so! I will go to Senhor da Mendonca and I will pull him all around hees office by an nose!" With this declaration Colonel Coelho was off, and his friends are now anxiously awaiting news from the seat of war. They are certain that the colonel will carry out his threat. Da Coelho and da Mendonca have long been political and personal enemies. Both are of good family and da Mendonca's statement that da Coelho is a mulatto is absolutely untrue.

Thinks Coelho Is Crazy.

WASHINGTON, April 14.—Minister da Mendonca thinks da Coelho is crazy and will have him locked up if he makes any trouble in Washington. He denies that he had ever called Coelho a negro. No challenge has been received and none is expected at the legation.

GONE WITH THE BANK'S CASH.

Bookkeeper Wiltshire's Shortage Is Said to Be About $100,000.

NEW YORK, April 14.—It is exactly five months to a day—on Nov. 14, 1891—that the United States National bank, in Wall street, ascertained that it had been robbed by a trusted clerk, but the story has just been made public. At noon time on that day Harry Cecil Wiltshire, one of the clerks of the bank, went out to lunch at noon time and did not come back. He is a defaulter. The amount of his stealings, according to street men, is upward of $100,000. The vice president of the bank, Dr. Parker, says that the total sum aggregates only $30,072.94, of which, Dr. Parker says, the bank expects to recover $8,700.

Wiltshire was about thirty years old. He was a single man and a member of the Seventh Regiment Veteran club and made his home at the club house of the Seventh Regiment Veteran organization. Fifth avenue and Fifty-eighth street. He had been a clerk in the United States National bank for about eight years.

Vice President Parker said Wiltshire was under suspicion before he ran away and that his books were being overhauled at the time. It was the fear that the expert accountant was getting pretty hot in his search probably caused him to fly.

HOW ONE MOTHER DRESSES HER BRIGHT AND HEALTHY BABY.

Hundreds of letters of inquiry have come to me concerning the way my baby is dressed, and I am happy to respond to these inquiries by saying that she is clothed in such a manner that every organ has perfect freedom to expand and grow as God and nature intended.

For the first two weeks of her life she wore the band until the naval healed, but no longer. After that her wardrobe consisted of one little princess silk flannel, high necked and long sleeved, thirty inches in length; another garment is silk flannel, just like the first, without sleeves and thirty-two inches in length, and her little dimity and muslin dresses thirty-six inches long. Her diapers are of absorbent Jersey cloth, which I find far better and warmer than linen.

For very cold days I add to the above a very fine ribbed wool undervest in preference to outside jackets and pinning blankets. There are no white cotton or linen skirts, and no undergarments with bands about the body. Everything is of flannel and perfectly loose. The result of this kind of clothing is absolutely perfect health. A more vital and muscular child of three months could not be found in the United States. She is able to lift herself, turn from side to side and hold her body perfectly erect without assistance. She has raised her head unaided since she was two hours old.

Some women will no doubt exclaim, How wonderful! but I do not regard what little vitality is shown to be the result of such carelessness was greater. The sense of scrambling is just as annoying; the absence of forethought is as manifest.

A good workwife needs no mean equipment of faculties, both intellectual and moral; and ill housewifery has the smirch of disgrace belonging to slothfulness and selfishness, to want of consideration for others, and to want of regard to duty all through her work.

It has become the fashion to vilify housekeeping as beneath the consideration of a fine mind and an heroic temper. It is the "button" beyond which the gifted soul must soar to be worthy of its talents. History belies this high stepping theory. English women were never grander than they were in the days when they were practical housekeepers and the active rulers of the household—when sex determined function; and that man was most honorable who did his most valuable work in the world with most vigor; that woman most lovesworthy who performed her womanly duties with most thoroughness and conscientiousness.

Expert Advice About Gloves.

I had just given my glove number, with the slightly superior air I always assume on that occasion, knowing full well that very few women wear 5½, and was looking about with the studied, unconscious ease that belongs with the air, when the man waiting on me returned with the box.

"Five and a half is the smallest we keep," he said, as she handed out a pair of that number.

"You used to have them," I returned, "for I have bought them here; I must have the same for the time being I am small."

Mentally they wrinkle," and I put out for her inspection a glove that even I, though unwilling to acknowledge it, could see was well fitting. Though I am sometimes compelled to wear them, but there is no call for them nowadays. Fashions have changed, and a perfect fit is not what it is considered the proper thing to be. I tried on the first one, or a leaf fit if you will take the first button with comfort. I have sold gloves to ladies who have told me afterward that on the first few occasions when they wore their gloves they were so tight that their hands became numb, and the fleshy portion was purple from the tension. I always tell them to be careful and look well at the same time be sure that the hand is entirely at ease without the aggravating stitch and stamp. The tips of the fingers of the glove should be shorter than the fingers of the hand, and the first button must close with perfect ease, without drawing the skin in the slightest degree, unless they have their gloves tried on here, drag them on by main strength, and then complain if they tear.

"Your glove should be free from moisture, and then the glove must be worked on gently. The four fingers put on first, making sure that the tips of the fingers go to the tips of the gloves. It is carelessness in this direction that is the cause of the brownstone appendages on so many gloves. When this is done, like little Jack Horner, put in your thumb and pull down the glove well before commencing to button it. Button the second button first, as in this manner the glove is kept smooth and the buttonhole from splitting. When you take them off turn down the wrist and pull them. Leave them turned wrong side out if you have occasion to wear them. When they are dry turn them and stretch them out in a glove box. Will you look at my hand? I say that with no pun? Five and a half is really your size."

"Five and a half, then, please," I meekly answered, as I held up my hand to be fitted.—Philadelphia Times.

How Should Mothers Punish?

It is a vexed question, this of punishing children. On the one hand it seems accordingly thing for a man to punish a little boy or a woman to fall upon a little girl. It is a mystery to the writer how ally parents who love her child can ever take her hand against it. On the other hand, the child which is not corrected soon becomes forward, peevish, tiresome—in short, spoiled.

What is to be done?

The old iron clad methods of punishment are fast passing away. There is a vast change in public sentiment since Solomon's day. The "rod is spared" these days by humane parents; so are the dark closet and other methods. So also the gentle reproofs, the chiding looks, the deprivation of treats, accomplish the much to be desired result? Are children better behaved than of yore?

There may not be so much outward fear of their elders; there may be less awe and reverence; fewer outward and visible signs of an inward respect for authority; but surely there is less inward, corroding rebellion. While children may not love their parents any more, they are on better terms with them than formerly. The father who is chummy with his boy, who gets down to that eager, inquiring, restless little soul and explains, visits and encourages, does not need to use a stern god or buy a bonus baby to secure obedience. And the mother who sympathizes, chatters and plays with her children can keep her office open on her face and her hairbrush on the dressing table.

The bullying off of children is a fruitful source of disobedience. They need love, tenderness and sympathy as much as fowers need air and sunshine. It is sometimes necessary to be severe, but such occasions are rather well the method themself.—A Mother in New York World.

Two People Should Not Sleep Together.

Persons often ask, "Is it healthful for two persons to sleep in the same bed?" This same question is varied three "Is it healthful for a man and a very young person to sleep together? If not, which suffers most, the aged or the young person?" We have often answered this question in a general way, but as the first question is the most important, and as it is often positively offensive to the nostrils of a person with an unimpaired sense of smell, especially one who is just coming in from outdoors into the fresh, pure air has been breathed.

The poisonous character of this under the lungs. When this is done, like little more likely to affect the susceptible constitution of a child than that of an adult. In elderly persons, the amount of the impurities in the air breathed is not so great as in young persons, consequently, while both persons would be more or less injured, the proportion of injury to each would be greater to the young person than to the person of more advanced years. Mr. Travers, of the London hospital, has found that after having received wounds, especially of the lower limbs, heal much sooner when kept exposed to the open air, instead of being covered by bandages. He remarks that the air under the bedclothing is foul and almost hot, and hence likely to be very harmful to wounds with which it may come in contact.—Exchange.

Anna Katharine Green.

Anna Katharine Green was born in Brooklyn, where her father occupied important positions as a lawyer, a politician and a journalist. At the age of ten she wrote her little playmates, published a pamphlet written under her direction, she thus becoming an editress at that age. The pamphlet was passed from one customer to another at "five cents a read." Miss Green's first ambition was to write poetry, and although she cultivated the poetic muse with she was still extremely young, yet her verses appeared in several of the leading magazines. Later she tried a story, and spent two years upon it. That story was published in 1878, and made her reputation in two months. It was the great "The Leavenworth Case." Since then published a number of novels, all of which have eagerly accepted for by the public. Miss Green was married to Mr. Charles Rohlfs, and shortly after removed to Buffalo.

She is of slight build, has brown hair and thoughtful gray eyes, and is of a very modest disposition. The mental concentration produced by her work gives to her features a look of great intensity. Her mind is a strange and powerful combination of romantic imagination and rigorous logic.—New York Ledger.

A World for Constant Study.

Now almost everything is changed, with more or less accuracy and the journey is generally speeding. Modern history is luminous and cure come animus and preacher, while the putting up in this way of various meats a great variety of vegetables and fruits at all seasons of the year is a most important addition to the comforts of human population.

It is the one thing sometimes to meet at the whole subject of canned goods and the part which they now play in the domestic economy, but a matter is neither argument nor necessarily to be treated as such. Only a little care and dedication the choice products of our gardens or fields, freshly gathered and perfectly served in its prime: no is there any mistake in the making of such dinner, carefully selected in every department and skillfully cooked by an accomplished housewife. But unfortunately there are a great many it's and happenings which stand in the way of these meals all the year round and under all circumstances. There are a great many times in almost every household when the best and most accomplished mistress welcome and want the "canned stuff," and is devoted by thankful for its assistance in the economy of meal. As a rule it is wholesome, far from expensive and of uniformity and excellence of quality which is quite remarkable.—Newton Norton in Good Housekeeping.

Dainty Wash Cloths.

Every one needs wash cloths, for after one's face has been exposed to the wind and dust, nothing is so refreshing as soap and water, and for delicate skins the linen mittens or diaper is found to be the most suitable material. A set of a dozen most attractive looking wash cloths may be obtained in this way by a woman who has everything about her toilet as refined, dainty and neat as it can be made, and who will work out of fine quality of linen birdseye, one a quarter of a yard square, and worn hemmed very narrowly and by hand, of course. Torchon lace, three-quarters of an inch wide, whipped on the edge, and looped by an eye to make a little frill, edged these cloths all around. In one corner of each were the owner's initials neatly embroidered.

To cut them to best advantage it is well to select yard wide linen, and if a dozen in the summer required a yard will cut them nearly, dividing it into twelve equal squares. Twenty yards of lace will be required to trim them. Instead of giving one's towel rack an untidy look as the Turkish ones are apt to supply it, these dainty affairs only add to the attractiveness of it.—New York Tribune.

A Sand Heap in the Nursery.

A mother, whose children were inconsolable when each autumn they gave up the sand of the seashore for a playmate, had a carpenter make for the nursery a sand table with a box top and a sliding cover like that of a paint box. The dimensions of the table were 27 inches in height, the length of the top 30 inches, the width of the top 25 inches, the depth of the box 5 inches. The table was painted brown as I the box lined with zinc. Into the box sand was then ordered and the box was filled with it. In the sand the toy trees grew and flourished and cities were built, dolls were reared. Islands and rivers and figures were traced and the definitions of geography made clear. This box table has found a place in some of the hospitals for children. It is a heavy nursery resource for children when from any cause pumps and outdoor play are out of the question.—New York Post.

Fish Culture.

Pick enough cold cooked fish to please to make a pint; sprinkle it with a teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper; add a tablespoonful of minced parsley; put a teacupful of cream or milk in a double boiler over the fire; rub a tablespoonful of butter and three large spoonfuls of flour together; when the milk is hot stir this in with two tablespoonfuls of hot milk and add it to the rest of the milk; as soon as it reaches the boiling point, stirring constantly, until it is thick, take from the fire, add the beaten yolks of two eggs, and salt and pepper to taste; mix and turn out on a platter to cool. Then cut into cubes. Dip in beaten egg, then in bread or cracker crumbs and fry in very hot fat, enough to cover. Cress or lemon pickles make a pretty garnish.—Ingall's Home Magazine.

How to Blow Soap Bubbles.

Professor T. O'Conner Sloan, in the course of a recent lecture on electricity, told his young audience how to blow soap bubbles. In substance his directions were: Take a lamp chimney, one which is not cracked or dirty, dip one end into a solution of soap and water until a fair disk of film covers the end. Blow gently till the bubble is started. Then remove the chimney about two inches from the disk and continue blowing gently. In this way giant bubbles can be blown without exhausting the blower. The addition of a little glycerin to the soap and water is very advantageous.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Women Martyrs.

A great many Russian ladies of high rank have been martyrs to the nihilists' cause and suffered the extreme penalty of death. Two ladies of the family of Vera Filipovitch, the former hanged, the latter dead in exile; Vera Figner, who died a prisoner in the terrible dungeons of Schlusselburg, on Lake Ladoga, for being a leader of the gang that assassinated General Strelnikoff, and the sisters Lubovtovitch, now suffering an existence worse than death in the mines of Siberia.—St. Petersburg Letter.

Women and Maids.

"It is a puzzle to me," writer Butterfield in his publication, "Fashion Notes," "that men, of all the creatures of the mind of man the noblest, most beautiful, most refined and spiritual, is so unattainable by women," who in a compound of all these qualities. "And when you reflect you will remember that we haven't any feminine Beethoven, Mozart, Mendelssohn or Verdi.

The Enemy of the Home.

How many homes are there in which the mother of the family can lie down to rest at night, assured that before morning one of the little ones will not be stricken down by an enemy more stealthy than the midnight assassin—the deadly sewer gases that emanate from our plumbing?

Lady O'Brien,

the wife of the governor of Newfoundland, is much interested in the wives and children of the men engaged upon that coast in the fishing industry, and has formed a small society to work up material into suitable clothing for her protegés.

Women have learned that the discussion of the great questions of the day from different points of view means to the matrons what the college course means to the young women, a broader outlook and a higher standard of intelligence.

A VISIT TO VENICE.

AS TOLD BY THE REV. DR. HURLBUT IN THE METHODIST CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

A Large Audience, Despite the Storm, Accompany the Gifted Speaker Stereoscopically to the Beautiful City in the Sea.

N illustrated lecture was given last evening in the Methodist church by Rev. Dr. J. L. Hurlbut. Despite the severe storm, it attracted a large audience.

The lecturer presented a fine collection of stereoscopic views, and related much that was of interest in connection with his visit a year or so ago to the remarkable city, as he explained the views.

What most strikes the visitor on alighting at a railroad station in Venice, said the lecturer, is that instead of a salesman to take him to his hotel, he is hailed by a gondolier, all the transportation about the city being in gondolas. These are used both for business and pleasure. They are propelled by one oar, which remains always in the water at the stern of the boat, and the propulsion is by a twisting motion which the gondolier seems to perform with great ease.

The gondoliers dress in white and appear neat and trim. When they hail you to take a ride, just as a salesman would, their voices sound shrill and harsh. They are not disagreeable persons, however, and, although there is a steam launch which will take the entire length of the grand canal in fifteen minutes, if you wish to see the beautiful palaces on the banks of the canal it is best to take a gondola. The gondolier calls out the name of each palace as you pass.

These palaces line the banks of the grand canal and seem to rise out of the sea. The canal extends more than the form of an S, according to a diagram which was cast upon the screen.

The lecturer took his hearers into the market, into most noted palaces, describing their extraordinary magnificence, incurred by each generation during the time this old city has existed.

There is a tradition that the city was founded by seven men who escaped from persecution in a neighboring locality. It is a very old city, and was a great power even in the middle ages.

In the Market place it is very interesting to study the faces and hear the voices. The language as they speak it is very musical, and entirely unlike what you hear from those who dig ditches in this country. They sing well and numerous quartettes and double quartettes move about the grand canal evenings making very sweet music.

One of the most important of the one hundred or more churches in the city is St. Mark's in St. Mark's place. The foundation of the present edifice was laid in 977.

The lecturer's detailed description of this edifice, with the views, gave a vivid idea of its beauty, and the same was the case with the ducal palace, and the palace of Robert Browning, who gave $125,000 for it.

The lecture closed about ten o'clock.

BREVITIES

—Two hackmen were fined three dollars each by City Judge Codington this morning, for fighting.

—Passengers from New York report that several inches of snow covered the ground between Westfield and New York this morning.

—A number of small boys were arraigned before City Judge Codington this morning on the charge of trespassing on vacant lots. The City Judge reprimanded and discharged them.

—There will be a committee at Hope chapel Saturday afternoon to receive and arrange flowers for Easter. Friends of the chapel who have flowers to send or potted plants which they will loan for Easter may send them Saturday to the chapel.

—A large brood of chickens and a couple of sable squirrels in one of the show windows of Randolph's pharmacy monopolize the attention of passers by. After passing that window the beautiful flowers in the opposite one delay them—willingly. Again.

—The report going around the State to the effect that the money voted at the Oasis of Newark last Tuesday was for the benefit of the Trinity Reformed Church of Plainfield is incorrect, as the Trinity Reformed Church of Newark, not Trinity Church of Plainfield being fortunate enough to require so much aid.

—What will the little lady have next? "The baby-house, sir, the baby-house!" What man, woman or child does not recall this well-flavored question and answer which, unlike the ordinary wine of the circus rung, grows mellow with age and as pleasant to the performers as the clown himself. Is there any one living in this glorious country who has not heard the talented clown deliver himself of the first sentence made by any human master of the ring respond with the second? This produce is offered in the nature of an apology; for the use of the sentences in print certainly shows a lack of confidence in the discriminating estimate of the beloved public's taste. The B. F. Keith's, we will admit after digesting the preceding items, that there is ample excuse for the writer's seeming misjudgment. There is a "little lady" whom everybody loves, and that will she have next? There is a clown and a ringmaster; there is a circus too; there is also a "manner" and the little lady's name is Henry. The "Circus" advertisement elsewhere will give particulars.

THE ORGAN RECITAL.

It was a Grand Success—A Large Number Present.

Notwithstanding the storm a large number of people were present at the First Baptist church last evening to listen to the free organ recital given by Mr. W. J. MacClymont, the organist of the church. The affair was very satisfactory to those present. Mr. MacClymont was assisted by the "Queen City Quartette," which was composed of the following gentlemen: Edward E. Ryder, first tenor; W. O. Chapman, second tenor; W. E. MacClymont, first bass; W. G. Pitman, second bass.

The programme was as follows:

J. S. Bach—"Toccata and Fuga," in D minor.
Mendelssohn—Andante, from Sonata No. 6.
D. Buck—Male quartette—"Summer Night."
Wagner—Bridal Chorus, from "Lohengrin."
J. Lemmens—March Pontificale.
H. W. Parker—Pastorale in F, op. 31, No. 3
D. Buck—Male quartette—"Lullaby."
Wenham Smith—"Desdemona"—1st, and Variations.
Van Weber—Finale, from Sonata No. 1.
Arranged for organ by W. E. MacClymont.

PERSONAL.

Maria Peacock, wife of Mr. Benjamin A. Mumford, died at her home on Arlington avenue this morning.

Mrs. E. H. Spooner of Grove street, will remove to Brooklyn, next week, where she expects to reside permanently.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Miller, of West Fifth street are just now trying to decide the future career of their son. This problem of the future the young man doesn't care a snap of his little chubby fingers about, being just at present interested in finding out what sort of a world this is anyhow. He has only been here about a week and is a sturdy, promising little fellow. Mrs. Miller used to be known as Miss Kitty Case, and is the daughter of Councilman Rufus K. Case.

Mr. E. L. Finch, of the Plainfield Board of Education, by advice of his physician, has with his family, been spending a short time at "The Chalfonte," kept by Messrs. Roberts & Son, at Atlantic City, and speaks very well of it. Mr. Finch says he gained eleven pounds in two weeks. How much he needed this extra weight may be judged when it is known how light he is, weighing only two hundred and thirty pounds. He was not always as light as this. The strip last Fall pulled him down. The doctor said he needed "change and rest." Mr. Finch says laughingly, "I followed the doctor's advice, but the waiters got the "change" and the landlord got the "rest." This is only by way of a joke, however, as he speaks very highly of the hotel.

Mr. Samuel Hudson of Somerset street, who died about six o'clock Wednesday evening, is to be buried in Greenwood to-morrow. His death at eighty-three years of age is considered due to injuries he received by slipping on an icy sidewalk some two years ago. He fell forward and bones of chest and ribs were fractured. His lower extremities were covered from the shock. He leaves a wife, two sons and four daughters, all but one being married. The unmarried one being one of the young teachers in the North Plainfield Public School. Another daughter is the wife of Dr. Miller of Asbury Park. Mr. Hudson settled in North Plainfield twenty-three years ago, coming from Staten Island. He was engaged in the business of refining oil. Small lots, which were bought out by the Standard Oil Company. Some of the family returned to Brooklyn and settled down after marriage. On a portion of Mr. Hudson's property is a valuable clay deposit for brickmaking, which was carried on there for years.

BOWLING LAST NIGHT.

ONE of the most interesting bowling contests ever held on the alleys of the Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society took place there last evening. "WHEN I WAS A BOY."

WHAT THE MAYOR OF NORTH PLAINFIELD TOLD THE BOYS' CLUB.

And How the Boys Received his Tale.—Reports Read and Officers Elected.—Mr. Miner's Resignation and Successor.

F all audiences to address probably the most trying for a speaker is one composed of boys. The are appreciative, skeptical, demonstrative and not all backward in expressing their opinion.

An official meeting of the Boys' Club was held in their rooms last evening. About one hundred boys were present. There were clean boys, dirty boys, colored boys, white boys, medium, ragged, well clothed, and big and little boys. Their ages varied, judging by appearances, between ten and fifteen years. All were bright eyed, intelligent appearing youngsters, with a look about them showing that contact with the world had rubbed off the nursery innocence, and to use a common phrase "had cut their eye teeth."

It was this squirming, wriggling, bubbling mass of explosive humanity that his honor, Mr. Saunders the Mayor of North Plainfield, was to address, as announced by the president, Mr. Wm. R. Wadsworth. A few words of the extra steam of the audience was let off at the mention of Mr. Saunders name, in a burst of applause, cat calls and stamping of feet. There was no doubt of the mayor's popularity there.

After waiting, with unconcealed impatience, yet quietly withal, while the business of the evening was transacted, the boys again uncorked when the mayor arose to address them.

He told them he had intended telling them "a moving story of the good little boy who never did anything worse than take jam out of the closet, and who grew up good, and of the bad little boy who did not, but as the president had said almost all the boys were good, he would tell them instead of something he did when he was a boy." He then, in language suited to the understanding of his hearers, told them of turtle hunting on the coast of the gulf of Mexico. The mayor is a capital raconteur and he held the interest of the big and little boys alike from beginning to end. He struck the first 'snag', though, when he mentioned the size of the green turtle, which is, of course, immense, being about seven feet long and weighing from four to five hundred pounds weight.

This seemed a little too strong for the boys who expressed their disbelief by ejaculating, "oh," "what yeh givin us," "whee!" with other amusing cries. The speaker and the green part of the audience "got even" not at all put out, however, but speedily convinced them that there were things in this world they did not know of. He refused to vouch, however, for the story of the "sucker-fish, which, when a rope is attached to it, will bring a turtle and clinging to it, both are drawn in." Snickers greeted this also. (The rumors, whose originator dosed it, is converted into a large sucking disk, is credited with this use.)

The wonderful vitality of the turtle was also explained. Altogether, from beginning to end, Mr. Saunders held them of the deepest interest, and made use in a way calculated to instruct as well as amuse.

Before Mr. Saunders addressed the boys the retiring superintendent, Mr. Miner, who has faithfully and ably filled the office, helped toward the success of the club, read his report. The president commented on Mr. Miner's good work, regretting his resignation, which is on account of musical obligations, and introduced Mr. Miner's successor, who will take charge May 1.

PRESBYTERY OF NEW BRUNSWICK.

Commissioners to the General Assembly and Standing Committees Appointed.

The second day's session of the New Brunswick Presbytery was called to order in the First Presbyterian church in Trenton yesterday morning by moderator Rev. George H. Ingram, who led in devotional exercises. The minutes of Tuesday's session were read and approved. The time having arrived for the election of commissioners to the General Assembly the following were elected: Revs. Dr. Green, of Princeton; Dr. Dickey, of Trenton, and Horace Beasman, of Mt. Holly. Alternates, Revs. Dr. Warfield, of Princeton; J. S. Kennedy, of Trenton, and T. S. Young, Dayton. Elders, Messrs. Elias Yeomeller, of Trenton; John K. Burd, Pennington, and Hastings Dunn, of Trenton. Alternates, David Lawshe, of Stockton; Wilson Thomas, of Milford, and Franklin Dye, of Trenton.

It was decided to defer the reports of the boards usually made at the April meeting until the June meeting.

The following overture was sent to the General Assembly: That such inquiry be made into the management of the temporalities of our congregations by means of boards of trustees, as the overture has already been adopted by the Presbyteries of Pittsburg and Jersey City.

Rev. Dr. Mosier read obituary notices of Revs. Dr. Allen, Joseph R. Evans and Robert Hamilton. Resolutions were adopted in favor of Sunday closing at the World's Fair.

Framingham was chosen as the place for the October meeting. The date of the Fall meeting was changed to Friday, April 22, at 9.15 a. m., in the Second church. The June meeting will be held at the same time.

The standing committees were appointed at yesterday's session.

The Popular Entertainment Meets with Success.

The first in a series of popular entertainments to be given from time to time under the auspices of the Plainfield Reform Club, occurred at their hall last evening. Owing to the inclemency of the weather the attendance was not as large as it would have been under more favorable conditions.

The evening's programme was an excellent one every way, as was shown by the enthusiasm of the audience and the interest evinced in the respective participants engaged for their entertainment.

Miss Ollie Blanchard captured the house by her vocal renditions, her selections being inspiring and elevating. A response was in order in each instance.

Mr. Ed. Medlicott rendered tickled the fancies of his auditors and kept them in the height of humor with his dialect selections, which were well spiced and full of freshness and originality. Mr. MacDonald will be welcome when he comes again.

As a serio-comic singer, Mr. Geo. Rehill was par excellence, the drollery, wit and jollity of the Irish character shining through all his efforts, highly favored with the encoring he received, and twice brogue of the Green Isle. For each he responded Georgie—Pat, and almost said Pat—and he was compelled to make his bow four different times.

Mr. J. Leslie Gossin was at his best, his full and well-modulated voice doing excellent work in his dramatic impersonations, which were of a high order and full of energy, pathos and fire.

Mr. Charles Smith, who is the possessor of a voice of large compass, was much in demand during the evening. His selections were of the best and brought forth hearty compliments. He has a brilliant tenor voice.

Mr. John Carney was, as usual, in his element as a German dialect comedian. He did full justice to his Teutonic friend "Fritz," portraying him with all his peculiarities, fresh, hale and hearty from the Fatherland.

Mr. Frank A. Coghill was all that could be desired as a pianist and accompanist, his work throughout being that of a master-hand with exact nicety of execution.

All in all, the entertainment last evening was very happily presided, reflecting evident credit upon the management.

—Messrs. Gossin and Carney—and will be long remembered as one of the best evenings spent at the walls of Reform Hall. The entertainment will be repeated next Monday evening for the benefit of those who were unable to attend last night.

Somerset Co. Republicans in Conference.

The meeting of Republicans of Somerset county to convene in the Union League club rooms, for conference, last evening was well attended, not withstanding the storm.

Ex-Senator Thompson presided and remarks were made by ex-Judge Ulrich, of Plainfield, Dr. Garrett, ex-Mayor Place, E. M. Fountain, H. J. Martin and H. N. Spencer of North Plainfield, Mr. Taylor of Bound Brook, Capt. G. J. Cook of Somerville and others.

The object of the meeting was in favor of promoting the early organization of clubs throughout the country.

The meeting was adjourned to Monday evening, April 25th, at same place.

—Butter still lower is the announcement made by the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association to-day.

HUDSON—In North Plainfield, April 13, 1892, Samuel Hudson, in his 83d year. Funeral services at his late residence, No. 7 Somerset street, North Plainfield, Saturday, April 16th, at 10 o'clock a. m.

They robbed the Southern express safe of several thousand dollars, estimated from $6,000 to $10,000 a lot of New York exchange and a package of tickets. The authorities at Jackson have been notified, as well as those of adjoining towns, and bloodhounds will be placed on the track of the robbers.

Snow in Newark.

Newark, N. J. April 15, (Special.)—Three inches of snow fell here last night and much damage to crops is reported by the farmers nearby.

What Mrs. Willard Thinks of the Salvation Army.

The following letter to the National W. C. T. U., has been received by Mrs. Ballington Booth; the Commander of the Salvation Army:

I am so much of a believer in the Salvation Army and rejoice so greatly in what you are doing, that I send these words out of a fervent heart. While others are asleep on the brink of a great crisis, you are wide awake, alert, and helpful. While others speak about organizing this work, you have actually taken hold of them with warm, kind hand. While others propose an army, yours is on the field and in full force of the enemy. While still another class have reached the point of helping the masses as it would have been under more favorable conditions.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The movement for an international bank is progressing. Some of the great capitalists of the country are among the incorporators. The bank will have its headquarters at Washington or New York, with branches in Mexico, Central and South America and the West Indies. Fifteen of the twenty-five directors must be American citizens.

It is well that the congressional committee will investigate the monstrous sweating system in our large American cities. The method under which clothing manufacturers give out work to contractors, who in turn have it done by the piece by wretched women at starvation wages, was imported into this country from the most miserable quarters of European cities. A curse upon the merchant and the contractor goes with every garment thus made. The system is one of the foulest blots on the good name of our republic. No African slavery was ever crueler. The methods by which the villainous contractors get work out of the wretched women have given rise to the name "sweating." Unfortunately, some of the leading merchants of the country permit their work to be done in this way. What good they or the contractors expect from money thus obtained it would be interesting to know.

Monkey Talk.

He really believes, does Mr. R. L. Garner, that monkeys have an articulate language, and he tells us so in The Forum. He has conversed with monkeys many a time, especially those of the capuchin species, and is charmed with the soft, rich, flutelike tones that they utter.

Mr. Garner's method of translating the monkey language is by the use of a phonograph. He has one of these machines close to where a monkey is delivering an oration and the sound waves are recorded by the delicate apparatus, to be reproduced when Garner desires to experiment with them. One part of his investigation is remarkable. He has been successful in making a record of monkey laughter. It has been insisted that man is the only animal who can laugh visibly and audibly. Mr. Garner has proved that a monkey can laugh as well as man, and worst of all that a monkey's laughter is even identical with man's. What are we but monkeys, anyway? For the simian laughter is blended with that of the human the experimenter explains:

I simply take a record of a monkey laughing, while the cylinder is revolving at the highest rate of speed to which I can go, reducing it to a very low rate I lengthen the sound waves and lowerthe pitch to that of human laughter, and find them to be identical in all respects except volume.

This is rough on us. At present date Mr. Garner has advanced in his learning of the monkey language so far as understanding how a monkey says no. Further, he finds that a monkey's affection is very warm and lasting. We commend this fact to those who have been disappointed in human affection.

Michigan's New Departure.

At the coming presidential election Michigan will cast her vote for electors by districts as the state has twelve congressional districts. Each of these will choose one presidential elector, exactly as a congressman is now chosen. For the remaining two electors the state is divided into eastern and western districts, and each of these will choose by vote one elector. Thus Michigan's presidential electors will not be all on one side, but part will be Democratic, part Republican, perhaps one or two even Alliance men, if the independent voters of a district so decide. The operation of this method will be watched with deep interest by the other states.

Governor Edwin B. Winans, of Michigan, contributes to The North American Review a paper in explanation of the reasons for being with which the new law introduced itself. It is not an innovation, he reminds us, or a violation of the United States constitution. It is merely a return to what was the intention of those who framed the United States constitution. The legislature of a state has full power to provide the method whereby electors shall be chosen. In 1828 electors were chosen by the district system in Maine and in New York. At the time of the adoption of the constitution nominating conventions were unknown. Each presidential elector was left free to exercise his judgment in his ballot in the electoral college, and the one who voted for anybody but the party nominee would not have been considered a traitor or an outlaw worthy of death.

Governor Winans declares in favor of the district system because it will show the real will of the people. In a state where political sentiment is evenly divided both sides will be represented in the electoral college. Certain states, as New York, for instance, will be robbed of their overweening importance in presidential years and cease to be the scene of bribery and bitter contention. President Madison said in a letter written in 1823 that the district system was the one in view when the constitution was framed. "If popular sentiment in a state is divided, her electoral vote ought to be divided, be the result what it may."

ITALY'S DAMAGES PAID.

The New Orleans Lynchings Cost Us 125,000 Francs.

DIPLOMATIC RELATIONS RENEWED.

King Humbert Glad to Hear That the President Believed It Our Solemn Duty That a Satisfactory Indemnity Should Be Paid—The News of Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The following is the correspondence with which the incident of the New Orleans massacre—leading to a temporary suspension of diplomatic relations between the United States and Italy—was closed by Secretary Blaine and the Marquis Imperiali:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE,
WASHINGTON, April 13.

SIR—I congratulate you that the difficulty existing between the United States and Italy growing out of the lamentable massacre at New Orleans in March of last year, is about to be terminated. The president, feeling that for such an injury there should be ample indemnity, instructs me to tender you 125,000 francs. The Italian government will distribute this sum among the families of the victims.

While the injury was not inflicted directly by the United States, the president nevertheless feels that it is the solemn duty as well as the great pleasure of the national government to pay a satisfactory indemnity. Moreover, the president's instructions carry with them the hope that the transaction of today may efface all memory of the unhappy tragedy; that the old and friendly relations of the United States and Italy may be restored, and that no more untoward may ever again occur to disturb their harmonious friendship.

I avail myself of this occasion to assure you that your prolonged service at this capital as charge d'affaires has been marked by every quality that renders you acceptable, and to the government of the United States and it is my pleasure to say that the action reached by the president would put an end to the unfortunate incident to which that deplorable occurrence gave rise, and that the friendly relations between the two countries would be firmly reestablished.

After having taken note, with much pleasure, of the language used by the president in his message of December last, and after having fully appreciated the words of regret and concern uttered with so much authority by the chief magistrate of the republic, and likewise the recommendations to congress that were suggested to his lofty wisdom by the unhappy incident, the government of his majesty is now glad to learn that the United States acknowledge that it is their solemn duty, and at the same time a great pleasure, to pay an indemnity to Italy.

The king's government does not hesitate to accept this friendly wish and, regardless of the judicial steps which it may be proper for the parties to take, and considering the redress obtained sufficient it sees no reason why the relations between the two governments, which relations should faithfully reflect the sentiments of cordiality, esteem and sympathy that animate the two nations, should not again become intimate, cordial and friendly as they have been in the past and as it is to be hoped they will ever be in the future.

Diplomatic Relations Re-established.

In bringing the foregoing to your knowledge, in virtue of the authorization given me by his excellency the Marquis di Rudini, president of the council and minister of foreign affairs, in the name of the government of his majesty, the king of Italy, my august sovereign, I have the honor to declare to you that the agency that the diplomatic relations between Italy and the United States are from this moment fully re-established.

I hasten, moreover, in obedience to instructions received, to inform you that pending the minister's return to this capital I have taken charge of the royal legation in the capacity of charge d'affaires. Be pleased to accept, etc.,

IMPERIALI.

Where the Money Came From.

The money which was paid to Marquis Imperiali was taken from the fund which is usually appropriated for the state department to be used in emergencies and for special and extraordinary purposes, such as the present. The fund for the current year amounted to $80,000, and has been drawn upon in addition to this $25,000 for expenses in Hawaii and Valparaiso during the Chilian controversy and to meet expenses connected with the Behring sea negotiations. It is impossible to say who will be sent to this capital at present, but the indications are that Baron Fava will not be returned to Washington.

Spicy Debate in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—The senate had a long and interesting debate on a bill to increase the number of judges of the court of claims, which brought up the question of the expediency of giving judges retiring pensions, and also involved a proposed reference to the increase in the number of judges of the supreme court just before the legal tender act was sustained. The discussion in the senate

RUSSIAN RELIEF WORK.

American Soup Kitchens for the Starving Peasants.

BACK FROM THE SHADOW OF DEATH

Thousands of Unfortunates Who Had Resigned Themselves to the Fate of Starvation Saved by the Food Supplies from Our Generous Hearted People.

ST. PETERSBURG, April 15.—The agents for the distribution of the relief supplies from America have opened soup kitchens in twenty-four districts. The peasants in those districts have been provided with seed potatoes, and corn has been supplied for 30,000 horses. The corn for cattle will be especially productive of good results, as in many districts they have been dying by thousands and the peasants have been thus deprived of means of cultivating the fields in the coming season. The people are soo weak from hunger and illness to do much field work, and had it not been for the present aid would have been obliged to leave the land untilled.

From the Grave's Brink.

In the province of Samara, for which much of the relief provision was destined, the suffering is described as terrible by the agents. Of a total population of 2,000,000 fully 1,500,000 are in want and 500,000 of these are on the verge of starvation. The distribution of the flour and other provisions has been accompanied by remarkable scenes. Peasants have fallen on the ground before the agents, kissing their hands and the hem of their coats.

Thousands who had resigned themselves to death roused themselves upon hearing news of the relief at hand, and crawled to the soup kitchens and places of distribution. Half of the people are almost without clothes, and many peasants come with their families of naked children to beg aid. In the smaller villages the meals now set before the poor are the first they have tasted for months.

Indifference and Corruption.

They were found living on grass, the bark of trees and the seeds of weeds

The roads to all the larger towns in Samara are thronged with beggars. Often a group of ten or twelve may be seen sleeping in the rain and sleet by the wayside. Deaths on the road are of frequent occurrence. Only the bodies are either buried under a few inches of earth by companions, or, if near a village, are left for the authorities to bury. The central government's efforts to allay the distress are still ineffectual owing to indifference and corruption among subordinate officers.

Return of the Indians.

PHILADELPHIA, April 15.—The steamship Indiana has arrived at her dock. Chief Matte Rodgers and Ship's Doctor Laban are entitled to credit for the reception which was accorded the officers and men of the vessel by the people of Liban. The mayor of the town, as well as the most prominent of its citizens, entertained them in a very hospitable manner. When the vessel left Liban Captain Sargent had been presented with a handsome silver urn on which was an inscription tendering the thanks of the people for his services in relieving their sufferings. The panels on the lid show the coats of arms of the city of Liban, the country of Liban and of Russia, as well as those of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania and the United States.

On the day the vessel sailed the ladies of Liban presented to Captain Sargent for the ladies of this city an immense basket of flowers with a card on which was written their thanks for the part the women of this city had taken in giving them relief. A handsomely framed testimonial from the mayor of Liban and the council was sent to Mayor Fox and was also presented to Hon. Captain Sargent. The latter was also presented with two loaves of bread made by Russian women from the flour which was a part of the Indiana's cargo.

No Relief for the Negroes.

WASHINGTON, April 15.—Dispatches from the governor of Mississippi contained intimations that it was a doubtful policy to secure the passage of the resolution for $50,000 for the relief of the negroes there as being against the interest of the planters. It is altogether likely, therefore, that the resolution will not be passed.

Richmond Terminal Reorganization.

NEW YORK, April 15.—The reorganization committee of the Richmond and West Point Terminal and Warehouse company give notice that $58,530,000 of the Richmond Terminal securities have been deposited under the plan of reorganization. This is out of a total of about $60,000,000.

Illustrating a Point.

"You don't know how glad I am to see you interested in this noble work," said the rector, addressing the Children's Foreign Mission society. "These poor heathens know nothing of our ways of life. They live in rude huts, dress in the skins of animals and never go to school or to church. They have never heard the blessed Gospel, and you can help to spread the good news among them.

"You can scarcely form an idea of what they are or how they live," he continued. "Why, children, these poor people are as black—as black—er—why, children, they're as black as the ace of spades"—

Two big boys on the front seat snickered and an audible smile ran through the older portion of the congregation, while poor Dr. Tomkly got red and white by turns and gave out a hymn to relieve the general embarrassment.—Detroit Tribune.

UNCLE SAM AND CHILI

Have Diplomatic Relations Between Them Been Broken Off?

WASHINGTON, April 15.—There was a rumor current, lacking official confirmation, that the withdrawal of Minister Egan from Chili, on a leave of absence, will shortly be followed by the departure of Consul General McCreary, and that for some time to come diplomatic relations between the two countries will be severed. Senor Montt, who was the Chilian Minister here throughout the late difficulties, has left Washington, and while his successor has been appointed, he may not arrive for some months.

Mr. Egan's departure from Chili is on a leave of absence. It is distinctly denied here that Minister Egan's leave of absence has any diplomatic meaning whatever. Meanwhile neither the American minister to Chili nor the Chilian minister to this country is on his post. It looks as though diplomatic relations, if not suspended, are not cordial.

NEWS FROM ALBANY.

Important Bills Passed by the Senate and Assembly.

ALBANY, April 15.—The assembly passed Senator Plunkitt's repeal of the Central park speedway law.

Senator Aspinall's bill creating a state board of telephone commissioners was passed by the senate.

The Democrats lost two measures. One was the Poughkeepsie gerrymander, increasing the wards from six to seven, and reapportioning them so as to give them control of the Dutchess county board of supervisors. It got only 84 votes in the assembly. The other bill lost was the Farquhar bill extending personal registration to the county districts.

The assembly, however, passed the new Ogdensburg charter by a vote of 66 ayes. The new charter throws the control of the city into the hands of the Democrats by extending the terms of office of the present mayor and recorder one year, and placing the appointment of election inspectors in the hands of the latter official.

The Cantor freedom of worship bill was passed by the assembly after being changed so that it is substantially a reiteration of the constitutional guarantee amendments proposed by Deyo. The amendments struck out the provisions for a regulating commission, consisting of the attorney general, president of the state board of charities and superintendent of prisons, and the penalty for violating the proposed law.

The senate passed the Aspinall telephone bill, creating a state board of commissioners to regulate telephone rates, and killed the state elevator bill, providing for the erection by the state of two grain elevators at Buffalo and four at New York. The game laws passed the senate, amended by striking out the privilege of fishing in Jamaica bay on Sunday.

The excise and New York election inspectors bills came to the senate and were made special orders for Tuesday morning.

Farquhar's amendment to the ballot law passed the assembly with the provision for the folding of ballots stricken out. Partial blindness was made a physical disability. The bill now provides for a uniform indorsements of ballots by requiring that the number of the district be printed on the face instead of the back of the ballot.

Governor Flower signed the congressional reapportionment bill.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

The Moving Story of a Mysterious Lot of Robberies in a Mining Camp, the Discovery of the Robber and the Plucky of a Woman.

[Copyright, 1892, by American Press Association.]

Boggs was and, if he is living today—and I hope he is, for he was a modest, truthful man and an excellent guide—is a great-grandson of Daniel Boone.

Like his famous ancestor, and all the other male members of his father's and possibly his mother's family, Mr. Boggs was born on the frontier, and he firmly believed that the true object of life was to live in the wilderness, hunt deer for food when hungry and grizzlies and Indians when the nerves needed toning up.

But I mention Boggs for the purpose of introducing a little story which he told me one night, many years ago, out in the shadow of the San Francisco mountains, in northern Arizona.

"No, sir," he said in answer to my question as to why he objected to living in settlements. "I can't stand 'em. Ever try it? Oh, yes, often; and each time I swear that I'll never try it again. The last time was over near Owen's lake, just on the edge of the Great Desert, east of the Sierras. Mebbe you'll go up thar on yer surveys, and if you do you'll see whar Dead Squaw's Gulch—that's the place I'm a-tellin you of—later on.

"MRS. BOLTON CAME OUT."

"I had a mighty good pard in them days, named Minty; but I reckon he's dead, for he was keerless about talk and firearms whenever he got on a spree, which was most every season. Me and Minty was down at San Bernardino, when word comes that pay dirt was struck mighty rich up at Dead Squaw's Gulch, near Owen's lake.

"We struck out to wunce, and when we got up thar we found the diggins in full blast and every one chuck full of hope and a-talkin about the place 'Mountain City' instead of Dead Squaw's Gulch, which I'll allow hasn't a pleasant sound. We found tents and shacks built, and of course there was the usual gang of sneakin gamblers—cuss 'em, how I do hate 'em—and thar was a grand Sierra saloon, whar kards were played and hard whisky drunk at all hours, and a lot of pore painted things in short skeerts danced at night.

"A mail route was opened to Los Angeles, but beyond there thar was no sign of law, and so a committee was had to open a graveyard up the hill, and most every morain we planted some one who'd been killed down at the saloon the night before. If the killin had stopped then it wouldn't 'a' been so bad, but we soon found out that honest, sober men, as had families at home, were likewise murdered in their cabins just to rob them of the dust they'd gathered.

"'Bout this time Cap'n Bolton, who was a mighty decent old gent, with his sister, kem to Dead Squaw's Gulch with his wife. The cap'n was a fine lookin man of forty, but, oh, my! what a reg'lar little beauty that wife was, to be sure—and so innocent. The Boltons lived in a little cabin 'way off from ev'ry one else, but the cap'n was allus along to help on law and order, so when the boss miners began to get robbed and kill we formed a vigilance committee, and as Cap'n Bolton—no one axed where he got his title—was a cap'n already, we elected him cap'n for keeps.

"All went mighty lovely for a little while. Then the killin and robbin began again, and Cap'n Bolton sent the vigilance was forever on a blind trail, and we was almost discouraged. We used to send in our dust to Los Angeles with Mike Mullen, who carried the mail once a week on a buckboard. Mike had been a sojer, and he was brave as a grizzly and honest as a hull skynful o' suns.

"Mike started off bright and early one mornin to go to Los Angeles, a three days' trip, but he hadn't been gone more'n three hours when he kem back with the buckboard kem a-tearin back to camp, with the mail bag and the gold dust gone, and Mike Mullen blim a-givin us the best. Turns me and my pard that lifted the driver off, for he was powerful bad shot, and any man but him would 'a' been dead. After we got a little whisky into him he opened his eyes and said:

"'Boys, 'twas Cap'n Bolton that laid for me and sprung on me unbeknowst down at the Divide. Say you'll do for him as he's did for me, and I'll die happy.'

"You can just gamble that we was all 'stonished, but we promised Mike, and then he said, 'I'm a-goin, boys!' and he went.

"Wa-al, we started down to Bolton's, but as we neared the place Bolton came out with a rifle in her hand and axed what we wanted, and we said we wanted the cap'n most powerful bad. She said he was right down sick all night, and she'd thank us if we'd come some other time, so's not to 'sturb him. Then I up and told that we must have him, and she ran into the house, closed the door, and next thing we knowed two rifles was a-pointin at us through the chinks, so we lit out.

"All day we kept a watch on the cabin to see that the cap'n didn't escape, and as we had time on hand we made up bundles of dry sage-brush and wood, and when it kem dark we rolled 'em down, determined to smoke the cap'n out or to roast him inside, if so be he perfar'd that.

"Then it was we kept up a fire and three of our men were wounded, so when it kem night we was all just wild for revenge, but we didn't want to hurt the woman, though I'll allow she was a-knowin what we believed her when we worshiped the tracks of her little shoes in the sand. We wanted the cap'n to come out and be decently hanged, but he said he'd see us all further first. Then we called to the woman, and she 'lowed she'd stand by her husband.

"Wa-al, to make a long story short, my pard struck a light with his flint and steel, and as the pile was dry as powder, up she flared and flashed, and we crept back to watch what followed. Soon we see the cap'n a-crawlin forward on his a-stomick, but when she come up she didn't faint, but sot down on a rock and watched the fire.

"The next morning thar was only an ash heap whar that cabin had been, and there was no sign of a human thar; the cap'n had gone back to dust, and whether he went to glory or the summer did next?" and Dugg paused and began to fill his pipe.

"I suppose," I said at a venture, "that the woman died of a broken heart, or was offended, and then turned her back on Dead Squaw's Gulch."

"No, sir, she didn't do nothin of the kind. She knowed that the cap'n had a great lot of gold dust about his clothes when he blazed out, so she waited till the ashes got good and cook; then she borrowed a tin dish from me whar she, do you think?"

"Really, Boggs, I can't imagine."

"Why, to gather up the captain's ash!"

"For burial!"

"No, sir; for keeps. Why, she carried her husband's ashes down to the crik, and she panned 'em out as cool as you please. And the man that married her the follerin week said she made right smart by the operation."

That 054 Frontiersman.

There were a half dozen men, all rich and jolly, sitting in Hoffman House one of the other night discussing the Chicago fair, when a tall man with long gray hair and beard, buckskin pants, a blond, hat and a slouch hat entered. He had other signs of time and adversity stood before them.

"By Jove!" whispered one as the apparition halted, "it looks as if the ghost of Cooper's Leatherstocking had come back from the grave."

Turning on the superior officer tried to stop the destruction of the fences. Daniel O'Connell, to illustrate the effect of wealth on courts of law, said he 'could drive a coach and four through any act of parliament,' and I often think of that when I recalled how our boys got over the orders against burning fence rails.

"Now, if we could have rails, Gen. eral Beall issued an order commanding that henceforth only such rails should be burned as were found broken!' Well, the logs were tickled, the gang moved ahead and religiously broke the rails, and another crowd followed and gathered in the pieces, as the fire-wagon went with orders.

"Seeing that the 'broken rail' rule defeated itself, the general put on his thinking cap, and by way of a compromise between the soldier and fence owner, issued an order that 'hereafter only the top rails of a fence shall be taken for fuel.' Then the boys fairly roared with delight; for, don't you see, there must always be 'a top rail' so long as there are two? After that there were no more rail orders, and there were not so many rails burned."

ALFRED R. CALHOUN.

The Love of the Dog.

Oxide, the novelist, writes: "The sympathy of some dogs for their masters is marvelous. If you are sad, so is he; and if you are merry, none is so willing to leap and laugh and frisk. He is the only friend you are never poor. The attachment of the dog to man outweighs and almost obliterates attachment in him to his own race. Man's fidelity to man is not so high an opinion of him in the callousness with which he will sniff at the stiff body of a brother dog; he will follow his master to the grave and sometimes die on it."

Colonel Owen—"Come here of him!"

"Hist of your friend Colonel Owen," said the Phoebus Island Texan.

"Wa'al, he was the first Injun agent out thar, and you bet your bottom dollar that was in 1886, and it was a double big skinny, and the gnashe slept outdoors from choice. Then there was old General Brady, sorter of him!"

"No."

"Nor of Judge Bell?"

"No."

"Nor the hanging of Si Lent?"

"No."

"Dern, strangers, you don't know of you hain't known Ellis Ave. And talk not easy guests, that while that big fair comes off that ere city will be the biggest and most wonderful part of the great show. Purchase the intension of a poor-old frontiersman, for that's all I've got to say."

The old man was about to hurry away when Tom Ochiltree laid a restraining hand on his arm, while another passed around the hat, into which at least twenty dollars was dropped.

A few days after this I chanced into a down town place where the same old man was telling an interested crowd of his experience in southern prisons during the war. He declared that he was only fifty-two years of age, but privation had made him old before his time.

"The Top Rail."

"Yes," said the captain, who was a veteran trooper, "I almost blush when I recall how little money our boys showed when they were for children enough to build rails, and let me say the Confederates re-membed the men in this in that respect.

"But, after all, I don't think we should blame a man who, tired out with a long march, preferred dry and convenient fence rails to green and uncut timber.

"I was a superior officer once tried to stop the destruction of the fences. Daniel O'Connell, to illustrate the effect of wealth on courts of law, said he 'could drive a coach and four through any act of parliament,' and I often think of that when I recalled how our boys got over the orders against burning fence rails.

THIS IS THE AGE FOR WOMEN.

SHE PROGRESSES FASTER THAN EVER BEFORE IN HISTORY.

Vida Coleman is Devoted to Her Subsex—How She May Learn of the World's Movements in a Realm Which is Entirely Her Own.

Ladies often give as a reason why they do not take exercise: "Oh, I don't like to go out without an object." They seem to be unaware of the fact that to a well-developed frame motion and fresh air are positive daily necessities, irrespective of any "object," save the vast gain of the vital forces on the temples and the healthful glow which follows a brisk walk. Medicine is a joke to it. No doctor, be he diploma'd over so profusely, could effect with simple means a more magical result. When it is considered what a "beautifier" exercise in the open air is, we marvel that the female portion of the community are so prone to neglect it. A little chilliness in the air, a little sprinkling of rain, a high wind, an inability to display a fine dress—what inadequate reasons for staying in the house and growing sallow, irritable and sick!

OUR VICE IS EXTRAVAGANCE.

Touch Some and Daughters Frugality if We Wish Them to Enjoy Life.

If the question were put to ladies one quality in a man most conducive to a happy home, I should say frugality and economy; and if what quality in a man they most object to keep longings, I should repeat, economy and frugality. The American crime is want of railroad economy. The waste in the parlor and kitchen; the man who saves is the man. There is no class that is careful of outgoes. No one man or woman in one hundred keeps an account of personal expenses. If our schools, instead of the rule of three, would teach the children the simplest elements of plain bookkeeping, mathematics would be of some value. The farmer who often puts down in figures his agricultures and his income, and honestly writes down his losses by bad management, environments—will be on the road to amendment. Every housekeeper should have a slate hanging in the kitchen, on which to jot down daily expenses, and a pocket account book to see how quickly $500 slips away.

When statistics prove that average life is provided with far more comforts than fifty years ago, and I look about at the amount now expended in a year, compared with what was formerly needed, I wonder how much it will take to satisfy the waste of a family fifty years hence. There is not a question but half of our boys and girls are harmed by too free use of money, and the other half by being jealous and dissatisfied.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Stout Women Should Know.

That they have no business to wear tailor made dresses. Such close fitting garments bring into prominence every pound of superfluous flesh they have.

That their arms must never be uncovered above the elbow, no matter what the fashion is. It is no reason because one has a pair of hams for shoulders that all the world should know it.

That reaching about the neck or sleeves and ribbons at the waist increases a diameter where it is already too large; therefore such things are not worn.

The necklaces, particularly big pearls, and heavy earrings should be dispensed with, as many women lose their quality, and only a few rings be worn in the way of jewels.

That a pair of fat hands do not look any the better for being squeezed into gloves which are too small. On the contrary.

That short bangs make them ridiculous.

That the best thing they can do with their hair is to dress it on the top of the head, because a low coiffure is invariably unbecoming.

In short, that there is no sense in a jelly-fish trying to wear what is becoming to a lean and hungry mackerel.

START PANSIES GROWING NOW.

How These Hardy Spring Flowers can be Best Propagated.

It is not too early to start pansies for blossoming in the house. The seed should be sown in a window-box, set in a sunny window in a cold room, but where it does not freeze. Powder loam a cool, moist atmosphere. The soil of the window-box should be kept rather wet till the seeds begin to germinate. When they are well up, thin them out, facilities them a little more than enough. Cheap guano dissolved in a quart of water, and protect them from the sun in the middle of the day, but do not give them any more heat. As soon as the ground thaws they will be all the better for being planted out doors, if they are protected at night.

There is no spring flower that will give such fragrance and variety of color as the pansy. These "little elephantines" as the German lovingly call them, grow their full beauty and bloom only in the moist early spring. The great velvety blooms diminish in size as soon as the summer comes and the sun will preserve their size and beauty. They are wonderfully a spring flower and their beds should be refilled by June 1 with summer flowers, now for a supply of pansies should be sown in the autumn or winter for the succeeding spring.—N. Y. Tribune.

Treating Round Sor Alum.

Bread cooked in an alcoholic solution of logwood will at once turn blue if there is alum present. Another very simple way of testing alum is to thrust a hot knife blade into a loaf that is one day old. If alum is present it will adhere in small particles to the blade.

Or take a good loaf of bread with a suspected one; cut from the two pieces of equal size, put them in saucers containing the same quantity of water; the best bread will invariably absorb the most water. This is more a test for alum than anything, as alum hardens the gluten of wheat and renders it less soluble.

Bakers' Soup.

Skim, singe and remove the entrails of two young rabbits, wipe with a damp cloth and separate the limbs at the joints; do not wash. Cut them in small pieces, cover with cold water, add a small onion cut in quarters, a blade of mace and a bay leaf. Simmer gently until tender, which will take about an hour and a half. Strain and return the broth to the soup-kettle; add half a cup of cream, pepper to taste and stew very gently for half an hour, add an even tablespoonful of butter, then squeeze the meat from the bones, add this to the soup, and it is ready to serve.

BREVITIES

—The People's popular entertainment at Reform Hall, Monday night.

—The Union Good Friday service was held last evening in the Trinity Reformed church at eight o'clock.

—Tickets for the forthcoming anniversary of Plainfield Lodge may be exchanged Monday at the Central Pharmacy.

—On account of Easter and so many special services in the churches to-morrow there will be no service in Reform Hall to-morrow evening.

—"Two boys can't agree in the same room," is a phrase a witty and intelligent German of North Plainfield smilingly used a few days ago to describe two selfish people, engaged together.

—Ground was broken to-day for a new dwelling on Craig place, to be erected (at a cost of about $4,000), by Mrs. Margaret Manta, formerly Mrs. Walker) of North avenue. The contract for the mason work has been awarded to Messrs. Burnett & Milligan, and that for the carpenter work to Messrs. Pearson & Gayle.

—Bicycling has now become very popular, and the day is not far distant when it will largely take the place of carriage riding. It is economical and safe, and affords excellent exercise for both sexes. The popular Acme Tailoring Company, No. 12 West Front street, have just taken the contract to furnish the Crescent Bicycle League with their handsome and stylish uniforms, adapted and designed especially for this club.

PERSONAL.

The funeral of the late Samuel Hudson took place this morning from his late residence on Somerset street.

Editor A. V. D. Honeyman has retired from the editorial management of The Trenton Times to give his entire attention to publishing the New Jersey Law Journal—the authority of the lawyers of the State. Mr. Honeyman is an ideal editor, eminently conscientious and painstaking, whose retirement will prove a loss to the fraternity in which he is such a shining light. He has many warm friends in Plainfield, and, in fact, all over the State. He is the Vice President of the State Publishers' Union, of which the editor of The News has the honor to be the President, and can personally testify to Mr. Honeyman's great helpfulness in bringing the organization to its present state of prosperity. He will leave New Jersey publishing fraternity generally.

The death of the celebrated Amelia Edwards, the novelist, is announced from Weston-super-Mare. Since 1853 she has been constantly before the public as a writer of juvenile and educational works, art and dramatic criticism, literary reviews and political leaders in many of the weekly and daily publications of England. She also wrote voluminously on archaeology, especially on Egypt ology. In the winter of 1889-90 she made a lecture tour through the United States, speaking on Eryptological subjects.

Before one of these lectures in this city, during the tour, it was entitled "Queen Ratasu." Those who had the rare good fortune to hear her on that occasion will readily deplore the decease of a woman so remarkably gifted and ripe in knowledge which she could make so intensely interesting to all.

Died in Agony.

A man, supposed to have been a tramp, died in great agony in a building near the Netherwood station yesterday afternoon at about three o'clock. He and a companion purchased ten pounds of wood alcohol from the firm of Marsh, Ayres & Co. on the previous evening. It is thought that the men drank the fluid. The kind of alcohol purchased by them is generally used by painters in burning paint from edges.

Morgue-keeper Casey took charge of the remains. County Physician Westcott, after viewing them, issued a permit for burial.

An Outrage on a Mountain Pastor.

A week ago last Thursday, while Dominico Greene of the Cosmopolitan Congregational church, located at Mt. Bethel, was attending an oyster supper with some farmers who are members of his flock, some evil-disposed persons smeared his front stoop and door with filth. The aggrieved pastor spoke of the matter from the pulpit last Sunday, and the congregation became greatly incensed and threaten punishment to the offenders if they can be discovered.

Suspicion is all in one direction, but the evidence is insufficient.

Arbor Day.

The proclamation of Governor Abbett designating Friday, April 22, as Arbor Day, was later in the issue than in former years, and the schools will not be able to make any elaborate arrangements for its observance. Superintendent Dix has communicated with all the principals and all are arranging for exercises of an appropriate character.

Marshal Pangborn Sworn In.

At the conclusion of the Borough Council meeting this evening, Mayor Saunders administered the oath to the newly-elected marshal, William Pangborn.

Resolved, That we extend to the family our sympathy in this hour of trial, and that we attend the funeral in a body.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, and also published in the daily papers.

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

A Lively Session.—Smalley Bros. Awarded the Contract for Crushed Stone after some Debate.—Twenty-Five Dollars Appropriated for Memorial Day Purposes.—Other Business.

The Borough Council met in adjournment session last evening at eight o'clock. Mayor Saunders presided and Councilmen Connelly, Hegeman, Hummer, Neal, Needham and Sebring were present.

The bond of Collector Henry N. Spencer was presented, referred to the proper committee and subsequently accepted.

Mr. Neal, the chairman of the Committee on Streets, presented bids from the various owners of stone crushers for furnishing crushed stone to the borough for the year 1892. The bid of Mr. A. C. Johnson was the lowest, but the committee advised Council not to accept the same because Mr. Johnson was not in a position to deliver stone to the borough as soon as it may be needed. The other bids were from Smalley Bros. and Mr. Wilson. The bids were received and ordered filed.

The bid of Smalley Bros., agreeing to furnish crushed stone and deliver the same for 95c. per ton was accepted later in the evening, and they were awarded the contract.

Previous to a vote being taken on the bid, Mr. Needham stated that he did not feel like voting for the resolution unless further inquiry was made.

Mr. Neal said that he had been given to understand that Smalley Brothers had been most treated rightly by the last Council and that the Council had broken faith with them.

Mr. Hegeman stated that he wished to refute that charge. He said the Council had broken faith with no one. He explained that there was a misunderstanding between the Council and Smalley Bros. in reference to the carting of the stone and that they had refused to deliver stone to the teamsters employed by the borough. He stated further that the stone that had been furnished the borough by Smalley Bros. had been very satisfactory; that he did not favor the acceptance of the bid of A. C. Johnson, but did favor the acceptance of the bid of Smalley Bros.

At the request of the Mayor, Mr. Needham explained the reason why he stated that Smalley Bros. had broken faith with the Council of last year. He said that he considered the action taken by that firm in that light; that Council had contracted with the firm and that the firm had refused to live up to the contract, and that he considered that the firm had broken faith with the Council when they refused to permit teamsters employed by Council to deliver stone. He said he did not feel like voting for the resolution until further inquiry had been made, and that as Smalley Bros. had broken faith with the Council in the past it would be a little careful. He thought that they had broken faith by refusing to deliver the stone.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hegeman, which was adopted fixed the price at 80 cents per ton as the contract price for delivery.

A resolution offered by Mr. Needham authorized the purchase of the necessary stationery for the use of Council for the ensuing year, the sum to be expended not to exceed $25.

The same gentleman offered a resolution ratifying the action of the Committee on Streets and Public Health in laying crosswalks on Park place and Duer street and also on Washington avenue and Park place.

On motion of Mr. Neal, Manning avenue from Somerset street to Franklin avenue was ordered macadamized. The property owners agreed to pay a stipulated sum, under $265. This is said to be less than one-third the estimated cost.

A resolution offered by Mr. Hegeman authorizing the Committee on Purchase to purchase stone on the streets the amount purchased not to exceed 1,000 tons.

On motion of Mr. Sebring Justice Thomas R. Crowley was appointed Borough magistrate.

Mr. Sebring offered a resolution appropriating $25 for the use of Winfield Scott Post for Memorial day purposes.

Mr. Connelly inquired whether or not there was another Post and when Mr. Sebring replied in the negative he stated that it would not be advisable to divide the money.

After some discussion it was decided to place the money in the hands of the Mayor to be disposed of as he thought best.

Previous to the passage of the motion, Commander Wm. C. Smith was given the privilege of the floor. He stated that Winfield Scott Post was the only Post in Plainfield that observed Memorial Day properly, that large and able arrangements; engaged speakers and furthermore prided to carry out the services in a manner befitting the occasion. He stated further that Major Anderson Post had been invited to take part in the exercises.

Mr. Neal thought there should be no discrimination be made between the two posts.

A resolution, offered by Mr. Hegeman, authorizing the committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections to fix the compensation of the several judges for his services at elections, was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Connelly the election of the several delegates to the convention of Warren Engine Company, No. 1, was confirmed by the Council.

Mr. Hummer offered a resolution to the effect that all special marshals that had not been appointed be instructed to return all property belonging to the borough now in their possession to the City Clerk.

On motion of Mr. Neal the Committee on Laws, Ordinances and Elections were instructed to report to Council at its next meeting the advisability of making Somerset street the dividing line for pedestrians in the section previous.

Mr. Hegeman offered a resolution authorizing the Street Committee to expend fifty dollars on the streets in case of an emergency at any time without first consulting Council. The resolution was adopted.

The meeting then adjourned.

SPECIAL CORRESPONDENCE

Legal Holidays and Saturday Half-Holidays.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—As an employe in one of our large factories, I in common with my fellow employes would like, through Mrs. News, to be informed as to what is the law relating to a Saturday half-holiday, if there is any such law.

A READER.

[There is such a law. We give it in full below.—Ed.]

An act in relation to days of recreation and holidays, and fixing the hours of work to be lawful to be set apart and observed, and regulating the issuing of commercial paper with reference thereto.

1. Be it enacted by the Senate and General Assembly of the State of New Jersey, That the following days and half days, namely, the first day of January, commonly called New Year's day; the twenty-second day of February, known as Washington's birthday; the thirtieth day of May, known as Decoration Day; the fourth day of July, called Independence Day; the first Monday in September, commonly called Labor day; the twenty-fifth day of December, known as Christmas day; and every day appointed by the President of the United States or by the Governor of this State, for a day of thanksgiving, or fasting and prayer, and the afternoon of every Saturday, shall, for all purposes whatsoever as regards the presenting for payment or the giving notice of the dishonor of bills of exchange, bank checks and promissory notes, made after the passage of this act, be treated and considered as the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and as public holidays or days of recreation; and all such bills of exchange, bank checks and promissory notes which may be payable on any of the said days shall be presented for payment on the next business day following, and when such bills of exchange, bank checks and promissory notes would, but for the provisions of this act, become due and payable on any of the said days, the same shall become due and payable on the next succeeding business day; and when the last day for the exercise of any power of redemption, or for giving notice that any bill of exchange, bank check or promissory note, and which shall not be discharged by the payment on the day it falls due, has been dishonored, or any other act authorized or required by the parties to be done with reference to any such bill of exchange, bank check or promissory note, and which shall not be incident to the immediate delivery thereof to the person to whom it is sold or transferred, falls on any of the said days, then and in every such case the said power may be exercised and such act done on the next succeeding business day; but nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the validity of any bill of exchange, bank check or promissory note made, drawn or accepted as aforesaid, or to render the same payable on any of the said days, except as aforesaid, or to render the parties thereto liable to any other liability than that which they would have been subject to if the same had been made, drawn or accepted on any other day of the week; and for the purpose of this act the first day of January, the twenty-second day of February, the thirtieth day of May, the fourth day of July, the first Monday in September, and the twenty-fifth day of December shall be considered as the first day of the week, commonly called Sunday, and as public holidays or days of recreation, and every Saturday afternoon from and after the first day of January next regards the transaction of business in the same manner as Sunday, and that no person or persons, corporation or corporations shall be compelled to do any manner of work whatsoever on any of the said days, except such as may be necessary for the preservation of life and property.

Approved, March 2, 1892.

W. C. T. U.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I shall not easily forget the impression made on my mind when I first heard of Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt and her arrival in England. I longed with a great desire to see that woman who had the power from God to lead, raising Christ's standard of temperance and purity. When I saw her delicate, frail form, and heard how she had braved the burning heat of the tropical sun, the long journeys, the loneliness and the privations in wearisome and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and in thirst, in fasting often, I knew that her strength had been sustained because to her had come the whispered promise, "My grace is sufficient for thee, my strength is perfect in strengthlessness." The above words were spoken by Lady Henry Somerset, at the World's W. C. T. U. Convention in Boston Tabernacle. Miss Barnham will have opportunity of seeing and hearing Mrs. Mary Clement Leavitt in Plainfield on May 31.

A MEMBER.

The Park Club Secretary Outgeneraled.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—A notice in one of the Plainfield papers recently published stated that after winning a game at bowling the Park Club was entertained by a collation at the Alps. As this was distinctly a present generously given by the Netherwood Bowling Club you will oblige us by noticing in some way the following communication which has just been received.

Mr. J. H. Van Deventer,
Pres. Netherwood Bowling Club.

Plainfield, N. J., April 14, 1892.

DEAR SIR:—Please extend to the gentlemen of the Netherwood Bowling Club our sincere thanks for the beautiful collation which they have so generously given the Park Club. We recognize in this a friendly and generous spirit in which we heartily appreciate, and we trust that by accepting our earnest invitation to bowl on our green you will give us an opportunity to in some measure reciprocate your kindness. Yours truly,

EDITORIAL NOTES

Pure Wisdom.

A book has recently been published containing the summing up of the life work of one of the greatest thinkers of the Nineteenth century. Doubtless it will interest our readers to know something of these profound conclusions. We therefore quote a few paragraphs. We offer no apology for the great writer's style of composition. It is as profound as his thoughts. We permit ourselves only to remark that if a newspaper man had wanted to say that common beliefs among mankind probably arose from a common experience and were therefore likely to contain more or less truth, he would have said it and stopped. But this is how a great philosopher says it:

However wrong many human beliefs appear, we may infer that they germinated from actual experience, and that they originally contained, and perhaps still contain, some small amount of truth. We may assume this more especially of those beliefs which are nearly or quite universal.

Further, if a newspaper writer had been going to say that no man's judgment is either always correct or always wrong, he would have said just that, no more. Read how you must put it if you are a great thinker:

We shall not regard some men's judgments as wholly good and others as wholly bad, but shall rather conclude that none are completely right and none completely wrong.

As for the following sentence, let it speak for itself:

We must say of conceptions in general that they are complete only when the attributes of the object conceived are of such number and kind that they can be represented in consciousness so nearly at the same time as to secure all present to sight, and when the size, complexity or discreteness of the object conceived become very great, only a large portion of its attributes can be thought of at once, and the conception formed of it thus becomes so inadequate as to be more symbolic than representative, such symbolic conceptions, which are indispensable in general thinking, are legitimate, provided that by some satisfactory or indirect process of thought, or by the fulfillment of predictions based on them, we can assure ourselves that they stand for actualities; but that when our symbolic conceptions are such that no cumulative or indirect processes of thought can enable us to ascertain that there are corresponding actualities, nor any predictions be made whose fulfillment can prove this, then they are altogether vicious and illusive and in no way distinguishable from pure fiction.

We think the philosopher here means to let us know how we can tell when a man is lying, but we are not certain. Every reader will take in the profundity of the following observation:

Every society, be it rudimentary, or be it advanced, displays phenomena that are ascribable to the units that compose it and to the conditions under which they exist.

Social growth is at once a consequence and a cause of increase in the units. The influence of the society exerts on the natures of its units, and those influences which the units exert on the nature of the society, incessantly co-operate in creating new elements.

Once more:

Other things being equal, localities that are uniform in structure are unfavorable to social progress.

Here is one, however, that is so plain we wonder the philosopher did not put it into Latin:

The desire to appropriate and to keep that which has been appropriated is deep, not in human nature only, but in animal nature.

As to the next one, though, the untrained thinker is not quite sure whether it goes or not:

Hence it follows that objective necessities of relation in space are represented by established nervous structures implying latent subjective necessities of nervous action: these last constitute prevalent forms of thought produced by the molding of Thought upon Things, and that the impossibility of inverting them, implied by the inconceivableness of their negations, is a reason for accepting them as true, which immeasurably transcends in value any other reason that can be given.

One more we quote, in the hope that it will set at rest many a vague doubt in the breast of the common individual who works for his living. Let us read it and thank heaven we live in an age of printing and of philosophers who can explain things:

The conclusion that a part cause of evolution is the multiplication of effects, and that this increases in geometrical progression as the heterogeneity becomes greater, are not only to be established inductively, but they are deducible from the deepest of all truths. The multiplication of effects is a corollary from the persistence of force.

We always thought so!

A curious circumstance gave rise to the report that the typhus fever patients at New York were shaved and left without food. The typhus fever patients were mostly Russian Jews, the strictest type. Their religion forbade them to eat anything cooked in utensils that pork had touched, or to take their food from plates which had ever held it. Equally they would have died before partaking of any meat that was not "kosher." That is, clean and pure according to ancient Jewish ordinances. Food, utensils and all must be "kosher," or they could not partake and would not. It was some time before the North Brother island authorities understood this, and it was not till the Hebrew Charities association sent full supplies of plates, utensils and meat for their use that the dilemma was met. The word "kosher" has not been heard since the Russian Hebrews have begun to come to us in such numbers. Food and observances that are permitted are "kosher."

The cotton crop of the world for 1891 was 2,000,000 bales larger than the world required. That is to say, it was that much larger than the world would buy and pay for. We must not forget that a very large proportion of the earth's inhabitants go naked. If the extra 2,000,000 bales were distributed in the form of cloth to them there would not be more than a handkerchief apiece to go around.

FARMS FOR SQUATTERS

Mad Rush of Thousands for the Sisseton Lands.

THE CLAIM FILERS ARE NOT IN IT.

Picturesque Description of the Opening for Settlement of an Indian Reservation—The Vast Horde Led in Its Wild Race by a Kentucky Thoroughbred.

LEDGEWOOD, S. D., April 16.—At five minutes to noon a cavalry bugler, with a long yellow plume streaming from his hat and cast a lounge new bugle suspended from his shoulder by a bright yellow cord, rode to the crest of the hills which separate Brown's valley from the Sisseton reservation. Scattered among in an uneven line to the north and south of him were three companies of cavalry, each man fully armed with saber, revolver and carbine. Back of these were grouped, or rather herded, a heterogeneous mass of men—white, yellow and black—the constituents of the Christian race, with a liberal mixture of half breeds. There were women in the crowd, too, and here and there could be seen a little baby held in the arms of its mother as she sat on her horse determined to be one of the first to enter the promised land which was to be opened.

The Wild Race Begins.

A splendid Kentucky thoroughbred carried a man who had thrown aside everything which could impede him in the ride for the reservation. Next to him, on a wiry broncho, was a halfbreed who sat on his horse as if a part of. Further down the line was a black negro, black as charcoal, astride a diminutive mule. All were impatient for the race to begin.

As the sun neared the meridian Major Bernard glanced at his watch. The bugler lifted his instrument to his lips and the crowd of land seekers gathered up their reins and awaited the signal. At last Major Bernard's watch hand, guided by the bugler, who began to sound the reveille. At the first note there was a crack from the carbine of the soldier next to him, which was quickly echoed by one further down the line. The shots rang out clear in the crisp air, and as the volley rattled down the lines on either side it was covered by the hoof beats of hundreds of horses spurred on by riders reckless of life or limb in the ride for land. A cloud of alkali dust rose as the motley army charged for the line of the reservation, and soon all that could be seen from the crest of the ridge was a black mass of huddled horsemen closely pursued by a whirl of yellowish dust. The man on the Kentucky thoroughbred got a good start, and when the line was reached he was ten lengths in advance of the next rider, a tall one who rode like a Centaur, but who was at a disadvantage as to his mount.

Out of Sight.

Behind the two leaders strung out a long line of horsemen, men in buggies, others in spring wagons and others still in huge prairie schooners, the latter being brought up by a man from Pike county, Mo., whose wife, children and household effects were contained in a Conestoga wagon drawn by a yoke of oxen. And so ends the picture column, and within half an hour the last man and vehicle had vanished from sight beyond the foothills, and the soldiers at the word wheeled and returned to camp, their duty in opening the reservation being finished.

There are now fully 5,000 settlers on the Sisseton reservation. These are pretty well divided between the northern and eastern borders. The squatter is monarch of all he surveys. There is literally out of the running. Governor Mellette had 200 deputy sheriffs on the reserve heavily armed with instructions to enforce order—peace ably, if possible; forcibly, if necessary. But checked several rows before serious results ensued. Wells are being dug everywhere and all the squatters apparently intend to live on their land. In a couple of weeks breaking plows will be at work everywhere. There will be good lands open to settlement for weeks, as not half the land has been taken up at this hour. Colonel Bernard has received orders to hold the troops here until Monday, but they are not needed.

Not a Homicide Killed.

There was a great deal of ill feeling it places and in several instances boomers came to blows but not a death from violence has occurred. The report sent by Rev. H. C. Horn, of the Baptist church. A lady had a substitute, fifth in the line. There was no fighting and everybody was good natured.

She Wants the Government to Be a Partner in the Fair.

CHICAGO, April 16.—The proposition for a government loan to the Columbian exposition, submitted by President Baker and Director Winston and Odell to the Durborrow World's fair committee of the house, is not acceptable to the local directory. President Baker and the others who were sent to Washington were sent in the interest of the bill asking the government to make an appropriation and to take charge of the World's fair enterprise. The proposition they now make to congress to loan $5,000,000 to the exposition and take a mortgage on the grounds and buildings to secure the repaiment of the loan, with 5 per cent interest

SENATOR QUAY TO TALK.

His Proposed Defense at the Harrisburg Convention.

POWDERLY IS NOT A CANDIDATE.

The Famous Knight of Labor Displeased Because He Has Been Named as a Presidential Possibility by Certain Journals—The Cleveland-Gray Fight Ended.

HARRISBURG, April 16.—Senator Quay will address the Republican state convention next Wednesday for the purpose of setting himself aright before the party and otherwise. He will be a delegate from Beaver county and it is thought will speak to considerable length. He will not be antagonistic, but will adopt a mild persuasive manner, which his friends say will result in carrying the convention so that he will be assured of a return to the United States senate by the next legislature. Although the senator has never taken this step he will now do so, it is said, for the sake of harmony.

The party leaders in Philadelphia are at last as to their preferences for candidates with the exception of congressmen at large from the eastern end of the state. They favor the nomination of George A. Castor. It is believed that Philadelphia will secure two delegates at large and that they will be William L. Elkins and William B. Ahern.

Halstead for Harrison.

BROOKLYN, April 16.—Murat Halstead said to a reporter here that he believed that the signs of the times pointed toward Harrison and felt convinced that Blaine's retirement was final.

"I haven't seen anything," he said, "since the retirement of Mr. Blaine that leads me to believe that there would be serious opposition to President Harrison's renomination by the Republicans. Everything is going his way.

"The three men who would be strong competitors—Sherman, Allison and Lincoln—do not appear to be in the field. McKinley, of Ohio, would be a formidable opponent, but I am not of the opinion that it is his year to run, or that he thinks it is. The drift of events is certainly very decided for the nomination and re-election of President Harrison."

A Cleveland-Gray Compromise.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 16.—An understanding has been reached between the Cleveland and Gray wings of the Democratic party, by which harmonious action is assured at the state convention next Thursday.

It was decided that the state platform shall declare tariff reform to be the issue and Cleveland the logical nominee, but that the name of ex-Governor Gray shall be presented to the national convention, and that in the event of Cleveland's nomination being deemed inexpedient by that body, the Indiana delegation shall do its utmost to secure Gray's selection as the presidential candidate.

Powderly Not a Candidate.

MILWAUKEE, April 16.—T. V. Powderly has written to Secretary Robert Schilling of the People's party, asking him to put a stop to the "nonsense" of the use of his (Powderly's) name as a candidate for president, as "for certain reasons" he does not believe his name would draw as well as that of some others. He says, "I vote the St Louis platform whenever it comes up, no matter what the name of the party may be."

Alger After Delaware Delegates.

WILMINGTON, April 16.—Judge Advocate General R. C. Fraim, of the department of Delaware, G. A. R., has received a letter from G. General Alger urging him to use his influence in the G. A. R. in this state. The letter stated that the general is a candidate for the presidency and makes an appeal to his old comrades for their support. The Grand Army men here are almost to a unit for President Harrison's renomination.

Allison for Harrison.

CHICAGO, April 16.—Senator Allison says "I am not a candidate for the presidential nomination; in fact, I will frankly say I have not heard my name mentioned for the place." The senator spoke flatteringly of President Harrison, whose renomination he professed to regard as a foregone conclusion. He said he was satisfied that the Iowa delegation would be for Harrison.

Instructed for Harrison.

TWENTY MINUTES TO RETRACT.

TEXAS HAUTE, Ind., April 16.—Judge Taylor sent M. Allen, proprietor of the Terre Haute Express to the county jail for twenty days and fined him a hundred dollars and costs for contempt of court, and Allen is now locked up in a cell. Thursday Judge Taylor sent William C. Fishback, the editor of the same paper, to jail for thirty days and fined him a hundred dollars also for contempt of court. Judge Taylor gave Allen twenty minutes to retract in open court the charge in his newspaper that the court suspended the grand jury investigation into the public works scandal through political and corrupt motives.

Allen retired with his counsel, and coming back failed to make the retraction and the sentence was imposed. Judge Taylor has suspended the grand jury investigation into the public works scandal on the request of the citizens' committee of one hundred, equally divided in politics and all prominent citizens, till the expert engineer now going over the contracts makes his report, which has not yet been filed.

MACAULAY WITH CHILDREN.

Macaulay's fondness for children continued all through his life, from the early days he has played hide and seek and capped verses with his sisters, to the later times when he would entertain a party of children at his residence in the Albany and send half sovereigns to his nephew at Eton, cunningly concealed under the huge wax seal of the letter. What a house that must have been in Great Ormond street when the holidays were in full swing. Macaulay was master of the revels, and games of hide and seek, the blowing of horns and shooting went on for hours in every part of the house. Like Sydney Smith, he could tell them stories at will. But these he preferred to give in the form of verse, like "the Judicious Poet." Fresh, perhaps, from working at one of the reviews which were then making him famous, he could still pour out for the amusement of the younger ones humorous rhymes.

In later life he would often delight some very young member of the family by a tea tor or story in rhyme, all the words being carefully written in capital letters. One of those was about the fate of two boys who talked in church:

The beadle got a good big stick,
Thicker than uncle's thumb:
Oh, what a frame those boys were in
To see the beadle come!

And they were turned out of the church,
And they were soundly beat,
And then those wicked naughty boys
Went bawling down the street.

Nor were verses all. He had a number of complete dramas of the deepest interest. All of which he was ready to perform at a moment's notice for the amusement of his nephews and nieces. If these failed then he would fall back on the expedient of building up with newspapers a darkroom behind the sofa and enacting therein a terrible scene between tigers and robbers. Indeed, Macaulay never appeared more than when playing with children, and he greatly missed this relaxation when they grew too old to be amused with rhymes, or to be ready with him to blow Mount Vesuvius as the summit of earthly happiness.

About 700 small vessels, sloop or schooner rigged, and varying in size from five to twenty five tons, are engaged in gathering sponges in the Bahamas. The gathering and preparing for market gives employment to 5,000 or 6,000 people, of whom all but the shipowners, brokers and shippers are black people. The hands are either boats or on shares, and seldom make $300 per year while those who handle them on shore get from fifty cents to seventy five cents per day. Which gives them a tolerable living there. They use a water glass to search the bottom for them, and then with a hook attached to a long pole they pick up the largest, leaving the smaller ones to grow. Dredging has been tried, but it brought up or destroyed the smaller ones and was ruining the beds, and an act was passed forbidding it. After they are brought up they must be exposed to the sun for the animal to die and decay, during which process the odor is more strong than pleasant. The vessel usually goes to the shore once a week to unload.

Then the sponges are put into a loggen built in the water in some sheltered part of the bay, where they stand each from four days to a week, after which they must be taken out and beaten with sticks to remove the decayed matter which covers them, the last particles being removed by washing after beating. They are now ready for market. The crop of 1890 was over 900,000 pounds, valued at $600,000, of which the United States took 700,000 pounds, valued at $250,000. The sponges from the easter Mediterranean are considered better than the West Indies sponges, being usually much finer in texture. About the same number of boats and men are employed there, and the annual product varies in value from $400,000 to $500,000. In some parts sponges are obtained by divers, who weight themselves with a stone and go down and tear the sponges from the rocks, and when loaded they are pulled up by their comrades in the boat.

Historical Trees.

In the private garden of the palace at Osborne on the Isle of Wight, Queen Victoria has a long array of memorial trees that serve to commemorate certain events which have occurred in the family circle. In one spot, says Golden Days, stands a row of trees set out in February, 1882, when each member of the family duplicated the tree planted on the previous December the one which the queen herself planted being a pine tree. In this same place is a group, each of which records the marriage of one of her children, and it is under the shade of these, we are told, that Victoria prefers to have her afternoon tea table set. Not far away is a large, luxuriant bush of myrtle, which has grown from a sprig which the queen took from the bridal bouquet of her eldest daughter, the Empress Frederick. Myrtle is always used at bridal ceremonies in Germany as orange flowers are with us, and this queenly act contributes to the adornment of all the brides among the queen's descendants. Her grandchildren are now adding on rare occasions to her collection of historical trees at Osborne.

Pig in a Poke.

"Pig in a poke," as our proverb has it, means a blind bargain. The French say "Acheter en chat en poche." The reference is to a common trick in days gone by of substituting a cat for a suckling pig and trying to palm it off on greenhorns. If any one heavily bought the article without examination he bought a cat for a pig but if he opened the sack he "let the cat out of the bag" and the trick was disclosed. The French "chat en poche" refers to the fact, while our proverb regards the trick.

Origin of Cards.

We are told that we owe the invention of visiting cards to the Chinese. They were first used during the Tong dynasty (718 407 B. C.) The present Chinese visiting card is large enough to fold twice and is bright red in color. The origin of card playing is unccertain. It is said to have been brought to Viterbo in 1379 and there were illuminated for Charles VI of France in 1392, then depressed in mind. Cards were first taxed in England in 1710.

The familiar saying, "My cake is dough" occurs in the "Taming of the Shrew" act fifth, scene first.

EFFECTS OF MENTAL DISTRESS.

A Theory in Regard to the Manner in Which Fright May Produce Death.

In studying the admitted fact that severe mental distress or fright sometimes produces physical disease and even death Dr. G. Beard has recently made a number of investigations on animals which died apparently in consequence of captivity. Birds, moles and a dog which had succumbed to conditions believed by Dr. Beard to result in those known among human beings as acute nostalgia and a "broken heart" were examined post mortem. Generally there was hypersemia, sometimes associated with capillary hemorrhages of the abdominal organs, more especially of the liver, also fatty and granular degeneration of their muscles, and sometimes bile was found in the stomach, with or without a catarrhal condition. The clinical symptoms were at first those of excitement, especially in the birds, these being followed by depression.

The theory suggested by Dr Beard is that the nervous disturbance interferes with the due nutrition of the tissues in such a way as to give rise to the formation of toxic substances—probably ptomaines—which then set up a condition similar to that of uremia, and sometimes this was found in the stomach, with or without a catarrhal condition. ORIGIN OF EASTER.

AS EXPLAINED BY REV. DR. A. H. LEWIS.

In a Sermon Yesterday Morning in the First Presbyterian Church.—Originally a Pagan Feast Day, of Most Bestial Orgies.

MOST appropriate was considered the sermon of that learned divine, Elder A. H. Lewis, in the First Presbyterian church yesterday. He told of the origin of Easter which very few know was pagan. In the days when Rome was young and history was forming, Phallic worship prevailed and what is now observed as our glorious Easter was then, history says, the time of idolatrous worship, bestial in the extreme.

We give a mere

OUTLINE OF THE SERMON.

A characteristic of our time is the tendency to recognize Easter, Christmas and similar festivals, more than formerly. To Puritanic ears, "Easter" carried the idea of paganism and idolatry, to an extent which made it little less than sin to think of any participation in it. No other opinion could have obtained under the early history of Protestantism, and the opinion was essentially correct. Historically speaking, there are several phases of the "Easter" question which are necessary as a foundation for the higher spiritual lessons which I seek this morning to give. We briefly as follows: So far as the New Testament is concerned, the Easter of to-day is organically connected with the Jewish Passover; it reaches back to the night when the Israelites were led out from Egyptian bondage. The Passover festival was continued after the death of Christ. It became a time of endless memories of its association with his death. It was celebrated according to the Jewish custom upon the 14th day of Nisan—a month made up of a part of our March and a part of April—and without reference to the day of the week. No change in this conception of the Paschal feast appears until the second and third centuries after Christ. By this time the Christian history had left Semitic soil and entered into contact and conflict with various forms of Paganism. Notable among them was the Oriental systems in which sun-worship and nature-worship were the prominent elements. The Babylonian paganism had a season of mourning for the lost "Tammuz," a beautiful youth god who was each year stolen away in the embrace of Winter. This season, the spring "Lent" which we still keep, was of wild revelry, at the Spring equinox, when the God began to return. His Consort—the Moon Goddess, Astarte, Venus Freya—was the chief mourner, and hence women were the chief mourners under this Cultus. The history of that Cult must not be opened to the public eye nor be repeated here.

As time passed the believers in Christ tendered more toward joy over a risen Christ, and the life of Christ was brought grew rapidly and a strong opposition arose against the time of holding the paschal feast, by the Jewish manner. The conflict waxed warm and finally the Council of Nice in 325, A. D., declared that the festival should be celebrated, not on the 14th day of the month, but on the Sunday next succeeding the Paschal new moon. As Christianity spread northward and westward this festival coincided with the festival of Ostra, the North European goddess of Spring, and whence came the modern term "Easter." The use of eggs and almost every prominent feature of the festival were borrowed from heathenism.

From this it came about that when our protesting ancestors began the work of breaking away from the old creed they found this festival both in the Latin and the Greek Churches, so nearly pagan, so utterly unscriptural, and deserted it, seeking of scripture. Hence Mr. Baxter from it with great vehemence. But as the world has risen to a higher appreciation of Christ, his life, death, and resurrection, all loving hearts have turned instinctively to the times and incidents which recall his birth and resurrection. We know that the 25th of December is not the date of Christ's birth. That it was chosen out of deference to a pagan sun-worship festival, and we know that this Easter day is not the chronological counterpart of the Passion of the risen Christ. Christians; still, we may gain valuable spiritual lessons at these times. Two lessons for to-day are these:

(a) This should be to all a festival of devout thanksgiving for spiritual deliverance. A risen Christ means vanquished death, and all the blessings which come to God's redeemed people. Broken chains, removed penalties, sins forgiven, souls justified, lives made pure, hearts made eager for joyous service, and the light of God's redeeming love flooding the world; these form the Spiritual "Easter" into which we enter, and rejoice therein.

(b) This should be also a day of reconsecration to Christ's service. Though Christ has risen, sin, sorrow, disease and sin are in the world. Tempted souls need help, sorrowing lives need comfort; suffering bodies need relief. Vice and wickedness abound, and the struggle between good and evil, light and darkness, is not ended. However much, or however little, we may have done, or have attained to the past, Christ calls for more at our hands. The world cries for help, truth calls for advocates, and the "Master" calls for reapers". He who has loved and served Christ hitherto, should love and serve him more than ever before. He who has done little hitherto, should repent of his neglect, seek help, and rise to higher endeavor and more earnest obedience, before he leaves these sacred walls. So may the memories of Christ fit us all nearer unto Himself in glad obedience.

EVENING SERVICE.

At the evening service Dr. Lewis discussed the "Christian Endeavor Movement," as an "Educational Spiritual Factor in modern Christianity. He noted its rapid growth from its inception at Portland, Me., in 1881, and a membership of 500 in 1883, to more than 30,000 societies, and more than 1,100,000 members at the present time.

He showed that this was due to the fact the movement is fundamentally right in seeking to let the young for service in Christ's kingdom, and in exacting loyalty to obligations, as embodied in the pledge "the prayer meeting" and the weekly "consecration service."

THE NEW GRACE CHURCH. (An engraving from a view taken this morning.)

NEW GRACE CHURCH.

DEDICATED YESTERDAY BY BISHOP SCARBOROUGH.

The Beautiful $40,000 Edifice in which Plainfield Episcopalians will Hereafter Worship—The Sum of $1,618 Contributed at the Services Yesterday, to Finish Furnishing.

Brightly shone the Easter sun upon the joyous congregations assembled in the new Grace Church for its first services yesterday morning. Bishop Scarborough was on hand, genial and cheery as ever, to bestow his Episcopal benediction upon the happy occasion, and to offer his warm congratulations. An early celebration of the Holy Communion was held at 7.30 a. m. It was well attended and was the first sacred rite in the new sanctuary.

At 10.30 all the seven hundred and five seats of the beautiful building were speedily filled. The renovated organ, under the skilful hands of the accomplished organist, gave fitting expression to the exultant joy throbbing in every earnest heart.

Soon the oaken doors of the robing room were thrown open, and a long procession of choir and clergy came forth, as they marched down a side aisle and up the nave, an appropriate Easter hymn, was sung.

Upon reaching the chancel the Bishop dedicated with special prayers, successively the altar, the lectern, the pulpit and the font, going with the attending clergy from one to the other, and upon consecrating the altar solemnly dedicated the building for the service of the Almighty, and prayed for a blessing upon pastor and people worshiping thereon.

Then followed the inspiring Easter service. The Rev. Mr. Hart assisted the honored rector of the parish. Dean Rodman, in reading the lessons and prayers.

The Bishop preached a warm-hearted, congratulatory sermon, and bid the parish God-speed.

BISHOP SCARBOROUGH.

All the musical portions of the service were rendered with superior excellence and showed the faithful practice and training.

The Te Deum and Jubilate were Whitsell's and the Hallelujah Chorus at the offertory was very effective.

The offertories at the consecration at morning services amounted to $1,200, and at the afternoon service this was increased to $1,618. The money is to be devoted to the completion and furnishing of the church, for some details are yet unfinished.

The brass pulpit was given by Mr. Richard B. Brown and others, in memory of their mother; flowers were placed on it in memory of their sister; the Bishop's and Priest's chairs are in memory of Samuel George M. Randall of Colorado, presented by his son; the altar was given by the altar guild; the altar cross, given by his aunt, Mrs. Weed, is in memory of Wallace Bradley; the font is the gift of Sunday-school; flowers were placed on it in memory of Edgar Herriot; the altar-rail was given by Mrs. Jas. Dodgson; the prayer and hymn Bible in memory of the Rev. John Wills, presented by Mrs. Frederick H. Wills; the lectern was given by Mrs. E. L. Finch to the memory of her little boy.

A lovely display of Easter lilies, and other floral emblems, graced their chancel to the "beauty of holiness," and silently emphasized the glorious truth of the resurrection.

In the afternoon the children of the Sunday-school met in the old church and formed in procession, with banners and floral offerings, and marched to the new church, singing their carols. During the course of the exercises, the rector made an interesting address, and crowned it up by conferring upon Master Willie Bull a medal for special good behaviour in the choir.

The floral offerings taken up by representatives from each class were placed in a frame which presented, when finished, a graceful butterfly. The singing by the Sunday-school, led by the well trained choir, was very pleasing. At this service there was also a large attendance.

In the evening the church was again filled and a missionary service was held. The building proved to be even more attractive in the brilliant electric light than by day.

The polished oak shone like glass, and the chancel's beautiful furnishings were far more effectively displayed. All the colorings of the church are peculiarly quiet and subdued in tone, and in perfect harmony.

From the outside the lighted windows were very beautiful.

Dr. Langford, secretary of the Board of Missions, made a powerful and interesting address, relating particulars of lonely missionaries in distant lands, heroically battling with dangers and difficulties in heathendom, carrying out the commission of the Risen Lord, to "preach the gospel to every creature."

None could fail to be impressed with the arguments of so vigorous a speaker.

A collection was made for both the choir and clergy marched out singing a sweet recessional, and so ended a very happy day, long to be remembered as an era in the parish.

THE DAY WE CELEBRATE

EASTER IN PLAINFIELD CHURCHES YESTERDAY.

Beautiful with Floral Decorations, Impressive in Devotions, Harmonious in Music and Gorgeous in Easter Hats.

SO AS TO MAKE Easter more impressive, special efforts are usually put forth in the churches generally. Nor only is there a profusion of fragrant floral decorations around the altars, to please the eye, but there is also special music by the choir, and the pastors usually endeavor to preach especially appropriate sermons. Even the congregations—especially the women by new Easter bonnets—pay tribute to help make the day looked forward to with great anticipation.

Yesterday was no exception to the rule.

The floral decorations in the larger churches—like St. Mary's Catholic, Holy Trinity, the Second Presbyterian, Methodist Episcopal, the two Baptist and the Methodist—were very fine, and the same can be said of the singing. But the other churches did equally well in proportion to their means, and no doubt their prayers and efforts were just as welcomed at the throne of Divine Grace.

Some idea of how the people did their share—and more—in their efforts toward making the day beautiful may be judged by the fact that upwards of some thousands of dollars—probably not one of which cost less than $10—arrived during last week from New York by express—while our local milliners worked night and day to supply the demand upon them for Easter bonnets. The latter alone therefore to increase Plainfield women's love for and appreciation of Easter is probably $20,000 would pay the bill. And it is the same the world over—at least in the world of Christendom—wherever Easter is celebrated, all to commemorate the risen Lord.

Saint and Sinner.

Half hidden in the pew, she sits,
A transient sunbeam softly flits
Across her modest, matchless face,
As if the angels thought to trace
Upon those features thus they love
An Easter blessing from above.
Demure, with modest eyes downcast,
My angel sits. I feast on her
For forty days for just one look
From those sweet eyes bent on the book;
And if she'd give me more or less,
I'd be content to eat no more.

SEE THOUGHTS.

Those horrid aisles (that drum is useless),
I wish those preachers would not use 'em,
Where, when I should be good, I get that thief!
Oh, I'm so sorry she's not deaf!
Sure, there she goes! Why has a maid,
How that man stares! He's really bold.
My bonnet! Can it have a crook?
I wish I'd let mamma choose my hat!
Stupid! who is that with the Prince?
What sights they are in those new hats!
There's Jones's wife—how she has waisted!
What Clara tells him about everything!
My! what a fright Rose is in Mid.
Is that the time? Dear me, how late!
Well, I paid slightly (what a word!)
More than my means justify to-day.
Oh, my! there's Smithe—such a fiend!
(Those horrid psalms! I've lost my place!)
Does he ever go to church? Yes, once a year!
The poor, dear fellow isn't strong.
Why, there is Fred! Does he see what mood
I hope I won't forget the text.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If the proposed government department of mines and mining at Washington will be as helpful to those interested in mines as the agricultural department has been to our rural population, then it will pay for itself from the start.

Processes of photographing in colors have been discovered by various individuals, but not till lately has any one of these processes been utilized. The Ives method of photographing in color has been adapted to stereopticon views as used in illustrated lectures. The method works successfully.

The Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, of New York, is to be congratulated on the success of his efforts in getting the laws against liquor selling and gambling on Sunday enforced for a little time at least. When he first made his accusations of violations of the law, newspapers that sided with the lawbreakers said his charges were false; that the minister's assertions were lies. Then when Mr. Parkhurst repeated that they were true; that he visited in disguise the places he indicated and knew what he said; further, when the grand jury found his accusations were true, and so reported, then the same journals raised a howl about the unworthy and unpreachable way he had taken to get his knowledge. You never can please some people.

The American Type.

Immigration Commissioner Weber is of the opinion that the highest type of civilized man will result from the blending together of the various races that come to America from Europe. He believes that the highest qualities in a race are the staying qualities, and these are the ones that would reproduce in a series of generations in this free republic. Then from the blend will come in time the finest type of mankind known, the American type.

This may be true, within limits. It is doubtful, however, whether the swarms of swarthy, squat Italians who come to us from south Italy would do much to improve the American type. They certainly would not unless in course of time the American generations of them should become taller and cleaner and less given to living sixteen in a room. But this possibility brings us to the point we wish to make, which is that there is something in our climate and spirit that tends to make the children of foreigners taller, more delicate and more refined of feature than their parents. Their hands and feet are smaller, and they show a disinclination for the rough labor their ancestors were so glad to perform. This disinclination for rough work appears to be a marked feature of the American type we are evolving.

Everybody's Flower.

Now is the time to begin. Every village of over 2,000 inhabitants ought to have next fall a chrysanthemum show. Premiums should be offered for the best displays, and when the show begins a small admission price should be charged to cover expenses. To prepare for the exhibit, select certain fine specimens, hold back their growth or force it, as may be needed, to bring them in bloom at the right time.

Yards and grounds in this country become more beautiful year by year, owing no little to the increased culture of this gorgeous autumn flower, the chrysanthemum. But still it is not encouraged half as much as it ought to be. New varieties appear annually, some of them always larger and more splendid than any that went before. At an exhibition last autumn were shown six chrysanthemums that were placed side by side in a row. The row of six flowers measured 5 feet 8 inches, showing that each flower was nearly a foot in diameter.

The chrysanthemum is the national flower of Japan. We might choose some of the family for our national flower, for the chrysanthemum blooms and thrives in America as gorgeously as in Japan and China, doing much better than in Europe. It is the plant that most repays the least trouble. From midautumn till after Christmas it gives by skillful manipulation a succession of splendid bloom. One single chrysanthemum plant produces from 150 to 200 blossoms. It is hardy, appearing year after year in the same spot to gladden the eye of the person who has even six square feet of earth for it to grow in. Or this kindly plant will bloom indoors for weeks in a flowerpot.

We Americans are far behind Europe in making our small country homes beautiful. We are such strict and hard utilitarians that it seems to many of us a waste of time to cultivate a plant for the mere beauty of it. Perhaps the feeling is an inheritance from Puritan ancestors. Wherever it comes from, however, it is wrong, dead wrong. We ought now to begin and make our happy country one vision of beautiful landscape from ocean to ocean. Then the Japanese and the French will cease to sigh for their homes when they visit America. As it is, even the Italian is homesick at the sight of our scarred up, jagged railroad cuts and weedy, desolate dooryards. We must cover all with a rare garment of beauty, and we can begin to weave it immediately by planting chrysanthemums.

TOLD ALL AT THE ALTAR

Remarkable Confession of Mrs. Cox Near Indianapolis.

MURDERED FOR INSURANCE MONEY.

Suspicious Circumstances Surrounding the Death of a Farmer Who Recently Took Out $55,000 Life Insurance in Favor of a Wife Who Loved His Hired Man.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 18.—While laboring under intense religious excitement Mrs. Cox, of Haughville, confessed that she and her husband were guilty of a deliberately plotted murder. Two years ago they were lovers in Chicago. He was a married man, yet past twenty years of age and is pretty bad another suitor, a man of middle age, a widower and well to do. Her parents were partial to him. A mortgage lay upon their property. The rich suitor promised that it should be lifted if she together would bestow her hand upon him. The younger suitor was driven from the house and the young woman forbidden to receive his company. The lovers grew desperate and resolved to run away, but that would take money. The young lover devised an awful scheme to obtain a supply of money. It occurred to him that the richer suitor should himself pay the forfeit of money and his life.

Lured to His Doom.

It was agreed that the girl should assent to accept the offer of the rich suitor in consideration of $1,000, and should make an agreement with him to meet on the Ladies' Street bridge. The money was to be paid there. The victim kept the appointment, and, as he approached the girl, she coughed. It was a prearranged signal for the conspiracy to reach its climax. Cox rushed forward from a shadowy nook and struck the victim a cruel blow with a coupling pin on the head. Cox was a blacksmith and the heavy bar was handled with fearful effect. The guilty couple robbed the body and then threw it into the river below. No one saw them on the bridge and their secret seemed safe. Cox and the girl soon came to this city. Cox obtained employment on the Peoria division of the Big Four.

Confessed at the Altar.

Recently Mrs. Cox became a regular attendant at revival meetings. She could find no peace until she fainted at the altar and later confessed the story as here told to Mrs. Ella Pensel. Others were brought in and the confession repeated. Since that time detectives have been at work on the case.

Murdered for $55,000 Life Insurance.

SEATTLE, Wash., April 18.—William Radloff, a German, twenty-seven years old, living near this city, was burned to death Saturday, and there is evidence that murder was committed in order to secure his life insurance of $55,000. Three years ago he was married to a young woman, with whom he had resided on a farm within four miles of Seattle. His only hired man was Louis Kostrusch, who lived with the family and who lately has been very attentive to the wife.

A week or two ago Mrs. Radloff went with her husband to visit her parents near Tacoma, and since then Radloff and Kostrusch have been keeping house alone. Saturday neighbors found the building burned to the ground and among the embers the charred remains of Radloff. Suspicion pointed to Kostrusch, who was arrested. The man at first denied having seen his employer since Thursday, but afterward admitted having talked with him Friday. Of Kostrusch's person was found a love letter from Mrs. Radloff and a money order drawn for her by her husband. The agents of the life insurance company are taking an active interest in the matter, because within two months Radloff took out insurance for $15,000 in the Mutual, $30,000 in the Equitable and $30,000 in the New York Life. The money will go to his wife.

Pension Forgers Caught.

PLEADING FOR DR. GRAVES.

Judge Furman Says Popular Clamor Cannot Influence Him.

DENVER, April 18.—The celebrated Bardsley case will come up again this week, when Judge Furman, counsel for Dr. T. Thatcher Graves will file his brief with the court and ask for a new grounds for granting a new trial. In the brief Judge Furman denounces the seventh instruction by Judge Hosford, in which the jury were told that it did not require a reasonable doubt to render a verdict of guilty. In referring to one of the witnesses the judge continues: "He was not corroborated by the testimony of witnesses who could swear at pleasure without contradiction or of liability to the penalties of perjury." After a review of Mrs. Worcester's testimony, he says: "If this is legal ordinance then no man's life is safe in Colorado, and if such testimony is sanctioned by the law we have fled from the high mission of enforcing right and justice. Again the court erred in not granting the application for a postponement."

In conclusion, the brief states: "Our contention is that both in the admission of evidence and in the instructions to the jury the court prejudiced and constricted the trial, characterized this trial was that plaintiff could be convicted, and that as a matter of fact was convicted upon the evidence of perjured and upon hearsay. In the rulings of which we complain a flagrant wrong was done the plaintiff and a precedent was set which if not reversed is pregnant with danger to liberty, right and justice, and will prove an everlasting stain upon the administration of law in our state."

It is more than probable a new trial will be granted.

The hat is of white silk embroidered tulle, trimmed with pale pink flowers and dark red and white charred remains of Radloff. Suspicion pointed to Kostrusch, who was arrested. DEEMING OR HIS DOUBLE

Evidence That the Fiend Once Lived in America.

CHICAGO'S SENSATIONAL SUICIDES.

Damon and Pythias Outdone in the Windy City—Two Germans Agree to Die Together and One Shoots Himself While Thus Other Runs Away.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 18.—From facts recently elicited it appears that the Australian murderer, Deeming, visited this city in 1887 and married, soon afterward, decamping with $3,000 of his wife's money. The marriage under the assumed name of Charles H. Williams and came from San Francisco. In a short time he succeeded in marrying Mrs. Nanni Catchings, who subsequent him to draw her savings, amounting to several thousand dollars, with which he fled. He then confessedly in Australia, was a Free Mason, a member of St. George's society, and in disposition and habits was strikingly like Deeming. He also showed great aversion to being photographed, a likeness being secured jointly by chance.

He Dreamed on Her Grave.

These portraits bear striking resemblance to those published of Deeming. He confessed to Mrs. Catchings an Australian marriage with fame, but told her this previous wife had died, tearfully describing the joyous dance he executed on her grave.

Williams' departure from Los Angeles was hastened by the accidental meeting with an Ohio lady who recognized him, and his circumstances, coupled with his bigamy in Australia of his photograph bearing the name of an Ohio photographer, strengthens the theory that Williams and Deeming are one and the same man.

Deeming Is Not Insane.

MELBOURNE, April 18.—The medical board who have examined the murderer Deeming as to his sanity, pronounce him to be mentally sound and perfectly responsible for all his actions. The statement that Deeming was mad when a boy and committed the murders at Rainhill and Windsor while suffering from instinctive insanity, received no credence from the jury. Deeming maintains his nonchalance and continues to talk of what he will do when he goes back to England. It is stated that a well known lady of a lawyer he could convince any jury if he tried that he was an innocent man.

Blackening His Dead Wife's Name.

He eats heartily, saying that he does not intend to go into decline and children authorities keep him in jail for a few weeks. A chaplain was admitted to him, and Deeming talked with him on religious subjects. He remarked, however, that he did not care much for religion, as the woman who got him in trouble by her unfaithfulness (Miss Mather) was always reading her prayer book.

Damon and Pythias Outdone.

CHICAGO, April 18.—Carl Cassel and Henry Spanis have long been friends, and stood side by side in the battle of life hand in hand together. Cassel imparted the information to Spanis while both were in the rear room of a saloon drinking beer that he was tired of life and wished he was dead. Spanis agreed with his friend that life was not worth living and he would gladly end his existance with his friend. More beer was ordered and when Spanis went and produced a revolver.

It was arranged that Spanis should shoot Cassel and then himself, but when he put him self. Spanis pointed the revolver at his friend, but weakened. He was willing, he said, to kill himself, but he did not wish to kill his friend. More beer was had, and the men discussed the best way to put an end to their lives. Finally Cassel arose, picked up the weapon, and sent a bullet through his heart. He fell to the floor and expired almost instantly.

Spanis Will Die, Too.

Spanis regarded the form of his dead friend for a moment, then drew a knife from his hand in his hip pocket and drew forth a keen edged knife. Summoning some words in German he knelt over the form of Cassel, and severing himself that he was dead sent the blade of the knife into the flesh right above the heart. He is still alive, and gained consciousness enough to tell the story of the arrangement between himself and friend. The doctors say the man cannot live.

An Insane Mother's Awful Deed.

PHILADELPHIA, April 18.—A shocking affair took place on Emerson street, at the west end, Sunday. Mrs. James Robertson cut the throat of her three weeks old baby and then tried to kill herself. The screams of the woman heard insane shrieks and laughter from his wife, ran down stairs, and found her brandishing a razor over her head. On her leg lay the dead body of her infant cut from ear to ear. As soon as the husband could wrest the razor from his wife's hand he went to visit her own throat, but she struck at several times. Mr. Robertson sprang to the side of his wife and caught her arm. Her wounds are very serious, and it is thought that she will die. Mrs. Robertson has been afflicted with the grip, and when her babe was born her reason was impaired.

CHIEF FORD ACCUSED.

Mrs. Wright's Charges Against the Pension Official.

RAUM SAYS HE WILL INVESTIGATE

If the Woman's Story Is True, She Was Persecuted by Her Male Superior in Office

Bureau Because She Refused Certain Proposals—Ford in Trouble Before.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—The story of the persecution of Mrs. Carrie L. Wright has been a sensation to the people of Washington. Mrs. Wright is a clerk in the record division of the pension office, of which William T. Ford is assistant chief. Ford, it is said, although a married man, made improper proposals to her, which Mrs. Wright resented. From that day Mrs. Wright's life in the pension office has been a burden.

In every conceivable way Ford sought to be revenged, using his official power for this purpose. When she could stand it no longer, Mrs. Wright sought the advice and protection of Mr. Landon, also an assistant chief of the record division, and Landon took the matter to his chief, who at the time was W. H. Barker. Mr. Barker has since been discharged by Commissioner Raum.

Not Reported to Raum.

When testifying before the special committee investigating the pension office it admitted that Mr. Landon came to him with Mrs. Wright's story and that he immediately took her from the disagreeable work to which she had been assigned by Ford and restored her to her former desk. He did not, however, report the matter to the commissioner, believing that he could, as chief of the record division, afford Mrs. Wright ample protection from Ford's persecution. He said nothing to Ford about it, but made it his business to see that Ford did not interfere with Mrs. Wright. As long as he was in the office Mrs. Wright was unmolested, but whenever Mr. Barker was away he came back to the office again to find Mrs. Wright away from her desk and assigned to work at files, which compelled her to stand all day. After this occurred twice Mr. Barker issued an order that Mrs. Wright was not to be assigned to any other work.

This made Barker and Ford enemies, and no one rejoiced any more than Ford when Commissioner Raum brought the ax down on Baker's head.

Once Before Accused.

Ford's record as a clerk in the department is a good one, he having served the government for forty-three years, with but one break. That was a few years ago, when he was discharged from the pension office by Commissioner Black upon charges made against him by a woman clerk in the office. These charges were not reduced to writing. It is said, however, that they were of a similar nature to the charges now made against him by Mrs. Wright.

Commissioner Raum Talks.

Commissioner Raum was seen by a reporter about the Ford case. He said: "The first time I ever heard of this matter was about ten days ago when Ford told me that Mrs. Wright, a clerk under him, had been summoned to appear before the investigating committee and would be interrogated, he had reason to believe, concerning charges of improper conduct she had made against him. He denied that he had ever affronted the lady, and gave his version of the episode upon which the charges rested.

"He said he met her by chance one night two years ago, and having an office acquaintance with her he spoke to her and walked along by her side. Both of them turned up E street and walked together to Ninth street. Donohue, another pension office employee, was standing on the corner of Ninth and E, and Ford said, 'Donohue and Mrs. Wright came up, 'Donohue, you must not think anything of my escorting a good looking young widow along the street.'

"He spoke jestingly and lightly, he said, and both Mrs. Wright and Donohue smiled at the remark, and the lady walked on alone. That was Ford's story to me of his meeting Mrs. Wright on the street.

"The next morning Mrs. Wright came in very much agitated, and requested to speak with me privately. Then for the first time I heard her side of the matter. She had spoken to but two persons on the subject, she declared, and seemed at a loss to understand how the matter had reached the committee's ears. However, she declared that Ford had accosted her on the street with an improper proposal and she had repulsed him, and that he had afterwards subjected her to many annoyances and hardships in the assignments of the division in which she was employed. Mrs. Wright was so overcome by the prospect of the publicity of the matter that she went home sick. I told her I had no advice to give her except to tell the committee the whole truth. I explained to her that she owed it to herself to make a clean breast of the matter, keeping back nothing."

An Investigation to Be Made.

"Have you taken any steps to investigate the truth of Mrs. Wright's charge about Ford?"

"Not yet. I shall investigate it, however, at an early day. That portion of the charge relating to the conversation of the street is a question of veracity between the two. I have seen no witnesses as yet except Mrs. Wright. But I can ascertain from the work of the division, of which Ford is an assistant chief, if Mrs. Wright has suffered any hardship at his hands, and if she has it will go toward corroborating her story."

Mrs. Wright is a well appearing lady who stands well, so far as I know. I regard the charge as an exceedingly grave one. Men who have women under their direction and in some measure in their power ought to be held to the most accurate responsibility for their conduct. They cannot carry themselves with too strict propriety and no punishment would be too severe for him who had used his position as a superior under his charge or who had persecuted them for maintaining their purity and refusing to yield to him."

Da Costa versus Parkhurst.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Rev. Dr. Da Costa, who has repeatedly criticised Rev. Dr. Parkhurst's methods of suppressing crime, claims to have converted in her own house one of the women whom the Rev. Dr. Parkhurst had indicted.

Colonel Mix Has Parents.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Parents have seized Colonel James S. Mix, once Horace Greeley's protege and a nephew of James B. Swain. At the outbreak of the war he was appointed commander of the President's troop in Washington.

Easter at New York.

NEW YORK, April 18.—In all the Roman Catholic and Protestant Episcopal churches the Easter services were unusually elaborate. The parade in Fifth avenue was one of the finest ever seen.

BOTH MEN WERE MURDERED.

The Arrest of Tramps Throws Light on Railway's Mystery.

RAWLEY, Wy., April 18.—The tramps arrested in connection with the mysterious finding of the bodies of two men in the woods near this city have been held pending an investigation. The men under arrest identify the bodies as those of Thomas Welsh and John Davis. They assert that the men came into their camp intoxicated and carrying a jug of wood alcohol, for the possession of which a fight ensued. The men were driven from the camp, retaining, however, their alcohol. A number of men followed the two, but all the prisoners deny having been in the following party. They say that they heard shots and that the party returned soon afterward with the spirits.

The police believe that both men were murdered, and that at least one of the murderers has been captured. They base this belief on the fact that while one of the prisoners was being conducted to the lockup and while crossing the bridge which spans the river the prisoner threw something in the water. Subsequent search near the spot led to the finding of a revolver containing six cartridges, three of which had been discharged.

Hustlers Still on the Shoot.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., April 18.—General John R. Brooke, at Omaha, has telegraphed Governor Barber that he had been instructed by the secretary of war to deliver to him the forty odd cattlemen now imprisoned at Fort McKinney. The removal of the prisoners from McKinney to Douglas would be very hazardous. It is certain the rustlers will try to kill them on the way.

Brazil's New Dictatorship.

LONDON, April 18.—The Times prints a letter from a merchant in North Brazil, who writes: "Federal authority has repeatedly violated the constitution as regards the autonomy of this and many other states, even to the extent of employing an armed force. We are once more subject to a military dictatorship under the name of republic."

A Would Be Suicide Saved.

NEW YORK, April 18.—Henry Nesbit, a traveling salesman for James H. Chambers, of 196 Church street, threw himself from a ferryboat into the North river but was rescued by a deckhand. He would not say why he tried to drown himself, except that he was tired of life.

Baron Fava Will Return.

WASHINGTON, April 18.—Speaking of the report that Baron Fava has been ordered to the United States by the Italian government, his son, Francis Fava, who is an architect in Washington, said he believed that the baron would return to Washington.

A Married Lady.

The other day a Colonel Bascup was arrested and arraigned before a justice's court on a charge of abusing a colored woman.

"What did this man do?" asked the judge of a woman.

"He used 'sultin language, sah."

"What did he say?"

"I was workin at his house, an while he was on the front porch a colored gen'le man come up an axed, 'Is dar a colored lady heah named Jane?' 'Dar's a colored 'oman heah by dat name,' said de white man. Dat's what he said."

"Is that all?"

"Ah! Ain't dat a nuff? Callin me a 'oman. I'll hab him ter know dat I'se a lady."

"Look here, Jane," said the judge, "were you not convicted in this court some time ago of stealing a feather bed?"

"Certainly I was 'victed when I 'knowledged de fack."

"Then why do you come around here calling yourself a lady?"

"Well, yer see, when I stole de bed I was a single 'oman."

"Yes."

"But now, sah, I'se a married lady."

An appeal to the supreme court will no doubt be taken.—Texas Siftings.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

THE CHURCH MOUSE.

The Experience of Two Bonny Little Maidens One Bright December Morning.

Rosy as blushing apples were two sunny little maidens. They were twin sisters and so much alike that scarcely any one but their mother could tell them apart.

They were very fond of going to church with their parents and would sit quite still during the long service, for they greatly enjoyed the organ and the fine singing of the choir. They called December morning their mother called them, and tying on their pretty scarlet cloaks and hoods, bade them go alone, as their father was not well and she must remain at home to nurse him. So little Lucy trotted off hand in hand, and entered the family pew in which they were accustomed to sit.

The choir was just beginning to sing a hymn, and Rosy had found the place in the book—when scratch, scratch, scratch! What could that be? Then a squeak and patter of little feet and, looking around, they saw a saucy brown mouse, who, feeling rather hungry, after the proverbial custom of church mice, had ventured out in search of food. They had a bit of bread in her pocket which she had put away at breakfast time for the birds, so pulling it out she pushed it along the seat, and they were both delighted at seeing the mouse making a hearty meal. Did not their father and mother laugh when, reaching home, the twins told their morning's experience with the unbidden guest at church?

Who Introduced Christmas Trees.

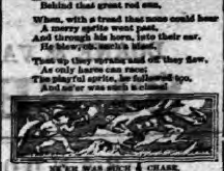
A Christmas tree, with its branches loaded with gay and knickknacks, makes, when its tiny candles of various colors have all been lighted, a pretty object. We have grown so accustomed to see it now that it is hard to think that there ever was a time when Christmas jollifications were not adorned with a nicely decked tree. As a matter of fact, the use of the tree is of a very recent origin in England and America. It is said that the late prince consort, who was the father of the Prince of Wales, introduced the custom of Christmas trees in England in 1840. There were grand festivities in Windsor castle, one of the homes of Queen Victoria, and he provided a handsome tree covered with beautiful presents that were afterward distributed among the queen's guests, old and young alike. Prince Albert borrowed the idea from his native country of Germany, where the tree has been a feature of Christmas gatherings for a long period.

Behind the Bars.

There are two bars behind the bars,
Two bars one sees quite plain,
And wondered what there was to see
Behind that great old pair.

When, with a trend that none could hear
A merry sprite went past,
And through his horn, into their ear,
He blew with all his might.

Then up the grass and off they flew,
As only hares can race;
The playful sprite, he followed too,
And after was such a chase!



HE'D HAD SUCH A CHASE.

Away he blew, and on they went—
The sun sank in the west;
And, till their mad career at length was spent,
They never stopped to rest.

The sprite took wing to join the elves,
And vanished in the air;
The hares sat down to cool themselves,
And wonder where they were.

"This seems the land of plight to me,"
For thus the leveret cried one;
"I really think at last that we Have got behind the sun!"

A Little Boy's Troubles.

I thought when I'd learned my letters,
That all my troubles were done,
But I find myself much mistaken,
They only have just begun.
Learning to read was dreadful,
But nothing like learning to write;
I'd be sorry to have you tell it,
But my copybook is a fright.

The ink gets over my fingers,
The pen cuts all sorts of shines,
And won't do at all as I bid it;
The letters aren't easy on the line,
But go up and down and all over,
As though they were dancing a jig.
They are there in all shapes and sizes,
Medium, little and big.

There'd be some comfort in learning
If other folks were in books awriting,
Of that there are books awaiting.
Quite enough to cram my head;
There's that spelling and 'rithmetic
And grammar, and—oh, dear me!
There's no good place for stopping
When once we begun, I see.

My teacher says little by little
To the mountain top we climb.
It isn't all done in a minute,
But only a step at a time;
She says that all the scholars,
All the wise and learned men,
Had each to begin as I do,
If that's so—wisn't my pen?

Truth.

That truth is safe and mighty as well as beautiful is illustrated by the following incident of a boy twelve years old who, with only truth as a weapon, confronted a smart and shrewd lawyer who was fighting for a bad cause.

Walter was the important witness in a lawsuit. One of the lawyers, after cross examining him severely, said:

"Your father has been talking to you and telling you how to testify, hasn't he?"

"Yes," said the boy.

"Now," said the lawyer, "just tell us how your father told you to testify."

"Well," said the boy meekly, "father told me that the lawyer would try to tangle me in my testimony, but if I would just be careful and tell the truth I could tell the same thing every time."

WASPY A-TOOTER.

The Man Who Just Stepped Into Town Quietly.

He bustled into a doorway on Broadway near Canal and they snapped his fingers at a newsboy and said:

"Bah, I may want to buy you out, or I may not want a single paper. I'm not going to tell whether I want a certain article in it or not. I'll have to look 'em over to see."

"Is it about the spotted dog?" queried the boy.

"No."

"About the injunction to close saloons on Sunday?"

"No. Look here, sonny, I'm a stranger in town. I just stepped in here quietly but with, without a word to anybody. That's my way. Because I happen to be mayor of Waspville and have

BREVITIES

—Mr. Beach will cook an entire dinner to-morrow afternoon at 41 Park avenue and invites everyone to call.

—Only a few more of the new storage rooms are now left at Carey's storage warehouse on West Front street.

—The Day Nursery referred to in yesterday's News is to open seven o'clock in the morning, instead of nine o'clock.

—In the case of W. W. Correll who was arrested on the charge of obstructing the sidewalk with barrels, etc., City Judge Codington suspended sentence.

—Ralph Hedley, a young man who is charged by the Elizabeth police with stealing chickens, was arrested at Dunellen Sunday.

—The Republican primary for the election of delegates to the State Convention at Trenton will be held at Spencer's Hall this evening at eight p. m.

—An interesting feature of the Easter afternoon service at Grace Church was the presentation of the Rector's medal for general merit to Master William Bull of the choir.

—A transparency bearing the words "Salvation Army" has taken the place of the liquor sign that hung over the door in front of the defunct "Elk wood" on West Second street.

—It is very important that every member of the Melopois should be present at this evening's rehearsal at the Casino, as there will be but three more rehearsals before the concert.

—Dr. D. C. Adams will exhibit and describe a skeleton under the auspices of the Young Men's Auxiliary at the Y. M. C. A. rooms this evening. Boys over 14 years of age are invited.

—The application of Mr. Frank Linke of North Plainfield for a liquor license was granted to-day at Somerville, by the Somerset county court. There was no opposition and the judges voted unanimously in Mr. Linke's favor.

—The Hunterdon Republican gives the best explanation of the uses of a constitution in the following language: "It serves as a guide and protection when the Democrats are not in power, and serves them as a plaything when they are."

—The People's Popular Entertainment was a decided success at Reform Hall last evening. All the artists were well received. The entertainment was of a high order and great credit is due the Reform Club and the managers. The next entertainment will be duly advertised.

—It would be very pleasing to many of the attendants at the Church of the Holy Cross if some means were devised whereby the worshippers up the nave could be avoided during the procession of the officiating clergy. The noise thus occasioned drowns the music. "Let everything be done decently and in order."

—The opening of the "outing sale" in the new Unitarian church on Park avenue, adjoining the Albion, will take place at 6 p. m. to-day. The sale will extend through this afternoon and evenings of the next two days, commencing at three p. m. Each evening an etchi o'clock and each afternoon at 4.30 there will be a short and pleasing entertainment.

—There was an exciting annual election at Elizabeth last night at which a clean sweep was made of everything in their power to obviate the possibility of ever again having another frightful accident. It was understood that this evening was to be guarded night and day. Since then a number of people have had their fingers pointed at that point. The Bagman leaves at 8.20 in the morning and as much of the snow as can be tracked at that place, thus obstructing the view so that a person cannot see an approaching train.

—Very interesting exercises were held at the barracks of the Salvation Army on West Second street last evening. Major and Mrs. Evans and Adjutants Dunham and Binder were present. The meeting was the swearing in of recruits to the ranks of the Army, of whom there were many. Major Evans admonished and addressed the volunteers, urging them to "enlist for the good fight of Jesus Christ and to stand firm in the combat with the common enemy. During the ceremony the flag of the Army and the Nation were held over the soldiers. A very earnest and favorable address followed by Adjutant Dunham. The singing of the Army songs, led by a cornet, was very inspiring. The attendance was large.

Dunellen and New Market.

The members of the First Presbyterian church, Dunellen, are about building a chapel for Sunday-school purposes.

Invitations are out for a social in New Market Hall this evening. The committee is Wm. G. Gites, E. S. Schenck, C. H. Giles.

A "Martha Washington Tea Party" will be given on Wednesday evening in the old school-house, Dunellen, for the benefit of the school library.

PERSONAL.

The Children's Home loses a valuable assistant in the death of Miss Kittie Henderson, to which we briefly referred yesterday. She was but nineteen years old. The cause of death was rheumatism, of which she had been ill only about a month. She is to be buried at Somerville to-morrow, at three p. m. There will be a brief service at the Home in North Plainfield at 12.30.

WINSOME WOMAN WAYS

THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB HAVE A JOYOUS TIME.

Observations by one of the Brightest of the Sex in Plainfield, Illustrated by The News Artist "on the Spot," but Unknown.

WOMAN made a stir in Plainfield yesterday. The fourth anniversary of the Monday Afternoon Club as celebrated will long be remembered by those who were present to enjoy it. It was a feast for soul and body. The very thought of what was before us, made our step elastic as we wended our way to the Congregational church, where the interesting exercises were so admirably carried out.

The first view as we entered the door of the pretty church, the flowers, and solid mass of beauty evidenced in the tasteful Spring costumes and bonnets, put our hearts in tune for the intellectual feast in store, as ornamentation of a table whets the appetite for the food to be eaten.

Women seemed to know her place on the occasion and sustained it well. From beginning to end with earnest, sober, uplifting thought, and good results, both morally and intellectually must certainly follow such infusion of methods and such interchange of language from the lips of talented

WIT AND SIXTH JOINED HANDS

LEADERS AMONG WOMEN.

This transition period for woman seems to be more taking than such periods usually are credited to it. We think the interval between starting an undertaking and reaching the successful issue as unsatisfactorily uncertain. We think of the error and right, a wavering between approved and unapproved methods. But yesterday we were not like the dog in Mrs. Blackwell's story, who did not know where he was going because he had eaten his tag. We knew where we were going, for after our souls had dilated to a veritable Jacob's ladder, we were travelling up and down between heaven and earth almost satisfied that we might step on the top rung, we all wended our way to the

which was kindly thrown open to the women of the town as a rendezvous for the Casino for luncheon. There, hungry, tired souls, as our Creator ever looked like little children, were fed with the sense of a worthy photograph as preserving memory of the occasion, we will keep unfolded the bewildering beauty in our mind's eye.

The stage was a bower of green, climbing ivy, ferns, feathery lilies, flowering potted plants.

The entire floor was arranged with tables made to fit a unique design; 150 candles were burning, images of our souls on fire, and the hearts of ladies graced by the worthy officers of our club.

The Gong d 'oeil from the balcony of the fantastic scene is one never to be forgotten.

The day was perfect, all arrangements perfectly carried out, and so long as success attended the efforts of the Committee of arrangements, what matter what the cost, even of sleep, was necessary to accomplish it. "A red letter day" does not express the satisfaction of all concerned. We were all on fire, and our resolves to benefit by the lessons taught of to all will develope into better work, in our club, and out of our club towards friends and towards fellow citizens.

Amidst all this enjoyment "regret" did creep in. We were all thinking of "THE MEN WE HAD LEFT BEHIND US."

Our president facetiously remarked that one had almost wished to make this a toast, but reflection suggested the different form of "fathers, husbands, brothers, sons"—but the men were left behind all the same.

Our hearts say, it 'll the day come when Plainfield's men and women shall for the projects which will elevate both and which will make our brother and sister a worthier image of God who made us. P.

Messrs. Howard Fleming, W. T. Pelletier and W. R. Cock.

The annual parish meeting of the Church of the Holy Cross took place last evening. The following church officers were elected: Wardens—Geo. P. Dupee and Samuel Townsend. Vestrymen—Mason W. Tyler, Charles J. Tagart, Thomas E. Warman, John H. Carman, M. D., and Wm. L. Saunders. Delegates to Diocesan Convention—T. Frank Allen, Jr., and J. B. Platt. Alternates—Geo. F. Edwards, Charles Graves and Henry P. Williams.

"Young Mrs. Winthrop."

The entertainment at Music Hall last evening had a large audience, and proved a most gratifying success. The Brooklyn Comedy Company presented "Young Mrs. Winthrop" admirably, and the leading lady was brought before the curtain and the entire company received a generous share of applause. The entertainment was given under the auspices of the entertainment committee of Wetumpka Lodge, of which Mr. F. P. Haffner is chairman, and to did them all credit. Edsall furnished the rugs and carpets that were used on the stage.

WILL THEY RACE AT ELIZABETH?

The Authorities and Church People are on the Alert.

Prosecutor Marsh of Union county, yesterday notified Constable Van Syoc that if an attempt is made to reopen the Dwyer track this Spring at Elizabeth he will be required to put all evidence possible as to the system of betting, so it could be laid before the May Grand Jury with a view to indictments. He was informed by Sheriff Voorhees that the racing would be stopped for a twenty days' meet next month. The track is in excellent condition and the fact that the jockey and a member of the New Jersey Jockey Club, says it could be made ready for a May race, together with the report that Sheriff Voorhees had issued orders to deputies, caused considerable excitement among the sellers by Peter De Lacy, or his associates. Prosecutor Marsh replied that he would see to it that the law was not violated, and would consider it his duty to get all the evidence possible and present it to the Grand Jury if they would urge indictments.

There is no race yet at the New Jersey Jockey Club course that these will be racing next week.

The church people are getting uneasy over the matter and begin to think they will have another big fight on their hands. Senator Garret A. Van Syckel has declared that if there are any more convictions for race track gambling in Union county he will consign the lawbreakers to State prison.

—There will be evening prayer at five o'clock every day hereafter in the new Grace Church.

THE PARK CLUB VICTORIOUS.

Its Bowling Team Succeeds in Defeating the Country Club Team.

A team chosen from the members of the Park Club visited the alleys of the Union County Country Club last evening and rolled a game with a team chosen from that club. A large number of persons were present and the game was an interesting one. The Union County Country Club was defeated in the first game by 122 pins and in the second game by eleven pins. The scores were:

Did Wood Alcohol Kill Them?

County Physician Wescott has given permission for the burial of the two tramps who were found dead in Gibby's woods at Rahway. The certificate gives the cause of death as drinking wood alcohol and from exposure.

The bottle found near one of the bodies was half filled with wood alcohol which the men had probably stolen from a paint-shop. The stuff they swallowed was almost enough to kill them. It so stupified them that they fell easy victims to the inclement weather.

The remains have been identified by tramps as Thomas Welsh and John Davis. It is claimed by some that the one known as Davis is really Andrew Perry, of Elizabeth, who was recently discharged from the county jail after serving ten days for drunkenness.

A Delicate Surgical Operation.

A delicate surgical operation was performed this week on Peter Staats of Dunellen. Mr. Staats two months ago was taken with a severe attack of la grippe. A short time ago thinking himself thoroughly cured he yesterday out, taking from cold a relapse followed. From that time on his head began to annoy him and physicians were called, but they could give him no relief. Finally a consultation was held and the patient notified that he must undergo an operation. Ether was administered to him and a large incision made back of the ear disclosing an abscess in an advanced state of maturity. It was taken out, the scalp sewed up, and Mr. Staats is now improving.

From Mr. H. N. Spencer.

The Plainfield Reform Club desires to respectfully notify their numerous friends and patrons that the entertainment given by the club on Thursday evening last was a success in every particular, and will be followed by others of the same character, which we believe will be worthy support. We believe Reform Hall can and should be profitably devoted to the purposes of the moral instruction and elevation of our citizens, mentally, morally, and religiously, and that clean, moral entertainments should be popular at low prices, permitting those of moderate means to enjoy the advantages, even from civil necessities. We hope it can be shown that our club and its friends are capable of carrying out Christian philanthropic work, for which the club was organized, and that Reform Hall may be devoted in every way possible to the promotion of temperance and total abstinence. We solicit the co-operation and sympathy of our Christian and philanthropic friends, and especially the ministers of the gospel, who may, by precept and example, be instrumental in the uplifting of the fallen, and what is a thousand times more important, preserving the young men and boys from the contaminating influences which confront them on every hand. We ask the co-operation of the parents of the boys, and the patronage of the public, and to be favored with their personal attendance.

It is hoped that many other young men, Sunday or Grammar schools will volunteer to give their talents for the entertainments of the club, and thus become useful to themselves and neighbors.

More books and other attractions are greatly needed in the parlors of the club, and we assure our patrons that the profits of the club will be devoted to procuring such additions as may be needed.

Very respectfully,

H. N. SPENCER, President.

Analysis of Water.

[Published by request of Plainfield Board of Education.]

Owing to a rumor which has been in circulation to some extent in our city that the well water used by the teachers and scholars of the High and Franklin schools is polluted and unfit, as well as dangerous to use, and has in some instances made the scholars sick so that they and the teachers were unwilling, and could not possibly drink it, the Board of Education desire to state that great care has been used in the construction of the well, that the best possible drinking water might be furnished to those who desire it.

The well is a combination of a dug and drilled well, having an excavation of seventy-five feet and a pipe driven or drilled twenty-five feet in the earth from the bottom of the well.

Desiring to use every sanitary measure and precaution to preserve the health of those attending or in any way connected with our schools, the Board of Education have thought it advisable to have a thorough and careful chemical analysis made of the well water used by the teachers and scholars of the High and Franklin schools, and herewith submit the following analysis and statement as made by H. P. Reynolds:

PLAINFIELD, Plainfield, N. J.

GENTLEMEN:—In compliance with your request, I have made a qualitative chemical examination of a sample of water taken from the well in the yard of the High School house located between Fifth and Fourth streets near the line of Arlington avenue, and I beg to submit the following report:

I examined the water, and condition. The sample is free from taste, odor or color. It is not, however, free from particles of rock and rust of iron serving to give it a medium degree of turbidity. This condition is probably due to the recent length of this well-bore, (125) and to the fact that more than half of this bore stands in a due-well, unsupported by the sides, but is exposed to the liquid-test to vibrations caused by the action of pumping.

Second, Application of Tests:—FOR ORGANIC MATTERS: These are present only in minute proportions—in fact, are believed to be negligible.

FOR FREE AMMONIA: The tests indicate the entire absence of free ammonia, and this, in connection with the absence of impurities of animal origin.

FOR CHLORINE: It is slightly expected by find—at this small distance from the sea—a Natural water absolutely free from any trace of chloride, and it is probably agreed that a proportion of chlorine equal to one grain per gallon does not imply pollution. In this water the absence of any chloride indicates the presence of less than one half of a grain—probably not more than one quarter of a grain per gallon.

FOR NITRATES: The tests used are said to indicate the presence of nitrates in so small a proportion as one to one million, applied to this sample they affect no change whatever, thus the more obvious that the water is free from nitrites.

It will be understood that the healthfulness of water as a beverage is not affected by the presence or absence of nitrates, of chlorides or of nitrites in the usual small proportions. But these things are important if found in such quantities as to indicate pollution from drains or vaults.

In this instance we find the quality of the water comes within the requirements of our State and city Board of Health, and I think the people of Plainfield well water as to quality, and we are justified in saying the water is a wholesome drinking water so far as can be determined by the most recent methods of QUALITATIVE examination.

I remain, very respectfully yours,

Very truly yours,

H. P. REYNOLDS.

EDITORIAL NOTES

On a Level.

If we are poor folk we are accustomed to think of the rich as possessing great advantages over ourselves. But is it true? Once it may have been, but the sourest cynic cannot deny that all modern invention has advanced in the one direction of leveling the condition of rich and poor.

Does the many millioned man desire to go from his country place to the city, twenty miles away—he must go by the same train that carries the poorest laborer or street cleaner to his daily toil. He cannot reach his splendid office a minute sooner or more comfortably than the laborer. Does he wish to go across the continent—he can indeed have his own special car; but even in that case the special train has to switch off and clear the track for the regular train which conveys the poor man in the common car. The millionaire may have luxuries that mitigate the miseries of railroad travel, but he will not reach his destination as soon as the common man.

Does the millionaire start across the Atlantic in his own private yacht? Not an ocean yacht has been built that will travel as fast as the ordinary passenger steamer that cleaves the wave like a bird. Besides that the yacht is smaller, and will be tossed upon the waters twice as much as the big ship, and the millionaire will suffer more from seasickness than even the steerage passenger in the people's steamer. The same sky is above both, the same green waves dance beneath them.

No private library contains so many and such valuable books as those in the public libraries that the poorest man may visit free if he is clean, and in some cases when he is not. In the parks of cities on stated days are concerts, and the musicians are often the same that the millionaire must pay a price to hear. Even the public bathhouses now being planned in some of the cities will rival in luxury that of the rich man in his home. In the public parks, attached to every town of a thousand inhabitants, the trees and flowers can be in the nature of things rarer and more beautiful than those of the private citizen. Gas, water works, electric lighting and cheap newspapers are enjoyed by the laborer equally with the millionaire. We are all on a level.

Noblesse Oblige.

It has been justly a matter of congratulation in the United States that the influence of social life has mainly touched those who occupy the highest positions socially in our young country. The court circles of Europe are seldom free from scandals of one kind or another involving persons in the so called highest rank. Here, in America our leading family for generations have been thoroughly honest, respectable citizens, and our millionaires are almost without exception decent men.

It is as it should be. The higher place one occupies in a community the more careful should he be to lead a clean life and to be just, gentle and courteous. Though a woman be merely one of the leaders of a village social life, that very fact puts her under obligation to use always the sweetest, most gracious manners she knows, to let her tongue wag it no gossip or scandal, to pronounce no idle, malicious criticism on a sister woman. Because others look up to her, for that reason she must lead the perfect life. Bad temper, deceit, jealousy and small meanness are really more wicked in her than in her lowly neighbor. With a standing to which others look up even an inch goes the grand obligation to make ourselves worthy of this position. Noblesse oblige always.

The treaty making power is one that England has always reserved to herself in connection with her colonies. Last year, when Newfoundland concluded a commercial agreement with the United States on the reciprocity plan, Canada protested against it on the ground that it injured her fisheries, and England refused to ratify it, much to the wrath and disgust of the people of Newfoundland. The people of Newfoundland have not forgotten the interference, and this spring retaliation on their part takes the shape of cutting off the Canadians' fish bait. Canada found the imperial negative very convenient last year, but now she wants to make some treaties for herself. There are statesmen at Ottawa who really believe that Canada should have an independent treaty making power, and one of them, Hon. David Mills, moves a resolution in the house that Canada should have the right to make her own commercial treaties. Circumstances make a difference, it seems. Affairs of the British North American provinces grow more tangled, and the general feeling there becomes more restive. The chains pull hard. Evidently a change is coming.

When meteors or other bodies approach too near the sun they are drawn into it and swallowed up. A great disturbance of the sun's atmosphere occurred lately some astronomers, who were taking photographs of the sun, saw a sudden flashing and heaving of its atmosphere attended with the ascent of vapor to a distance of 80,000 miles. They ascribed the connection to a meteoric

JUDGE MAYNARD'S CASE

The Majority Report Upholds All of His Acts.

DENOUNCED BY MINORITY MEMBERS

They Allege That the Investigation of Maynard Was a Farce from Beginning to End and Recommend That the Judge Be Dismissed from the Bench.

ALBANY, April 19.—The reports of both majority and minority on the Maynard investigation were presented to the senate. The majority report concluded that the witnesses were all prejudiced against the judge prior to the time of the investigation. The minority report reviews the testimony at great length. It finds that the testimony in every case justifies the charges and demands the resignation of Judge Maynard. The testimony in the contested election cases will go over until next session. The majority report says:

The Majority Report.

We examined the evidence taken before the association of the bar and the report based thereon. It charges Judge Maynard with wrong, first, in his having taken from the office of the comptroller on the morning of Dec. 22 a sealed envelope containing one of the certificates of canvassers which had been transmitted to that officer through the mail by the county clerk of Dutchess county; second, by his acquiescence in the canvass of the Myled returns by the board of state canvassers, on the ground that the sealed returns were opened by him were not before them. Judge Maynard gave to the board of state canvassers advice as to their duties in every one of the cases in which there was a contest. His advice was affirmed in every instance by the court of appeals. The charges against Judge Maynard are confined entirely to the advice he gave in reference to contest in the Fifteenth senatorial district.

The report then recited the status of the case in that district in all its phases.

Regarding the stipulation which they say Judge Maynard, acting for the board of state canvassers, entered into a stipulation with the relators, acting for the Republican party in the county of Dutchess. This stipulation was made not alone in the Dutchess county case, but also in the Onondaga, Steuben and Rensselaer senatorial district cases. The majority report continues:

The entire object of that stipulation was to benefit the Republican party and prevent a possible wrong being done by the board of state canvassers in at that date awarding to Osborne his certificate of election.

By the terms of that stipulation it was expressly provided that the proceedings of the board of state canvassers relating to the canvass of votes for senator in that and the other districts in controversy should be suspended until the determination of the court of appeals upon an appeal to be forthwith taken from the order made in such various contested election cases.

The committee of the bar association express "astonishment that a proposition should be seriously maintained by a public officer holding a place in the highest judicial tribunal of the commonwealth to the effect that the board of state canvassers, by agreement with private individuals who may have instituted suit against it, to directly suspend the operation of the laws of the state."

This language, while forcible, is meaningless. The duty of the board of canvassers was that it was the duty of the board of state canvassers to have counted the Myled certificates of canvass and the official canvass reduction upon the assumed integrity of those sentenced that they should complain that Judge Maynard, though acting as a lawyer that it was the duty of the board to canvass forthwith, should, for the purpose of being certain that there was no error in his advice by which the defeated Republican candidate could be injured, have urged the board to stretch their powers to the extent, after refusing to receive and act upon "the solemn evidences of the popular will," but to await the decision of the highest tribunal of the state on the allegations made by the Republican contestants, that they were not under duty if they counted such returns at that time.

Approved and Then Criticised.

It may be that Judge Maynard erred in giving the advice. In the light of subsequent events we believe the Myled certificate should have been counted then and there. But it is an error of judgment that asks and approves a concession and then criticises those who have granted it.

The majority report says that when the stipulation was signed Judge Maynard did not know the situation of any other litigation than the one to which his clients were parties, but the same relators were engaged in another proceeding by which they sought to obtain a mandamus compelling the board of canvassers to canvass the votes of the county of Dutchess to recanvass and recanvass the vote of that county. It is claimed by Judge Maynard that the fair intent of the stipulation and his understanding of it was that it meant that no other proceedings of any kind were to be taken to alter the situation in which the board of canvassers then stood, and the majority believe his views to be correct.

Politics in It, They Say.

The majority report then charges that the Republicans by an order sought to obtain, during the armistice which they had secured, the filing of a fraudulently corrected return without a hearing upon the merits, a hearing they dared not have. After reviewing the whole case at great length the majority report says that the action of the State Bar association in making the charge was personal animus against Judge Maynard.

We have determined that in all that Judge Maynard did he acted as an honorable, upright and conscientious lawyer. We have looked in vain for an attack by the Bar association upon any officer taking his appointment from Republican sources. The memorial addressed to the legislature relative to Judge Maynard is in the act of the Republican party and its allies. Therefore, in concluding, your committee recommends the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved, That the action of the county clerk of Dutchess county in forwarding an alleged statement of the canvass of the votes of that county to the governor, secretary of state and comptroller on Dec. 21, 1891, was unauthorized and illegal, and in violation of two injunction orders of the supreme court, then in force, enjoining him from doing so. Its procurement by Republican counsel was a breach of good faith and a violation of the stipulation and proceedings under it, by virtue of which alone the state board of canvassers then had jurisdiction of the matter and it was the duty of the county clerk to immediately take the necessary steps to regain possession of the same and it was the duty of the state officers to whom they had delivered and their attorneys to cause same to be returned to him upon his request. That said statement of the canvass was in truth false and fraudulent and not the only one sent in the canvass of the votes for senator in that county in the last election, and it has been in fact so determined recently by the general term of the supreme court in the second department.

Second—That when such statement reached the office of the comptroller on the morning of Dec. 22, 1891, it was his duty and that of his attorneys and all other persons representing him, not theretofore it, but to cause it to be immediately returned to the custody of the officer who had illegally transmitted it.

Third—That in causing such statement to be returned unopened to the county clerk Judge Maynard had full authority from the board of canvassers, as his attorney, to act for him in the matter. That in so doing he did not violate any promise made to the Republican state committee or to any other person, and that in so doing he did not violate any duty he owed to the board of canvassers, but on the contrary performed his duty to the board of canvassers, and the individual members thereof, including the return of this statement unopened, were in accordance with the strictest code of professional ethics, and were designed to obtain a canvass of the votes cast in conformity to the law, and to prevent the commission of great public wrongs, and have our unqualified approval.

Fifth—That the committee on the appointment of Judge Maynard by Governor Flower as a judge of the court of appeals as eminently fitting and just, and well deserved recognition of his long and faithful public services, his integrity of character and ability as a lawyer.

Sixth—That the final action of the state board of canvassers in the Fifteenth senatorial district and in the other senatorial districts was strictly in accordance with law and with the decision of the court of appeals in such cases, and resulted in the return of the men of votes legally cast in each district, and by means of it the conspiracy on the part of the Republican leaders to nullify the ballot reform law and to issue certificates of election to candidates not lawfully elected was defeated, and that for this action each state board of canvassers is entitled to the commendation of the people of the state.

The Minority Report.

The minority report alleges that the majority members of the committees, with but one or two possible exceptions, did not intend to make any real investigation into the charges against Judge Maynard, and that the committee's counsel have conducted the proceedings upon certain lines apparently settled upon in advance.

Their evident purpose has been to present only such testimony as would either tend to refute the charges against the judge or discredit the witnesses who prepared the report of the Bar association. All to time have shown a disposition to get at the truth of the matter. There are a great many facts which were not developed, and which in our opinion would throw a flood of light upon the questions presented for the consideration of the committees. We asked for subpoenas to bring before the committees the persons by whom such facts could be established. The request was arbitrarily denied.

In the face of these circumstances we think we are justified in asserting that there has been no fair and impartial investigation of the matters referred to the committees, but that the plan of the so called investigation was deliberately planned and has been carried out by the majority of the committees with the sole purpose of suppressing or obscuring, so far as it was possible to do so, the facts that would damage to Judge Maynard's reputation.

The minority claim that the attorneys who framed the charges against Maynard are among the most eminent lawyers in the state and nation. Seven of the nine have long been identified with the Democratic party, of which Judge Maynard is also a member. In the course of their report the minority say:

When Judge Maynard took that paper from the comptroller's office and delivered it to Emmis he deprived the board of state canvassers of that which alone can verified the true result of the election in Dutchess county, and thereby aided in depriving the people of the Fifteenth senatorial district of their lawful representation in the state senate.

There can be no reasonable doubt but that Judge Maynard did in removing that paper was a statutory crime. But the seriousness of his offense is to be measured not by the motives which prompted it and the chemistakes under which it was perpetrated. It was not done upon a sudden impulse. On the contrary, it was done deliberately and after the fullest consideration. There is only one explanation of the fact that Judge Maynard, which is, that the [illegible] mentioned, together with Judge Maynard himself, conspired to prevent the canvass of the returns as certified by the judgment and order of Judge Barnard, from reaching those persons to whom the statute directed they should be transmitted. The scheme was frustrated, so far as the attempt to carry it out by legal methods was concerned, by the fact that Judge Maynard, to Judge Ingraham did not reach County Clerk Emmis until after he had issued the returns, pursuant to the statute, for counting to what was to be announced, that the crime of abstracting documents from public offices should be committed.

They Want Maynard Removed.

The minority believe that not only is there no defense on the part of Judge Maynard, but that the offenses which he committed do not present any extenuating circumstances and recommend the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved (if the assembly concur), That Isaac R. Maynard, a judge of the court of appeals, be and he hereby is removed from the position of such judge, pursuant to the provisions of section 11, article 6 of the constitution.

In the senate Mr. Rosch presented the majority report on the Maynard matter and Mr. Saxton the minority report, and they were laid on the table for printing. One hour is to be allowed for discussion.

SEVEN MEN ANNIHILATED

Blown to Bits by a Nitro-Glycerin Explosion.

BUT A SINGLE MAN'S WEIGHT LEFT.

Of the Mangled Bodies Only About One Hundred and Fifty Pounds of Mangled Flesh and Bone Were Found—Buildings Rocked as if on a Stormy Sea.

NEWARK, N. J., April 19.—The works of the American Forcite Powder company, a short distance from the landing station at Lake Hopatcong, on the Morris and Essex railway, blew up shortly after 3 o'clock and seven men were blown to atoms. The killed are:

J. D. Smith, superintendent of the works.
Jacob Carlson.
William Pierce.
James Vagh.
A. Johnson.
Godfrey Water.
An unknown Swede.

Besides these two men were injured. One of them, Benjamin Cassimore, will probably die.

The Shock Was Terrific.

The works of the company consisted of a number of small buildings scattered at a distance of about 300 feet from each other. The nitro-glycerin mill was the first building to go up, and the shock of the explosion caused the other buildings to be set asunder by the explosion of their dangerous contents. The report was terrific and was heard in the surrounding country for many miles. Buildings in the vicinity rocked as if on a stormy sea, and in some instances appeared as if about to topple over.

The startled residents rushed from their houses and saw a cloud of dust and smoke flying through the air near the lower part of the company's works. They knew instantly what had happened and ran for the mountain side, fearful that some of the large storage houses of the company, in which there were tons of the highest and deadliest explosives, might go off at any moment. When several minutes had passed without their fears being realized, the people cautiously advanced to the scene of the explosion. The wreckage was found to be on fire and burning fiercely. The most timid of those present seeing in this a new danger—there being a possibility that the flames might spread to the storage houses—again fled. The others, however, ran out the company's fire apparatus and water from the lake was used to fight the fire.

Mangled Flesh and Bone.

In a short time the flames were under control, and then the wreckage scattered about was overhauled in the purpose of finding the bodies who had been at work in the buildings. Within a few minutes two men were found, both badly injured. The first was Benjamin Cassimore, who was also called and it was found that seven men were missing, and a search was begun for their bodies.

The missing men were mostly old employees of the company and know that in a case like the present one it was useless to search among the ruins that still remained where the buildings had stood. They found pieces of flesh and bones scattered over several acres of ground. After several hours' work the searchers had succeeded in gathering about 150 pounds of flesh and bone, and bone which is all that remains of the dead men. The cause of the explosion is not known, and representatives of the company on the scene say that it will be impossible to ascertain it.

NEWS FROM ALBANY.

Wissig Pleads to Have His Woman Suffrage Speech Printed.

ALBANY, April 19.—Assemblyman Phillip Wissig is trying to crawl out of his unpleasant and threatening position in which his recklessly indecent speech on the woman suffrage bill has placed him.

Rising to a question of privilege in the assembly he pleaded that he didn't intend anything wrong in the now notorious speech and begged that the speech be printed.

Mr. Wissig pleaded that it was impossible, as he had directed that the stenographer's notes be destroyed, and it had been done.

It looks as though the extra session to reapportion the senate and assembly districts will not be called until the first part of next week, probably Tuesday at the earliest. Some time will be required to reapportion on the basis of the figures of the recent state enumeration, which will not be available before Monday or Tuesday.

The governor has appointed John S. Little, of Utica, to be trustee of the Soldiers' and Sailors' home.

MODUS VIVENDI SIGNED.

Seals to Be Protected for Another Season.

DAMAGES PROMISED THE POACHERS

The Canadian Seal Pirates Will Be Paid for Their Losses if the Arbitration of the Behring Sea Troubles Goes Against the United States Government.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—An agreement between the United States and Great Britain for a modus vivendi in relation to the fur seal fisheries in Behring sea for the present season has been signed by Sir Julian Pauncefote, the British minister, and by James G. Blaine, secretary of state, and transmitted to the senate for its action by the president.

The modus is in the form of a supplemental convention to the treaty of arbitration recently ratified. It states that both governments will prohibit during the sealing season the killing of seal in that part of the Behring sea lying eastward of the line of demarcation described in article 1 of the treaty of 1867 between the United States and Russia, and each government will enjoin its citizens and vessels to an observance of this agreement. The United States, it is understood, is allowed to kill, for the subsistence of the natives on the islands of St. Paul and St. George, 7,500 seals, the same restriction as was made last year.

Vessels May Be Seized.

The vessels of the United States or Great Britain or citizens of either country offending against this agreement may be seized by either of the high contracting parties, but as soon as practicable shall be handed over to the authorities of the nation to which they belong, who shall have sole jurisdiction to try the case and impose penalties. The decision is a material part of the agreement of 1891, with the addition of a clause providing for the settlement of damages sustained by the Canadian sealers through the interruption of their business, in case the arbitration goes against the United States.

Under this clause owners of Canadian sealing vessels have already begun to file their claims with a commission appointed to receive and present them. But General Foster, the agent of the United States, who is preparing the case for this government, and E. J. Phelps, counsel, are leaving no point uncovered, and will be fully prepared to meet the claims if they are ever pressed for payment.

News of Congress.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—The senate passed the two court bills laid over from Saturday, and spent the remainder of the day in executive session over the modus vivendi.

The session of the house was devoted to the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, which was finally passed as it came from the committee, with the exception of the dry dock at Algiers, La., which was stricken out on a point of order. The election case of Noyes versus Rockwell, of New York, is being considered. The passage of the naval appropriation bill as it was reported by the committee means the defeat both of Mr. Holman, the economist, and of Mr. Boutelle, who led the battle for the continuance of the enlargement of the navy. The debate was marked by many speeches.

Mr. Houk, of Ohio, said that if New York did not give the country a Democratic Senate the offending power would pay for it after-ward.

The probability is that the naval appropriation bill will, despite the objections of Mr. Holman, be amended in the senate so as to provide for the continuance of the creation of the new navy and, that, in consequence, Mr. Holman will yield.

ANARCHIST GANTER ON THE SHOOT.

He Fatally Wounds His Wife and Severely Injures His Daughter.

BROOKLYN, April 19.—John Ganter, an anarchist, of Williamsburg, fatally shot his wife and injured his eldest daughter so badly that she may not survive. The couple, with their two daughters, Augusta and Cornelia, live at 22 Scholes street. Ganter is a machinist. He has made many anarchistic speeches in the Williamsburg Labor Lyceum lately. When his daughters called him to supper he growled at the meal. Cornelia retorted, "You didn't provide it."

Her father kicked her in the side and she screamed. The mother bent over the girl, shrieking. Ganter, cursing, turned away and returned with a revolver.

He fired one shot at his wife's back. The bullet passed through the kidneys, and she will die. Cornelia has heart disease, and the kick will probably kill her.

Ganter ran out of the house, never stopping until he had reached a saloon a mile away. Here he laid the pistol on a table and boasted that he had killed his wife.

"No one can take me alive!" he shouted. The saloon keeper called in Sergeant Streckfus and another officer. They told the barkeeper to turn out the gas, fearing to tackle him in the light. In the darkness they rushed upon him and overpowered him.

Manager Barnie Released.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Manager Barnie has been released by the Washington baseball club.

GORMAN FOR PRESIDENT.

The Democratic Senator Pleases Himself in the Race.

WASHINGTON, April 19.—Senator Gorman is a candidate for the presidency. He has not made a public avowal of the fact, but has confided it to not two or three of his close friends in Washington. This was the secret of his journey to New York last week, and it accounts for his withdrawal from the Democratic committee, which will take place before the beginning of the next presidential canvass.

There is a friendly understanding between Senator Gorman and Mr. Cleveland. Mr. Gorman will not try to prevent Mr. Cleveland's nomination, but on the other hand, if the trend of events shows that Mr. Cleveland's nomination will be out of the question, it is probable that a good share of the Cleveland following will go to Gorman by and with the advice and consent of Mr. Cleveland himself.

Mr. Quay Talks.

PHILADELPHIA, April 19.—Senator Quay is at the Lafayette. Collector John W. Glazier, of the port of Erie, suggested to him that the Harrison sentiment was very strong and would control the delegates in the deliberations.

"The delegates will do just as the please," said Mr. Quay. "They are free to act just as they like."

Among the unexpected visitors here was Chris Magee. The state convention will indorse and instruct for President Harrison, said Mr. Magee, "and on the resolutions no one can speak. I am interested more especially in a strong platform for solid money and the McKinley tariff."

Quay May Challege Daizell.

PITTSBURG, April 19.—Walter N. Lyon, United States district attorney, says that Senator Quay will challenge Congressman Dalzell to a joint debate on "National Politics" or "National Statesmanship."

Troops at the Election.

NEW ORLEANS, April 19.—Some excitement was caused here by the ordering out of the Second and Fourth battalion of the state militia by the governor for duty at today's election.

AFTER NATURAL GAS PLANTS.

The Standard Oil Company's New Trust Scheme at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, April 19.—The Standard Oil company is said to be after the natural gas plants, also a big independent oil pipe line to the seaboard, and it has forced the price of crude petroleum down to such a low point —fifty-nine cents a barrel—that the independent producers are talking of a shutdown for five months beginning May 1. The first scheme mentioned is the absorption of the leading natural gas companies of western Pennsylvania, and their amalgamation into a gigantic trust, the ultimate idea being to supply a manufactured fuel gas.

The Standard Oil company is said to be the owner of a process, invented by Lonzo Cox chemist, that has been fully tested and pronounced a success. The idea is to make the Philadelphia, of which George Westinghouse is president, the nucleus of the trust and double its stock. The companies to be absorbed are as follows: Philadelphia company, Chartiers Valley Gas company, Bridgewater Gas company, People's Natural Gas and Pipage company, Manufacturers' Gas company, Allegheny Heating company, Ohio Valley Gas company, Pennsylvania Gas company, Salt Lick, nine companies, with a capital of $15,521,600.

The independent pipe line which the Standard is said to desire to gobble is one almost completed from the McDonald oil field to Linwood, a few miles below Philadelphia.

Over a hundred producers in the oil fields of Pennsylvania, Ohio and West Virginia have already signed an agreement to suspend operations for five months, beginning May 1.

Among those present were Governor Russell, Rev. Dr. Miner, Edward Atkinson, Rev. Dr. McKenzie, Gov. Boutwell, Rev. Dr. Lyman Abbott and General Francis A. Walker. Dr. Holmes was represented by a poem.

One Victory for Mrs. Davis.

Various Methods of Serving Oranges, a Fruit that is Now so Plentiful and Always Healthful—Other Carefully Selected Recipes.

Coffee-tea, a beverage made from the leaves of the coffee shrub, is a new candidate for popular favor, and would seem to have some advantages over the berry. It has not yet reached this country, save as a mere curiosity. As the leaves may be easily grown in many parts of the globe where it is difficult to insure large crops of coffee berries, it might prove a valuable agricultural product in many warm colonies. At present only some two millions of men use coffee-tea, in comparison with 110,000,000 who use the bean, and 500,000,000 who drink Chinese and Indian tea.

A Revival in Furniture.

A GREEK CHAIR.

Every one must notice the remarkable improvement that is taking place in household furniture. All the old designs are revived, so that it is possible for one to have rooms furnished in any style, as it is to have a house built of any style of architecture. Our design shows an ornamented Greek chair. The Greeks preferred this design plain and without ornamentation.

Ragout of Mutton.

Cut cold roast lamb or veal into neat squares, put a tablespoonful of butter in a frying-pan, brown it, and stir in a tablespoonful of flour; when smooth add gradually half a pint of hot stock or water, stir until it boils; now put in a pint of the mutton broth, pepper and salt to taste and a teaspoonful of Worcestershire sauce. Put the frying-pan over a large pot of of boiling water until the sauce is well heated. At the last add a tablespoonful of currant jelly and a glass of sherry. Serve very hot.

Canned Oranges.

Cut a hole in the top of each orange large enough to allow of juice, pulp and seeds being taken from them, then without breaking the orange peels boil them in three or four waters until tender and no longer bitter. Boil the juice and pulp separately with half a pint of water and the juice of a lemon to each pint, and one pound of sugar. When the sugar is quite dissolved, add the rind, which you have cut and boil them in the syrup until they are clear and the syrup thick. Put them in wide-mouthed glass cans and close.

Dinner Note.

The most valuable dinner set in the world is said to belong to Queen Victoria. It is in two parts, the "Buhl" set, a large one, and is guarded by two men continually. Mrs. William Astor has a gold dinner service valued at $50,000, and the service of Li Hon and his envoy to this country is used upon the finest of white linen cloths bordered with lace, showing a tint through its meshes of a shade of gold. Even the wedding breakfast of Miss Vanderbilt and Count Szechenyi was served on the finest of white damask, and the table decorations.

A Waste Basket with Cover.

A trash-basket is a stiffbacken article which is apt to thrust itself upon the attention in an unseemly manner. It certainly should not be a thing of brilliancy in bows and plush. The very best trash baskets are probably those of white and gold rattan. They are diminutive in size, but large enough for the purpose. They have a cover, so that their contents need not be displayed, and there is nothing about them to catch the dust unnecessarily.

Orange Snow.

Peel and seed a dozen oranges, quarter, then divide into two sections and divide the pieces again crosswise. Put a layer of oranges in the bottom of a glass dish, sprinkle with sugar, about a cup in all. Pare and grate an ordinary sized cocoanut, sprinkle a layer of this over the oranges, then another of sugar and oranges, and so on. The last layer should be cocoanut. It is ready to serve in an hour.

Orange Pudding.

Peel and pick to pieces four oranges and put in a deep pudding dish with two cups of sugar. Put a pint of milk, yolks of three eggs and two dessertspoonfuls of cornstarch on to boil. Take off, cool, pour it on the oranges. Beat the whites to a stiff froth, put over the pudding and place in the oven to get a light brown.

Boiled Frosting.

White of one egg beaten to a stiff froth. One cupful of granulated sugar moistened with four tablespoonfuls of hot water. Boil the sugar briskly for five minutes unstill it "ropes" when dropped from the spoon. Pour the boiling syrup on the egg in a small stream, beating hard at the same time.

Squash Pie.

One pint of squash, three eggs, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of vanilla and a little nutmeg. Pass the squash through a sieve, mix with a scant tablespoonful of corn starch and milk enough to make it soft. Add the other ingredients. This makes one large pie.

Keep Celery Moist.

When celery is brought home, if not wanted immediately, it should be wrapped in a wet sheet. An hour before dinner put in cold water, then clean and arrange on a celery dish.

Dusting Carved Furniture.

A new, soft brush is a good thing to dust carved furniture with, as the bristles will penetrate the deepest crevices.

Who Gets Married Nowadays Anyhow.

Some light on the question of a young woman of working girls for factory girls was thrown the other day by a party of them in a discussion of the subject in a working girls' club. One of the girls thought the fact was owing to a growing love of lack of independence. One afternoon in a week and every other Sunday was all the leisure that a maid could expect, while in a factory or shop she had to work all day, so how could she be expected to have the chances of steady employment lost, her time after her day's labor was done her own to spend as she pleased? Then the advocates of factory life was accountability to one person only, and systematic work. In the domestic service she would be at the beck and call of perhaps two or four, and be obliged to go from her bread baking to wait on dinner, and from tending to dinner getting, to being stuck at second half finished bits of work some other time. This, it was claimed, was wearing to mind and temper.

Other disadvantages in the domestic side of the social difference that must be continually felt, and the contrasts of the daily lives of the servant and her mistress in a factory city, it was claimed, left the young girl feels herself a part of the world of work without these sharp contrasts. One girl believed that factory girls made better wives, for the reason that lived on stricter "beat," and didn't compare their homes with palaces that they had lived in.

A girl who favored domestic service thought that the woman who lived in her own home, and was the right kind of daughter and sister, had all her own time to herself in a factory as in a home. She believed that a girl with firmness could look out for one hand in the household, and that by planning wisely and saving of time, labor and strength, the most accomplished work could be greatly reduced. More money could also be saved than in considerations where wages were paid. The pleasure of clothing, as one girl put it, and the employment healthful. It was in the simple social life, where all were on the same terms as servants, kept, that these girls believed those were the most satisfactory life for the domestic. When a vote was taken a majority declared in favor of home service, and the three who had not become or whose homes were not satisfactory.—New York Post.

Do You Neglect Your Father

Too much attention cannot be given to the toilet. By this we do not mean to say that the girl who is dazzling before the mirror for two or three hours a day is to be commended, but even her case is superior to the one that makes a boast of being able to dress in ten or fifteen minutes. The girl who can get up in the morning and be ready for breakfast in fifteen minutes we are certain neglects her toilet. In the first place, to be perfectly clean and healthy, a bath must be taken every morning. Baths, warm or cool, whichever is best suited to the constitution of the individual and handiest of all, a sponge bath. Now, it is perfectly impossible for you to perform your morning ablutions in proper form in fifteen minutes; the teeth, nail and hairbrush in the short space of fifteen minutes, and unless you do pay particular attention to each of these details your toilet is neglected.

How many girls who have to labor for their bread and butter frequently complain because they have no five hundred we can safely say. Every morning they wash their hands and faces, their ears and necks, and that suffices from one week's end to another. Does not the old-fashioned "rub night" proclaim the fact that a weekly bath from head to foot is all the body ever receives? Is it any wonder that these neglects and factors and freaks become too weak to bear the burden of the day? To such we say, you are to blame for it. Time is the thing to be considered about the toilet. You may stand for hours pasting on the finishing touches to a girlish face, but what use? Not a bit of it, all for naught if you are not absolutely clean underneath the silken gown of latest style.—Philadelphia Press.

Why a Young Woman Was Honored.

One of the youngest women who has ever received the honor of the Legion of Honor is Juliette Dodu, a creole. In 1870 Mme. Dodu was telegraph operator at Pithiviers and Juliette was her assistant. In November of that year the Prussians, who were then established at Orleans, sent a telegram to Prince Frederic Charles at Pithiviers, describing the exact situation of the army of the Loire, which was marching on Glen, and also the manoeuvres necessary to surround them.

The telegram was in the possession of the telegraph office, had confided Mlle. Dodu to her room. Through the tower, however, the telegraph wire passed, and Juliette, with a pair of scissors, quickly realized that to tamper with the wires was an act for which she might be shot, but she did not hesitate.

She sent a despatch to the subprefect, who sent it to the French commander. The Prussian movement was anticipated, and the French army was saved. When the Prussians discovered what Juliette had done, she was condemned to be shot as a spy, but Frederic Charles pardoned her on account of her youth.

She received the military medal, and in 1878 the French government gave her the cross. She is now an inspector of primary schools.—La Semaine Illustree.

An American Girl Who Has Succeeded.

Miss Marie Burroughs is a striking example of what a young woman may by a woman endowed with American pluck, backed by talent and common sense. Only a few years ago she was a girl living in San Francisco, her native city, and with other children was fond of playing truant and repairing to the sand lots, where she witnessed amateur theatricals and played the roles of Juliet and Pauline to the entire satisfaction of her youthful companions.

She was known then as Lillie Arrington. She laughed at dividing the honors with one of the foremost English actors, and receives $100 a week.

One day she was at the sand lots playing, crying, "Stay, Tybalt, stay!" and repeated the injunction as other that an old carpenter at work close by called out in impatient tones, "Oh, give Tybalt a rest." "That dashed me," said Miss Burroughs when relating the incident, "and I went home only to get a scolding from my mother for being away so long."—Detroit Free Press.

Danger in Vacant Houses.

So long as the house is unoccupied, there is no danger; but when new occupants take possession of it, they will do well to take the precaution to have it thoroughly aired for nine days previous, have the oil cloth cleaned or taken up altogether, the closets and attics cleaned and disinfected, and a general overhauling effected. More or less refuse is always left by the last occupants of a house, and in these unaired premises, while the windows and doors are tightly closed, the whole house becomes infected. This explains why fevers and other germ diseases so often arise soon after the occupation of a new house.—Good Health

TWO LITTLE LEOPARDS.

How Three Curious Spotted Babies Thrived in a Zoological Garden.

Once on a time two little creatures were born in a fine house in a beautiful park. There were bright flowers and rare animals there, and in their own apartment all was arranged for their comfort.

They were curious little fellows, both in appearance and in ways; for they were born quite cross, not at all like the cross of other babies, but like the cross of kittens in their first days of playful forbearance. So it was thought best to take these twins away and give them to a nurse who would take good care of them. In the community the wife of one of the keepers volunteered to take the baby leopards. It was a long time before the leopard-ladies had to a feeling home, but finally they would struggle for its possession, and often they tore their mistress' clothes in their efforts to reach it first.

When they played together it was much like the play of kittens, though more clumsy, for their paws were so large that when they ran over the floor the noise they made sounded like children running, and they would creep stealthily, with their bodies crouched low to the floor, around the sides of the room, rarely running freely in the center of the floor. One of their favorite playthings was an old chestnut, and that they would toss up in the air and worry it when it came down, as a cat proceeds with a mouse.—Wide Awake.

Old Mussentuchit.

There was one word the little girl heard many times a day and could not imagine what it was, says Golden Days. The word was Mussentuchit. Baby would need Mussentuchit could be. The strange thing lived in the bureau drawers; it lived in the sewing machine; it lived in the tall jar that stood on the little round table, it certainly lived in the glass globe where the gold fishes swam.

The week we till baby was two years old. Mussentuchit was everywhere—in the shining books on the parlor table, in the flower beds; among the roses; even in mamma's workbasket the strange thing lived; and if baby took up a reel of silk or cotton there was Mussentuchit.

One day baby found herself by the glass globe all alone. The family were very busy, and for a few minutes forgot the little, joyful, restless darling.

This was her chance. Up went the chubby legs into the chair the same as the gold fish globe. Then out on the moulding cushion baby reached far over to touch the goldfish. In reaching she lost her balance and fell, dropping into the water. There was a great splash, a scream, a rush and mamma was on the spot. Baby was picked up, kissed and smoothed.

"I does it stilled old Mussentuchit 'is time!" she said, shaking herself and walking off.

Frogs at School.

Twenty froggies went to school
Down beside a rushy pool;
Twenty little coats of green,
Twenty voices all within and clean.
"We must be to time," said their chief;
"First we study, then we play.
That is how we keep the rule
When we go to school to-day."

Master Bullfrog, grave and stern,
Called the classes in their turn,
Taught them how to croak and dive;
From his seat upon the log,
Showed them how to say "Ker-chog!"
Also how to dodge
From the sticks which bad boys throw.

Twenty froggies grew up fast;
Bullfrogs they became at last;
Not one croaker among the lot,
Not one lesson they forgot;
Polished in a high degree,
As the learned frogs should be.
Now they sit on other logs
Teaching other little frogs.

—Elizabeth Democrat.

Stockings or Scales.

If I were asked of all things what I most would like to be,
I'd choose to be a mermaid and live below the sea.

How nice, instead of walking, to swim around in the little fishes,
And to wear instead of stockings many shiny pairs of scales.

Wasn't don't mind changing every time that nurse says they are wet,
And then to have no shoes that always come untied—and yet—

TO HAVE NO SHOES THAT ALWAYS COME UNTIED.

And yet, although it must be nice to swim around in scales,
To attend a school of porpoises and play at tag with whales,
To be on friendly speaking terms with jellyfish and eels,
And never to be sent to bed or told I'm late for meals,

Still, when I think of Christmas eve my resolution fails,
For what would Santa think if I hung up a pair of scales?

—Ex. Nicholas.

Overdoing It.

Fond Mother—I do so hope that George has studied hard at college. I have tried to impress upon his mind the value of a liberal education.

Father—I am afraid, my dear, that you have rather overdone the matter. I had to send him a check for fifty pounds today.—Funny Folks.

"Of course I am," he answered.

BREVITIES

—A number of gypsies are encamped on Park avenue near the fair grounds.

—The Union County Board of Freeholders will hold its final meeting on May 11th.

—The leap year social club gave an entertainment in the Crescent Rink Monday evening.

—Mr. A. D. Thompson to-day had another sale of horses at his place on North avenue.

—The members of Plainfield Council No. 711, Royal Arcanum, will hold a banquet at the Albion next Friday evening.

—A small fire occurred in a house on Somerset street yesterday afternoon. The fire was caused by a defective flue. No alarm was sounded.

—The members of the Independent Gun Club indulged in an inanimate and live bird shooting contest on their grounds in North Plainfield to-day.

—A number of the members of the Crescent League were present at the opening of the new club house of the Elizabeth Athletic Club last evening.

—The Memorial Committee of Winfield Scott Post, No. 39, G. A. R., will hold a meeting to-morrow evening to complete the arrangements for Memorial Day.

—A man named Wilson spent last night fishing in Greenbrook. This morning he passed along Front street and exhibited about twenty-five pounds of catfish and an eel.

—Mrs. Green of New York and John Smith of this city were arrested last night for drunkenness. The former was discharged and sentence was suspended on the latter.

—There will be a mothers' meeting in the W. C. T. U. rooms, Crescent building, to-morrow at 3.30 o'clock. Mrs. Fernald will preside. Every one is welcome. Mothers are urged to attend.

—Turpentine has other uses besides being a menstruum for varnish gums, for paints, etc. A few drops sprinkled where cock-roaches congregate will exterminate them at once; it will also exterminate red or black ants—moths will flee from the odor of it. It will take ink stains out of white muslins when added to soap, and will help to whiten clothes if added while boiling. Besides it is an excellent application for a burn or cut.

—Messrs. Doane and Van Arsdale who are making very successful efforts to be the shoe dealers of Plainfield manage to keep up with the times, which means stocking their large and well-located store with the very latest style in shoes. The public pulse, on the question of shoes, is decidedly erratic and it takes men of experience and sound judgment to know what is wanted. Sometimes the convincing of the public as to what it wants brings that great and "almighty dollar" on the run to the dealer.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. Eugene Laine of East Second street is convalescent from her recent illness.

Prof. A. Venino is to give a piano recital at the Casino on the evening of Thursday, April 28th.

Mr. Milan Hall, formerly of this city but now of Yonkers, N. Y., is visiting his parents on Plainfield avenue.

Mr. Harry Drier of Madison avenue has returned to his home in this city from an extended trip South. During his visit he secured two alligators which he still has in his possession. One of them is ten feet long.

An Enjoyable Evening.

An interesting Easter entertainment took place in Vincent chapel last evening. Dr. Hurlbut and the Rev. Mr. Mitchell, the pastor of the M. E. Church, delivered short addresses. There was a good-sized audience present. Master Mills of La Grande avenue and Prof. Conde rendered selections on the violin. Master Mills is a pupil of Mr. Conde's and plays very well for a boy of his age. There were many children present.

Delegates Chosen.

The Republicans of North Plainfield held a primary meeting in Spencer's Hall last evening. Dr. H. K. Carroll presided and Mr. H. N. Spencer acted as secretary. The Hon. Chas. Place, ex-Councilman P. E. Emmons and Mr. W. C. Smith were elected delegates to the coming Congressional convention and Collector H. N. Spencer was elected as a delegate to the State Convention, which is to be held at Trenton, April 28th.

Chinamen in Trouble.

A man and woman caused a disturbance in a Chinese laundry on Somerset street at about half-past eight o'clock last evening. The cause was that the Chinaman in charge refused to deliver their laundry because they had lost the check. The police quelled the disturbance and the persons eventually procured their laundry.

School Notes.

A Skeleton Described.

Dr. D. C. Adams of Grove street, North Plainfield, exhibited and described a human skeleton at the Y. M. C. A. rooms last evening. All boys over sixteen years of age were admitted. A large crowd was present. The description was very interesting and instructive.

A Meeting Held Last Evening—A New President Elected.

At a meeting of the Republican Association held last evening the constitution and by-laws presented by the committee were adopted. At a previous meeting the Hon. John Ulrich presented his resignation. It was accepted at the meeting last evening. In presenting it he stated that his new duties would call him away from home most of the time and that he did not wish to be president of a body when he could not be present at the meetings.

The following officers were elected to serve for the ensuing year.

OUTING SALE OPENING.

THE UNITARIAN CHURCH PRESENTS A BRILLIANT SCENE.

A Large Number of Visitors Make the First Night a Success—A Novel Entertainment—The Sale to Continue for Three Days.

The new Unitarian church presented a pretty picture at the opening of the three days' outing sale last evening. The decorating committee had adorned the room in outing cloth of crimson and white stripes, and doft flowers had arranged all the interior hangings and furnishings of the several booths in dainty colors and artistic forms. Here and there in all parts of the room are tasteful adornments. By the side of the pulpit platform on a large easel stands full length portrait of the late ex-Mayor Job Male, the generous patron of the society, who would be looking with satisfaction upon the consummation of his long-cherished desires. The picture was loaned for the occasion by the directors of the Job Male Art Gallery.

The sale will open to-day and to-morrow at three p. m. and continue throughout the evening of each day. The ladies will begin to serve a supper this afternoon from six to eight o'clock, which New York business men will find it well worth while to patronize on their way to their homes.

Amateur Hanging.

Friday afternoon James Masterson and Henry Peterson, two boys aged respectively sixteen and seventeen years, began playing hangman in their yard on Watson avenue. A rope was thrown through a pulley and young Peterson was supposed to be the condemned man. He placed a box under his feet, adjusted the rope and Masterson began to haul him. All went well until young Peterson was dangling high in the air when the rope slipped and caught in the wheel of the pulley, leaving the boy suspended.

He tried to yell, but he was choking, while Masterson, thinking he was fooling, danced about in glee. When he saw Peterson kick and squirm and then saw his tongue protude and his body become quite rigid he became frightened and rushed to the rope, but without avail.

Meanwhile Peterson was slowly strangling to death. With a desperate fight-ing Masterson got his pocket-knife out and cut the rope. Peterson fell to the ground in a heap as near death as he may ever expect to be and live. He was soon resuscitated but will not try any more hangman.—Elizabeth Herald.

Two Murderers Pardoned.

The State Court of Pardons yesterday paroled a number of State convicts, including two murderers, Gustavus Willingham, who killed a prison guard, and Mc-killed James Daly, while drunk, 1889, and was sentenced to ten years imprisonment in the Essex Court in October, 1889; Edward Flannagan of Hudson county, sentenced to twenty years for murder in the second degree in October, 1890. He killed a man named Philpott, who mixed in a barroom conversation. The argument used was that there were three men in the altercation, and it was never clearly proved who made the assault.

A Banker Picnic.

About seventy-five scholars attending at the Bryant school enjoyed a basket picnic in Hyde's woods on Monday avenue, North Plainfield, yesterday afternoon. They thoroughly enjoyed themselves. Their teachers accompanied them.

CORPORATION ASSESSMENTS.

The Concerns Assessed for Taxation —The Capital and Assessment.

Among the many interesting things regarding taxation and the work of the State Board of Assessors which in the recently issued report of the Board is the following:

There are 2,377 corporations assessed for taxation in this State, the capital stock of which ranges from $10,000 to $200,000,000. Twenty-three corporations have a capitalization of more than $5,000,000. Before the passage of the law of 1891 these companies only taxed one-tenth of one per cent on their capital, which would make the tax in some cases $40,000 or $50,000. Since the passage of the act of 1891 a tax of one-tenth of one per cent. is imposed on the capital stock up to, and including, $5,000,000, on all above this and not exceeding $6,000,000, a tax of two-tenths of one per cent, and for every million in excess of that, $30 additional tax is exacted.

The report shows that some very large tax bills are sent out under the law. The American Sugar Refining Company is the largest assessed, having a capital stock of $40,125,000, and under the old law the Sugar Trust, as it is commonly known, would have been looking with satisfaction upon the consummation of his long-cherished desires. The picture was loaned for the occasion by the directors of the Job Male Art Gallery.

The committees in charge of the different departments are as follows:

Executive—Mrs. Osgood, chairman; Mrs. Buckle, treasurer; Miss Leonard, secretary; Mrs. Adams, Mrs. Draper.

Reception—Mrs. Robert Clark, Mrs. R. C. Leonard.

Entertainment—Mrs. W. J. Leonard, Mrs. D. W. Pond.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

CUSTOM HOUSE TORN UP.

Broker Schneider and Clerk Fortman Arrested.

New York, April 20th, (Special.)—Intense excitement was created in the Custom House this morning by the arrest of a member of a leading firm of Custom House brokers and one of a clerk employed by the same concern.

It was but the beginning of a half dozen arrests that Inspector Whitehead of the Treasury Department expects will be made within the next twenty-four hours. So much excitement was created this morning by the announcement of the arrests among Custom House officials, brokers and merchants, who import goods, that business well nigh stood at a standstill.

Otto Schneider was the Custom House broker who was placed under arrest. He is one of the firm of Carl Preston & Co., brokers, who have their offices at 124 Pearl street.

The other persons arrested and about whom there was so much mystery last night, was John Fortman, a clerk in the employ of the firm.

Desperate Fight with a Wildcat.

Alec Morrell, a well-known quarryman in Sandycreek township, Venango county, says the Warren Republican, has always been considered a rather handsome man, but when he came to Deckertown last Friday he presented such a startling appearance that he drew crowds against. One of his eyes was cut and the greater part of his cheek and mouth was pulled around until he looked like a fiend. His cheek teeth could be seen through the gap. His left ear was partially gone and two of his fingers were missing. The quarryman told the following story:

"I stopped one evening several months ago at the house of a friend, and he was pretty late when I got home. It was stormy hard. I had been drinking a little, but not enough to make me drunk. I make me careless. My home is a little way back from the road, and when I got out on the step I saw something sitting on the rag carpet mat, and thinking it was a stray dog I reached down to put it out. Before I could take time to think something landed square in my face and I fell backward on the floor stone and into a flower bed. It was too dark to see what it was, but I was by myself, for my wife got a job on Penn hands, and I tried to grab the critter, but you may bet his claws were sharp. I had a hard hour's fight then two fingers. Then I caught a wipe across my head and at the same time got my hand on the critter's windpipe, and in spite of the loss of my eye and the blood flowing from my face I pulled it off. The critter and got my knee on its breast. It clawed me with its hind feet and ripped me in a dozen places, but I held on and finally I lost my senses, and the next thing I knew was when I woke up in bed with Dr. Moore stitching up my wounds.

"It seems that my wife had heard the noise of the scrimmage and came out with a lantern. She found me lying across the dead body of a wildcat. I was then up and in bed for a week with an ear. It took thirteen weeks for me to get over it, and I haven't bragged much about the fight with the wildcat, saying that I'm the only man who ever choked a full-grown wildcat to death."

The wildcat was a big one, and not stuffed. It weighed forty-four pounds, and is the largest ever seen in Northern New Jersey.

IN the great contest men work too hard and too long; they fret and worry over-much:

Work is good: striving is good: but "the first rule of the game" is this—

Have some H-O for breakfast.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If there is anything New York people enjoy more than another it is a great scandal. The Drayton-Borrowe matter amused them for weeks.

Learned scientific gentlemen have discovered that a woman's knee is structurally built in such a way as to hinder her from standing erect long at a time or ever becoming a great walker. That may be. We have not yet heard, however, of a scientist who has discovered anything in the structure of a woman's knee that would unfit her anatomically for doing all the world's scrubbing.

It is announced that J. Mosenger, of Cincinnati, has succeeded in utilizing aluminium in the electroplating industry. The deposit is pronounced as hard and effective as nickel. If this be true, it is a great step forward. All metals can hereafter be plated with aluminium, a metal that never tarnishes and does not fuse readily. The amount of scouring and polishing that will be saved when aluminium plating comes into common use will make the new discovery an incalculable boon to mankind. Wherever nickel is now used, aluminium can be used in plating.

The French nation has decided to make an exhibit, not only of manufactured goods, but of live stock and farm products at our World's fair. It is to be hoped the exhibit will include also French cookery as it is known in the provinces outside of Paris. The French have long been known as the best cooks in the world. This is true not only of hotel and restaurant cookery in the large cities, but likewise of the simple dishes prepared by the peasant women. These could give our farm wives points on the preparation of food that would go far to cure the common disease of the American farmer the country over—dyspepsia. Besides being the best cooks the French are likewise the best farmers in the world, making the most and the best of their resources. The horses of Paris are the most beautiful in Europe.

English It Is.

MacMillan's Magazine contains an article going to show that English is the coming language of the world. It begins to take the place of French on the Continent as the language of common conversation between all countries—an international coin of talk. In Germany it is the first foreign language to be learned. Even in Russia it is becoming fashionable. Emphasis is given. The writer in MacMillan's, Mr. C. R. Haines, mentions the fact that at the international Samoan conference, in 1889, the language used was English instead of French, the German diplomats all being able to speak English. Mr. Haines does not mention, however, as he might have done, that English was used because the American diplomats were unable to speak anything else.

In Africa English is driving out French, German and Portuguese. In Asia the same condition exists. The agency which has spread the English language abroad is colonization, and that habit which people who speak it have of gadding about all over the earth. Mr. Haines says:

In a hundred years the United States will probably have as many inhabitants as China, and it is not likely that Canada, Australia, New Zealand and the Cape will fall much short of half their number.

Where are already signs that English is becoming the literary language of Europe. Professor Vambery, a Hungarian, published his autobiography first in an English dress; the Dutch author of the "Sin of David Avelloe" wrote his novel, "An Old Maid," in English, and the author of "The Crustacea of Norway," himself presumably a Norwegian, frankly owns in his advertisement that to obtain the largest possible circulation for his book it will be written in the English language.

Count Pulaski's Heir.

Not long since an old man was hurt at the corner of Sixth and Vine streets, in Philadelphia, and taken to a hospital. He was a dingy, broken down looking individual, and was peddling cough drops and shoestrings. He was a Pole, unable to speak more than a few words of English, and was naturally taken at once to the pauper wards of the hospital. Yet this forlorn foreigner was a nobleman, a Polish count, who had been brought up in luxury and owned large estates in Poland before the Russian government confiscated them and sent him, Casimir Suffozynski, an exile to Siberia.

That is one part of the story. The rest of it, and one which congress and every citizen of this country ought to lay to heart and feel ashamed over, is that this feeble old pauper who peddles shoestrings and cough drops in Philadelphia is one of the two only living heirs of the brave Count Pulaski, of Poland, who fell mortally wounded at Savannah in 1779, while fighting for us in the Revolution. Since 1882 his heir, the feeble old count who peddles shoestrings, has been trying to get congress to pass a bill giving to him the amount, with interest from date, of Count Pulaski's back pay, and congress will not do it. The case ought to go on record along with the French spoliation claims.

It is almost inconceivable, this insult of a great, rich country to the memory of the gallant and chivalrous Count Pulaski, to whom the Moravian nuns of Bethlehem presented the banner celebrated in the poem:

> Take thy banner; may it wave
> Proudly o'er the good and brave.

QUAY WILL NOT SPEAK.

Too Ill to Address the Pennsylvania Convention.

REPUBLICAN HOSTS IN HARRISBURG

The Appearance of Senator Cameron at the Session Causes Uneasiness in the Camp of Taggart—In Conference with Quay and Magee—The Platform.

HARRISBURG, April 20.—The Republican state convention is being held here today. To all appearances, so far as the nomination for justice of the supreme court and for congressmen at large are concerned, Senator M. S. Quay is not interfering actively, and the campaign being free and open is exceedingly lively. The chief fight is on the judgeship. At one time it looked as though Judge Dean would lead in the convention, with Judge Sadler a close second, but Judge Henderson began to gather strength, particularly among the supporters of General Lilly and Major McDowell, the chief candidates for congressmen at large, and Henderson, McDowell and Lilly headed the strongest combination. Philadelphia has been a big factor in the fight. Her delegates came in on a special train this afternoon pledged to vote for George A. Castor for congressman at large. Some of the other delegates were inclined to believe that they were not altogether in earnest, but when they found the Philadelphia delegation solid and prepared to trade for other offices they began to skirmish.

Philadelphia Men Untrusted.

The friends of Mr. Taggart, the former candidate for congressman at large, early spread the story that Castor had promised to contribute $10,000 to the Philadelphia city campaign fund if he received the nomination, but the charge gave the Philadelphians little uneasiness. They continued to coquette with other delegations who were anxious to trade. Mr. Taggart's friends found they had the Cameron influence to contend with. The presence of Senator Cameron at the convention was a surprise to many. It was said he came to Harrisburg particularly to defeat Taggart, who bolted the party caucus four years ago when Senator Cameron was up for re-election. The senator, with Chris Magee, of Pittsburg, and R. K. Martin, spent much time with Senator Quay. Mr. Quay has not recovered from the effects of the severe attack of the grip which he had in Florida recently, and he was not well enough to join the crowd in his headquarters at the Lochiel this afternoon.

Quay Will Not Speak.

His weakness will prevent him addressing the convention as was expected. It looks now as though McDowell and Lilly would be the Republican candidates for congressmen at large. William Woods, of Philadelphia, and B. F. Jones, of Pittsburg, two of the four electors at large, and the following gentlemen, delegates at large: W. L. Elkins and Hamilton Disston, of Philadelphia; General Frank Reeder, of Easton; H. W. Oliver and William Flynn, of Pittsburg; S. A. Davenport, of Erie; the Hon. H. C. McCormick, of Lycoming, and Lyman D. Gilbert, of Dauphin. The temporary chairman of the convention will be General James Latta, and the permanent chairman E. K. Martin, of Lancaster.

The platform will declare against free coinage; indorse the McKinley tariff law; indorse in a hearty manner the Harrison administration; commend Secretary Blaine, and declare it the duty of congress to issue a free ballot and fair count. There will be no instructions.

They Favor James G. Blaine.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Republicans of the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, Twelfth and Thirteenth congressional districts, all of which are located in this city, elected the following delegates to the Minneapolis convention: Sixth—H. O. Armour and John E. Milholland; they were instructed for Harrison. Seventh—John D. Lawson and Charles H. Murray; uninstructed. Eighth—Horace Porter and Samuel Thomas; uninstructed; Harrison's administration indorsed. Ninth—Jacob M. Patterson and George Hilliard; uninstructed. Tenth—S. V. R. Cruger and William Heakel; uninstructed. Eleventh—Fred S. Gibbs and Sheridan Shook; uninstructed. Twelfth—Elliot F. Shepard and William Brookfield; uninstructed. Thirteenth—David F. Porter and John Reisenweber; uninstructed. The majority of the delegates elected are favorable to James G. Blaine as the next candidate for the party for the presidency.

Mr. Bliss' Presidential Dinner.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Herald claims to have learned the true story of the dinner given by Cornelius N. Bliss in the interest of the renomination of President Harrison. The Herald says Mr. Bliss was honest in his intention to boom Mr. Harrison, but that unexpected opposition to the president developed. When Mr. Bliss saw how the land lay The Herald declares that he said:

"Within a week President Harrison told me that unless there was a good prospect of his election he would not consent to run and that now he could withdraw with great dignity."

The Herald says that after all the other candidates had been discussed the political "combs" came to an end without having come to any decided conclusion as to who should be chosen as the representative of the Republican party.

Cleveland and Gray.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 20.—The Democratic state convention will be held here Thursday. The Cleveland people propose to go straight ahead, putting nothing but avowed supporters of Cleveland on the delegation, and the Gray faction seems equally determined. Senator Voorhees says the convention should instruct for Gray. The gubernatorial candidates have been drawn into the fight and J. G. Shanklin is regarded as the supporter of ex-Governor Chatfield's candidacy, while Claude Matthews holds the same position with the Gray people.

Boston Republicans Meet.

BOSTON, April 20.—The dinner of the Republican Club of Massachusetts, at Music hall, signalized the opening of the national campaign in this state. Nearly 1,000 republicans sat at the tables. Among the speakers were Senator Dolph, Theodore Roosevelt and ex-Speaker Reed. The state Republican convention is being held here today. From all appearances Hon. W. W. Crapo, Hon William Cogswell and W. M. Crane will be chosen delegates, while the fourth choice seems to lie between ex-Governors Ames and Brackett.

Foster Elected Governor.

NEW ORLEANS, April 20.—State Senator Murphy J. Foster will probably be the next governor of Louisiana. The most exciting election ever held in the state came to a close last evening at 6 o'clock after eleven days of voting. It has practically been a case of the most peaceable fights of the ballot ever waged in Louisiana. There were five tickets voted for, one headed by McEnery (Dem.), one by Foster (Dem.), one by Newton (Rep.), one by Treadwell (People's Party), and one by Leonard (Rep.)

They Indorsed Mr. Harrison.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., April 20.—The Republican convention of the Twentieth congressional district has indorsed Hon. John Sanford, of Montgomery, and Hon. Harvey J. Donaldson, of Saratoga county, as delegates to the Republican national convention. The convention passed resolutions indorsing the administration of President Harrison.

Acheson for Congress.

PITTSBURG, April 20.—E. F. Acheson, of Washington county, was nominated for congress by the Republicans of Beaver, who elected delegates to Chicago by the Thirteenth district Democratic convention, which also adopted Cleveland resolutions.

Opposed to Cleveland.

PORTLAND, Ore., April 20.—The Democratic state convention in session here has elected delegates to the Democratic national convention will be opposed to the nomination of Cleveland.

Democrats Carry Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., April 20.—The new city of Niagara Falls held its first municipal election and has carried by the Democrats. George W. Wright was elected mayor by 230 majority.

FOR MEN'S BETTER HALVES.

WOMEN ARE BECOMING BRIGHTER, HEALTHIER AND HAPPIER.

It is Because They Read all the Helpful Hints They Can Find, and Thus Save Much Labor and Worry—Here are Some Valuable Points.

It is said that a fan owned and used by Martha Washington is still in excellent preservation. It is engraved in a great variety and $1,000 has been offered for it and refused. When unfolded a series of pictures may be seen painted in oil. One, a portrait of George Washington, represents him at the age of seventeen, wearing the military uniform of captain, and being the only portrait of him in his youth, so far as known, greatly increases the value of the fan.

Hovering above is an angel crowning him with a wreath of flowers, while by his side is an Indian adorned with flowers and feathers, arrayed in the robes of her tribe, presenting him with a national standard in token of the acceptance of peace.

On Washington's left stands the figure of Liberty. The face of the fan bears the seal of arms of the Washingtons, and the color is still bright and distinct.

FASHION BRIEFS.

Light, airy coverings for the chest and throat are a feature of Parisian attire this season.

Picture hats, or very small bonnets, placed far back on the head, seem the fashion now.

Green, always an appropriate spring color, has a leading position this year, bright greens being mostly affected.

Here is another maxim sent forth by the mysterious French goddess of fashion: "No woman who has any self-respect will allow the sleeves round her upper arm to be less in circumference than her waist."

The newest thing in cents consists of smelling salts perfumed with the scent of different flowers—roses, carnations, violets, lilacs, &c. The salts are the color of the flowers with which they are scented, and are put up in handsome bottles.

"More vaporous than ever," is the edict which has just been issued from Paris touching the dress of the season. The thinner the gauze and the larger the fan, the more chic it is, but it must be elaborately painted with quaint, old-fashioned designs.

Bismarck Wanted Belgium Annexed.

PARIS, April 20.—The Temps publishes a letter which it asserts to have been written by the Emperor Napoleon early in 1866, showing that Prince Bismarck urged Napoleon in 1866 to annex belgium to France, who referred to annex him right against my power opposing the annexation.

Richmond Terminal Reorganization.

NEW YORK, April 20.—The Olcott reorganization committee of the Richmond Terminal announces that at the close of business there had been received by the Central Trust company, as depositary, $66,433,700 worth of securities under the plan of reorganization.

Worthless and Absurd.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The speaker laid before the house a memorial of Captain John Cowdon, the superscription on which said, "Showing not only the utter worthlessness but the absurdity of the work of the Mississippi river commission."

AGAINST THE COMBINE.

New York's Legislative Committee Makes Its Report.

READING DEAL DECLARED ILLEGAL.

The Investigators Say the Coal Monopoly Is Against Public Policy and That They Believe It Means Higher Prices Regardless of the Coal Business' Condition.

ALBANY, April 20.—The report of the committee of the legislature which investigated the coal combine in this state has been completed. After reciting the fact that the evidence taken shows that the Philadelphia and Reading, Lehigh Valley and Port Reading railroads, the Central Railroad of New Jersey and the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company have entered into a combine by which they control the output of coal from Pennsylvania to the east the report says:

It is to be remembered that the anthracite coal region of Pennsylvania is the only source of supply of that kind of coal for the people of New York; that the district is not more than 500 square miles in extent; that the whole available coal lands and collieries therein are under the said combination, either now controlled, or likely soon to be controlled, by the Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron company, the Delphia and Reading Railroad company or its subsidiary companies. There can be no question that the operations forming the combination control almost entirely the output for the said coal to the city of New York and vicinity.

The control of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company of the Poughkeepsie bridge, in connection with the railroads now controlled by it, gives additional evidence that the company intends to control not merely the anthracite coal market of the state of New York, but also as far as practicable that of the New England states.

Contrary to Public Policy.

The committee feels constrained to report in accordance with the terms of the resolution under which it was appointed, that the combination affected under the terms hereinbefore referred to is contrary to public policy and injurious to the public welfare, as it unduly influences in the hands of a few persons a combination the power of regulating or advancing the price of one of the chief necessaries of life to any extent and advisable; that the control of coal, whether for domestic or business purposes, is entirely in the hands of the persons in the combination, inasmuch as the prices to be paid for coal will entirely depend upon the views entertained by the members of the combination as to what is or may be for their best interest.

It was maintained by their representatives before the committee that the existing situation would not necessarily nor as a matter of fact advance the price of coal; that the combination was intended solely to secure economies in the production and carrying of coal and to equalize prices at various points, and that its average effect would be to reduce rather than advance in price to the consumer. It is to be noted, however, that the well-known purpose of the principal corporations took this ground before the committee, they have asserted elsewhere that the object of the combination is to fix the price of coal, and that was the principal object thereof, was to equalize prices by raising the price at New York and other points where coal was being sold cheaply, is against public policy, if not against existing laws, that the profits afforded by the city and state of New York to producers and carriers of coal should not be controlled either wholly or in so large a degree by any single corporation, as under the combination.

At a Monopoly's Mercy.

It certainly seems that a combination, capitalized practically at nearly three hundred millions and also the delivery of coal to the consumer, is not without danger to the community. The state of New York is practically without coal, and is to be deprived from the benefits arising from natural competition, either in the production or in the transportation of coal, and is to be left at the mercy of a monopoly in a matter of such absolute necessity. Whatever advantage may arise from the consolidation of the companies engaged in it, or for the people of another state, it is certain that no advantage will come from it to the people of New York. It is to be remembered that the several railroad companies forming the combination have been the chief carriers of coal from the anthracite coal fields of New York, New Jersey and Pennsylvania and almost the whole of the anthracite coal lands are owned by them. They have controlled mined and marketed their product in direct and active competition with each other.

The combination has already bonded indebtedness to the amount of hundreds of millions of dollars, much of which already represent adhesive original values, particularly in the case of one of the companies, lately bankrupt, and the committee is not to be deterred by the combination as to legitimate transaction of mining and carrying coal must be added the interest on excessive capital and other investments heretofore unwisely made. For this reason, therefore, if for no other, the combination is one of danger to the community and contrary to public policy.

Such Combinations Illegal.

If the result of the combination is to unduly advance the price of one of the necessaries of life, it matters little what the intent of the parties interested in such combination may be declared to be. The courts have uniformly held such combinations to be illegal. The power to who are already interested in controlling it; and, in the present instance, the financial demands upon the corporations representing the combination will compel it, in the opinion of the committee, to exercise its power of controlling the price of anthracite coal by advancing the price thereof to the consumer when the natural conditions of production, demand and supply do not warrant such advance.

The committee is not prepared at this time to suggest any remedy for the existing evil. If one be found necessary, as it is believed that the executive department may, through the attorney general, successfully institute proper legal proceedings under existing laws against the corporations and persons, should such proceedings become necessary because of any advance in the price of coal arising from such combination.

To Watch the Combine.

The committee, therefore, recommends that the attention of the governor be directed to the matters herein set forth in such manner as he of the state in order that he may take at the proper time, the necessary action to enforce the laws.

The committee begs leave also to renew the recommendation contained in the preliminary report submitted March 17, that the committee be continued, or another appointed, with authority to investigate the subject further. This course is recommended because of the apparently well grounded apprehension that monopolistic advantages in the future may be taken by the combination after the adjournment of the legislature. Should the fears of an advance or other evil arising from the combination, the committee, of course, do not deem it necessary to rest unable before the next meeting of the senate.

A Move Against the Reading.

PHILADELPHIA, April 20.—A sensation has been caused by the announcement of the Pennsylvania railroad that it had cut the rates on coal from the mines to New York twenty-six cents a ton, or from $1.70 to $1.44. The cut is looked upon as a hostile movement against the pooling combination. The reduction will go into effect on Monday. The $1.70 rate is from the Schuylkill region to tidewater. The rates from the Lehigh and Wyoming region are respectively $1.75 and $1.80. The reduction applies to these regions also. No general disturbance in the coal trade is looked for, as the hard coal business of the Pennsylvania is so small that it will be unable to demoralize the much greater interest of the other companies.

SEALS ARE SECURE NOW.

The Senate Ratifies the New Modus Vivendi.

A STRAW ON THE SILVER QUESTION.

Senator Hill and Several Other Doubtful Men Vote with the Free Coinage Members on a Monetary Question—Unexpected Strength Shown by the West.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The senate in secret session ratified the agreement for the renewal of the existing modus vivendi in Behring sea. There was some objection to article 5 concerning the allotment of damages to British sealing vessels because of interruption to their business in the event that the decision of the arbitrators is against the claim of the United States, but little objection did not assume formidable proportions and died away under the appeal of Messrs. Sherman, Morgan and other members of the committee on foreign relations for the ratification of the agreement. The text of the modus vivendi follows:

The New Modus Vivendi.

Article 1. Her majesty's government will prohibit during the pendency of the arbitration, and within the part of Behring sea lying eastward of the line of demarcation, described in article 1 of the treaty of 1867 between the United States and Russia, and will promptly use its best efforts to insure the observance of this prohibition by British subjects and vessels.

Art. 2. The United States government will prohibit seal killing for the same period in the same part of Behring sea and on the shores and islands thereof the property of the United States (in excess of 7,500 to be taken on the island for the subsistence of the natives), and will promptly use its best efforts to insure the observance of this prohibition by United States citizens and vessels.

Art. 3. Every vessel or person offending against this prohibition in the said waters of Behring sea, outside of the ordinary three miles limits of the United States, may be seized and detained by the naval or other duly commissioned officers of either of the high contracting parties, but they shall be handed over as soon as practicable to the authorities of the nation to which they respectively belong, who alone shall have jurisdiction to try the offense and impose the penalties for the same. The witnesses and proof necessary to establish the offense shall also be sent with them.

Art. 4. In order to facilitate such proper inquiries as her majesty's government may desire to make with a view to the presentation of the case and arguments of that government before the arbitrators it is agreed that suitable persons designated by Great Britain will be permitted at any time, upon application, to visit or remain upon the seal islands during the sealing season for that purpose.

The Question of Damages.

Art. 5. If the result of the arbitration be to affirm the right of British sealers to take seals in Behring sea within the bounds claimed by the United States, under its purchase from Russia, then compensation shall be made by the United States to Great Britain (for the use of her subjects) for abstaining from the exercise of that right during the pendency of the arbitration, to the extent of such a regulated and limited catch or catches as in the opinion of the arbitrators might have been taken without an undue diminution of the seal herds; and if, on the other hand, if the result of the arbitration shall be to deny the right of British sealers to take seals within the said waters, then compensation shall be made by Great Britain to the United States (for itself, its citizens and lessees) for this agreement to limit the island catch to 7,500 a season, upon the basis of the difference between this number and such larger catch as in the opinion of the arbitrators might have been taken without an undue diminution of the seal herds. The amount awarded, if any, in either case shall be such as under all the circumstances is just and equitable, and shall be promptly paid.

Art. 6. This convention may be denounced by either of the high contracting parties at any time after Oct. 31, 1892, on giving to the other party two months' notice of its termination, and at the expiration of such notice the convention shall cease to be in force.

Senators and the Silver Question.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The features of the open session of the senate was the short but spirited debate on an Arizona funding bill, which, by indirection, brought up the silver question and resulted in a yea and nay vote on the question of striking out the words "gold coin" and inserting "lawful money of the United States" in the interest bearing provision of the bill. This amendment was carried by 38 to 24, but Mr. Gray (Del.), who voted in the negative, took occasion to deny that the vote had any bearing on the free coinage question. Mr. Palmer (Ills.), who voted the same way, explained that he did so in recognition of the right of Arizona to manage her own affairs in her own way and to pay in gold if she wanted to. Mr. Hill (N. Y.) voted for the amendment without comment.

An analysis of the vote shows few changes from the detailed estimate made by a senator some time ago of how a vote on any proposition concerning the silver question would stand but these changes, few as they are, are of vital importance and his estimate placed ten Democratic senators in the anti-free silver column. These were Messrs. Hill (N. Y.), McPherson and Blodgett (N. J.), Gray (Del.), Butler (S. C.), Gibson and White (La.), Carlisle (Ky.), Palmer (Ills.) and Vilas (Wis.) It will be seen that the changes from the estimate were the votes of Senators Hill, Blodgett and Butler, thus taking away three supposedly anti-silver men from their presumed position and placing them in the free silver ranks. The estimate made Senators Gorman and Gibson doubtful quantities, but presumed that they would vote for free silver. Their votes show that the presumption was correct.

The Anti's Over Confident.

The result shows that the sanguine expectations of the anti-free silver men, that a free coinage bill could not pass the senate, were not based on such good grounds as those who made up the estimate given had reason to suppose. The estimate gave to the free coinage proposition forty-four senators, just half the senate, the other side, of course, having the remainder to support it. This would throw the deciding vote, so it was argued, on Vice President Morton, and as he is anti-free coinage it was believed that no free coinage legislation would be enacted in the senate this session.

In the House.

WASHINGTON, April 20.—The house passed a resolution to vacate the order of general "leave to print" to members who desired to submit remarks on the tariff and silver question. A resolution was also adopted authorizing the civil service committee to investigate the alleged violation of the civil service law by certain officials in Baltimore. The remainder of the session was devoted to the consideration of the contested election case of Noyes vs. Rockwell, from the Twenty-eighth district of New York.

Offered $5,000 for Butler's Head.

CHARLESTON, S. C., April 20.—William Laidley, who offered $5,000 reward for the head of General B. F. Butler during the war, died, aged eighty-one. He was owner of the Charleston Courier at the time, and through that paper the reward was offered.

A Long Farewell.

"Farewell, Em'ly, farewell! Your father has took me by the ear and kicked me to that extent that my manly heart is a-bustin with shame and sorrer. Nothin is left for me now but to hunt Injuns for the remainder of my ratched life. Me an my dorg Fido. He will watch my wigwam. This letter contains my will what'll make you my hairess; also a nickel to buy a memento of one who will be heard of in border annals as Dustie Lotts, the Dust Tosser. Farewell, goodby, adoo!" [Exits hastily with pal.]—Life.

WALSH'S ANSWER FILED.

He Denies That Phelan Has Any Right to the Secretaryship.

NEW HAVEN, April 20.—The answer of the Republicans in the quo warranto case of John J. Phelan against Secretary of State St. Jay Walsh, was filed in the superior court at noon in accordance with the order of Judge Hall. The defense denies that the relator received a majority of all the votes lawfully cast for secretary on Nov. 4, 1890; denies that the action of the canal assembly is impracticable and impossible; denies that Mr. Walsh has held the office without any legal right and that the acts of the defendant are without legal warrant and that he usurps the office, and denies that Phelan is duly qualified to act as secretary. All the other allegations of the complaint are admitted, and the answer further says that the general assembly has not yet finished or declared any one to be the successor of R. Jay Walsh, and that neither the superior court nor any other competent authority has rendered any judgment which is legally equivalent to such declarations.

The defense says that the process of election is not complete. It also claims that the relator lacked more than 700 votes of a majority of all votes lawfully cast for secretary of state, and that the house found after an investigation of the returns that no one received a majority of the votes cast for secretary, and that therefore it is the duty of the general assembly to choose a secretary from the two candidates receiving the largest number of votes—John J. Phelan and George P. McLean.

The attorney of such a regulated for the Democrats is to file a rejoinder if they so choose and move for a special assignment for trial, which latter will be done on Friday.

FOUR NEGROES LYNCHED.

They Were Suspected of Having Murdered Stevenson and Payne.

ATLANTA, April 20.—Four negroes were lynched at Inverness, near Ocala, Fla., at about 2 o'clock by a mob of 150 men. On Monday eight negroes suspected of the murder of Stevenson and Payne were caught. One of them was a woman. She confessed and implicated two others. All were taken from the jail by the lynchers. Three were hanged first, and at the hanging another was implicated. The governor wired for the Ocala Rifles, who remained at their armory until 5 o'clock this morning ready at call, but their services were not needed.

The names of those hanged are Jerry Williams, George Davis, Willie Williams and Alberti Roberts. The negroes are in great strength at the phosphate mines and it is estimated that 1,500 weapons are in their possession, and future outbreaks are expected any time.

LIKE FRAYNE'S FATAL SHOT.

Oklahoma Frank's Serious Attempt to Do the William Tell Business.

KINSPORT, April 20.—Frank Lockett, who is known as "Oklahoma Frank," while attempting to do the William Tell business by shooting an apple from the head of his assistant, Frank Ferguson, at the Bijou theater here, accidentally shot the man in the forehead. Ferguson is unconscious, while Seargent is almost prostrated at the accident, which, he claims, is the first of the kind in five years.

The shot was made by taking aim in a mirror, and Seargent says that a fog on the mirror obscured his aim. The ball has not yet been found. The late Frank Frayne killed his wife while attempting the same feat.

There were salutes and bell ringing at sunrise, and a Boston drum corps awakened the citizens by marching over the route taken by the British April 19, 1775.

It Was a Runaway Match.

JERSEY CITY, April 20.—Abraham Simmons, aged twenty-two, and Eliza T. McGregor, aged twenty-one, both of Elizabeth, drove to Justice Ward's office in Jersey City and were married. They admitted that it was a runaway marriage because of parental objection.

RALEIGH, N. C., April 20.—At Flat Rock J. P. Jones, a prominent young man, shot and killed Mr. Lemuel L. Brookshire, his uncle, a well known citizen. Brookshire was tried recently on a charge of outraging Jones' wife, but was acquitted.

She Died for Love.

BUFFALO, April 20.—Maud Dolby, a young woman of questionable character, committed suicide by taking "Rough on Rats." On a page torn from a memorandum pad was pencilled: "Please send me home to my mother, 221 Seneca street. I died for love." Her lover, had forsaken her for another woman.

WOMEN FIGHT FIRE.

THAT IS, THEY PRETEND TO PUT OUT A SHAM CONFLAGRATION.

Sweet Girl Graduates in an English School Prove to Be Firemen of the First Water—A Scene in a Dormitory When an Alarm Has Been Sounded.

It is well known that there are several fire brigades in the kingdom officered and "manned" entirely by women; their sex loss, happily, do not seem to have been required on any serious occasion, and their experience has been therefore confined to assidnous drills and sham alarms. Women, as the poets have long since discovered, are of a retiring nature, and these practices of theirs are carefully guarded from the eye of the stranger. But it was the good luck of the writer to witness such a drill recently, and the proceedings were on this wise. (It is necessary to explain, in a parenthesis, that this particular drill was an "alarm drill;" the theory is that news of a fire has been brought to the chief officer, and every member of the brigade is supposed to act as if the alarm were true.)

The scene of the fire was one of the women's colleges—shall we say in Cantford? The time was late in the evening, when a college might be expected to be, and apparently was, sunk in meditation over the profundest of themes. In one apartment at least a powerful conversation was going on, to judge by the noise. It was as if a thousand beehives had broken loose at once just outside the door; the occupants of the apartment sprang to their feet with one accord; the colloquys that had been in their hands dropped where fortune would, and hostess and guestsded for their lives down the corridor.

There was banging of doors and cries of "Fire!" For one moment the hearts of the outsiders stood still, to think of a fire in that long building and none but girls to cope with it. Then followed recollections of enthusiastic praises of the deeds of a fire brigade, which, in default of real fires, spent its energies upon imaginary ones. The occasion was evidently an "alarm drill." The outsiders pulled themselves together, and went out also on a square landing, only to see the last of the students vanishing down a staircase.

We followed in their wake; a few belated people, who seemed to be inhabitants of a distant part of the building, fled past and served as guides. The members of the brigade were discovered in a small hall, ranged in order and in an obtrusively exhausted condition. None the less, they manifested great eagerness; they were evidently longing to be up and at 'em, like the Guards at Waterloo. They gazed up and down the long vistas of corridors, and presently appeared the reason of this expectation. An officer came flying down the line crying, as she ran: "Corps No. 8, right turn! Forward! Double!"

The corps in question No. 5 vanished in the twinkling of an eye, away it went, knocking over coal scuttles and hot water cans as it ran. The other companies had thus time to get in front of No. 5 for the good luck to be first in the field. In the midst of their envy the voices of other officers dispatched them in the same direction. At a more peaceful time we inquired why the officers arrived so much later than the "men." It was pointed out in reply that an officer was obliged to get hold of one of those alarmists who went around and made so dreadful a noise with the rattles, in order to discover the position of the fire, and this, with your shrouded in an excited condition, might take up some time.

The lookers on followed the brigade at a less headlong speed, and came upon it ranged in two long lines on either side of a corridor. Canvas buckets were passing, as the word was given, from hand to hand, the stentorian officer captain resounded down the line; any incipient burst of laughter, as when some excited creature buried a empty bucket over that it reached the next "man," was at once suppressed. Real water, we were told, was not accepted as a gift, on account of the damage it would cause, however carefully treated.

"We go to a wet drill in mackintoshes," said one of the firemen, "and we discover how much heavier a bucket full of water is than an empty bucket. It is a practical experiment in physics."

The drill went on monotonously to the words "Take," "Change," "Take," "Change"—as each took the bucket from her next neighbor and changed hands by way of passing it on. The order and discipline were really very fair, considering how few drills such busy people can get into each term, and how many members would be likely to answer to such an alarm.

"All of them," said she, "if only from force of habit. I have once or twice seen an alarm under such circumstances that a number of the brigade believed the fire to be a real one. They were, not unnaturally, somewhat startled and frightened; but they all came. As for the use, our little hand engines couldn't put out a serious fire of course; but if the fire were discovered in time we might keep it in check until outside help came; and a brigade is, on the whole, a very pleasant institution and helps to keep together all sorts and conditions of students, and affords them some healthy exercise of mind and body. So that, on the whole, I consider this feminine fire brigade to be a valuable institution deserving of support." And the visitors were inclined to agree with her.—St. James' Budget.

Home the Place to Begin a Reform.

If cigarette smoking is an evil, and we believe there is no question about it, it is a monstrous evil. In thirteen years the *manufacture of the little rolls of bad smell*ing tobacco has increased from 288,576,811 to 2,277,792,5-7 Fully two-thirds perhaps of this enormous number of cigarettes an nually made and sold are smoked by boys. The first thought of many when their attention is called to this subject is that the monstrous evil should be suppressed by law. It is much more easy to make that statement than to carry it into effect. The reformation should begin at home, at the home of parents.—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Mail Cloth.

Mail cloth is a handsome material well used for spreads or portieres. It is a heavily woven cloth of cotton and fine cabling large meshed canvas. It is effectively wrought with conventional patterns done in rope silk, caught down to the pattern with finer silk, an operation not involving a great deal of time and labor.—Carpet and Upholstery Trade Review.

THE SPRING POET AND THE EDITOR.

He's a burst of rhythmic promise getting ready to be adopted;
There the editor awaits for him, with his right hand slyly crooked;
In about another minute this spring poet will be shocked.

"Good morning, sir," the poet cries, "while I am here with the ways,
I just dropped in upon you to present a little lay."
And in his hand extended the young poet holds his fiver;
Two weeks of solemn labor flown among the groves of pison.

"Ah, I see," the editor falters, as he saw unfolds the verse,
And he drawes his lips together like a little bachelor purse.
"It's a bit of springtime fancy, done in yellow, green and blue,
And a shade of bright magenta, blended with a softer hue.

"Oh, I love the sweet arbutus, that is very good indeed,
Says the editor, who passes when he'd just begun to read,
And he turned toward the poet, who is blushing rosy red;
"And the little star eyed pinxy, in its lowly bed."

And again the reader pauses, then again begins to read,
"Soon the buttercup will brighten all the meadows and the mead,
And the swallow will go whirling like a thought upon the wing;"
Why, dear sir!" says the editor, "this is quite a pretty thing.

"But it needs a little mending; some of its poetic feet
Are a little lame and halting where they should exactly meet.
Now, for instance, here's a dactyl where a spondee fits the place,
And it quite destroys the symmetry of true poetic grace.

"Yes, I know 'tis true to nature," says the critic to the poet's interruption, with a lonely flashing eye;
"All the flowers are in season, and the landscape does its part,
But what's nature in the country, in the city heart and soul?"

"Besides, my dear young fellow," and the editor returns
The bright poetic fancy to the poet while he spurns,
"Though you've told a pretty story, told it very well indeed;
Why, you haven't told a word of news, and news is what we need!"

* * * * * * *

Now departs the young spring poet, with his roll of manuscript;
All his sweet, warm, rhythmic fancy has been chilled to the point,
And the hope and the ambition in his fondly cherished line
Will be buried now forever 'neath the sighing Jersey pines!

Value of "Dem Pants."

An amusing incident happened in the city courts this other day. A Jew was on the witness stand testifying against a negro who had stolen a pair of pantaloons from his store.

"How much are the pants worth?" asked Judge Thompson.

"Well, judge," responded the witness, "it depends on the man that wants to buy 'em. I sell them to one man for six dollars, to another for five dollars, but you can have them for four dollars."

"Sir," responded his honor in a disgusted tone of voice, "I want you to tell me what those pants are worth."

"Ah, judge," said the Israelite, "take 'em for three dollars if four dollars don't suit you."

"Look here," thundered the judge, "if you don't tell me the exact value of them pants I will send you to jail for contempt of court."

"Well, then, judge," pleaded the citizen whose face was in most lamenting tone of voice, "take 'em for two dollars. It is giving them away almost, but you can have 'em for two dollars."

By this time the people in the courtroom were convulsed with laughter, and the judge himself was obliged to forget his dignity and join heartily in the laugh. He did not buy the "pants," however.—Louisville Times.

For Short.

In one of the smaller towns of Kentucky lives a negro familiarly known as Tim Whit. On one occasion it was necessary to record his full name.

The not unnatural supposition that Tim stood for Timothy was met with a flat denial.

"No, sah! My right name is What-dem-ere-souls-we-poor-mortals-be White. Dey jes' calls me Tim fo' sho't, sah!"—Youth's Companion.

An Urgent Case.

Poor Patient—I sent for you, doctor, because I know you are a noted physician, but I feel it my duty to inform you that I haven't over twenty-five dollars to my name.

Dr. Bingloe—Very well, then, we must try to cure you up as quickly as possible.—New York Weekly.

The Miserable Culprit.

Browne (to barber's clerk)—Now look here, Sambo, if you cut me the last time you shaved me nearly killed me, and I won't be as easy on you as I was on him.

Barber (anxiously)—No one in this shop else shaved you, sah.—Harper's Bazar.

Getting His Money's Worth.

Ben Wright, who died the other day, was the most companionable man I ever met. The oyster house which he opened, at the corner of Brattle and Court streets, for years was a popular institution.

I remember going into Wright's one night a dozen years ago. Seated at the table next me were four newsboys, accompanied by two girls who sold papers. The waiter refused to serve them.

"What's the trouble, my little men?" said Ben Wright, who overheard the conversation.

"Why, this 'ere duffer says he won't give us dat what we wants."

"What do you want, my boy?"

"I want a great big stew, with plenty of oysters and six spoons."

Wright said "All right," quietly gave the order and when it was ready served the boy with a big stew, a large plate of crackers and a platter of pickles. The six spoons were there.

The stew was passed around, the spokesman seeing that each had his or her share. In a few minutes it had entirely disappeared. The boy paid the party then walked up to the desk and said: "How much stuff, Ben? I tell you dat was cracky."

"Never mind the stuff, my boy; have the stew with me." said Wright kindly.

"Don't want no stuff?"

"No, my boy."

"Well, dat was dat order quick."

No one laughed heartier or enjoyed the retort more than honest Ben Wright.—Boston News.

A BOY'S MOTHER.

Blood and Sire of This Will Not Tell of Your Own.

It is no ordinary hand to which falls the natal rockings and spankings of the years preceding the first day of a boy's introduction to atmospheric existence, the discipline toward the making of a boy's mother begins.

Especially when he wants the marmalade young scion kick his way through the shorthand term and dimly dear to her mother heart. There are thrills of managemal joy in the first long pants, and there is the domestic realm at the first step.

Little by little the finger marks on the doors and windows succeed, and by and by the baby garments are folded away, the long curls—those dear, beautiful baby curls—are shorn, and the heir to the throne is self-announced.

Then comes an age of bumps and bruises and griefs. There are fingers to be tied up and healed with rags and kisses and love. There are hours to be wiped away, manly tears they are too, and there are whole wells of sorrow to be absorbed by the rags of sunshine from a mother's eyes. There are endless draughts drawn from the magic anodynes of a mother's heart. The supply is unceasing in its flow.

Then comes the age of boots. The whole world seems in delightful solution, to be rushed for and spilled. Who but a mother could invent excuses therefore, and then put the soluble world on a higher shelf?

Who but a mother can remove the traces of ink and jam so that no stain dare willing witness to juvenile marauders?

Then does discipline beget patience and endurance and other fruits of the spirit.

Painting Poetry.

I saw a peacock with a fiery tail
I saw a blazing comet pour down hail
I saw a cloud all wrapt with ivy 'round
I saw a lofty oak creep on the ground
I saw a beetle swallow up a wave
I saw a foaming sea brimful of ale
I saw a pewter cup sixteen foot deep
I saw a well full of men's tears that weep
I saw wet eyes in flames of living fire
I saw a house as high as the moon and higher
I saw the glorious sun at deep midnight
I saw the man who saw this wondrous sight.

If a semicolon be placed after the noun in each line except the last this absurd jingle will be resolved into sobriety.

Why Temptation Comes.

Wasps and birds won't pique some unripe fruit, not they. The sweetest, mellowest plums and cherries are their food. And so it is with trials and temptations; they assail only the finest, truest natures. The dwarfed, stunted mind and heart is never troubled with those pangs of temptation. They are not worth while, the powers of evil think, and pass on to more worthy ground. Oh, yes, the devil has a fine discriminating taste.

The Irrepressible Tommy.

Tommy (to new arrival)—Are you Mr. Dosset?

The guest—No, my boy; that's not my name. Why?

Tommy.—'Cause when sister looked out the window and saw you coming she said, "Oh, the dosset!"—Pittsburg Dispatch.

ARTIST AND HIS SISTER.

Tom was a clever young fellow, and he Determined to join the Academy.
And to send in his pictures, large and small
To be hung on the Exhibition wall.
From his father a box of paints he got,
And, of brushes and pencils, quite a lot.
Now, Tom's father is not to be trifled away, nearly tears they are too, and there are whole wells of sorrow to be absorbed by the rags of sunshine from a mother's eyes. There are endless draughts drawn from the magic anodynes of a mother's heart. The supply is unceasing in its flow.
To tell of his trials, his hopes, his fears,
The elder came to the picture, where
She fell fast asleep in the old arm chair.
Said Tom, "I will paint a moustache on Ann,
And change her at once to a fine young man.
There's no time to lose. I will paint in blue,
And give her a pair of green whiskers, too."

Ann woke with a start, and cried out "You wont!
I'll take good care, sir, that you don't!!"

He Had Caught the Idea.

The teacher is suspicious of the influence that the new boy in school seems likely to exert over the rest of the class, and not without some reason.

She had been explaining how aquatic birds are provided with boat-like bodies so as to counteract the force of gravity, and was testing the result of her efforts to impress the fact in the minds of her pupils.

"Now," she said, "who can tell me why the duck's body is formed as it is?"

"I kin," said the new boy, holding up his hand.

"Very well; you may give the reason."

"So's to have 'er all ship-shape."

Never set aside a bottle dirty. Wash, clean and turn with the neck down that it may dry, and no dust be in it when you want it.

Still Smoking Cigars Again.

William Moore, of Oakland, popularly known as Billy, has a sweetheart. Billy used to smoke incessantly, and being of blue blood always consumed the best of weeds. Consequently his bill was bigger than that of others, the odor of which was detested by the lady-fair when William pressed her to his heaving "bosum." She asked Billy to cease, but he put his pocket and told them away on the mantel, so that, "Willie, dear, they will not tempt you." William had noticed that his prospective father-in-law had of late discarded a pipe and gone to smoking fine cigars, so he thought business was prospering with the old man.

One night Willie staid later than usual. Just as he was saying goodby "for the last time" he heard the old gentleman, who thought he had gone, call out to the daughter: "Down the back of the stairs." "How about cigars tonight? Were there any in his pockets?"

William said nought, but went his way. He is still smoking cigars again.—San Francisco News-Letter.

AN ORDINANCE

For the Assessment of Taxes for the Year 1892.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

He Is Now Smoking Cigars Again.

William Moore, of Oakland, popularly known as Billy, has a sweetheart. Billy used to smoke incessantly, and being of blue blood always consumed the best of weeds. Consequently his bill was bigger than that of others, the odor of which was detested by the lady-fair when William pressed her to his heaving "bosum." She asked Billy to cease, but he put his pocket and told them away on the mantel, so that, "Willie, dear, they will not tempt you." William had noticed that his prospective father-in-law had of late discarded a pipe and gone to smoking fine cigars, so he thought business was prospering with the old man.

One night Willie staid later than usual. Just as he was saying goodby "for the last time" he heard the old gentleman, who thought he had gone, call out to the daughter: "Down the back of the stairs." "How about cigars tonight? Were there any in his pockets?"

William said nought, but went his way. He is still smoking cigars again.—San Francisco News-Letter.

PERSONAL.

Miss Alice Holmes is to be married in the Crescent avenue church this evening.

Mr. John Rothaker and Mr. Rust of Philadelphia spent yesterday with friends in this city.

Mr. William Fitzgerald is happy to-day over the advent of a son which was born yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. E. H. Spooner, who formerly resided on Grove street, North Plainfield, yesterday removed to Brooklyn where she will reside permanently.

Tandem-driving, with a high-actioned leader, a steadier going horse between the shafts, and with a driver holding the ribbons, whose skill can show to advantage all the good points of the glossy, high-spirited animals, is a pleasure easily enjoyed, long remembered. Among the gentlemen in this vicinity who drive tandem and whose turnouts attracted attention last Summer are Mr. J. J. H. Pollion at Broadway, Mr. T. B. Paxton at Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, Mr. Will Vail at Madison avenue and Eighth street, and Mr. W. F. Smith of Netherwood.

A STABBING AFFRAY.

One Boy Uses a Knife to Defend Himself from Another.

A small boy employed by George Richter, the Somerset street barber, was stabbed in the hand this morning by another boy.

The boys engaged in a fight in Exchange alley. Richter's employe was getting the best of it, when the other boy drew out a penknife and stabbed him in the right hand, inflicting a deep wound from which blood flowed profusely. The Richter boy went to his home and had the wound dressed by a physician.

The name of the boy who did the stabbing is not known.

Yesterday's Tournament.

The tournament given by the members of the Independent Gun Club on their grounds in North Plainfield yesterday afternoon is said to have been one of the most successful ever held by that organization. Sportsmen were present from New York, Philadelphia and other places. A large number of persons visited the grounds to see the shooting. Both live and inanimate pigeons were used.

A Runaway Accident.

A horse attached to a light phaeton belonging to a man named Coleman, who resides on Richmond street, became frightened on Park avenue shortly after six o'clock last evening and ran away. The driver became frightened and jumped out. Before the animal was stopped it succeeded in wrecking one of the wheels of the wagon. The driver escaped injury.

The Amplified Degree.

A number of Plainfielders visited Bonnie last evening to see the working of the amplified degree worked on six members of Somerville Lodge, Knights of Pythias. The degree was worked by a team from Somerville. Visitors were also present from Elizabeth and other places. The exercises are said to have been very interesting.

About the Indians.

Mr. Fountain will speak in Hope Chapel this evening about the Indians and other early inhabitants of this country. He has made this subject a matter of study, and will undoubtedly interest all who hear him. He will exhibit at the same time some relics, many of which he has found himself. All are welcome.

The Day Nursery.

At the corner of Broadway and Fourth street, that great help to working women—a Day Nursery—has been opened. It opens at seven a. m. for the day.

NUPTIALS.

Walsh—Cadlipp.

The new Grace church, brilliantly lighted with electricity, was the scene, last evening, of a very graceful and charming wedding. Being the first event of the kind in the new church it caused much interest, and the ceremony was witnessed by a pleasantly large number of people. The contracting parties were Miss Sarah Alice Cadlipp, daughter of Judge Reuben Cadlipp, of New York, who resides on East Ninth street, and William Smith Walsh of Metuchen. Easter lilies were the important decoration, both in the church and at the house. As usual upon such occasions the organ interested the audience, until the hour for the arrival of the bride, when, at the sound of Lohengrin, from the distance came the voices of the choir singing the familiar strains most beautifully. The vestry door opened and the surpliced choir marched to their seats at the chancel. Following them came the bridesmaids, Miss Grace Howard, who, in the absence of the maid of honor, through illness, filled her place, and Miss Smith of Brooklyn, N. Y. Then came the ushers, Messrs. Harry Squires, Charles Kendrick of Nutley, John Joy and Toastmaster of Brooklyn, E. L. Bridi of Montclair, and G. B. Foucey of Westfield. While the groom and his best man, E. A. Hall of Brooklyn, were taking their places at the altar, the bridesmaids and ushers walked slowly down the aisle to meet the bride, leaning upon the arm of her father.

When they met the bridesmaids and ushers turned, thus reversing the order, and bringing the bridesmaids just before the bride—together they went to the chancel, where the Rev. E. M. Rodman officiated.

The bride wore a gown of heavy white satin, with court train. At the sides reseves were formed with wide old point lace, let in by heavy cords of satin. A full veil of tulle, caught with natural orange blossoms, fell freely and enveloped the pretty bride in its soft folds. A delicate chain around her neck, holding a large solitaire diamond, and a diamond brooch just beneath, both gifts of the groom, were the only ornaments.

The bridesmaids were dainty in their pretty white gowns of crepe de chine, fluffy with frills, trimmed with gold and white and chiffon. Each held a large bouquet of marmet pink roses, tied with pink satin ribbon, full bows and ends. The wedding procession on the way to the altar was a pretty sight, and the bride an exceedingly interesting one. Instead of satin ribbons to guard the pews during the ceremony, immense white silk cords were stretched from the part reserved for friends to the end of the center aisle.

Abundance of smilax, mixed with white and pink carnations tied with pink ribbons, long bows and ends struck the eye upon entering the room.

The bride and groom stood within a bower of Easter and Day lilies and ferns between the front windows of the drawing rooms, and here were the congratulations extended the beamingly happy couple. The presents were choice, beautiful and numerous.

As Mr. and Mrs. Walsh will probably return to Plainfield to reside a cordial welcome awaits them. Metuchen is not to steal this one of our pleasant friends.

Stephens—Cairncross.

At the residence of Mr. and Mrs. James Whiteley, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Dorset, Monday evening, the wedding was celebrated of Miss Ada Cairncross, also a former Plainfielder, but now a resident of Colorado, to Mr. John Stephens, of Cranford, N. J.

A pleasant reception was held afterward.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Whitely, Miss Flynn and Miss Katie Moen of Plainfield were among those present.

Silver Wedding.

Mr. and Mrs. William Hagan of 18 Prospect avenue celebrated their silver wedding last evening. The silver was all to the presents and choice invitations sent out, for no threads appear in the hair of the bride of twenty-five years ago. Their large number of friends were present to extend congratulations and everything was arranged in a delightful and enjoyable manner. After pleasant conversation dwelling upon reminiscences and old times, the young people did what they always like to do and will do—waltz. These anniversaries are pleasant mile stones to halt at, and we regret that our friends are about to leave us, for otherwise we might look forward to the next stone of fifty years, when we could be among those to wish them God speed.

Mr. Dilts' Resignation Accepted.

The members of the Park Avenue Baptist Church held their regular monthly meeting last evening. The resignation of the pastor, the Rev. Asa Roe Dilts, was brought before the meeting and accepted. It will take effect on April 30. A committee was appointed to supply the pulpit until a new pastor is chosen. Other business of a private nature was transacted.

Delegates Elected.

The Republicans of the First and Fourth Wards held their primary meetings in the Republican headquarters last evening. J. Fred MacDonald was elected a delegate from the First Ward to attend the Congressional convention and Abram Anderson was elected as a delegate from the Fourth Ward.

THE PRESBYTERY.

Rev. George Buckle the new Moderator.

The delegates to the Elizabeth Presbytery meeting at Westfield are enjoying the splendid weather, (not including to-day), the bright scenes and the pretty village, and the hospitality of the home church. They were cordially greeted by Pastor Caldwell, and between the sessions both yesterday and to-day have been sumptuously entertained with luncheons.

Tuesday morning session was taken up with the admirable sermon by the retiring moderator Rev. James M. Mosse, of the Madison avenue church of Elizabeth, and the business formalities of organization for the year.

Rev. George Buckle pastor of the Marshal street Presbyterian church of Elizabeth was elected moderator to succeed Mr. Mosse, and Rev. G. Herbert Payson of the First Presbyterian church of Rahway was chosen assistant clerk.

The new church at Maurer's near Rahway, organized through the effort of Rev. Dr. Allen was enrolled in the Presbytery.

After the noon lunch the clergymen and elders congregated on the lawn of the pretty church, and were so greatly enjoyed the bright scenes and invigorating atmosphere here, many of them tarried beyond the hour for the opening of the afternoon session, and Rev. E. B. Coe was obliged to call the moderator to summon them to business.

The session was occupied with the narrative of the state of religion, and reports from the pastors and elders. Rev. Mr. Rowland read the narrative. It was brief and interesting. The reports from most churches were favorable in respect to growth in spiritual and financial interests. Fourteen union and mission Sunday-schools were reported all in a flourishing condition with one exception, an Elizabeth school which reported it was without means, while another, the Westminster Hope Mission, reported a doubled growth. Twenty-two churches reported Y. P. S. C. E. societies. A very gratifying grown of interest in woman's work in all churches was reported. The Elizabeth churches reported as having been especially blessed with large ingatherings and increased vigor of religious life. Under "Methods of work for moral reforms," one church in Orange was reported as as "fighting the race tracks and other devices of the devil." Another church in the Presbytery reported in answer to this question that "The gospel is preached and the Bible is taught."

The ruling elders were then allowed each three minutes for discussion of state of religion.

Rev. Mr. Blauvelt of Roselle said while his church was growing spiritually, and a new church was under way, the power of the devil to destroy he is increasing in the village. The devil was increasingly increasing his plant. This was the result of the increase of foreign population. A venerable minister built a nice house near the village, and a beer saloon has gone up adjoining it. The increase of the morning trains, and the Sun day travel on the new county roads, the bad influence.

Rev. Mr. Cadwell, of the Westfield church, reported it in good condition, and greatly increased membership, as the influence of a Bible training class in which members of all ages participated.

Rev. George F. Greene, of the Cranford church, had a very favorable report. Four thousand dollars were expended on improvements, and $1,600 given to missionary boards. An advance in woman's missionary work was especially noticeable. Twenty-two members were reported as the net increase.

Rev. Dr. Leggett, of Rahway, reported a church in a flourishing condition, and a new edifice in process of erection. Rev. G. H. Payson of Rahway, and Rev. Dr. Richards, of Plainfield, and his assistants of Rahway, the Grove chapel had very encouraging reports.

KNIGHTS AND LADIES OF HONOR.

Session of the Grand Lodge at Bloomfield—Wiener Again Grand Protector.

The Grand Lodge session of the Knights and Ladies of Honor of New Jersey, held at Raub's Hall, Bloomfield, yesterday, was a lively one. The Hudson county representatives were discrusted because they did not capture the Grand Protectorship. They have not secured it once since the Grand Lodge was organized ten years ago.

A resolution was passed that all the grand officers in the future shall hold office for two years instead of one, as the rule was up to last night.

Everything went along smoothly until the nominations for supreme representatives came up. There were ten candidates in the field and five ballots were taken before a choice was made. The officers chosen were as follows: Grand Protector; Oscar Wiener, of Newark; Grand Vice-Protector, Henrietta Fredericus, of Newark; Grand Secretary, Henry Wilshusen, of Jersey City; Grand Treasurer, Ferdinand C. Schmidt, of Newark; Grand Chaplain, Matilda Remmer of Jersey City; Supreme Representatives, Dorothy P. Loder, of Newark, and George Bechtold, of Jersey City; both delegates for a term of four years; Grand Trustees, Henry Ulcamer, of Jersey City. Meyer Newman, of New ark, and Frederick Mandler, of Jersey City. The Grand Chaplain appointed were, Grand Guide, Daniel Cole, of Jersey City; Grand Guardian, C. A. Nestler, of Jersey City; Grand Sentinel, Edward J. Decker, of Newark.

After the election the new officers were installed by Acting Supreme Protector De Forest P. Loder, assisted by Charles Edwards as supreme guide. This will be Mr. Weiner's sixth term as grand protector. The grand lodge was instituted by Mr. Weiner ten years ago yesterday with ten lodges having a membership of 800. The order now has fifty-nine lodges and a membership of nearly 6,000. After adjournment the delegates were entertained with a reception at Raub's and Metz's Halls by the four lodges of Bloomfield and Montclair. This was followed by a ball at Metz's Hall.

Delegates from the lodges in this city were in attendance.

STATE BOARD OF HEALTH.

The Regular Spring Meeting Monday and What was Done.

The regular Spring meeting of the State Board of Health was held Monday in the State House, and various items relating to the general health of the State were considered. Reports from health inspectors and local boards were published, showing a general increase of attention on matters relating to the public health.

The prevalence of smallpox recently in Elizabeth and Newark, and now in Jersey City, has led to a more thorough inspection of the vaccination. Diphtheria and influenza have prevailed during the Winter and Spring in many localities, and arrangements were made to facilitate the work of township boards in wiping out the causes, in view of the recent law which causes them to appoint a day in each township to be set apart annually for a consideration of local health needs.

Geo. W. McGuire was reappointed State dairy commissioner for a term of three years from date. Mr. McGuire is giving active attention to his department of the work. Various contagious diseases of animals were considered; especially with reference to tuberculosis. The Board is doing what it can under present laws, but there is much need, it is thought, of more summary proceedings in dealing with this disease, especially as at present it is mostly confined to a few localities.

In reference to the adulteration of foods the Board adopted a resolution that the use of a specific list of chemical acids as a means of preventing change in foods and fluids is an adulteration, and as such is to be dealt with under the law.

The Board adjourned to meet in June, unless some exigency requires sooner attention.

The Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company, after an existence of twenty years during which time it has sold thousands of lots and been instrumental in the rapid growth of the town and villages along the Central Railroad of New Jersey, has decided to dispose of its remaining properties at such prices as will prove attractive to home seekers, investors and speculators. Don't invest in the many mushroom paper towns when here is a chance to buy lots in prosperous, healthy cities, with good schools, churches, electric light, low taxes and city charges paid for all improvements made, such as sewers, curbing, paving, etc. Many $600 lots reduced to $350, and large reductions throughout. In many instances city improvements have cost close to $300. A rare chance, and present prices will hold good DURING APRIL ONLY.

THREE STAR TEA

EDITORIAL NOTES

The women's vote at the Kansas election was very light. Women can hardly expect men to take much interest in suffrage for them till they begin to take more interest in it themselves.

Millions of buffalo, or, as they are more properly called, American bison, a generation ago roamed over our western plains. The latest buffalo census shows that there are now alive in the world only 1,097, and half of these are kept in captivity in parks and menageries. A wild herd, 200 strong, is protected by the United States government in Yellowstone park. Thus the Behring sea seals will vanish before the white man's cruelty and greed unless they are quickly protected by law.

General Edward W. Serrell has invented a system of electrical coast and harbor defense which is noteworthy. The device is so arranged that if a ship crosses the electrical path at the entrance of a harbor it will at once receive a tremendous blow, which will shiver it to atoms. The blow will be equal to 20,000 tons, and not much is known about it except that it will come from overhead, in a flash as of lightning. This is very fine for harbor defenses, and we hope it is true. All the same, in our judgment, the person who can abolish mosquitoes will be more of a benefactor of his race.

New States Yet to Come.

At most there are five—New Mexico, Arizona, Utah, Oklahoma and Alaska. This closes the list, unless Indian Territory should desire to come as a state and be cast in corpus of time. In that case there can yet be six new states. Alaska is out the question at present, however, owing to reasons which may prevail permanently. New Mexico is the most promising candidate for statehood. It has now a population of nearly 250,000, containing more people than the states of Idaho and Wyoming combined. New Mexico has magnificent prospects in many directions—agriculture, live stock, mining and manufacturing. The mongrel greaser population which used to be set down against the account is rapidly being transformed before the all conquering Anglo-Saxon.

Utah cannot come in because of her polygamous religion. Otherwise she would make a good state. Then there is Arizona, with a population of 70,000. Arizona has been an organized territory for thirty years, and a year ago adopted a state constitution. When irrigation plans are in operation Arizona will be a fine state. Oklahoma has 80,000 population already—a young giant—and wants to be a state. But her boundaries have not yet finally been settled. Congress may add more to her square miles. It is not likely, however, that any territories will be put through congress as states till the presidential election is over.

Women Astronomers at Harvard.

The Harvard astronomical observatory was the first in the world to photograph a star, which it did in 1850. It is also the first to give to the world a regularly trained corps of women astronomers. The work on which the ladies are engaged is described in the New England Magazine by Helen Leah Reed.

It includes three classes—computing, original investigation and, third, the Henry Draper memorial work and four other branches of investigation similar to the Draper work. For twenty years women have been employed in making mathematical calculations for the observatory. It is found that they are quite as skillful as the men computers, and they are paid the same. But there is another kind of investigation for which women are peculiarly adapted. Telescope observations at night are not so much in their line, but after the stars are photographed the women, by the aid of magnifying glasses, examine the plates and describe them. For this task they seem peculiarly fitted by their quickness and closeness of perception. An astronomer does not have to sit up nights now and look through a telescope. He simply studies the stars in the daytime from their photographs. Photography has brought the stars into daylight.

Since the application of photography to astronomy, this science has changed greatly, and a new department has grown called astro-physics. The wonderful method of spectral analysis is applied to the light of the star as photographed. By this means it has actually become possible to determine the physical constitution of a star.

The superintendent of the Draper Memorial work is a woman, Mrs. Miss Fleming. She has added to astronomic knowledge the discovery of a method whereby variable stars of a certain type may be proved variable. Miss Maury has discovered that the star known as Ben Aurigae is a close binary. Miss Byrd and Miss Whitney obtained the exact difference in longitude between Smith college and Harvard observatory. Miss Whitney is now Maria Mitchell's successor at Vassar, and Miss Byrd is director of Smith college observatory. Women who are accomplished mathematicians are quickly sought for as teachers.

Finally Miss Anna Winlock has made a standard catalogue of the stars about the north pole.

SENATOR QUAY PRAISED.

He Shares Honors with Harrison and Blaine.

JOHN DEAN FOR SUPREME JUDGE.

Closing Scenes of the Exciting Pennsylvania Republican State Convention at Harrisburg—Kansas Democrats Instruct Their Delegates to Vote for Cleveland.

HARRISBURG, April 21.—The Republican state convention adjourned late last night after a very exciting session. The platform which was presented by Chris Magee, chairman of the resolutions committee, extends greetings to the Republicans of sister states, especially those of Rhode Island. It next appeals to the young voter to study the history of the Republican party since it crushed the slave power, established sound currency and protected American labor. It declares that the party of Lincoln and Grant, of Harrison and Blaine, has always the wisdom to do right and the courage to be consistent. Unbounded confidence in President Benjamin Harrison is the next plank. His conduct in the Italian and Chilian disputes and in the threatened complications with England is warmly commended.

"The Republicans of Pennsylvania," continues the platform, "have an especial right to pride in the eminent service of the distinguished secretary of state, that brilliant son of Pennsylvania and ideal of Republican leaders, James G. Blaine."

Protection and Silver.

The principle of protection to American labor as the cornerstone of Republican faith is the next plank laid down. The Democratic action in attacking the tariff piecemeal is denounced as guilty of cowardice and false pretension. Liberal appropriations are favored for the construction of a ship canal between Lake Erie and the Ohio river.

The platform opposes free coinage of silver, but favors the purchase of American silver at its market value and the issue of treasury notes in payment thereof. A liberal scheme of pension legislation for the soldiers injured in the late war is favored. The passage of more stringent immigration laws in order to keep out undesirable immigrants is urged upon congress.

The names of Harrison and Blaine were received with cheers. Before the platform was adopted D. D. Phillips, of Schuylkill, offered a resolution indorsing Senator M. S. Quay. The resolution was received with prolonged cheers and calls for Quay. Mr. Magee got the floor and protested against the resolution because he thought that it committed the convention to one side of a controversy now going on. With no desire to belittle the services of Senator Quay he asked that the resolution be withdrawn. After a short meeting the committee on resolution, which reads as follows, was withdrawn:

We sympathize our junior United States senator upon the spontaneous and overwhelming manifestations of approval of his course exhibited throughout the commonwealth, and as representatives of the state at large in the presidential year, recalling his magnificent service to party in 1888, commend friends from adding our testimony of appreciation and approval and tendering our most earnest felicitations to the Hon. Matthew Stanley Quay.

Senator Quay Indorsed.

A little later the Quay men presented the following:

Resolved, That the eminent public and party services of Matthew Stanley Quay entitle him to the thanks and gratitude of the Republicans of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Magee said he heartily approved of such a resolution, and it was adopted.

Then the election of 76 large, the delegates at large and alternates, and district electors were named as follows:

Electors at Large—R. F. Jones, Pittsburg; William Wood, Philadelphia; J. F. Dunlap, Lancaster; W. H. Savin, Delaware.

Delegates at Large—William L. Elkins and Hamilton Disston, Philadelphia; Chauncey Filmer Black, York; General Frank Reeder, Easton; Henry W. Oliver, Pittsburg; Senator William Flinn, Pittsburg; S. A. Davenport, Erie; Hon. Henry C. McCormick, Lycoming; Lyman D. Gilbert, Dauphin.

Alternates at Large—William B. Ahearn and S. L. Clements, Philadelphia; J. A. Dale, York; John Young, Wyoming; Joseph Bosler, Montgomery; A. C. Hawkins, McKean; Morgan B. Williams, Luzerne; Samuel Douglas, Allegheny.

Districts Electors—1, John S. Lawson; 2, John Rundell; 3, John Hunter; 4, Alexander Crowe, Jr.; 5, Charles H. Siner; 6, Maxwell Clower; 7, W. H. Grundy; 8, Frank Green; 9, J. N. Momer; 10, J. W. McGirl; 11, H. J. Knapp; 12, W. J. Harvey; 13, Jesse Muir; 14, J. H. Bingley; 15, Col. Durland; 16, Perry A. Steckley; 17, L. T. Bonbrake; 18, S. S. Schoch; 19, J. Schell Wilson; 20, ——; 21, J. B. Faux; 22, J. R. Pitcairn; 23, J. M. Misemer; 24, I. V. Babcock; 25, S. D. Bell; 26, M. S. Taylor; 27, C. F. Barclay; 28, J. R. Dale.

Dean for Supreme Judge.

After a hot fight John Dean, of Hall county, was nominated for supreme judge. The sixth ballot resulted as follows:

Hendersen, 102; Dean, 97; Ewing, 76; Shelley, 31; Archbald, 26; Wetherill, 9. Some delegates tried to move an adjournment, but he was ordered down and the call of the roll was resumed. On the sixth ballot Hendersen had forty-eight votes for Henderson. The result announced was seventh ballot: Henderson, 114; Dean, 99; Ewing, 32; Archbald, 17; White, 7; Shelley, 4. Chris Magee appeared into the aisle and challenged the correctness of the vote. Judge Sadler's name was announced. On the ninth ballot the Dean galaxy delegates swung from Ewing to Dean, and the ballot resulted: Dean, 126; Henderson, 127; Ewing, 7; Sadler, 1. Mr. Ray, who nominated Mr. Henderson, moved to make the nomination of Dean unanimous. There was great confusion, but quiet was restored long enough to put the motion and it was carried unanimously amid wild cheering.

The candidates for congressmen at large were Major Alexander McDowell, George A. Gowen, General William Lilly, Assa J. Taggart and Dr. C. H. Brenner. McDowell and Lilly were nominated. Just before adjournment Mr. Magee got the floor for a minute to state that he was in the corner during the afternoon and might have been clerical errors, and he wanted to withdraw anything he had said which might be construed as an imputation on Secretary Lesh.

Indiana Democratic Meet.

INDIANAPOLIS, April 21.—The Democratic state convention met here today. It will choose four delegates to Chicago and will nominate candidates for governor, lieutenant governor and other state officers. The indications are that the convention will be one of the most hotly contested in the history of the state.

The followers of ex-President Cleveland and ex-Governor Gray seem to be about equally divided. There is some disposition on the part of enthusiastic Cleveland people to ignore the agreement entered into a few days ago by some of the friends of Cleveland and Gray, and if this is done the whole proceedings of the convention will be tainted.

Cleveland delegates are criticising this agreement and expressing the belief that the Democrats of Indiana should pronounce their unqualified adherence to the candidacy of Mr. Cleveland.

Tracy's Presidential Boom.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—There is an impression growing in official circles that the utmost activity displayed by the admirers of Secretary Tracy's aspirations for the honoring of a presidential boo in the neighborhood of Secretary Tracy's office.

General Tracy is believed to appreciate the value of the presence in the convention of a well organized body of Tracy boomers.

Much has been said throughout the country about the speech of Vice President Morton touching the old ticket. The exact truth seems to be that the vice president is not particularly in love with his office and not personally partial to going on with his duties, if there should be a second Harrison administration.

McKinley Yearns for Congress.

CINCINNATI, April 21.—It is said here that Governor McKinley will accept a renomination for congress from the new Stark-Columbia district.

It is an open secret that McKinley is thoroughly disgusted at the office of governor. The Foraker-Sherman fight has caused him no end of trouble; the constant fight for office annoys and disgusts him. He does not desire a second term as governor, and as his term in congress would not begin until his gubernatorial term expired the arrangement may be a go. It is known that Governor McKinley has been asked so to accept the nomination.

Bay State Republicans.

BOSTON, April 21.—The Republican state convention for the election of four delegates at large and four alternates to the national convention at Minneapolis selected the following named delegates: W. M. Crane, W. W. Crapo, William Cogswell and Henry B. Rawson. The convention then placed itself on record:

Resolved, That we heartily approve the fearless and dignified policy of the administration of President Harrison in the carrying out of so ably asserted in all of his loyal endeavors by that noble patriot and statesman, James G. Blaine; for its prompt action in the carrying out and adoption of all true American principles.

Cleveland Men Win in Kansas.

SALINA, Kan., April 21.—The Kansas Democratic state convention declared for free coinage of silver and elected delegates instructed its delegates to vote for Cleveland while his name remained before the Chicago convention. The six delegates at large elected were leaders of the Cleveland movement in the state. They are ex-Governor George W. Glick, W. C. Jones, chairman of the Democratic central committee; Tully Scott, of Oberlin; Hon. Thomas Fenlon, of Leavenworth; R. C. Sepp, of Cherokee county, and Thomas B. Finch, of Wichita.

New York's Delegate at Large.

ALBANY, April 21.—Secretary M. Dyer, who is here, says that he is sure Mr. Bisbee is out of the race. He does not think New York's delegation will have any instructions, but will go to the convention uninstructed and will cast their votes for whoever they deem the best candidate to lead the party. Who that will be Mr. Dyer said he could not say.

Prohibitionists Meet.

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., April 21.—The Prohibitionists of the county of Lycoming met and the following nominations: For congress, Benjamin C. Welsh, of Hughesville; for the assembly, Hon. Jesse Bisbee, of Montoursville, and Dr. C. D. Huntington, of Williamsport. Resolutions were passed condemning both political parties.

Mr. Platt a Delegate.

OWEGO, N. Y., April 21.—The Republicans of Tioga county met at Welch Opera House and chose the following delegates to the state convention: T. C. Platt, J. C. Lounsbery, George Truesdale, Fred Lang, Epenetus Bowen, James Davidge. The delegates are uninstructed.

Foster's Finality $6,000.

NEW ORLEANS, April 21.—Chairman Knittschmitt estimates that Foster has carried the state by not less than 50,000 plurality.

FASHIONS

A French Costume.

Indications of a revival of overskirts and skirt drapery appear in some recent French costumes for afternoon and dress wear. An instance of this new feature is found in the long apron front of the French artist gown drawn here shown.

FRENCH AFTERNOON DRESS.

The demitrained skirt and pointed bodice are in cream crepon; the sleeves, bib, square and bands are of terra cotta poult de soie, edged with knotted fringe and embroidery.

Silk Shirts and Sashes.

Silk shirts are frequently finished off with wide sashes of soft silk, passed twice around the waist and tied in a large bow at one side. This is very good effect in the case of slight, youthful figure, and is in carried out for both day and evening.

Pittsburg's Strike Still On.

PITTSBURG, April 21.—The bricklayers' strike, which has been on for fifty weeks, will continue indefinitely. All efforts toward settlement have been futile.

MANY MINERS DROWNED

Ten or Twelve Reported Dead at Minersville, Pa.

OVERWHELMED BY THE WATERS.

An Immense Flood Bursts Through the Old Workings of Lytle Colliery, Drowning a Large Number of Men to a Horrible Death in the Darkness.

MINERSVILLE, Pa., April 21.—This town, which is situated about four miles from Pottsville, is greatly excited over a horrible accident that occurred late in the afternoon at the Lytle colliery, whereby ten or twelve men are said to have lost their lives by the flooding of the mine with an immense body of water that burst through the old workings. The accident occurred just about the time the shifts were changing. It is asserted by the people of the village that eight men have met their death by the disaster. Among those lost are Minora Dolbin, Bell and Dizzy.

A Night Key of Hope.

Besides the Americans fifteen there were a large number of Italian and Hungarian laborers at work inside, and it is thought that perhaps six or them are also drowned. The doomed men were surrounded on all sides with water, and while their surveyors and engineers set to work to save they are all somebody has evidently blundered.

There were scores of men inside at the time, and some of these swam out, while others are said to have been heard calling as if they had reached a high point above the water. The place where the accident occurred is a new coal operation that is being carried upon an immense scale by the Lytle Coal company, an incorporated company, the principal stockholders of which are the Pennsylvania railroad and Reading railroad companies. The works are located on Primrose mountain, several miles northwest of Minersville, and tops the great Wolf Creek colliery, which has been idle for some time. The mine is known as the Lytle tunnel.

About two years ago the present operations commenced the reopening of the tunnel, which was opened by the old Indians in pumping and opening up new shafts. Gangways are being pushed out from these slopes on all sides of the new workings. The old workings are in, and it is the bursting through of one or more of these deposits without warning that caught the unfortunate miners while at work.

BLEW UP THE BRIDGE.

Spain's Anarchists Getting Very Free with Their Bombs.

MADRID, April 21.—Armed anarchists marched through Barcona, Castile, last evening and blew up the bridge over the river. There were about forty in the band and they carried red and black flags. There have been no arrests. They threatened to blow up the gas works if they were interfered with. There was an explosion in a market place in Orense, Galicia, last evening. The bomb contained about seven pounds of dynamite and was placed under a bench in the middle of the square. No one was injured, but houses in the vicinity were injured to the extent of several thousand francs. There have been no arrests. The police are anarchists themselves.

Revenge Promises Retribution.

PARIS, April 21.—Anarchists have sent the following letter to Ravachol: "You may be condemned, but your death shall be avenged. The day of your execution, the infamous Deibler and his assistants shall pay with their lives for taking yours. We shall be present with bombs in our pockets and we will blow up the guillotine."

Anarchist Meet Honored.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Cooper Institute hall was packed last evening on the occasion and concert in honor of Herr Most, the anarchist. Five red flags were displayed on the platform and the Marseillaise and Ca-ira were played. Several speakers denounced Most's imprisonment as an outrage upon the right of free speech.

Anarchist Masters Rewarded.

LONDON, April 21.—The hotel which has donned fifty pounds to the Walsall petty police as rewards for their skill and energy in the case of the Walsall anarchists.

KILLED BY A SINGLE BLOW.

Freithoim's Quick Temper Has Made Him a Murderer.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Arthur Freithoim, who lives at 660 Lexington avenue, went to Hammerstein's theatre last night to see a benefit performance. Before a crowd had collected about the ticket office that Freithoim attempted to break through it. Deckman, a huge Vanderbilt employe, remonstrated with him, and Freithoim struck him a terrific blow in the face, knocking him down.

Blood flowed from his mouth in such volume that the attaches of the theatre were unable to check it. A physician was summoned, but Vanderbilt was dead before he arrived. Freithoim was locked up on a charge of manslaughter, which followed his blow. He made no attempt to escape, and gave himself up. On his left hand a ring of Freithoim's fingers had cut an artery in the deceased's face.

Changes in Yale's Crews.

NEW HAVEN, April 21.—D. Rogers and C. Haskell, of the Yale crew, who have been retired for a term, have now been given a trial at bow and No. 2 respectively, and Stanford was taken from No. 6, Captain Hartwell going to that position. Peters succeeds Hartwell at No. 6, Wright succeeds Stanford and the last stage of the work has not been ventured upon for years.

Gould and Sage to Reside.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Jay Gould and Russell Sage will retire at the annual meeting of the Union Pacific railroad company on April 27 from the directorate, and their successors will be elected to succeed Sidney Dillon, Captain Richard S. Hayes, of the New York Central, is also prominently mentioned for the presidency.

Brotherhood Engineers Against the Great Coal Combine.

SATISFACTION OR A BIG STRUGGLE

Report That the Wholesale Discharges Recently Made by the Reading's Four Heads is the Alleged Interest of Cheap Coal May Cause a Very Serious Strike.

NEW YORK, April 21.—The Herald declares that the labor situation on the four great railroads allied under the Reading deal last night resembled a smouldering volcano; it may break forth at any time. The gravity of the situation is likely to become apparent very soon. When the deal was consummated which put into the hands of the Reading railroad by lease the Lehigh Valley and Central Railroad of New Jersey and brought into the combine by a control of stock the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, it was predicted that there would be a great curtailment of pay rolls on railroads and in mines. It was denied by the railroad folks that there would be any extensive reduction.

No Great Labor Organizations.

Enough, however, has been done in that direction to indicate what the policy of the "coal combination" will be and to fill the labor organizations with alarm. Indeed, it is charged that agents are already under way to "weed out" the labor organizations. Whether this is generally attempted it will speedily bring about a struggle.

Since the famous Reading strike in Pennsylvania, which resulted in President Corbin and Vice President McLeod utterly uprooting labor organizations, there has been little organized labor on the Reading road. It is reported that Mr. McLeod, who is now president of the Reading, said since the deal that he would get rid of all labor organizations on the combined roads at any cost. That Reading's president made use of such a remark is not probable, but his position is so well known that there is no doubt that if there is to be a struggle he would welcome it now.

The Jersey Central, Lehigh Valley and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western are all thoroughly organized. It would be almost impossible to find a locomotive not run by a Brotherhood engineer. On the Reading it is different. A large number of nonunion men were took the places of the strikers who joined the Brotherhood, but more than half of them are still out of the union.

Grievance of the Men.

The men complain that steadily but surely reductions in the train forces are being made which amount almost to a sweep. In round numbers it is said that sixteen freight and eleven passenger trains, in consequence of the combine, have been withdrawn from the Lehigh Valley and Jersey Central. That means, if true, twenty-seven engineers, twenty-seven firemen and a large number of conductors and brakemen who have been thrown out.

The trains which have been discontinued are rendered unnecessary by those of competing lines passing into the control of one company.

The men take the ground that in the reduction of forces the company has not made the discharges in accordance with the age of the men in the service. They also make the point that when the deal was made, and even when the bill to legalize it was before the legislature of New Jersey, it was broadly claimed that this was not a combination of freight interests, but that it was merely to bring about the cheap mining and transportation of coal. They also assert that there is a universal feeling that if this combination is for the purpose of cheap coal interests, it should not be by the wholesale discharges of trained employees in the freight and passenger service who have given their lives to their work.

But it is not only in the discharges of train crews that the hardship of the combine is felt all along the line of the allied roads. The shops at Bethlehem, Pa., have been practically discontinued, throwing many mechanics out of work. The machinists and other mechanics in the Lehigh Valley shops at Easton, Pa., have been on half time since April 1. They have been brusquely told if they do not move to the shops at Communipaw they can quit.

In New Jersey the feeling has become "sullen," and it has become more so during the last few days, when it came to be generally known that two or more of the Harrison points for coal at tide water would be discontinued. The story is that Elizabethport and Port Johnson are to be practically wiped out of the map. This would mean the throwing out of employment of about 500 men.

It is said that Brotherhood men employed on the line between Easton (Pa.) and Manch Chunk have received notice instructing them to leave the Brotherhood or leave the employ of the company. If this be really been done it indicates that the struggle between the company and the men is much nearer at hand than is generally supposed. A secret meeting of the Lehigh Central engineers was held last night. It was specially called, and not held at the usual meeting place in Masonic hall, Pacific avenue and Linden street. Men from along the line of the road reported what had been done by the officials of the Reading company in Pennsylvania. There were rumors that a strike was imminent, but everything was quiet in the Jersey City yards.

A prominent member of the Brotherhood of Engineers said to a reporter, "I think a strike is more than likely. The men are dissatisfied. Over after over has been laid off. The men do not know what to expect next, and while they will act with care they will act fearlessly when they think it necessary. The manifest antipathy of the Jersey Central, Lehigh Valley and Delaware, Lackawanna and Western, as controlled by the Reading, to the Brotherhood is good cause for preparation for the worst. The Reading is the only road of the four which we could not completely tieup—freight, passenger service and all."

Bob Ford After Blood.

COLORADO CITY, April 21.—Bob Ford, the slayer of Jessie James, has arrived here. He denies that he was run out of Creede after reckless shooting in the street. He swears that he will return to Creede with a gun in each hand and there will be bloodshed.

Trumpbour on Trial.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 21.—A jury has been obtained in the Trumpbour case. The trial Attorney Yardley opened the case for the prosecution. The indictment against the prisoner contains eleven counts, charging grand larceny and embezzlement.

"Lady" Stewart in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, April 21.—"Lady" Stewart is here looking for her husband, Captain Stewart, who she says is in the city under the influence of drugs.

FROM CONVENT TO STAGE.

Report That Sister Mary Celesta Will Sing in Comic Opera.

HARTFORD, April 21.—A great sensation has been caused in this part of Connecticut by the reported withdrawal of the most prominent nun in the state from Mount St. Joseph's convent to become a member of a comic opera company. Hartford people remember the debut of Miss Willcox some fifteen years ago by the conversion from Protestantism to the Roman Catholic church of Miss Lois Willcox, a member of one of the most aristocratic families in the city.

Shortly after her conversion she entered the convent as a postulant, and in due time she was regularly received into the Sisterhood of Mercy. The church was crowded to its utmost capacity, and among Catholics the congratulations were mutual and general over what was regarded as perhaps the most notable event in the history of the Catholic church in Hartford.

Only the bare fact that Miss Willcox has withdrawn from the order is known, but she left voluntarily, however, is beyond question. During all her years as a sister her conduct has been exemplary. Miss Willcox entered the convent in the full bloom of youth; she leaves with all the charms of gracious young womanhood. Her religious name is Sister Mary Celesta.

Only the day before she gave up her garb and ring to the mother superior she seemed to be contented with her lot to the extent of extreme happiness. When she announced her intention of leaving she was prevailed upon to remain until the bishop, who was away, would return, when she could apply for a dispensation; but she declined to do this. She intends to join a comic opera troop, where her musical accomplishments will be utilized.

ROBBED THE ROTHSCHILDS.

Employee Jaeger, Who Stole 2,000,000 Marks, May Soon Kilted Himself.

BERLIN, April 21.—It is believed that Herr Jaeger, the trusted employee who robbed the Rothschilds of 2,000,000 marks, has either fled to Brazil or committed suicide.

The Jaegers have for two generations been trusted employees of the Rothschild family. They had every opportunity for theft than any other employee, and he is said to have been inflamed with a desire to become a millionaire himself. The stolen money, it is believed, was lost in stock gambling, Jaeger having been unfortunate almost from the first in his enterprises in that direction. When he saw that detection was inevitable he fled.

Enormous sums of money and great quantities of securities passed through Jaeger's hands daily. A cursory examination of the books shows that the frauds were carefully planned and had been carried on for many years in a systematic manner. The books were altered and false entries were made. Millions of thousands in bonds were misapplied.

Last Wednesday night Jaeger notified his employers that he had quit for work and must have a rest of a few days. This was granted without hesitation as Jaeger was known as one of the most hard working clerks in the house. Monday morn was heard of him at the bank until members of his family called and asked apprehensively if anybody there had seen of him. They feared he was ill or ill at all. He left the house on Thursday afternoon and had not returned. He had been moody in the family and had hinted frequently that business was troubling him.

SENATOR TELLER'S PHILIPPIC.

He Says Four Silver States Will Bolt the Republican Party.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—Senator Teller's administration silver speech in the senate created even more of a sensation than his colleague, Mr. Wolcott's recent philippic upon the same subject. Mr. Teller's statement that if the republican party continued to adhere to the single gold standard the four chief silver producing states of Colorado, Montana, Nevada and Idaho would not hereafter be able to act in co-operation with the Republican party, either in the senate or elsewhere, was not concurred in by Mr. Sanders of Montana.

Another strong incident of the day was the announcement from Mr. Sherman, chairman of the committee on foreign relations, that he was in error in supposing that existing Chinese restriction laws expired by limitation on May 6. It was now discovered that they run to July, 1894. The obvious result of this discovery will be that no present action on the Chinese question will be pressed in the senate, though it was stated that the Geary bill would be called up for remarks if senators wished to speak upon it.

In the House.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—The house declared its entire session to a consideration of the Noyes-Rockwell contested election case.

Our Troops Hold Blanco.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—General Stanley has transmitted to Major General Schofield the report of the Dewal county (Tex.) grand jury, which investigated and found false the charges made against the United States troops and the state troops of Texas in connection with the Garza insurrection.

The Select Few.

The music's graceful, measured rhyme
Floats out upon the night;
Within the room is all sublime,
With flowers and with light.

The door is smooth, the ladies fair,
The music soothes the ear;
Life seems a delight, without a care,
In the rhythm of the air.

Who could resist that bright refrain
For gossip or for flirting?
Not I, except in the first strain,
All tete-a-tetes deserting.

MRS. DRAYTON DETERMINED.

The Astors Will Force Society to Still Receive Her.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Interest in the Drayton-Borrowe scandal is revived by the statement made by a connection of the Astor family, that Mrs. Drayton has decided to resume her residence in this city and take her former position in society. In that effort, it is said, Mrs. Drayton will have the combined assistance of her parents and all the immediate members of her family.

She is expected to spend the summer at Newport, the Astor's home for the season.

Careful observers of matters in fashionable society say that such a procedure on Mrs. Drayton's part will surely cause a social warfare.

CHANGES OF FIFTY YEARS IN THE TREATMENT OF CHILDREN.

The whole treatment of children has changed, and the idea of severity toward them, especially while they are little, has become, even with people of harsh character, utterly abhorrent. "Whipping," which even in the "forties" was the regular and proper method of discipline, is considered by almost diabolical cruelty; "sending to bed," which was really a method of inflicting solitary confinement, is entirely disused; and "standing in the corner" is condemned as inflicting "humiliation." There is, in truth, in a majority of comfortable households, no way left of punishing a child beyond a reproving look, a lecture which must not be too protracted, and in extreme cases a deprivation of some promised and greatly desired indulgence.

Children's health, too, is looked after with even more care than that of "grown ups," sometimes, indeed, with a sedulousness which degenerates into coddling; education is postponed by at least two years, lest it should press too severely upon unformed minds; and a perfect science has grown up among us of devising ways for preventing the little things from suffering from ennui, or from the restlessness with which bright children are tormented sometimes with this odd result, that the little men and women grow blase, and betray the "unamusableness" of which the Countess du Barry complained in Louis XV.

The little children are "petted" in affection until the air of ordinary life hardly blows on them, and are in certain classes, especially those classes which can afford to give the happy doubt life in town and country, the happiest of all created beings. They are liberated for all the earlier years of their lives from care, have ceased altogether to fear their parents, for whom they invent pet names usually tinged with a comic irreverence, and have nearly lost—not quite, for even good nurses are on that point a little unmanageable—those grotesquely terrible superstitions about policemen, sweeps and bogie men generally, which forty or fifty years ago tortured half the nurseries in the country. They have grown, in their pride of security, skeptical of all those things, and have been known to treat even supernatural horrors with a calm "I don't believe you; God isn't half so bad as that."—London Spectator.

Helpmates Indeed.

The wives of members of the sacred and medical professions have a different career from those of their sisters who marry the man, and not his vocation. Those women are expected to do much that is not exacted from any other women, and the wife, especially of the clergyman, lives always in "what fierce light which beats upon a throne;" for she and her family are claimed as the property of the congregation as thoroughly as ever sovereign became the possession of a nation. The "minister of the manse" needs to be a woman of rare character and strong health to fulfill all that is expected of her, and it would be well were she also endowed with that serenity of temperament which is the best armor of defense, and which forbids the use of offensive weapons.

The physician's wife has also unusual claims upon her time, though in a lesser degree, and the imperative telephone and the charity patients often absorb her precious moments, while in addition she has the widely anxiety of seeing her poor tired husband wakened from his belated slumbers to go on nocturnal errands.

Maud Muller sighed for the silken gown and other luxuries which would be hers as the bride of the judge. She did not look forward to the high vocation of sharing his legal duties, nor does any lawyer's fiancee dream of playing the part of Portia and assuming to be learned in the law. The editor's wife seldom uses her pen for the public, and officers of the army or navy expect only the military virtue of promptness to be practiced in their households. But doctors of divinity and medicine alike, when they marry, feel that they are defrauded if the chosen young women fail in any of the requirements imposed by their married dignities.—Harper's Bazar.

Women and Library Work.

Three hundred and eighty women are employed in twenty-four prominent libraries, receiving from $240 to $1,500, an average salary of $570. The average is greatly reduced by the large number required to do mechanical work in connection with the few needed for supervisory and independent work. Thirteen women of recognized ability, trained as apprentices in large libraries or in the school of experience, receive from $550 to $2,000, an average salary of $1,150.

The thirty-seven women trained in the Library school once of Columbia college, but now attached to the state library at Albany, which was opened in 1887, receive from $600 to $1,200, an average salary of $900. The thirteen highest salaries paid to Library school women average $1,000. Seven women as librarians of state libraries receive from $625 to $1,200, an average salary of $1,000. The twenty-four men filling similar positions receive an average salary of $1,600.

A woman occupying a subordinate position in a library, where faithfulness, accuracy and a fair knowledge of books are the only essentials, can expect the best $600. A good cataloguer or a librarian with average ability and training can expect to receive from $600 to $900. A woman with good ability and fitness, with a liberal education and special training, can expect $1,000 at the head of a library or of a department in a large library, or a possible increase to $1,500 or $2,000. Women rarely receive the same pay as men for the same work.—New York Sun.

Women Should Vote.

John Stuart Mill, though he admits a woman's right to do whatever the law of her being prompts her to do, so long as she remains unwarried, assumes that when she undertakes the duties of wife she must say adieu to pursuits she must abandon. The love of one man for one woman, and of one woman for one man, is not the only passion of love in the human soul. The love of art, science, literature or of any pursuit or calling may become a noble passion demanding gratification as well as the passion of the wife's love. The individual can never attain his full and complete development who is compelled to struggle and kill the half of his nature that impels him to individual must develop in all directions.

Hitherto women have been more or less cramped and restrained in all directions but one. Motherly love and marriage have been as inspiration and a forward impetus to men only. To women they have been only a will o' the wisp, but a temptation. This is violating all intellectual and spiritual laws, which ought to be imperative and paramount. The intellectual and spiritual forces are as much natural laws as the laws of physical nature. Among all natural laws there must be a divine harmony. There can be no discord in the revolution of one another and to the universe. To discover this harmony and to live in full accord with it is the secret of the salvation of the human race.—Blanch Fearing in Chicago Woman's News.

Covering Old Blankets.

Almost all old housekeepers have a store of blankets which, having been in use for many years, have become thin and yellow from washing. They would make most useful summer coverings but for their ugly color. Now a very little expense will make them decidedly pretty and an addition to one's comfort on cool nights, not to be too much commended. Get enough cheese cloth, pale blue or pink, to cover the blanket on both sides, some blue or pink zephyr wool to buttonhole the edges, and tie the cover through the blanket, interlining from side to side, and you have all you need except a big darning needle. Sew the widths of cheese cloth together till they form two pieces a little larger than the blanket, turn in the edges and buttonhole the three thicknesses together. All around the square with stitches half an inch apart. Next thread the darning-needle with the zephyr doubled, and put it through from side to side, first one and back again, tying the wool in a tight knot and leaving short fluffy ends to form a tiny tassel at equal distances in squares all over the cover.

They are prettily made of contrasting colors, pink one side and blue the other, and also of dark red cheese cloth tied with black wool. The most inexperienced person can make them.—Maria Pendleton Kennedy in Homemaker.

Coffee as a Deodorizer.

One of the simplest disinfectants of a sickroom is ground coffee burned on a shovel held over a chafing dish until the room with its pungent, aromatic odor. If two red hot coals are placed on a fire shovel and a teaspoonful of ground coffee is sprinkled over them at a time, using three teaspoonfuls in all, it will fill the room with its aroma, and is said to have the hygienic effect of preventing the spread of various epidemic diseases. The odor is very agreeable and soothing to a sick person, where other disinfectants prove disagreeable. Physicians have doubtless the power of coffee as a disinfectant frequently recommend it as a deodorizer, and it is certainly one of the very best and most agreeable. Most of the expensive disinfectants sold in the shops have no special power as such, but are simply deodorizers, the true being frequently confounded. It is best, however, to obtain from a physician in case of contagious disease something that will certainly destroy the germs of the disease, as well as deodorize the room. —New York Tribune.

The Way to Boil Eggs.

One woman (and her household ways are the wonder and envy of her friends) says that the right way to boil eggs is not to boil them at all.

First put the eggs into a wire basket or sieve, and then you have saved much time and vexation of fishing them out with a spoon when cooked. Then set the nest of eggs in a kettle or other vessel, with cold water enough to cover the eggs—not hot water or warm water, but cold water. Set the vessel over a brisk fire. Do not let the water boil, only just "come to a boil," and at that particular time—not before, not later—the eggs will be cooked as they should be.

Remove the basket of eggs by the tall handle, spread a napkin over a deep dish, lay in the eggs and fold the four corners of the napkins over them and serve.

The secret of success in cooking consists in the eggs when broken will roll into the cups like balls of soft jelly, nothing silhering to the shell; the entire egg thoroughly cooked but delicate and tender through and through.

Air in the Children's Bedrooms.

The ventilation of a bedchamber cannot be too carefully attended to, and, as says Horace Mann, "from the remotest parts of forty miles deep all around the globe, it is a useless piece of economy to breathe it more than once." Yet nine mothers out of ten will carefully close at night the windows for fear of colds and night air, and leave two or three children asleep in a stifling atmosphere and see no connection between the pink and pasty look of their faces and the vitiated air she compels them to breathe night after night. Let the morning air and sunshine into the bedroom as soon as the children are dressed and risen, and if there is no sunshine and it is not raining, let in the air. Do not make the bed too soon after they are vacated. You may lose your home tidied sooner, but it is neither cleanly nor healthy to snugly pack up bedclothing until the exhalations of the sleepers' bodies have either been removed by exposure to the air.—Exchange.

Importance of Sanitation.

It is of the utmost importance that the public should have some general knowledge of proper house sanitation, and I would urge upon the householder to secure it by every means in his power. I do not mean that every man should be his own plumber, but that he should acquire a sufficient knowledge of this subject, so that he could examine for himself the plumbing of his house or his apartment, and say, "I am confident of being able to protect my family from the dangers that surround them. I have inspected my plumbing and the fixtures that connect with it, for I know it is best that the traps under those fixtures are properly set, and that which is the most important of all, that those traps shall always and at all times contain water, for the purpose of making it impossible for the deadly sewer gas to enter our rooms."—Humanity and Health.

Mrs. Gladstone to Mothers.

Trouble should be taken by every mother to make herself acquainted with the laws and principles governing the human body. She should learn the vigilant watchfulness without which she will never succeed in understanding the tender organization of her child; thus constitutions will be strengthened and lives saved. Instead of walking in uncertain paths in the dark, over crowded ways, and overlooking, practicing experiments haphazard on the delicate little frame, the mother will be guided aright, for the laws of nature will be plain for her guide. And how beautiful and so full of interest are these laws that surely, even if their study involves some sacrifice of time, it will become a pleasure as it becomes a duty, and there will be ample compensation.—Mrs. William E. Gladstone in Ladies' Home Journal.

A Pretty Dinner Custom.

A very pretty custom in Dresden might well be introduced here. At a swell dinner party when the sweets came on an empty cornucopia was placed by each woman's plate. The writer asked the purpose of the cornucopias, and was told that they were intended to enable the ladies to take something home in for the children. There it is quite the custom to remember the little friends who stay with nurse, "What did you bring me?" is familiar to every mother on returning from a dinner or wedding, and the little lover, the more easily slipped quietly into the pocket or a piece of wedding cake, is doubly sweet to the little ones, whose only vision of the festivities has been its mother's raiment and return. It is a pretty custom, this Dresden one, and one that should find favor in the eyes of American mothers. Bring in the cornucopias.—New York Recorder.

Italian Cream Caramels.

Boil ten pounds of sugar with one pound of glucose to 32 degs.; then pour out on the marble and when fairly cool add two and a half pounds of chocolate (melted), then turn to a cream; then warm one and a quarter pounds of good butter in a pan and add the chocolate cream and two vanilla beans; then warm all till it can be poured out on paper laid on the marble with iron rods around; let the cream remain cool all night, or till thoroughly cool, and cut in squares. If it is desirable to have them a little softer, cook only to 30 or 31 degs. Italian cream, or "Cremona," as they are called, are sold in New York and Philadelphia at eighty cents per pound.—Supply World.

A Scholar of Forty.

A petite pupil that an up town school teacher has is a woman of forty, the mother of three children. She comes on certain evenings of every week to study the common English branches. In her interview seeking the lessons she said:

My children are at the public schools, and I find myself powerless to give them the assistance which they need to keep up with their grades. Everything is taught differently nowadays than in my school times. I reach the same results, but by a process they do not understand, and I must be taught their way to be of any help to them.—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Origin of Bangs.

The bang is one of the latest innovations among women and girls. It had its origin in the reformatory for girls on Blackwell's island, New York. The inmates were in the habit of getting their hair in such a difficult to recognize them after changing their apparel. It was first suggested to crop them, but this was considered too sweeping. The bang was then adopted, and it was a perfect mark. For some reason or other the style struck the popular fancy, and in the course of a few years after its adoption as a mark in the reformatory became one of the fads of fashion.—Pittsburg Commercial Gazette.

Women in the Harvard Observatory.

For twenty years the Harvard observatory has always employed women on the staff of computers, but since the endowing of the Draper memorial (founded by Mrs. Henry Draper, of New York, in honor of her husband), a corps of women has been engaged on work more in the nature of original research.

The examination of the photographic plates as well as all measurements and the preparation of the great catalogue, are in the hands of Mrs. Nina Fleming and her eight women assistants.

Care in Choosing Playmates.

Should not we mothers be careful in choosing playmates for our little ones? Sensitive children are apt to make them babyish, while older ones perhaps teach them things we do not care to have them know. It is best I think to keep their friends under our own supervision, and to watch them unseen for a little while, and we can soon judge whether or not they are safe and suitable playmates for our children.—Cor. Babyhood.

Resting Her Eyes.

I was driving to a succession of "All Homes" with a lady noted for her beautiful bright eyes; large, prominent and flashing, they outshine her big diamond cardrops. I notice that directly we passed the carriage to go from one reception to another she almost closed her eyelids; all the sparkle vanished; her brilliance "stood at ease."—London Illustrated News.

The Sunshine of Home.

Don't shut up your house, lest the sun should fade your carpets and your hearts, lest a merry laugh should shake down some of the musty old cobwebs there! If you want to ruin your sons, let them think that all mirth and social enjoyment must be left on the threshold. Whence when they come home at night.—Home Gems.

Miss. Patti's Votes.

Miss. Patti has "sold her voice," that is, for a consideration she has promised to permit her throat to be examined after her death to see if the construction of it is any way accounts for her marvelous gift of song. The probability is that the secret lies more in the brain than in the vocal mechanism.—Yankee Blade.

A pretty wedding gift is the combination set of the long gloves, handkerchief and nightdress case, together with the tablet cushion, all made to match in design and treatment. They are made of white silk and embroidered in orange blossoms. A frill of plaited silk and lace edges them.

The fact that women in East India are making petitions to vote is a striking evidence of the rapid strides of progress. In the Indian national congress the women are recognized, and the consensus of thought from the standpoint of both sexes is considered potent.

Some of the New York hotels provide classrooms for female guests unacquainted with the city. Many ladies find this onerous pleasant and remunerative. The charge for their service is $2.50 a day.

Miss Emily Healey, of Washington, has invented a process for gilding china, and expects say that this particular way of applying gold to porcelain is an entirely new art.

Miss Sarah D. Rother, who won the prize offered by the women's board of managers of the World's fair, is a Norwegian by birth and lives in Milwaukee.

Never sweep dust and dirt from one room to another, nor from upstairs to the lower part of the house. Always take it up in each room.

In selecting a parasol for the baby carriage, do not get a white one, as that does not soften the light sufficiently for baby's eyes.

—One of the comic papers a week or so ago had a whole page cartoon, representing a man prostrate, and with a look of wild despair suffering with various Summer diseases, including "baseball on the brain." At present symptoms are that Plainfield is to have the disease this year fully as bad as in any previous year. And Plainfield has sometimes been quite wild on the subject.

—The rain last night did not apparently interfere with the attendance at Music Hall, a good-sized audience being present to witness the Miss Nellie McHenry Company in the farce of "A Night at the Circus," and seeming to enjoy it. The serpentine dance was presented for the first time in Plainfield. This is supposed to be a dance originating with the Nautch girls of India, and made such a hit when introduced at the Casino in New York, a few months ago, that several of the leading New York papers, including the Herald and Sun, each devoted nearly a column to an illustrated description of it, and it is now rendered nightly in several New York theatres.

—Once there was a man who had a mongrel dog. The dog himself felt very big, but he was really no bigger than common dogs, if as big, but that made no difference, he was great at barking, and when there was nothing near his size to bark at he would squat on his haunches and bark at the moon by the hour. But the moon kept right along as if there never was a mongrel dog. This made the mongrel dog very mad, and he tried to jump to the moon, but he fell short and the moon kept right along just the same. At last, the mongrel dog died from sheer barking and jumping, and the man who owned him however had a mongrel dog since. The moral of this Yankee story is in its application; whenever you see a paper whose chief business is "barking" at bigger papers "that keep right along," just think what became of the mongrel dog that made barking at the moon his chief work. The dog died, and no one was sorry, "but the moon kept right along just the same."

A Valuable Dog Shot.

A valuable dog belonging to ex-Councilman B. O. Bowers of LaGrande avenue was shot yesterday morning by dog catcher Priddy. The canine was one of the number bitten by the supposed mad dog some weeks ago.

ARBOR DAY.

Interesting Exercises Held in the Plainfield Public Schools.

Arbor Day was observed in the public schools of this city this morning. In the High school there were readings from various authors on the subject of trees. Miss Ariadne Gilbert read an essay, taking for her subject, "Our High School Trees." She referred to the trees that had been cut down. The essay was full of poetryand sentiment.

Miss Helen T. French read an essay which Miss Bulkley, the principal of the school, named, "In Memoriam." It referred to the trees in front of the High school and also the mud which the scholars were compelled to walk through in order to get to school.

Songs appropriate to the day were sung by the scholars.

Miss Bulkley spoke of the advantages of trees, and gave an incident that she witnessed while passing through Cairo, Egypt. She said that the natives had planted trees there and that since the trees had been planted an occasional thunder storm visited the place, something that was never known before. Theretofore there were nothing but sand storms.

The other schools also held appropriate exercises. In the Irving school the scholars planted a tree which was presented to them by Mr. Rushmore.

DELEGATES ELECTED.

The Second and Third Ward Republicans Choose their Representatives.

The Republicans of the Second and Third wards met at the Republican Headquarters on East Front street last evening and elected delegates to the State and Congressional Convention. The result was as follows:

SECOND WARD.

State Convention—Delegate—Hon John Ulrich.
Alternate—Mr. B. Gray.
Congressional Convention—Delegate—V. W. Nash.
Alternate—Mr. Patton.

THIRD WARD—STATE CONVENTION.

Delegate—Frank E. Marsh.
Alternate—Frank W. Runyon.

CONGRESSIONAL.

Delegate—J. W. Murray, sr.
Alternate—F. W. Runyon.

Mr. V. W. Nash acted as chairman in the Second ward and Mr. W. Messerschmidt as secretary.

In the Third ward Mr. Frank E. Marsh was elected chairman and Mr. Frank W. Runyon secretary. Both meetings were well attended notwithstanding the rain.

PERSONAL.

The family of Mrs. Schneely of Putnam avenue will leave next Monday for San Francisco.

Mr. Jacob Werner of Bridgeport, Conn., is visiting his son, Mr. Harry Werner of the Werner Clothing Company.

Mrs. George H. Frost of 119 Broadway, and son, Edwin H. Frost, will sail to-morrow by the Etruria for an absence of four months in England and France.

Mrs. Chambettan, of New York, accompanied by her niece, Miss Antoinette Allison, of Somerset street, North Plainfield, started to-day for New York to take a French line steamer for Europe. The boat starts at about four a. m. to-morrow. They expect to be gone several months and will spend most of the time in Paris.

Several young men of the Plainfield Bicycle Club, expert wheelmen, are training assiduously for the June ten-mile road-race. The race will be over the Elizabeth-Cranford course. A team of six will be selected to represent the Plainfield Club. Among the fast riders are, Messrs. T. Thurlow, H. L. Metcalf, G. W. Moreton, Geo. Mabon, E. V. French, Chas. Maltby and N. Titsworth. Mr. Lutie Waring expected to take an active part also, but illness, from over-training it is thought, has made it impossible. Messrs. Moreton and Titsworth will compete for a prize and the championship of Union county. They will have to meet such flyers as Messrs. Saltonstall and Bowman of the Elizabeth Club.

Mr. Harder to Lecture.

During his recent travels through so me of the larger cities in the United States, Mr. Harder of Madison avenue has made it a point to visit the missions in those cities. NUPTIALS.

Faxon—Holmes.

The Crescent avenue church was beautifully decorated with Easter lillies and other flowers last evening. It was also filled with society people, the occasion being the wedding of Miss Alice Holmes of East Fifth street, the popular Plainfield contralto, and Mr. J. G. Faxon of Fitchburg, Mass.

At half-past seven o'clock the bridal party entered the church, preceded by the ushers and marched to the altar to the strains of a wedding march. The Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards then performed the ceremony which made them man and wife. Miss Augusta Holmes, a sister of the bride, was the maid of honor and Miss Flora Faxon and Miss Ethel Holmes were the bridesmaids. Mr. Harold Faxon, a brother of the groom, acted as best man.

The ushers were Messrs. William C. and Frank Hubbard, Frank Clawson, Alfred E. Holmes, Max Munger, and Edward Spencer.

The bride wore a dress of white bengaline with train veil, and a diamond and pearl pendant, the gift of the groom.

The maid of honor wore white crepe, trimmed with white chiffon, and white rose buds. The bridesmaids were plain crepe chiffon trimmed with pink water ribbon.

The best man wore a gold four-leaf clover and the ushers gold fleur-de-lis in the button holes of their coats.

Among the guests were Captain and Mrs. A. D. Holmes, Miss Gussie Holmes, Miss Ethel Holmes, Mr. Alfred Holmes, Miss Emma Clifford of Boston; Mr. E. Wood Perry of New York; Mrs. Faxon of Quincy, Mass.; the Misses Faxon, of Quincy, Mass.; Mr. E. B. Faxon, Quincy, Mass.; Mr. Randal Faxon, Quincy, Mass.; Miss Edith Randall, Quincy, Mass.; Mr. Allerton Delano Hitch, Orange; Mr. Edward Spencer, Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. DeHart Mr. and Mrs. Van Deventer, Captain and Mrs. Outcalt of Mrs. Van Deventer, Miss Blackwell, Long Island city; Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hubbard, Mr. and Mrs. David Moore, Miss Lily Moore, Mr. and Mrs. J. The bridal party left on their wedding tour on the 10.13 train. They will visit Philadelphia, Baltimore, Washington and other places.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of very handsome presents, two checks for a large amount being among them.

That Electric Head-Light.

The big P. and R. engine, 570, whose head-light is fitted with an electric light of great power, still attracts crowds of people each night to see it pass. The Washington limited, which train this engine draws, is due here at 9.20 p. m. The other evening the light gave out after leaving Trenton Junction, and a small lantern was placed in the box, thus going at once from the sublime to the ridiculous. As the train came around the curve at the junction, and the engineer saw the light of Flagman Brock, the sight is a most magnificent one, a dazzling white shaft of light illuminating the country for a far distance, as he hit the grid a spot.

Superintendent Hoffman, of the road, has not yet decided when the light is to be put in use, but it is thought that the company will compete for a prize and the championship of Union county. They will have to meet such flyers as Messrs. Saltonstall and Bowman of the Elizabeth Club.

How Josiah Sold the Farm.

In the northern part of Jersey
Where the soil of flinty stone,
Lived a farmer named Josiah
And he worked his farm alone.
Josiah was a bachelor, Josiah,
And put wrinkles in his hair,
Neither had he any money,
So he thought he'd sell the place.

Neighbors, trying to be funny,
Told him he'd a fine farm,
If before he tried to sell out,
He'd start one to raise corn.
If he took would sell his cabin,
Where the rain fell on the rocks,
Then sell out the bunch of stocks."

Josiah wasn't much for talking,
So he thought he'd take a walk,
And he had a common notion
When he'd walked he'd get it through.
So, one morning, quiet and early,
With a spade and grit and drill,
Josiah started operations
On his very smallest hill.

Josiah worked and worked until long,
With the grit between his hands,
Until rounded on the knee
Were the marks of his pants;
Then he thought he'd have some dinner,
Through digging so many holes.

Down a neighbor who was passing,
Called, "Josiah, what you at?"
Just he answered, "Nothing in particular,
As he hit the drill a spat.
Down the neighbor came in a hurry,
But the farmer kept right on,
Then he said he'd come to supper
Before the sun was gone.

Fast as fire in the stubble
Leaps before the breaking wind,
Went the story that Josiah
Had gone clean out of his mind;
For perhaps in all creation
Unless to new wilderness sent,
Was there ever such a planting
That he doesn't want to tell.

Round about that stony hill-top,
Gathered people by the score,
Paying him with eager questions,
Or by standing near the door;
Or the eager or the idler
From his lips no answer broke,
Only kept on digging, digging,
And he never looked at a stroke.

Human nature in that country,
Is much like it is elsewhere,
It was asked him on the quiet,
If he'd sell the farm, and where;
If he'd sell it for a million,
Why, he'd think he had declined,
And he'd keep right on digging,
As he answered, "No, no matter,
Here's the one to talk to now."

Then the neighbors went to mother,
Let the cabin stay and rot,
And when some one spoke of paying,
Josiah said, "Why not?"
Then a crew, who let the money
Hold he would, paid him down
And would pay them back two thousand
If they'd talk with Josiah's hand.

Mother, she was quite reluctant
Though the papers were made out;
Still she thought Josiah knew
What the offering was about.
Shortly the hole was completed,
Josiah's work was done,
But Josiah, tired out of digging,
Ad he pocketed had gone away.

WESTCOTT SUCCEEDS THE DODD.

Is this One of the Results of the Fight Between Reading and P. R. R.?

Westcott's Transfer Company will succeed Dodd's Transfer Company on the New Jersey Central, Lehigh Valley and Reading Railroads on May 1. The news was a complete surprise to many of the most people who generally keep well informed on railroad matters.

Various reasons are assigned for the change. On one hand it was asserted that the Dodd Company, which has had charge of the transfer business at the Jersey Central almost from the time it was built, has of late been under the control of more or less complicated friendliness with the Adams Express Company.

The Adams, since the United States Express Company retired control of the business on the New Jersey Central system four years ago, has been confined almost entirely to the Pennsylvania Railroad's lines in New Jersey, and naturally it was said, would like to extend its control tendency toward substituting the Dodd Company for the Westcott Company. The Westcott Company has a very large hand in the new transfer deal.

Reading people were generally either non-committal or silent on the subject yesterday. It was said that nothing beyond the fact that the Dodd Company's lease would expire on April 30, and that the Westcott Company would take it, for purely business reasons, in the interest of the Reading system.—Trenton Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Change in Indian Management.

The transfer of the Indian agencies to officers of the regular army will be gradually accomplished. It is not in the nature of handing over our Indian management to the war department, for the control of the agencies will still be in the hands of the secretary of the interior. It will not be an innovation, either, for from time to time since the beginning of Indian agencies they have been occasionally put in charge of army officers.

Senator Manderson said in his speech advocating the measure that there never had been a single instance of fraud or stealing on the part of the military Indian agent. This is much to say. The fact shines like a good deed in a naughty world. Army officers have been known to get drunk, unfortunately, more than once. Some of them have likewise developed a liking for the fascinating game of poker. But they never put off on the Indian blankets that a horse would despise or flour that a rat would scorn to eat and pocketed the difference. Therefore one scandal at least will be avoided.

Wherever it seems best, the president will still have the authority under the new law to appoint civilian agents, so that they are not cut off entirely. But if in addition to their undoubted honesty the officer agents will interest themselves in the education and peaceful civilization of their wards, we shall have the model Indian management.

Plant Trees and Preserve Trees.

The tremendous floods this spring in several parts of the country emphasize anew the necessity of preserving entire the wood covered heights which are the sources of our water courses. A river takes its rise among hills and mountains. It is formed by innumerable little brooks and rills, which are formed by rain or melting snow. If the ground of these heights is kept covered with timber, that timber preserves the water from being evaporated by the sun's rays and causing drought on the one hand, and holds it back and causes it to pass off gently, thus preventing floods and ruin on the other. Wooded hills and heights are our natural reservoirs of water supply. If the woods are cut away, the land is turned out bare, and the bright, life giving brooks dry up. Where are the springs and brooks of fifty years ago? The water which would have passed gently away through them, giving grateful drink to growing crops, rushed off in a wild torrent in the spring, carrying destruction in its path. Alternate flood and drought are the history of the region where the small water courses have been destroyed in this manner.

Therefore keep the hills and mountains covered with timber at the top and around the sources of springs, creeks and rivers. Plant trees where they have been stripped off, preserve trees where they are still left. It is life or death to agriculture in many parts of the country.

The United States has given to Europe quite as much as Europe has given to us in the way of new and desirable dishes and food staples. Through us they learned over there what it was to eat succotash and southern cornbread as well as broiled beefsteak. Until within a very few years the American traveled from one end of that continent to the other without once encountering a beefsteak such as we know it in the United States. Likewise we have bestowed on the nations there pumpkin pie, squash pie and our kind of fruit pies, which are as much ahead of their fruit pies as a golden pippin is ahead of a wild crab apple. Now we heap on blessings upon them by sending to them the tomato, canned and fresh which they cannot get enough of. They indeed know about the tomato, but only as an ornamental growth. We caught it and civilized it and made a food delicacy of it. Italy is at present the only country of Europe where tomatoes and green corn are made much of, and the climate of Italy more resembles ours than that of any other part of Europe.

An English scientist, Mr. William B. Tegetmeier, has written a pamphlet on "Seal Life in Behring Sea." In this he favors strongly the ground taken by the United States for the protection of the seals from extinction. A copy of the pamphlet has been sent to every member of the house of commons. Probably the mind of the nations generally is by this time made up that the seals must be preserved. The main question the arbitration commission is likely to solve will be to decide on the best measures for such preservation.

The Universalist denomination now has forty regularly ordained women ministers. The Unitarian Robert Collyer said to a female preacher who had just been ordained in his denomination. "Stay there, my young woman: don't move until you have proved, as you can, that the ministry is as much a woman's work as a man's."

Between the ages of twenty and forty, prisoners die of consumption much more rapidly than people outside of confinement, but whether this is owing to the confinement or to the previous lives of the convicts is not clear. Few criminals of any kind live to be old men.

SHERMAN ON EXCLUSION

His Forcible Speech Against the House Measure.

MR. C. P. HUNTINGTON'S PLEA.

The Railroad Magnate Says He Hopes the American People's Good Business Sense and Love of Justice Will Induce Congress to Defeat This "Wicked Bill."

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The Chinese question proved as irrepressible as the silver question in the senate, notwithstanding the opinion of the foreign relations committee that existing laws remain in force till 1894. A general Chinese debate, characterized by a vigorous onslaught upon the Geary house bill by Mr. Sherman, was entered upon and remains the unfinished business. An ineffectual attempt was made to arrive at an agreement to take a vote on the question at 5 o'clock today. Some rather pointed references were made in the debate to senators who favored the unexcused violation of treaty stipulations but who did not themselves oppose the Scott exclusion law of 1888. The debate began when on motion of Mr. Dolph the senate took up for consideration the house Chinese exclusion act as amended by the senate committee on foreign relations, combining in force existing Chinese restricting laws for the period of ten years.

Mr. Dolph insisted upon some immediate action on this question. He had read in the New York papers that there were 3,000 Chinese in Seattle ready to cross into the United States after May 6 and that they had engaged counsel to defend their rights. He believed it was absolutely necessary to at least pass a bill continuing existing laws as proposed in the bill introduced by him and now pending as an amendment to the house bill.

Mr. Sherman's Forcible Appeal.

Mr. Sherman made a forcible appeal to the senate against any action on the Geary bill. He said that in its severity of terms and denial of the ordinary rights of humanity this bill went far beyond anything ever introduced into congress. The evil complained of was a diminished cost in Ohio; he knew the number of Chinese was infinitesimal. East of the Missouri river there were only a few Chinese washing clothes. The chief danger grew out of the introduction of Chinese from Vancouver, but more were going out than were coming in. The tendency of the Chinese was to go back.

Mr. Mitchell asked what was the precise objection to the house bill. Was it that it violated the treaty between China and the United States? If so, the Scott exclusion bill, which it was sought to continue in operation, was equally objectionable.

At this point Mr. Frye read the following telegram from C. P. Huntington, president of the Southern Pacific railroad:

C. P. Huntington's Advice.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 18, 1892.

Hon. W. P. Frye, United States Senate:

Since my arrival here have learned what effect the passage of the Geary bill would have on both Chinese and Americans. Thousands of Chinese in transit across the United States, landing at points under regulations made by the secretary of the treasury January, 1891, have paid American transportation companies since the restriction act $30,000 for transportation alone. Should that bill become a law this traffic would go to foreign companies via Canada and Panama. Since passage of restriction act American houses show $2,000 more for departures than arrivals at this port. Hundreds of wealthy Chinese merchants representing firms here have gone to China and other countries on business under faith of existing laws, having property interests here valued at hundreds of thousands of dollars. The Geary bill would debar them from returning and virtually confiscate their property.

Much has been said about thousands of Chinese crossing the boundary from Canada. Collector of British Columbia reports for 1891 3,253 arrivals at British Columbia ports and 2,777 departures for China.

I trust the good business sense of the American people and love of fair play and justice will find expression in congress sufficiently strong to defeat this wicked bill. Our west coast possessions were obtained in the first half of the century by the best and greatest men in our country as much or more, to secure the commerces of the orient as for the territory itself. California has the best climate in the world, and her soil is unsurpassed, as if the commerce of the 400,000,000 people of China is not distributed it can be made more by the great men who secured California, builded better than they knew. C. P. HUNTINGTON.

China Would Turn Her Seat.

Mr. Sherman, resuming, said a bill which prohibited 400,000,000 of people from landing on our shores for any purpose under penalty of being sent to prison for five years was little more than a barbarous decree, only to be justified by circumstances which did not now exist. The passage of such an act would inevitably break off diplomatic relations with China. And what would become of our commerce with that country? We should once more be compelled to obtain our tea and other Chinese products through British ports. Vancouver might soon rival San Francisco, and what would become of the thousands of American citizens in China?

These considerations should cause senators to pause, in his judgment, before they enjoined a mandate, the effect of which might pass all their comprehension. When congress was urged to repeat a treaty the reasons must be apparent to the general judgment of all the nations of the world would denounce the United States for its action. It would be unjust, unmanly and un-American for us to violate and break down our treaties with China without stronger reasons than we had today.

Mr. Wilson, of Iowa, strongly condemned the Geary bill and argued against its passage by the senate. Mr. Butler, of South Carolina, followed on the same side, reading the treaty stipulations with China, which he contended the Geary bill violated. He added his personal opinion that the passage of the Scott exclusion act was a disgrace to our civilization. The senate adjourned with the Chinese bill still pending.

The Rockwell-Noyes Case.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—The Rockwell-Noyes contested election case occupied the entire time of the house, the debate being exceedingly dull and little attention was paid to it. The majority members occupied their time in chatting and smoking in the foyer and cloakrooms, and Mr. De Forest (Dem.), of Connecticut; Mr. Haugen (Rep.), of Wisconsin, and Mr. Chipman (Dem.), of Michigan, spoke in favor of Mr. Noyes, while Mr. Wise (Dem.), of Illinois; Mr. Allen (Dem.), of Mississippi; Mr. De Armand (Dem.), of Missouri, and Mr. Gilfoyle (Dem.), of Pennsylvania, who submitted the minority report, supported the case of Mr. Rockwell.

Public Servants Tested.

NEW HAVEN, April 22.—Captain James S. Pettit, First United States infantry, has been ordered to relieve Lieutenant C. A. L. Totten as professor of military science in Sheffield scientific school, Yale university.

THE BUNCO KING ESCAPES.

Tom O'Brien Given Keeper Beach, of Dannemora Prison, the Slip.

UTICA, N. Y., April 22.—Thomas O'Brien, the king of bunco sharers, who fleeced an Albany man named Peck out of $10,000 in January, 1889, and who was thereafter extradited from England and sentenced to ten years' imprisonment in Dannemora prison for robbery in the third degree, has given Keeper Beach the slip and is now on his way to the island of Cuba.

O'Brien arrived in Utica Sunday evening in charge of Keeper Beach, of Dannemora. He came here on a writ of habeas corpus issued under his affidavit to the effect that he wanted to go before Judge Coxe, of the United States court, and argue the question of the right of the authorities to hold him in this country under conviction of a charge for which he was not extradited. Judge Coxe held that the authorities were all right and remanded O'Brien to the prison.

When he first arrived here O'Brien was taken to the jail, but his friends, among whom were D. A. Dibble, influenced Beach to allow his prisoner to stop at Baggs' hotel. With no one to guard him but his friend Dibbler, O'Brien skipped.

Keeper Beach says he left O'Brien Thursday last a moment in his room and when he returned O'Brien had gone. It has been learned, however, that O'Brien left the city Wednesday noon and after Judge Coxe's decision had been rendered and that in so now well on his way to Cuba, where, it is said, he will be safe.

While O'Brien's case was in process of argument here, an officer complained to the authorities of the United States court that O'Brien was left unguarded and alone at the hotel, but the authorities had nothing to do with him, as he had not been turned over to their charge but had remained in the care of the keeper. It is very evident that O'Brien had friends behind him. His attorneys are Howe & Hummel, of New York, and he was accompanied to this city by the notorious confidence man, "Doc" Minchon.

The police here have telegraphed Warden Thayer at Dannemora that O'Brien has escaped and are also taking measures to capture him. Keeper Beck remains in his room at the hotel unconcerned and cool. He remarked that if O'Brien got away he supposed he would have to bear the blame.

MME. BARRIOS A BRIDE.

Guatemala's Dictator's Widow Weds at New York.

SENOR DE RODA THE FAVORED ONE

New York Society People Witness Another Interesting Event in the Romantic Career of the Central American Beauty.

NEW YORK, April 21.—Mme. Francesca de Barrios, the beautiful and wealthy widow of the ex-president of Guatemala, was married at her palatial Fifth avenue home last night to Senor Joseph Martinez de Roda, a Spanish grandee, whom she first met at a brilliant ball in Madrid early a year ago. It was a case of love at first sight on both sides, and before Mme. de Barrios left Madrid her troth was plighted. A civil marriage took place at 5 o'clock, and at 6 o'clock the religious ceremony was performed by Archbishop Corrigan in the drawing room of Mme. de Barrios' house. A cable dispatch from Cardinal Rampolla, secretary of state of the holy see, announced that the pope had accorded his blessing to the couple.

There were no elaborate decorations, the dainty splendor of the room being merely heightened by a few loose flowers placed in the Delft vases. An altar banked with flowers of the yellow genesta gave the room the appearance of a beautiful sanctuary.

Godmother for Spain's Queen.

The bride, charmingly beautiful, was attired in an exquisite dress of rich apple green velvet, with long train, plain full skirt, bordered with Persian embroidery set with emeralds, suited well the shapely figure of the wearer. She wore no jewels and carried no flowers. Senor de Roda wore full court costume. The best man was Senor F. Bedoncourt, while Senor Baggardo, second secretary of the Spanish legation at Washington, represented the prime minister of Spain. Mme. Aparicio was godmother by proxy for the queen regent of Spain, who sent her a letter requesting her so to act for her.

Senor de Roda and his wife will leave for Spain early in May, where they will make their future home.

Senor de Roda is a Spaniard of noble birth. He is thirty-seven years old. The title of marquis has descended to him from his great grandfather, upon whom it was conferred by Charles III for his eminent services as minister of war, but Senor de Roda, being democratic in principles, does not use his title. He is a member of the Spanish chamber of deputies.

The Bride's Romantic History.

Mme. de Barrios is the daughter of one of the proudest families in Guatemala. When only a girl she met General de Barrios, the then president of the republic, and love at first sight was yet produced. He at once fell in love with her, but the match was opposed by her father, until he was finally compelled to accede to the entreaties of the daughter and give him his daughter's hand. The marriage was at first distasteful to Mme. de Barrios, but with time grew to love her queen, who has assigned them to the highest social position in the country. After a happy married life, General de Barrios was killed while trying to cross the border into Mexico on the battlefield. After his death his widow fled to California, where her husband had received a large portion of his great wealth.

GORMAN FOR PRESIDENT

Like Barkis, the Maryland Senator Is Willing.

CLEVELAND TIED FOR WHITNEY.

It Is Reported in Washington That the Ex-President's Followers May Unite Upon the Ex-Secretary as a Candidate for the Nomination.

BALTIMORE, April 22.—An evening paper prints a statement from a close friend of Senator Gorman which it claims is authoritative. It says: "Mr. Gorman is not a candidate for the nomination at Chicago in the sense that he is seeking the nomination either personally or through his friends, but I do not believe he would decline if were he to be nominated. The fight between Hill and Cleveland in New York renders them, in my opinion, unavailable, and it would be madness to nominate either. Gorman would be acceptable to the Empire state. He would be acceptable to the south. His record as a Union man during the war destroys all objection to him on account of his being a Marylander.

Gorman and Cleveland.

"He would be acceptable to the west, for he is not an extremist in anything, but is a calm, careful, conservative, level headed statesman, who knows more of this government and the needs of the people than any other living man. If the people are for Mr. Cleveland Mr. Gorman is for him. He is a Democrat. He is for the man the people want. But I do not believe the people of Maryland, through their state convention, are going to instruct their delegates to vote for any particular candidate. They want the convention to nominate a candidate who can be elected. Mr. Gorman will not decline nor will he be defeated."

Cleveland the "Logical Candidate."

INDIANAPOLIS, April 22.—For governor, Claude Matthews; for lieutenant governor, Mortimer Nye; for secretary of state, Captain W. E. Myers. This is the head of the ticket nominated by the Democracy of the Hoosier state. The platform makes tariff reform the issue, and indorses Cleveland as the logical presidential candidate of the party, with instructions for the delegates to vote for Isaac P. Gray if the nomination of Cleveland is deemed inexpedient by the Chicago convention.

While the nominations were being made the most amusing incident of the day occurred. Large sized portraits of Gray, Cleveland and Hendricks had been suspended in a row above the stage. Suddenly the portrait of Gray began to swing, probably impelled by slight draughts of air, and finally turning with the face to the wall, rested in that position. Instantly there was a wild yell in the audience from the Cleveland men, who regarded this as an omen of the retirement of Isaac Pusey Gray from the presidential arena.

Governor McKinley Denies It.

COLUMBUS, O., April 22.—Governor McKinley denies the report sent all over the country that he is a candidate for his old seat in congress from the Stark-Columbiana-Mahoning district. To a reporter the governor said:

"No, I am not a candidate. I haven't thought of such a thing."

The anti-Harrison men do not want McKinley to go as a delegate to the Republican national convention, for they intend to spring the governor on the convention as a candidate for president and do not want him to be in a position where he can rise and decline. They expect to use the magic of the great protectionist's name to defeat Harrison.

Whitney for President.

WASHINGTON, April 22.—It is reported that there is a movement on foot among Cleveland men to unite their forces on ex-Secretary Whitney. The report says that Gorman is in the cool also, and that if Whitney should be nominated and elected Gorman will go into the cabinet.

Senator Gorman laughed at the story when it was told him by a reporter.

The painter, however, is a man of ideas. Waiting until the lion is asleep, he presses the monarch's tail into service——

Young Hopeful—Papa, I wish you'd buy me a bow and arrow.

TWO OF THE MINERS SAVED.

But Ten Others Were Probably Drowned in the Lytle Colliery.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., April 22.—Twelve men were imprisoned by the flooding of the Lytle colliery mine, near Minersville. After two hours of agonized imprisonment two of the men, William Bell and James Dolliver, who had fled to a high portion of the mine, were rescued through the heroic efforts of their fellow workmen. The unfortunate men who are still in the mine and who are undoubtedly drowned, as they have no known chance of escaping, are: Thomas Boggy, Joseph Fiotta, Peter Maketis, Vincent Mercurio, Peter Otwell, Ignata Perona, Albert Setrella, Dominic Uguilla, Frank Vegetta and John Zerbe.

Setrella and Boggy were married men with large families. His remainder were Italians. This gang were engaged in a gangway in the lowest part of the mine. The water broke in from the No. 9 chute and flooded the mine so quickly that they could not escape. At its highest point the water reached 100 feet up the slope, and it will take a day or two to remove sufficient to reach the place where the men are imprisoned. The water is supposed to have come from the old McDonald workings, of which the records are inaccurate. Bell and Dolliver were taken from their perilous position by the rescuing party, who built rafts and pushed them through the flood to the gangways. They were about twenty-five feet from their chute.

COCKERMAN'S TRIPLE CRIME.

He Shoots His Hired Man and His Wife and Kills Himself.

DES MOINES, April 22.—James R. Cockerman went to the home of his divorced wife, Nancy, near this city, fired through the window, instantly killing William T. Davis, her hired hand. He then shot Mrs. Cockerman to the road and shot her dead, and reloaded his gun and blew his own head off. Mrs. Cockerman secured a divorce from her husband last year on a showing of ten years of terrible cruelty, culminating in a desperate assault upon her in April, 1891, when he told her he was going to kill her and their children and then commit suicide. He was drunk, and the daughter then saved the mother's life by seizing his two revolvers and throwing them away.

The couple had trouble all last summer about the seven acre place Mrs. Cockerman owned, and Cockerman had recently threatened to kill her and his daughter, and also her lawyer, James R. Jones, of this city. Mrs. Cockerman was high tempered and a continual quarreler, while undoubtedly a faithful wife and innocent of improper intimacy with Davis. Cockerman was crazy drunk when he committed the awful crime.

MRS. HARWELL'S HARD LUCK.

She Burned Her Husband and Eloped but Was Goaded to Death.

BASTROP, Texas., April 22.—News has reached here of a terrible tragedy which occurred in the mountain region of Kendall county. Syl Harwell was a very well to do farmer of that section. He had been married about three years and had lived happily with his wife. A few days ago, however, he made the startling discovery that his wife was too intimate with a young man of the community named Alex Brady and vehemently and incessantly abused her for her infidelity.

Mrs. Harwell thoroughly saturated with kerosene oil the bed on which her husband and infant was sleeping and threw a fire brand thereon, then darted out at the door. The building was soon wrapped in flames and Harwell and the child were burned to death. Among those attracted to the scene by the light was Brady. After locking on a few moments he and Mrs. Harwell started away together secretly. Soon after he was attacked by a savage bull and gored to death. Mrs. Harwell lived a few hours and acknowledged the facts as related above.

CHILDREN'S OWN COLUMN.

INTERESTING POETRY AND PROSE THAT WILL PLEASE THEM.

The Pictures are Also Pretty, and the Smallest Tot can Understand Them—Clever Sayings of Children Told for the Bright Ones.

I expect to go through this world but once. If, therefore, there be any kindness I can show, or any good thing I can do to any fellow-being, let me do it now. Let me not defer or neglect it, for I shall not pass this way again.

FREEDOM.

Fly away, Dickie, home to your nest,
To the woods and the fields, that you love best.
But I've been thinking how sorry I'd be
If I couldn't come home to my dear Mammee.
But sometimes, Dickie, you'll fly back, dear,
And sing me the songs I love to hear.
And if ever you're hungry, dear little pet,
There's plenty of crumbs here, so don't forget.

A PICTURE OF YOUR MOTHER.

She is not only your Mother but Every Boy's Mother.

A boy's mother entertains a proper respect for the contents of a boy's pocket—the nails, bolts, crumbs, taffy, screws, wire, bits of rope and pieces of rock, hooky stones and other juvenile treasures; and when a boy loses his knife some one with a gentle voice knows where it is—where she placed it for safe keeping.

When the boy is in trouble the same gentle voice intercedes in his behalf, and when he is in disgrace she sad look in the loving eyes is hardest of all for him to meet.

But there is some one to believe in him again whate'er befall, some one in whose heart confidence never dies—nor hope—and a little voice within him sings of her.

And one day after he has grown to manhood she will go to a long-closed drawer, and from its sacred depths she will take her trembling hands sacred little garments stained with time and perfumed with lavender—the while an involuntary lullaby springs to her lips—and the eyes will dim with tears, and as they behold all that is left to a boy's mother—all save memory, which is near the heart of hearts has enshrined the image of a boy.

A Heirs's Book Song.

"Wanted a kiss," the lassie said
To brave "Lord Fauntleroy;"
"Come, 'Saint Elizabeth,'" he cried
"It 'Mother Bunch,'" with joy.
Away, weary, to "Patrician Italy,"
For "Nobody's House" is there,
And "Four on an Island" soon will help
The legend to declare.

"Red Feather" wants to lead the throng,
With "Little Miss Peggy" near;
"A Pony Tale" the nurse's aho'll have,
If "Carrots" doesn't hear;
But if he does, the "Cuckoo Clock"
Will tell "Us" time flies fast,
And back to "Four Winds Farm" we'll hie,
Ere "Wandering Will" goes past.

"What's that you say?" cries "Sara Crewe,"
"The Bravest of the Brave;"
"Down the Snow Stairs" I'd like to go,
"Hal Hungerford" to save.
Perhaps sweet "Saucy May" would come;
But quick "Our Dolly" said,
"No thanks, we came to find a King,
And now we'll go to bed."

Talent and Genius.

A reader wishes to know the difference between talent and genius, if there is any. There is a great deal of difference, and its manifestations are in a very marked contrast.

Talent is a development of the natural understanding. It may be inherited or it may be an original gift. At any rate, it is special natural inclination in any certain direction, as for language, for music, painting or what not else. Cultivation perfects it mechanically and develops it to its fullest extent.

Genius is the action of reason and the imagination. It is thoughtful and sensitive where talent is merely mechanical and imitative. Talent reflects ideas and subjects in order to inspire them with life.

In this way of familiar illustrations, it may be said that Charles Dickens was a genius, and Charles Reade a man of talent. Anthony Trollope was a talented man, and Thackeray a genius. With this hint the reader can go ahead and make up a contrasted list of what he considers the gentlemen and the ladies of the universe for himself.—Farm and Fireside.

A Young Lawyer.

"In your essay," said the pretty schoolma'am to Freddy Gaswell, "you say the horse has six legs. How do you make that out?" "He has fore legs in front and two behind," exclaimed Freddy.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

Two of Them.

"Hullo!" said the Chestnut to the Robin. "What are you?"

"I'm a little bird," said the Robin. "What are you?"

"I'm a little burred, too," said the Chestnut.—Harper's Young People.

AN OLD-FASHIONED PRESCRIPTION.

Something the Greatest Men and Women on Hand to Take in Their Day.

It is a false idea that obedience can only be secured by constant punishment or threatening. Obedience may be by memory, but the desire for approbation is often as potent a factor in making a child do as he is told as is the fear of punishment. Where the loving spirit prevails no sentimental compositions should deter the mother from bestowing it. She should decide what best suits the individual case whether it be a reproof, a deprivation of privilege, solitary confinement, a few hours in bed, or that much-aroused and salutary form of punishment, a good old-fashioned spanking, given with a switch, a slipper or a shingle in the mode honored and made orthodox by our grandmothers. When she has decided upon the penalty, let her enforce it calmly and without wrath. As a wise mother said often to say: "It is not the severity so much as the certainty of a punishment that impresses a child."

THE COCOA PLANT.

The South American Bean from Which the Nutritious Drink is Made.

The consumption of cocoa as a beverage in place of coffee and tea is rapidly increasing. We give herewith a cut of the plant, pod and seeds.

The principal home of the cocoa plant is on the banks of the Amazon, Brazil. A cocoa tree in good soil yields from fifty to 100 pods per annum. As it generally takes about eleven pods to yield one pound of cured cocoa, the above would indicate that a good, mature cocoa tree, under favorable circumstances, might yield, as an average, not less than seven pounds of cured cocoa. The average yield per tree (at all stages) on an estate of, say, 200 trees would probably not exceed one or two or three pounds per tree, or (taking 200 trees per acre) a return of four to 600 pounds of cured cocoa per acre.

PLANT AND OPEN POD SHOWING SEEDS.

It is by grinding the seeds and extracting the oil that the cocoa powder is made. The waste kinds are a great part corn starch and sugar.

LET YOUNG PEOPLE SLEEP.

It is as Necessary as Food to Young and Old.

A German specialist, Dr. Cold, pleads for giving young people more sleep. A healthy infant sleeps most of the time during the first weeks, and in early years people are supposed to let children sleep as much as they will. But from six or seven, when school begins, there is a sudden and great change. At the age of ten or eleven the child sleeps only eight or nine hours, when he needs at least ten or eleven, and he is generally robbed of rest is shortened. Dr. Cold believes that up to twenty a youth needs nine hour's sleep and an adult should have eight or nine. If this insufficiency of the nervous system, and brain especially, not resting enough and ceasing to work normally, we find exhaustion, excitability and intolerance, irritability, failing the place of love of work, genteel well being and the spirit of initiative.

Have Peace at Home.

When you don't know what to say, say so.

Nurse good habits, and wet-nurse bad ones.

Open doors quietly and shut them without a bang.

Use the door-mat, instead of the floor carpet, for a foot scraper.

Let your manners at home be a little better than they are abroad.

Live sociably with your family, and possibly with your neighbors.

When the "last word" is likely to be an unkind one, let some one else say it.

Be as agreeable with your wife as you would be with "other men's wives."

Speak as pleasantly to your husband as you would to "other women's husbands."

Look out for the claws of the family cat when its paws are fairly let out of the bag.

If it must be a kiss or a blow, let the kiss come first—the blow will take care of itself.

Have soft answers always ready as a bulwark to set up against the overflowing steam of wrath; it may chance to be stowing by.—Good Housekeeping.

To Bleach Cotton Goods.

To five pounds of cloth take twelve ounces of chloride of lime, dissolve in a small quantity of boiling water and when cold strain off into sufficient warm water to immerse the goods. First boil the goods in soap and water, then wring and rinse. Put the cloth in the above solution, let it remain ten or fifteen minutes, frequently stirring; and rinse till clean.

Tapioca Pudding.

Take eight tablespoonfuls of tapioca, wash it thoroughly and pour over it one quart of boiling milk; when the tapioca is soft, add three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, one cupful of sugar, five well-beaten eggs, spice to suit taste; bake in a buttered dish and serve with cream when the pudding has become cold.

A Simple Fruit Cake.

One cup of butter, one of brown sugar, half pint of molasses, two eggs, one cup of sour milk, one teaspoonful of soda, one pound of flour, one of currants, one and a half of raisins, one teaspoonful of cinnamon, half teaspoonful each of cloves and allspice. Bake in a slow oven.

Salt on the Carpet.

Sweeping heavy velvet carpets with salt cleans and keeps them from moths, as particles of the salt remain in the carpet for some time. Salt is not hurtful and has no disagreeable odor.

THE BIRTHDAY OF JONES.

His Wife Prepares Some Little Birthday Gift.

"Jepthe," said Mrs. Jones in a little, wayworn voice that sounded soft and squeaky, "today is your birthday, and you know I always give you a birthday present."

"Yes, Maria," answered Mr. Jones hastily, "but you needn't mind any this year. I still have that box of cigars that you gave me on last anniversary."

"There was a cake of French soap, too, and a shaving mug, Jepthe," insisted Mrs. J., in a hurt tone.

"Oh, yes. I've used the soap every day, and its shadow hasn't grown less yet as I can see. The shaving mug I broke—accidentally, of course."

"Oh, of course," chirped Mrs. Jones. "You don't suppose I thought you broke it on purpose? Well, dear, this time I've bought you—now guess."

"Slippers, suspenders, a footrest, smoking jacket, slumber robe, manicure set"—

"Oh, no, no," interupted Mrs. Jones. "I knew you would never guess. Look there, Jepthe," and Mrs. Jones laid in Mr. Jones' unwilling arms a package of something metallic and a long, narrow box.

He opened the box first and dragged out four long strips of silk, lined and wadded, each of a different color.

"What are these, Maria?" asked the unhappy man, moved by a premonition of woe.

"Four-in-hands! I made them myself. You can wear one at a time or all four at once, just as you like. Ain't they awfully sweet?"

"But, good heavens, Maria, they are made of women's goods! Men don't wear that kind of stuff—no man living could tie one," said Jones, mentally wondering if one of them would bear his wretched weight.

"Oh, they'll do," said Mrs. Jones cheerfully. "You are too particular, Jepthe, dear. Now undo the package." And she retreated toward the door as Mr. Jones opener that Jones wondered whether it were dynamite.

But she only did that to get a better vantage ground from which to observe his delight when he saw the piece de resistance of his natal day.

It opened up well, as a three leaved shaving mirror with a patent attachment which would enable a nervous man to shave himself.

"Well, that is quite a scheme," said Jones complacently; "you've hit it this time, Maria. How does it work?"

"Why, you put this self adjusting shelf under your chin, and this strap over your head, and that brings the mirror around your face so that you can see both sides at once, and of course the razor is inside in your hand, and you fasten this catch and it fits as snug as a helmet. Great invention, isn't it?"

At that moment the doorbell rang and Mrs. Jones was called out of the room to see company.

Jones studied himself and thought he was a pretty good looking man. He mapped out a diagram for his next shave and examined a new mole that appeared in a constellation under his left ear. Then he began to perspire and concluded to lay aside the adjustable mirror.

Mrs. Jones a half hour later was talking to her caller, when a strange noise was heard upstairs.

"It must be the cat," she said, and listened a moment.

"Sounds like some one in distress," said her company, as she rose.

"Maria!" called a smothered voice.

"M-a-r-i-a, h-e-l-p m-e-e-e-e!"

Mrs. Jones rushed up the stairs and as soon as she saw Mr. Jones she began to laugh hysterically.

"Take off the infernal thing!" he shouted as he ran excited around the room with his head fastened in its cage of glass and steel.

"Keep still! I can't find the combination," gasped Mrs. Jones. "Oh, Jepthe, you do look so funny!"

But Mr. Jones was in no mood to be trifled with, and by the time Mrs. Jones had his head out of its novel frame she realized the joke.

A hollow peace is patched up, and Mrs. Jones says that she will hang that mirror over the kitchen sink. Sunday bonnet is in, and in that way it will do the most good.

And she thinks the new four-in-hands can be utilized as belts for her new Russian blouses.

Jones thinks—but his thoughts cannot be recorded in a family newspaper.—Detroit Free Press.

Business on Hand.

It was at breakfast.

"I wish you'd come to the office immediately," said Bobby's father.

"Can't do it, wealthy," was the answer. "I've got to go and get weighed, wight off."

"What for?"

"Because I discovered this morning that I cawn't get both my own legs into one of my twousahs legs, don't you know, and unless I'm getting stouter, I'll have to call that blawsted tailah to account, you know."—Washington Star.

The Clergyman's Good Advice.

"Sir," he said, as he stalked into the clergyman's study, "you are the man who married the knot, I believe?"

"I beg your pardon," said the clergyman, looking up from his sermon.

"You performed the marriage ceremony for me, didn't you?"

"Yes, certainly, Mr. Willings. What, may I ask"——

"Then you know what the rights of a husband are?"

"Why, yes, in a general way."

"And the rights of a wife?"

"Well, yes."

"Well, now, sir," said the caller, drawing a chair up to the clergyman's desk and taking a seat, "has a wife a license to torment her husband?"

"Certainly not."

"If she makes his life miserable he has redress of course?"

"Yes, but I'd give you a friendly advise"——

"Never mind your advice now; we'll come to that later. My wife complains that I don't shave often enough."

"Oh, that's a small matter."

"Is it, sir! Is it! Just wait! I told her that that was my affair, and then she taught the children to cry when I kissed them so that she could say that my rough chin hurt them."

"That hardly showed a Christian"——

"Wait a minute. Yesterday morning I found them playing with the cylinder of a broken music box. You know how that seems to the touch?"

"Certainly."

"Well, she'd taught them to call it 'Papa's chin.'"

"Hardly, sir, I must admit"——

"Wait till I'm through. Today one of them got up on my knee, passed his little hand over my chin and called it 'Papa's whisk broom.' Now, sir, I ask you as a Christian man and as the man who tied the knot, what shall I do?"

"Get shaved," replied the clergyman softly, as he returned to his work.—Chicago Tribune.

For the Repairing and Permanent Improvement of Farragut Road.

The Inhabitants of the City of Plainfield, by their Common Council, do enact as follows:

Section 1. —A. G. Spaulding & Co., of New York, have donated a handsome championship pennant to the Central New Jersey League. It will be put on exhibition in Elizabeth in a few days.

—Miller Bros., are having their new hotel on North avenue thoroughly renovated and repaired. The wooden awning, which formerly stood in front of the place has been torn down.

—Mr. Harder of Madison avenue delivered a lecture at Hope chapel last evening. He took for his subject "City Mission Work." A large number were present at the lecture, which was of an interesting nature.

—The old barn of the "Yellow Tavern" between Dunellen and Bound Brook is to be torn down. It has been the scene of many notorious events, the most prominent of late being Jim Dwyer's prize fight, of a year or more ago.

—Rudolph Speigel, the man who applied to the Somerset county courts for a license to sell liquor in the building owned by Joseph Blatz at the corner of Somerset street and Greenbrook road, has withdrawn his application.

—The household effects of Mrs. Laura A. Livingston, widow of the late Robert R. Livingston, are to be sold at public auction by Auctioneer T. J. Carey, on Wednesday, April 27, at two p. m. sharp. The sale will take place at 168 Broadway.

—Hon. Alexander Olcott, Mayor of Plainfield, is very prominently spoken of as one of the delegates from this city to Eighth Congressional District in the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis. A better man could not be selected.—Elizabeth Journal. Correct.

—The robin is called "God's bird" because it plucked a thorn from the cruel crown and used it upon the head of our Saviour and in doing so wounded its own breast. It forsakes a "cursed" graveyard.—Irish Times. And this in the 19th century.

—It is casually mentioned, that the wheel of most of the fast riders who will contest in the great ten mile road-race, is named the Columbia. Quite incidentally, it might also be observed, that Mr. Frank L. C. Martin is the agent here.

—The Holy Cross choir will be assisted by Miss Maude Bowers at their entertainment next Thursday evening. Selections by the choir are, "By Babylon's Wave," Chas. Gounod; "Crusaders," Pinsuti; "Hallelujah Chorus" (Messiah) Handel.

—Get on your knees, put your elbow on the floor, and then sit in the absence of the forearm from the knee, fingers outstretched, put a spoon, with the spoon part toward you. That done, put your arm behind your back and pick that spoon up with your mouth. It's easy. Very easy to look at.

—Yesterday was Arbor Day, by appointment of the governor, and not a bad day for planting trees. It was not the best kind of a day for children to be out of doors, watching the tree planting, but the weather was moist and cool, just about right to start a tree a chance to make a good start.—Elizabeth Journal.

—At the great peremptory matting sale in New York last Thursday, 6,700 rolls of Chinese and Japanese matting were sold. Edsall says he was a large buyer at this sale, and in a few days he expects to astonish the citizens with the most attractive stock of fine mattings ever offered in this city. The prices, he says, will be much lower than ever known before. See advertisement.

—Lottie Mortimer, of the "Tangled Up" company will introduce her famous serpentine dance in her specialty at Music Hall next Wednesday week. This latest fad is simply dancing in the semotion of the day. It is a combination of the Spanish girls' dance and the movements of the "Living Statues." The skill in the effect is in the dress, which is made of many thicknesses crepe silk, and falls in graceful folds about the dancer to the floor. When colored skirts are used, the dancer wears her brown lights under the dress. In dancing the dress is twirled with the hands in all sorts of spirals, concentric circles and wave like motions, making a series of graceful pictures and poses. The dance created a great sensation in New York.

COLLISION IN BRISTOL CHANNEL.

The Steamship East of Chester Sank and the Boto Beached.

LONDON, April 23—(Special)—During a heavy fog this morning in the British Channel the British steamship East of Chester collided with the Spanish steamship Boto.

The East of Chester was so badly damaged that she sank within seven minutes after the collision. The Boto was but so badly injured, and her commander succeeded in running his vessel aground.

No loss of life has yet been reported.

NEW YORK, April 23d, (Special.)—Mme. De Plasice, a French woman, left the gas turned on last night in a furnished room which she occupied at 107 East Thirty-first street. At nine o'clock this morning the door was forced open by Edward Campbell, a tenant in the house. The woman was in bed dead. It is said that she trained persons for the stage.

Dunellen Notes.

Peter Stout has been improving slowly for the past week.

Miss Louise Lord and Lena Kuenlen spent Easter with friends in New York.

Business was open for the season at Brown's brick yard this Wednesday.

A large job of Republican flag pole is being painted and will be placed in position soon.

Deacon Richardson has been remodeling his house and has fitted it up with new furniture.

The Mayor of Bound Brook visited Dunellen one evening this week to investigate our electric lights.

Last Saturday a very close and interesting game of base ball was played on the Dunellen grounds between the Young America and the Pond Jumpers. The score was 14 to 14 in favor of the Pond Jumpers. Bobt. Orelle's fine catches and double plays won the admiration of the spectators present.

Last Monday Mrs. Daniel Olora was called by the appearance of a ferocious looking tramp at the back door of her residence, but the tramp did not feel inclined to change his business. Officer Ward soon arrived and conducted the vagabond to New Brunswick, where he was given the free use of the county hotel. He left his name as Whitcock, and judging from the number of fresh cuts and bruises on his face and body, he had been in a scrimmage with some other tramp. The Presidents of the Board of Trade and Common Council met in the office of the former and discussed the matter of a disorderly dinner or any abode within the borough limits, shall be dealt with according to law. Constable Bloodgood soon arrested with full power to arrest such characters.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

EDITORIAL NOTES

E. W. Howe says he never abuses anybody in his newspaper now, except the Prince of Wales. This is since Mr. Howe himself passed through a storm of newspaper abuse and knows how it is. If Wales should come to America on a visit then Mr. Howe would only berate somebody in China, who could not read English.

None of the exiled Russian Jews are being sent to Palestine. They come by colonies to the United States and to Argentina. Twenty years will be required to get the lands provided by Baron Hirsch fully settled. This is half as long as the children of Israel wandered in the wilderness before reaching the promised land.

The czar is carrying out in true czar fashion his desire to convert the world to the Greek church. In his province of Volhynia no one may own real estate unless he first converts himself to the Greek church religion. In this same province nobody may live outside the towns at all except he is a true son of the czar's church. It is useless to try to play longer that Russia is a civilized country. Russia is merely a savage masquerading in a silk hat.

Queen Victoria knows how to do a graceful thing. The painting, by Frank Carpenter, of the international arbitration commissioners at Geneva, presented to the queen by Mrs. Carson, of Newburg, N. Y., hangs in the royal banqueting hall at Windsor castle. Her majesty sent a note of thanks for it, and in addition, on the day the court mourning for the Duke of Clarence expired, Feb. 17, conveyed to Mrs. Carson a gift which will be one of the historic treasures of America. It is a full length portrait of the queen herself, mounted and framed, with her autograph and the date when it was painted in the right hand corner. There is probably not such another picture of the queen in the United States.

Mackenzie on the Throat.

Sir Morell Mackenzie, the great throat specialist, had decided views about the use and abuse of the larynx. Singers, to keep their vocal powers in the best trim, must not smoke at all. If, however, they will smoke let them do so only after a full meal, and never before singing. Particularly they must not inhale tobacco smoke, and they are to use only mild tobacco, with the mouthpiece of pipe or cigar holder kept clean "with ultra Mohammedan strictness." The man in whom tobacco increases the flow of saliva to any marked degree is not intended by nature to smoke.

In view of the prevailing fashions of ladies' garments and the high, stiff collars of men, the following advice is interesting:

The final thing is to try and harden the throat. Do not wrap it up too much. Endeavor to make the neck as capable of exposure as the face. Do not cover up our faces, and they are practically the hardiest part of our bodies. Of course, when a person gets to a certain age it is too late for this. Keep the throat free from wrappings. The throat is the entrance to the lungs—a very vital part, naturally and tender. The great feather boas and Medici collars which ladies wear around the neck, and the stifling undlers which men put on, are calculated to do harm. Garding with cold salt water in the morning is a very excellent thing, also bathing the throat, first with very hot water, and then with very cold. The throat gets the effect of a sudden shock.

American City Government.

Albert Shaw, American editor of The Review of Reviews, pays his respects to American city government in a way not flattering to us. His remarks are directed especially at New York. He attributes all the rottenness of our city government to the fact that it is controllable. Politics has been made thus far to defeat the "greater New York" movement, which would make one grand metropolis of New York, Brooklyn and Staten Island. It may interest our readers in the rural districts and in the little villages of the far west in whose streets the whoop of the cowboy is heard, to know that the city of Brooklyn, with nearly a million inhabitants, has no street cleaning department. How the cowboy towns must pity the unfortunate people who are compelled to live in a city where the dirt has been accumulating in the streets something like 250 years.

It is to the point to recall at this moment the statement of a magazine writer who has made the welfare of Chicago at heart. How the park management could be kept out of politics is indeed a mystery, and one that other American cities would do well to investigate.

In the following paragraph we hold up to the citizen of New York the portrait Mr. Shaw paints of him:

The average respectable citizen of New York does not remember when the last municipal election was held. He does not know which of the leading officers are elective and which are appointive. He knows of no principle which separates the government and administration of New York by the municipal authorities from the government that is exercised over New York by the legislature at Albany. He knows no distinction between the officials of the county of New York and the officials of the city of New York.

ROCKWELL'S SEAT SAFE

Democrats Disagree Over the Contested Election Case.

CLEVELAND AND HILL REFERRED TO

The House Enjoys One of the Most Spicy Debates of the Session—Democratic Congressman O'Ferrall's Stirring Plea for the Republican Contestant Noyes.

WASHINGTON, April 21.—After four hours debate on the Noyes-Rockwell contest the house decided to retain Mr. Rockwell in his seat. The principal speeches of the day were made by Messrs. Fellows and Cockran, of New York, who spoke for Mr. Rockwell, and Mr. O'Ferrall, of Virginia, who made an earnest appeal for Mr. Noyes. The discussion at times was tart and spicy, and the interference of Senator Hill in the case was alluded to. At times the scenes in the chamber and there was considerable confusion. On the motion that Mr. Noyes was not entitled to the seat the vote was—yeas, 140; nays, 98, and on the motion that Mr. Rockwell was elected the vote stood—yeas, 128; nays, 106. These resolutions were submitted by the minority and a vote thus first taken upon them.

Rockwell Declared Elected.

Mr. Bryan, of Nebraska, then moved to recommit the resolutions with instructions to take testimony regarding the disputed ballots and report hereafter. This was lost —yeas, 110; nays, 138, and on a vive voce vote Mr. Rockwell, the sitting member, was then declared elected. The result was received with applause by the Democrats generally, except those who voted with Mr. O'Ferrall, for the Republican contestee, Mr. Noyes.

When the case came up Mr. Fellows was the first speaker. He defended the case of Mr. Rockwell. He inquired of Mr. O'Ferrall if it were conceded that the Doyle ballots cast for Noyes were rejected and the twenty-eight marked ballots for Mr. Rockwell were allowed, would not the latter be entitled to his seat upon any return? Mr. O'Ferrall replied that he would if the count is made upon the face of the returns, as the law provided in the state of New York and should have been done, and the sixteen Doyle ballots were rejected.

Fellows Scores Noyes.

Mr. Fellows said the decision of that court could in no way affect the issue. Whatever they decided was in reference to the modes of procedure in the state of New York and could have no relation to the line of action to be taken by the house. The sixteen Doyle ballots cast for Noyes were fraudulent and were the result of a criminal conspiracy, and were not to be considered in the case for a moment.

Mr. Fellows roundly scored Mr. Noyes for the alleged corrupt methods he had employed to purchase votes. If Noyes was seated it would be odious, fraudulent and disgraceful.

Mr. Cockran having secured fifteen minutes from his colleague, Mr. Fellows, addressed the house in favor of Mr. Rockwell. He said that the entire case of the majority of the committee of elections rested upon the proposition of throwing out sixteen Republican ballots and retaining twenty-eight Democratic ballots just as fraudulent as the sixteen ballots. The Democratic party could never afford to do wrong, but it could always afford to do right. [Applause.]

Senator Davis' Sensational Speech.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—Chinese exclusion occupied the senate all day after the morning hour, and at adjournment was apparently good for two or more days' further discussion. An extraordinary feature of the debate was the introduction by Mr. Davis, of Minnesota, of an attack on the papal hierarchy, the German ambassador at Rome and the Austrian royal family for alleged attempted interference with Catholic immigrants into the United States. He referred to an alleged proposition which he asserted had recently been made to Pope Leo XIII by M. Cahensley, for the segregation of German, Belgian and other Catholic immigrants on their arrival in this country and the consolidation under bishoprics of their own nationality.

Mr. Davis charged that this scheme had been instigated by M. Von Schloesser, the German ambassador at the Vatican, and by members of the Austrian royal family, and that the people of the United States in their statesmanship in rejecting the proposition. Meanwhile senators on both sides of the chamber had listened to Senator Davis' earnest remarks with obvious and undisguised curiosity, as to just where he would connect it with the pending question of excluding Chinese.

Mr. Davis, however, resumed his seat without making this apparent, and then it was passed around from one senator to another that this portion of Mr. Davis' remarks had been contributed by Colonel Elliot F. Shepard. Another attempt was made to come to some arrangement as to the time for taking a vote on this Chinese question, but without success.

Murderer Parks Convicted.

Not a Single Boomer Killed.

The Grover Cleveland Missing.

GLOUCESTER, Mass., April 23.—Schooner Grover Cleveland, of and from St. Johns, N. F., with cargo of fish for this port, now five weeks out, has not been heard from and it is feared she is lost with all on board.

Californians Sleeping in Tents.

VACAVILLE, April 22.—A number of tents have arrived here from Sacramento. They were sent by Governor Markham. Many people were afraid to pass the night in their homes and slept in the tents.

Ran Into a Herd of Cattle.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., April 23.—The Southern Pacific passenger train was wrecked near Lagurta by running into a herd of cattle. Engineer Hodgkins was injured and Fireman Lattimer killed.

the man's Democratic name for argument. As an American citizen he had a right to exercise that privilege. His choice was well understood. Yet he was entitled hereafter to support a Democratic candidate in another Democratic gentleman, as the nominee. It was true he preferred a certain Democratic gentleman. He preferred a (Loud laughter.) He preferred a man who was a lion and not a fox. [Loud applause.] He preferred one who stands before the country head and shoulders above every other living Democrat of this age, a man whose big heart know no south, east, west or north, the magnificent, grand, Grover Cleveland. [Continued applause.]

He said that there was a conference to ascertain how the Democratic members of the committee stood on the case and there was one gentleman who was in favor of Mr. Rockwell, but who now opposed him. Reverting to the statement of Mr. Allen, he said that that gentleman had said the Democrats should stand together like the Republicans. He thanked heaven he was not rocked in the same cradle with the gentleman from Mississippi.

Mr. Allen replied that he disclaimed that the Democrats should follow the tactics of the Republicans. The idea that he desired to impress upon Democrats was that they should stop fighting one another, as was just illustrated by the statement of the gentleman from Virginia, who was then a good Democrat as a lion and to another as a fox.

Mr. O'Ferrall said he was sorry he was touching a sore place of the gentleman from Mississippi; he did not have him in his mind, he did not allude to him as a lion.

Mr. Allen—The man who fights Democrats as you do will never regard me as a lion.

Mr. O'Ferrall—I fight fraud wherever I find it, whether in the Republican or Democratic ranks.

In conclusion he said he was willing to go before the people on the report of the majority of the committee. If the sixteen Doyle votes were rejected then twenty-eight more ballots would be rejected. The Democratic party could not afford to place itself in the position of throwing out sixteen Republican ballots and retaining twenty-eight Democratic ballots just as fraudulent as the sixteen ballots. The Democratic party could never afford to do wrong, but it could always afford to do right. [Applause.]

THE DRUNKARD'S FRIEND

Rev. Dr. Talmage Praises Dr. Keeley and His Cure.

NOT AN EVIL, BUT A BLESSING.

Brooklyn's Famous Clergyman Describes a Visit to the "Shot Tower" in Keeley's Institute at Dwight, Ill.—Hope in the Faces of Five Hundred Men.

NEW YORK, April 23.—Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage has joined the vast army of Keeley cure enthusiasts. While on his recent visit to Chicago, from which he returned yesterday, he was taken by Dr. Leslie Keeley to his gold cure establishment at Dwight, Ills., which is the parent institution of the fifty branches that are scattered throughout this country, Europe and Australia. Dr. Talmage had faith in the gold cure before he went there; now he is as loud in its praises as the most enthusiastic of the 60,000 people whom he says have been rescued from the thraldom of alcohol, opium and tobacco by its influence.

Keeley a Great Benefactor.

In speaking of his visit to a reporter, he said:

"I am firmly convinced from what I saw and heard at Dwight that Dr. Keeley is one of the greatest benefactors to mankind that ever lived. His institution is a wonderful place, his cure a marvelous one. Dr. Keeley's fame is on the world, and I shall do all in my power to tell the world so. I shall have him in Brooklyn before long, and will guarantee him an audience of 7,000 people. I am satisfied now, for I have seen Keeley, Dwight and the gold cure."

Dr. Talmage's face was red with enthusiasm as he spoke. When asked if he had seen the operation of administering the cure, he said:

In the "Shot Tower."

"Yes; I was in the 'shot tower,' as they call it. There, in front of the most wonderful sights in my experience. I saw 500 men standing in line, with slits in their sleeves, waiting their turns to have the gold cure injected to them into their arms. The expressions on the faces of these men was enough to show the good work Dr. Keeley is doing. The poor broken down wrecks who had just come in awaited their turns with a look of hopeful expectancy on their faces that was touching, while on the other hand those who had been there some time, and had already experienced the good effects of this cure, looked proudly conscious that they were being freed from slavery. I tell you the confident way in which these men spoke and the happy, triumphant expressions on their faces would have converted the greatest enemies of the cure."

"Did you come across any persons who were skeptical regarding the cure?"

"At Dwight, not one. Elsewhere I have met hundreds of them; but the best answer to the objections they make that the cure is only a temporary one is the 13,000 people who have been cured there and at the various branches and who have remained cured for six and seven years. Why, 48 per cent. of the cures are permanent. What better record could I wish for?"

The Cure and Insanity.

"Do you believe in the theory that the gold cure tends to produce insanity, doctor?"

"I do not. There are 40,000 people in the lunatic asylums of this country who were driven insane from drink. Is it any wonder that the fear that possessed Mr. Davis of the Keeley institutes? They don't under take to cure insanity there; they only remove the causes that may lead to it. There are many men who are saved from drunkards' graves by the grace of God, but there are others who need something more. Dr. Keeley struck the keynote when he said, 'The will is dethroned.'

"When people are sick of typhoid they don't ask for the grace of God; they send for a physician. He represents God's grace. And why should it be different with the disease of drunkenness, of which I am firmly convinced Dr. Keeley has found a sovereign remedy."

Dr. Talmage says he met with an enthusiastic reception at the hands of the Dwight patients and delivered an address to them, after which he was overwhelmed by hundreds of applications for his autograph.

KINGSTON, N. Y., April 23.—At the trial of Trumpbour Chief Examiner Judson, of the state banking department, and Mack S. Benton, his assistant, testified that Trumpbour admitted the irregularities to them and explained the method adopted by Ostrander and himself.

More Anarchists Arrested.

PARIS, April 23.—Four more anarchists were arrested in the city last night. It is said to be the intention of the ministry of the interior to continue these arrests until every avowed anarchist in the city is under lock and key.

A DUEL AT DAWN OF DAY

Fox and Borrowe to Settle Their Quarrel.

SWORDS OR PISTOLS THE WEAPONS

The Cause Belli Is a Question of Veracity Between the Men Concerning the Publication of the Drayton-Borrowe Duel Correspondence—Milbank Tired of Talk.

LONDON, April 23.—Borrowe and Milbank have vanished from London so suddenly and so mysteriously as they disappeared from New York two weeks ago.

Exactly where they have gone nobody seems to know, but if statements made to friends here just before their departure are to be relied upon, Fox and Borrowe will fight a duel before daylight.

When Milbank left the Savoy hotel he said he was going to Paris and should return in a day or two. At Borrowe's lodgings it is reported that he has gone to Brussels. Fox has gone to Calais.

The Cause of the Awaiting Affair.

seems to have real guns in it. The affair has been arranged with the greatest secrecy, but the report here is that the duel will take place in the morning, probably with pistols.

The Cause Belli.

Fox has all along held stanchly to his assertion that Borrowe knew of the publication of the letters in the Borrowe-Drayton affair and authorized it. Borrowe denied this, asserting that while he tentatively agreed to the publication of the correspondence when the proper time arrived, he had no knowledge whatever that Fox had bargained to sell it for money or that it was to be published while Drayton was in mid ocean, unable to defend himself. Borrowe distinctly said on board his City of Paris: "I authorize you to say that in publishing this correspondence as he did, Fox was guilty of gross breach of faith."

Since Borrowe has been in London he has avoided meeting Fox, and no effort was made by the parties interested to bring them together. Last Tuesday Milbank met Fox by accident, and the duel is believed to be the outcome of conversation on that occasion.

Milbank Tired of Talk.

Milbank has made no secret of the fact that he was heartily tired of the whole affair, and that if Borrowe expected his assistance in settling up the quarrel with Fox matters must be brought to a climax very speedily. Fox and Borrowe are much mortified at the position in which they have placed themselves. While Fox has practically no social position here, his friends have made him feel keenly their disapprobation of his conduct in selling the correspondence intrusted to him in an affair of honor, even though he did it, as he alleges, with Borrowe's consent.

Borrowe, on the other hand, makes no secret of the fact that nearly all his friends in New York have cut him, because Fox insists on making him an accomplice in the publication of Mrs. Drayton's disgrace.

It is not known who Fox's seconds are. Milbank, who has stood staunch by Borrowe through the whole affair, will probably be one of his seconds in this meeting should it come off. Fox is a determined fellow, not likely to tolerate any aspersion upon his words or conduct. If he and Borrowe meet that will put an end to this purely accidental issue in this case.

Swords or Pistols?

Borrowe is under the impression that a meeting with Fox on the field of honor will be a vindication from the aspersions cast upon him by Drayton for his refusal to meet Fox is certainly as formidable a foe as Drayton would be, and if Borrowe is not afraid to meet him for an exchange of shots the inference is that the cowardice was not his ground for declining to cross swords with Drayton. Whether Fox challenged Borrowe, or whether he forced Borrowe into challenging him, cannot be learned.

There are all sorts of widely divergent rumors, but the probability is that Fox challenged Borrowe. In that case Borrowe would have the choice of weapons, and would naturally choose swords, of which he has some knowledge, while Fox has absolutely none. If Fox had the choice of weapons he would undoubtedly choose pistols, in which case the chances would be strongly in his favor.

MURDER IN THE SECOND DEGREE.

Mrs. Annie Walden Convicted of Killing Her Husband.

NEW YORK, April 23.—The trial of Mrs Annie Walden, who shot and killed her husband, James Walden, on the night of October 31 last at Broadway and Thirty-eighth street, ended in the jury finding a verdict of murder in the second degree against the defendant. The case has attracted a good deal of attention among persons of spending proclivities, in which class of people both the murdered man and his murderess were prominent. James Walden was the son of Peter Walden, the well known owner and trainer of thoroughbreds. He met his wife at the races, where she was known as Mrs. Delmar, although she had never been married. Young Walden—he was only nineteen years old at the time—became infatuated with the woman and shortly after their acquaintance they were married at Camden N. J.

Their married life, according to the tale told by Mrs. Walden, was far from a happy one. Walden remained out late at nights, and his wife learned that he was frequently seen in the company of other women. When she upbraided him he accused her of unfaithfulness and often beat her severely. This condition of affairs continued until Mrs. Walden saw her husband, on the night of Oct. 31 last, come out of the house of a woman whom she had begged her husband to cease visiting. She reproached him on the street, and he retorted that he would go wherever he pleased. She then drew a revolver, which she had concealed in her bosom, and fired the fatal shots.

THE PRESIDENT IS RETICENT.

Secrecy at the White House Concerning the Big Silver Conference.

WASHINGTON, April 23.—While it is an open secret that the president is endeavoring to secure an international conference on the silver question, the closest reticence is regard to the whole subject is maintained at the White House and the state and treasury departments. It is understood the president has practically completed arrangements for such a conference to be held early next summer and that invitations will be issued within a few weeks.

Senator Stewart is outspoken in his characterization of the plan as an electioneering device, absolutely devoid of any honest purpose, to carry out the express declaration of congress in favor of the full remonetization of silver.

Senator Teller does not see how the conference can have any practical result in view of the insurmountable limitation to be placed upon the conference according to the reports. This senator hinted that the administration and not Great Britain, as reported, had really secured the limitation of the subjects to be passed upon by the conference to the consideration of means to secure the enlarged use of silver as money, and has prevented the consideration of the question of the best means of securing free coinage of silver. He held, and other silver senators entertained the same belief, that the conference would come to nothing unless it was allowed to consider the free coinage question.

CURIOUS MINERALS.

A Remarkable Variety of Limestone—So Called Fossil Plants.

In the south of France, upon the banks of the Rhone, occurs a curious variety of limestone, to which the name truffite has been given, on account of its peculiar property of exhaling the odor of the truffle when rubbed or broken. From an illustrated account in Popular Science News, of this and other remarkable minerals, the following is reproduced: The mineral occurs in beds of lignite in the form of irregularly rounded or flattened masses more or less perfectly crystallized in different layers (Fig. 1) and somewhat resembling the similar siliceous formations known as agates.

A close study of this mineral has led to the conclusion that it is a mineralized wood in which the original substance has been replaced by carbonate of lime. It is probable that in some past geological age, when the country was submerged under water and the lignite beds were being formed, branches of trees floating in the water were deposited in such a position that the carbonate of lime which was dissolved in the water permeated into their substance, so that, as the woody substance decayed, it was replaced by carbonate of lime, more or less perfectly crystallized. The peculiar odor of the truffite is supposed to be due to the decomposing animal or vegetable matter contained in the water at this time. Although it is very pronounced when the crystals are first crushed, the odor soon evaporates.

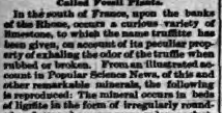

FIG. 1.—TRUFFITE.

In Fig. 1, A is a crystallized layer in a rounded specimen of the mineral; B, central portion of the same, not crystallized; C, fragments of lignite; D, mass of limestone containing the mineral; E, flattened piece of truffite, crystallized like the rounded specimen.

When minerals and rocks are broken open they are frequently found to contain markings like that represented in Fig. 2, which are often taken by inexperienced persons for fossil plants and mosses. These dendrites, as they are called, are usually black, but may also be of different shades of color, and sometimes have a metallic luster. The stone known as "moss agate" often furnishes beautiful examples of these crystalline or mineral growths they really are, and not petrified moss or plants at all.

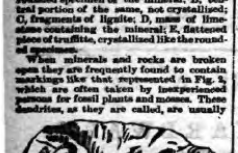

FIG. 2.—DENDRITE.

The dendrites are not always deposited in subsequent fissures. In Fig. 3 a curious instance of imitation is shown, where the head and neck of a bird is imprinted on the rock, even the feathers and the comb being plainly shown. Of course this is much more common than true fossils.

Inflammable Buttons.

The progress of science is not without its dangers, as well as its benefits, to mankind. The employment of a preparation of solidified gun cotton as a substitute for horny, and, when colored, for tortoise shell, horn, etc., has long been known to be attended with a certain amount of risk. A scientific authority has recently published a letter, recounting a singular accident which occurred to a lady who was standing near a fire. She found herself suddenly enveloped in smoke, and a gentleman who crushed the ignited portion of her dress had his hand badly burned. The fire originated where a large bone button had been, which had disappeared. The following test of the inflammability of one of the buttons shows the danger of this style of ornament. A button was mated and a piece of a button was placed on a piece of iron heated by a gas flame; in five minutes the button ignited, and in twelve minutes another piece double the size, from the flame, while the match remained unignited for more than a quarter of an hour. Another button, similarly treated, and placed before the fire in a position a lady's dress might occupy, took fire and ignited the duster in a few minutes.

Train Oil for Calming Waves.

Herr Josef Grossman, an Austrian mechanical engineer of some note, has been discussing a scientific subject, which is upon the question of calming the ocean waves in storms by oil. The frequent failures that have been experienced in this direction Herr Grossman ascribes to a too indiscriminate use of oils. Purified petroleum, and in general mineral oils, he says, are quite unsuitable for the purpose, even when poured by a skilful hand on the sea. Train oil, on the other hand, is extremely effective. Even so small a quantity as half a gallon an hour will, he avers, secure a large vessel against danger. On the conclusion of Herr Grossman's second lecture a discussion took place, and the meeting resolved to petition the Austrian naval administration to conduct an extensive series of trials with train oil in order to test its practical value.

To Cut Glass Without a Diamond.

Scratch the glass about the shape you desire with the corner of a file or piece of glass; then having bent a piece of wire in the same shape, heat it red hot and lay it upon the scratch; this the glass will take water just deep enough for the water to come almost on a level with its upper surface. According to The Mechanical Review the glass will rarely, if ever, fail to break perfectly true.

Hints About Boilers.

If the tap of a hammer makes your boiler ring like bell metal look out for crystallization.

Boilers should have the means for free expansion and contraction. Where a boiler rests on logs the logs must rest on rollers, or the boiler or boiler wall will receive injury.—Safety Valve.

ABOUT EGGS.

Traditions Connecting Them with Good Friday, Easter, Ascension Day, Etc.

A writer in Notes and Queries has been woven about that article of prime domestic importance, the egg. Most of these old beliefs have become simply matters of curiosity to folk lorists, but it is said that a small remnant still survives in quiet haunts "far from the madding crowd." The dove has been particularly favorable of the poultry. The eggs of Maundy Thursday (Witches' Doodesdag) protect a house from the ravages of fire, lightning, etc. The following test of the inflammability of one of the buttons shows the danger of this style of ornament. A button was mated and a piece of a button was placed on a piece of iron heated by a gas flame; in five minutes the button ignited, and in twelve minutes another piece double the size, from the flame, while the match remained unignited for more than a quarter of an hour. Another button, similarly treated, and placed before the fire in a position a lady's dress might occupy, took fire and ignited the duster in a few minutes.

"We hang an egg laid on Ascension day in the roof of a house," says Reginald Scot in 1584, "preserveth the same from all harm." Probably this was written with an eye to the "harm" arising from witchcraft, in connection with which eggs were supposed to possess certain mysterious powers. For instance, if you went to church in Lent made on Maundy Thursday and hid it in your pocket, without knowing it, a gallet's egg (a difficult condition, methinks), you would distinguish the voice of the Devil present were it clicken by their appearing to you to carry cheese or milk pails on their backs.

In North Germany, if you have a desire to see the ladies of the broomstick on May Day—their festival—you must take an egg laid on Maundy Thursday and stand where four roads meet, and when the clock in the church on Good Friday, but eggs out before the blessing.

It was formerly quite an article of domestic belief that the shells must be broken after eating eggs, lest the witches should sail out to sea in them; or, as Sir Thomas Browne declared, lest they "should dance or prick their names thereon and vexed cloonely mischief" the person who had partaken of the eggs. North Germans, believing this also of the witches, "break the shells or you will get the ague," and Netherlanders advise you to secure yourself against the malice of the disagreeable visitor by eating on Easter day a couple of eggs which were laid on Good Friday.

Scotch fishers, who may be reckoned among the most superstitious of folks, believe that contrary winds and much consequent vexation of spirit will be the result of having eggs on board with them, while in the words of Brucianl it is considered very unlucky to bring birds' eggs into the house, although they may be hung up with impunity outside.

Carlyle as a Husband.

On the much discussed subject of Carlyle as a husband some light is thrown by the following letter which his wife wrote to a friend soon after the death of her mother:

"Only think of my husband, too, having given me a little present! he who never attends to such nonsense as birthdays, and who dislikes nothing in the world so much as going into a shop to buy anything, even to the pens and ends, pencils, etc., for the ornamentation of cockney tailors, I am obliged to go about them. Well, he actually picked himself up in a jeweler's shop, and brought me a very nice smelling bottle! I cannot tell you how wise his little gift made me, as well as glad; it was the beginning of the love he will learn me in his life. In great matters he is always kind and considerate; but these little attentions, which we women attach so much importance to, are not in his way. He is wondering to any one; his upbringing, and the severe turn of mind he has from nature, have alike indisposed him toward these things, and the dislike we have to see his irreplaceable makes him as good in little things as he used to be in great."

Carlyle never forgot his birthday afterward. Once Mrs. Carlyle thought that he had when he was away from her, but a day or two afterward she received from him "a dear little cardigan."

The Author of a Familiar Rhyme.

The name of Mrs. Julia A. Carney, of Boston, will, it is said, be found on over ten thousands of cars, yet it is stated that from the pen of this woman came many years ago a jingle which is known perhaps as widely as any ever written:

Little drops of water,
Little grains of sand,
Make the mighty ocean
And the pleasant land.

It is now nearly fifty years ago since Mrs. Carney wrote these lines while teaching a district school in Boston. She was then writing a little article on the value of moments in a life that, to illustrate her meaning, she repeated slowly: Mrs. Carney acknowledges the verse. Without thinking that there was anything in the lines calculated to make them immortal, she read the article, which she asked her for "some scraps to fill corners." In a few weeks the lines were copied broadcast over the land, the Boston schools introduced them into their books, children sang them, mothers taught them, and they are widely known in both America and England.

The Devil and Brandy.

Who invented brandy? The good people in certain parts of Germany say that it was the devil, and perhaps they are not very wide of the mark. Here is the legend:

A Steinbach man cajoled the father of evil into entering an old brick tree and there he was imprisoned until the tree was cut down. His first step on regaining his freedom was to visit his own particular dominion, which he knew he would find empty. This, naturally, would not do, and he set about repeopling hell without delay. He thought the quickest plan would be to start a distillery, so he hurried off to Nordhausen, where his manufacture of brandy (his own invention) became so famous that people from all parts came to him to learn the new art and to become distillers. From that time his satanic majesty has never had to complain of the paucity of subjects.

The Worth of a Laugh.

"A laugh," Lamb says, "is worth a hundred groans in any market," and he—brave, patient man that he was—proved the truth of this valuation in the heavy, heroically borne sorrows of his own life. There is no more pathetic figure than I among men of letters of this or any old age, and if ever man knew by bitter experience the force of Byron's lines—

And if I laugh at any mortal thing,
'Tis that I may not weep.

The last I may not weep.

Lamb did: his evidence on this point shou be conclusive.

THE PARK AVE. CHURCH.

THE DIFFICULTY WHICH BEGAN WITH ITS CONSTRUCTION.

But which Some of the Members Insist was Not Settled According to Principles of Equity—Unable to Settle it Themselves it is Now Submitted to Ousiders.

The skeleton in the closet of the Park Avenue Baptist church has so persistently and at most inconvenient times, exposed itself to public gaze, to the great annoyance of the members, that they have finally called in outsiders to help them bury it out of sight. Five of the most eminent of our citizens have been selected that the burial will be decently done. It is hoped that when this is done the skeleton may rest in peace forever and never again be seen as a terror to point the finger of scorn at the people who as a body at least seem to mean to be just.

Such tales as have reached the public ear have like ghost stories generally not lost anything in their journey. The efforts of the people to keep the skeleton shut has only tended to make the specters appear at more frequent intervals, and to shiver and the flesh crawls at the contemplation of what a horrible thing the reality must be.

The stories have not made the people appear in a very creditable light, it is true, but the facts, as obtained by a NEWS reporter, will, we think, show that they are not so much to blame as they have been represented to be. At least it will help the reader to understand what appears enough they decided to build a church.

When the Baptists in the eastern section of the city grew as they thought they should they decided to build a church.

The Rev. Dr. Lowrie, of Park avenue the gifted hymn writer and composer of "Shall We Gather at the River," and other hymns of world-wide fame, was the chosen pastor, and they all agreed to have an edifice that would be a credit to their taste and an ornament to the city.

They secured Mr. Baptiste, Mr. Charles Smith, an architect, residing in North Plainfield, to prepare the plans. He is the son-in-law of Rev. Dr. Yerkes, the esteemed pastor of the First Baptist church. Mr. Smith was new in the business, and it was thought the erection of such a church would give him a good start. He made plans which were supposed to come within the agreed limit of cost, and they appeared very fine on paper. They were approved and the work of construction given out by contract.

Isaac Welbourn got the contract for the mason work, and that for the wood-work was given to two carpenters, who were and are still members of the church.

The difficulty arose when the walls were partly built. It was found necessary to take them down again to prevent their falling. They were then rebuilt stronger.

It seems that the plans were imperfect and that the builders had to make so many alterations to make things fit that though they were permitted to bring in charges for extras, they lost money on the contract.

When the roof was got on, the criticisms to the effect that it was unsafe and likely some day to fall in and overwhelm all till the people worshiping there finally led the Building Committee to call in experts, who corroborated the conjectures. They also claimed that the way the roof was put together it would never carry the ten tons or so of slate required to cover it.

The experts advised as a remedy to insure perfect safety the introduction of iron girders or bars secretly bolted. The advice was acted upon, and these bars can be seen now extended across the interior. They are not at all much to the architectural beauty of the church, but they are necessary to its safety, and make it secure as may one with an intelligent eye may observe.

There were other alterations made in the construction as called for in the plans. For instance the staircases were made of wood instead of iron, and opera chairs were substituted for benches or pews.

When the time for settlement had come the architect to whom the payment of the bills was intrusted had the contracting carpenters meet at his house one evening and it is stated gave them to understand that they would have to accept a certain sum in full settlement of their claim, which he estimated would as they would have to wait his pleasure for payments. It would be better for them to do this. Under a misapprehension, they are said to claim, they signed a release and got the sum offered.

They say that in finishing the latter over, the carpenters found that there was work that inadvertently had not been charged for, and the bill is presented. This work, it was claimed, was outside of the contract, and done at the architect's orders. They called his attention to the matter. He is seems unintentional that in view of their release they had no further claims. They insisted that this was not just, and laid the matter before the Building Committee.

A majority of the committee, after see ing the release, took the ground that they had no right to go behind it. The minority insisted that though the release by its wording might be literally construed to give the builders no legal rights to recover, it was unchristian to take advantage of it, since it was signed under a misapprehension, and that was even a question if such a release would stand in law.

It was not the amount, as that was only $200, but simply, they claimed, a question of principle.

The matter was left open, and the church members took sides, until it threatened to disrupt the church. Rev. Dr. Lowrie, resigned and a new pastor, Rev. Asa B. Ditts, was chosen. He knew nothing about the difficulty but he listened, as the years rolled by, that the church was not prospering as he felt it should. Carbuncles on his body he had prayed for light. At last the light came, and he felt that a wrong had been done to two of the church members and that the church could never prosper until that wrong was righted.

Finally Archibald Smith, intending to reside at Bergen Point, asked for his letter from the Park avenue church to the church at the place referred to.

Mr. Smith's request was brought before the church meeting, and members, who objected until the matter was investigated. A committee was appointed. Most of these were new members. When they discovered what a mess it was, and that the unsophisticated carpenters, who had complained, had been treated right, although he only called for the appointment of a committee to investigate and report. Some maintained that he had taken sides and had thereby destroyed his usefulness. When Mr. Ditts heard this he promptly tendered his resignation. To the credit of the church, be it said, that they refused to accept it.

The pastor went in his resignation a second time to take effect the end of the present month, and, as there was no alternative, it was accepted last Wednesday night.

In the heat of discussion, at various meetings members of the church had used words of bitterness and reproach which tended only to widen the breach. Words once spoken can never be recalled, and these rankled, until it was clear the members could not take up the matter dispassionately.

Under these circumstances, at the meeting which accepted the pastor's resignation, it was voted that Messrs. Charles McCutchen, Martin L. Cooley and Morgan G. Taylor of North Plainfield, members of the First Baptist church, disinterested parties, be asked to investigate the matter. Mr. McCutchen's beautiful home was built by Mr. Smith. That was only a few years ago.

The gentlemen named were selected Mayor Gilbert and ex-Councilman Newhall have been added to the committee.

No objection could be made by some of the members that it is not right for the church, being a party in interest, to select all the arbitrators, while the other parties in interest have been permitted to select only one, as it is argued that the idea that these gentlemen are arbitrators.

THE NEWS understands that they are simply not acting as counsel, who, after investigating the matter, and counselling together, will, with unbiased judgment, recommend what ought to be done in justice to all concerned.

The NEWS, we believe, makes the case as clear as it ought not to take five minutes to arrive at a conclusion by a body of such intelligent and fair-minded men as we all know the persons named to be.

We have got our facts from various sources, and traced the difficulty as we believe to the fountain head. If we help the people to a prompt adjustment, we will be pleased. It will be seen, however, that some of the stories published elsewhere to their discredit are untrue. They have tried to do what they believed to be right. They have divided on the question of what was right.

A CRAZY WOMAN'S DEED.

SHE ATTEMPTED TO BURN CRESCENT AVE. CHURCH LAST NIGHT.

Though Only a Small Woman She Shows Wonderful Strength, and Knocks Over the Large Man who Discovered Her—The Services in Progress and the Congregation in Ignorance of the Danger—It Requires Three Men to Get Her to Jail—To be Sent to an Asylum.

Just after the services in the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church had commenced last evening, a woman with a kerosene oil can in one hand and a box of matches in the other invaded the parlor of the church and began pouring the contents on the floor which was carpeted. She was in the act of igniting the fluid with a match when she was discovered by James Stewart, who was assisting the janitor. Mr. Stewart asked her what she was doing. She inquired where the Rev. Dr. Richards was. Mr. Stewart informed her that he was conducting the services. She then said she was going to burn the church over his head.

Mr. Stewart caught hold of her and succeeded in ejecting her from the edifice. After he got her outside the door she lifted him bodily and threw him on his back over a stepping stone. He says she is a little woman, and that he had no idea that she had so much strength. He is a man over six feet tall and is very muscular.

He went to the front of the church and summoned the janitor. While he was gone the woman poured kerosene on the steps of the church and ignited it. She also saturated a tree alongside of the church and set it afire. The flames were extinguished with much difficulty.

The woman was then taken in charge by Mr. Stewart and Janitor Henry Clarkson. It was with much difficulty that they succeeded in getting her as far as North avenue. Policeman Cooney went to their assistance and she was eventually locked up. It was then ascertained that her name was Maria Meehan, and that she was a servant employed by the family of Mr. J. Clifford Wharton, who resides on the corner of the church she attempted to burn. She was, it is said, at one time in the employ of the Rev. Dr W. R. Richards, the pastor of the church, and later in the employ of Mr. Charles Lyman of Washington avenue.

She said that every time she heard that church bell ring she felt it pressing down on her brain. She also had a hallucination to the effect that City Judge Codington was trying to force her to eat meal when she did not want it. Policeman Hendrickson was detailed by Captain Grant to watch her during the night.

The physicians examined her this morning, pronounced her insane and she will be committed to an asylum.

Dr. Stillman brought Home a Wreck.

Dr. Charles H. Stillman, who caused a sensation here some two years ago by kidnapping his son from the Irving school, was brought to this city to-day on the 2.32 p. m. train. He was apparently an invalid. He was carried from the car in a chair, and thence to a coach by is brother, ex-City Judge Stillman, his brother-in-law, ex-Councilman J. K. Myers, and Baggagemaster Garretson. He was then taken to the home of Dr. Stillman's mother.

When last heard from Dr. Stillman and his son were in Chicago. The reporter was unable to ascertain the cause of his illness.

It was said that he had become a helpless invalid.

Dr Stillman figured in a sensation a few years ago which caused great grief to his kindred. He was one of the most noted of New York physicians. He had a large practice, and was one of the examining physicians of a leading New York life insurance company, when he met a woman in choice New York society. They became infatuated with each other. The woman knew he was married, and heeded not the pleadings of his wife, whom he had deserted.

Dr. Stillman's mother, brother and sister, all residing in Plainfield, sided against him and extended to the wife and their child a home and protection. Months afterward Dr. Stillman stole the child, as stated, from a public school and disappeared. He was recently heard of in Chicago, and now he comes home a wreck.

His father, the late Dr. Stillman, was the founder of our public schools, the second ward of Plainfield, and Stillman Music Hall is named after him. His brother-in-law is the treasurer of the American Bank Note Company of New York, and the whole family with the exception of the way-ward son, are honored and loved by all who know them, and are among the foremost of our people.

Born in Camp.

The gypsies encamped at Round Park on Park avenue, near the fair grounds, are rejoicing over the advent of a baby which was born in camp early yesterday morning. It is the first gypsy baby ever born in Plainfield. A number of persons visited the camp yesterday to see it.

Another Runaway.

A horse belonging to Mr. George Schlereth of West Second street became frightened shortly after seven o'clock this morning and ran away. The animal was caught at North avenue before it succeeded in wrecking the wagon.

—According to Edsall's announcement in another column, the first installment of his large matting purchase was received this morning.

SOMETHING ALARMING.

IF IT IS TRUE THAT BLACK DIPHTHERIA IS HERE.

The Terrible Disease Said to Have Been Brought by Italians.—The Health Department Investigating.

The residents in the vicinity of Liberty and Third streets are complaining that there are several cases of black diphtheria in that neighborhood. They claim that a house situated on Liberty street between Third street and the railroad has been leased to Italians and that some of the members of the family are ill with what is known as black diphtheria.

They are very indignant because the owner of the house leased it to those persons. A NEWS reporter visited the office of Health Inspector Dunham to ascertain the facts, but he was not in and would not return until late in the afternoon.

—Do you know of any newspaper whose advertisements are more neatly displayed than those of THE NEWS? It is famed all over the United States as a model of newspaper neatness. We have frequent calls from points remote from each other—sometimes as much so as Maine and California—desiring sample copies for other papers to remodel by or a specimen for new ones. This is very gratifying to us, though of course we do not follow the ideal to which we are always striving. THE NEWS advertising schedule has been for years a model in newspaper offices, because so equitable and accommodating to the wants of all classes.

—Seldom has the Church of the Holy Cross held within its walls a larger number of people than assembled there yesterday afternoon to listen to the monthly musical service by the surpliced choir, in accordance with the report-card published in Friday's edition of THE NEWS. Camp chairs were called into requisition and the several entrances to the church were blocked with people unable to obtain seats. The choruses and solos were delightfully executed, Master Herbert Schantz acquitting himself with great credit in his respective parts. These monthly musical services are becoming very popular. Much praise is due Choirmaster Miner and the choir at large for the admirable rendition of yesterday's programme.

EDITORIAL NOTES

American Newspaper Evolution.

Twenty-five years ago the large city newspaper had a circulation extending over a much greater area than it has today. The carrier delivered the morning newspaper from the city of the first class by the hundred copies to the city of the second class a hundred miles away. The old method has changed almost without our knowing it. The daily from the great city has indeed as large a circulation as formerly, but it is drawn inward and localized. The daily of the small city, on the other hand, crushed and overshadowed a quarter of a century ago by its great city rival, has loomed up in astonishing proportions and taken on new life. Newspaper evolution has been in the direction of localizing all journals and confining them to their own neighborhoods, at the same time that the daily of the smaller cities has increased in influence, wealth and circulation a hundredfold. It has practically driven out of its neighborhood the daily of the great city. At home it is king.

The newspaper of the small city now compares favorably in appearance and contents with the great daily as well. There are no handsomer or more newsy and able papers in this country than some of those published in the small cities.

This remarkable change is due to several reasons. First we have the general increase in wealth and population. Neighborhood papers get a more liberal pecuniary support. Second, the telegraph has increased enormously. Third, cheap and daily newspaper reading have increased enormously. The country merchant now has a rich and fashionable stock of goods, the farmer must have his daily paper. We are becoming a citified nation throughout. The public schools of America have so diffused desire for knowledge among us that we are a nation of newspaper readers.

Another reason for the enormously increased circulation of the country newspaper is the localization of its news. You can now pick up your familiar paper and find out what all the people you know are doing or are going to do. The character of the journal has changed completely. The first newspapers published in this country were filled with sermons, essays and sentimental poetry. News as a feature of the newspaper was scarcely thought of. Now nearly all is news—that is, all except advertisements. If that master of fine English, Joseph Addison, were on earth today, his essays would be thrown into the waste basket of any live newspaper in America. Readers want current events dished up for them daily, particularly the events of their own locality.

The leveling tendency between the newspaper of the large city and that of the small one is altogether in favor of the smaller. It has leveled up, so to speak, alongside the great daily. How greatly the syndicate system has contributed to this happy result it is impossible to calculate. A number of newspapers in different parts of the country combining to buy the same correspondence, the same news or the same original novel, thus lowering the share of the price paid by each to a comparative trifle, has brought the best journalistic achievement within reach of the small daily equally with the large one. There are not as good newspapers anywhere else in the world as in America, and the small ones are in many instances better than the large ones. While the large ones have remained stationary the small ones have improved immeasurably.

Good hops indeed is there in future for that most unfortunate class of human beings—idiots. Some years ago the idea occurred to a French anatomist that the reason some children were idiots was that their skulls, by some malformation, were too small to allow the brain to grow, hence the unfortunates remained always in the condition of infants. The small skull frequently consisted in the fact that the skull bones were grown together solid at birth, and had none of the soft places at the edge, which denote that the bones are connected by membranes, leaving room for the brain to expand. It seemed to the anatomist that if in early childhood the skull could be cut open in places, in the track of a furrow, opening the edges slightly, then would be room for the brain to grow. The operation has been performed successfully several times, transforming an idiot child into one having an equal chance in life with his fellows. The scalp is partially removed, the cuts made and dressed and the scalp laid carefully back and stitched down, the patient meanwhile, of course, being under the influence of ether. Among all the triumphs of modern surgery perhaps this is the greatest.

In one election district in Westchester county, N. Y., in a population of 1,100 there are seventy-six persons whose age averages seventy-seven years. Three of these hale old people are past ninety. Westchester county is a bad place to go to for persons who wish to get rid of life.

The president and four members of his cabinet, Noble, Foster, Rusk and Elkins, were born in Ohio, making this state not only the mother of presidents, but also the mother of cabinets, so to speak. Ohio seems a good state to go away from young.

TELLER FOR PRESIDENT.

He May Head a Free Coinage Party.

COLONEL POLK FOR SECOND PLACE

The Colorado Senator and the Famous Farmers' Alliance Man May Be Able to Carry Eleven States If Neither of the Great Parties Declares for Free Coinage.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Senators Teller Morgan, Daniel and Sanders are said to have taken an active part during the past week in the secret proceedings of the national silver committees, which has been in session for this city. Twenty states were represented, and it has developed that the meeting was of more than ordinary importance. It is stated by members of the committee that a last effort will be made by the free coinage advocates at their convention which has been called to meet in Washington on May 26, to induce one of the great political parties to incorporate in its platform a free coinage plank; that if efforts in that direction fail, the free coinage men will take steps to organize a third party, the basis of which will be the Farmers' Alliance and all devoted advocates of free silver that a convention will be called, at which Senator Teller will be nominated for president and Colonel Polk, of the Farmers' Alliance, for vice president, and a platform advocated containing but a single plank, providing for free and unlimited coinage of both gold and silver.

Could Carry Eleven States.

Friends of Senator Teller maintain that he will accept the nomination upon a strictly financial platform, provided the great par ties nominate men unfriendly to free coinage. A gentleman familiar with the movement, figures that Messrs. Teller and Polk would certainly be able to carry the states of Georgia, Alabama, North Carolina, South Carolina, Colorado, Nevada, Montana, Nebraska, Kansas, Washington; have an equal show with either Harrison or Cleveland in Missouri, Minnesota, Arkansas and Texas, and if unable to secure election direct, that they could at least have the choice of a president into the house of representatives, where it is claimed the free coinage candidate would be almost certain of election.

Alliance Officers to Meet.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The Farmers Alliance leaders have issued a call for a supplemental meeting, to be held at Birmingham, Ala., on Tuesday, May 3, 1892. The president and members of the executive committee of the following state alliances have been invited to attend: Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina, Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma and Tennessee. The call says that political contests threaten the destruction of the order. A lack of cohesive and uniform action by the order threatens the political slaughter of its friends. The emergency is said to be great, and the necessity for full and free council by all executive officers is declared greater than at any time in the history of the movement.

Ohio Republicans at Odds.

COLUMBUS, O., April 25.—The Republican state convention to nominate a state ticket and to select four delegates at large to the national convention at Minneapolis will meet in Cleveland Wednesday and Thursday. Nearly every Republican congressional district has three or four candidates for congress. These contests, together with the old fight between the Foraker and Sherman factions, will make an interesting convention.

It is generally conceded that Governor McKinley will be elected one of the delegates at large to Minneapolis by the Ohio delegation, and it is proposed to make Senator Sherman one of the other three delegates and Foraker another.

Is Reed Against Harrison?

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The Post says: "Last week ex-Speaker Reed held several conferences with anti-administration senators, and it is known that he has joined in active participation the movement to accomplish the defeat of President Harrison. Reed opposed the appointment of Fred Dow, editor of the Portland Express, as collector of customs at that port, while the two Maine senators united in a request to President Harrison to appoint Mr. Dow. Reed strenuously protested, without avail, and now he wants revenge."

Five Republics in Unio.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The plan for the reunion of the five republics of Central America into a single confederation has been again revived. Salvador has adopted a resolution empowering the president to take whatever peaceful steps he may deem advisable looking toward a reunion.

O'Brien Still at Large.

NEW YORK, April 25.—Tom O'Brien, the bunco king, is yet at large and the police have not yet succeeded in getting the slightest clew to his whereabouts. Dubler, the friend who is alleged to have aided him in escaping, is at the Gilsey House, but refuses to speak about the matter.

Bakers on Strike.

CLEVELAND, April 25.—Nearly 300 bakers of this city are out on a strike. They demand that they be exempted from night work and that the baking concerns shall employ no one except through the labor bureaus organized by the bakers.

Kaltenborn-Stachaus to Retire.

BERLIN, April 25.—It seems certain that General von Kaltenborn-Stachaus, war minister, will retire shortly. The reason assigned is illness.

AMONG HIS HEART BROTHERS.

That Is Where Theosophist Olcott Wishes to Live and Die.

CHICAGO, April 25.—The American section of the International Society of Theosophists held its annual session at the Palmer House declined to accept the resignation of Colonel H. S. Olcott as president of the organization, and instead of his desire that he continue in the position for life. The convention was participated in by over a hundred delegates, including many women, and the spirits of the departed Theosophist seemed to hover over it, lending around and exerting a benign influence upon the deliberations. Judge W. McBride, of Cincinnati, presided in the absence of G. R. S. Mead was received as a delegate from the European section, and a cablegram of greeting was presented from Annie Besant, of London, with letters breathing goodwill from India, Dublin, Barcelona and Amsterdam.

Colonel Olcott's letter of resignation was dated from Ootamacund, in India. In it he said among other things: "I have no intention of leaving India, nor any desire of living anywhere but in my home, and I wish to die among my heart brothers, the Asiatics. I shall always be ready to give all needful help to my successor. In parting with my colleagues I beg them to regard me, not as a person worthy of honor, but as a sinful man, erring often, but always trying to work his way upward and to help his fellow men."

The letter was supplemented by a report from a special committee that a canvass of the branches for a successor to Colonel Olcott had resulted in 26 votes for W. O. Judge, of New York. It was also recommended that each member of the society should make an liberal a contribution as possible toward a fund that should place Colonel Olcott beyond the reach of want for the future. It was also stated that in a few weeks he would retire to a little house of three rooms near Ootamacund, there to rest for the remainder of his days. The convention adopted lengthy resolutions requesting Colonel Olcott to reconsider his resignation on the ground that the time for his retirement had not arrived; that W. Q. Judge as president for life in the event of Colonel Olcott's refusal to longer serve, and re-electing Judge general secretary. The reports presented showed that there are now sixty branches of the Theosophical society in this country.

Mrs. Ensign Charges Conspiracy.

HARTFORD, April 25.—Mrs. Charles A. Ensign, of Simsbury, has brought suit against Lawyer H. W. Ely, of Westfield, Mass., and Elson Curtis, of Hartford, a former husband, charging them with having conspired to defraud her out of $6,000, which sum Ely, it is alleged, informed her she would be obliged to give as a trust fund for her two children at the time she obtained a divorce from Curtis.

WORLD'S FAIR NOTES.

The number of men working on the exposition buildings is now more than 7,000. On some of the buildings work is proceeding day and night.

Prince George of Wales, who, if he lives, will some day be king of England, will visit the exposition.

Mrs. Amy M. Beach, of Boston, will preside at the woman's congress exposition to be rendered at the dedication of the woman's building. Theodore Thomas will conduct the presentation.

The California fruit exhibit will be a representation in wax of 300 specimens of fruit which grow in the state. It will be prepared by a Kalamazoo woman.

Mrs. Phebe Hearst, of Alameda county, Cal., intends to send to the exposition a pumpkin weighing 238 pounds.

The women of Springfield and Sangamon county, Ills., are planning to make an extensive exhibit of Lincoln relics at the fair.

Miss Alice Ridcout, of San Francisco, has been awarded the contract for sculptural work on the woman's building.

The lady managers are in communication with Mrs. Humphrey Ward, requesting her to loan the original manuscript of her novel, "Robert Elsmere," for exhibition in the woman's building.

Under the auspices of the board of lady managers there has been formed the Woman's Dormitory association, the object of which is to furnish cheap and comfortable living quarters during the exposition to women visitors, particularly those of the industrial class and of limited means. Four huge hotels or dormitories will be erected. The site for one of them has been donated by George M. Pullman.

DUEL AMONG THE DUNES

Alleged Hostile Meeting Between Fox and Borrowe.

NEITHER OF THE FIGHTERS HIT

The Duelists Were Top Mats. Were Brave and Cool and Fired at Twelve Paces—It Is Said That Fox Had a Very Close Call.

NEW YORK, April 25.—Two New York newspapers publish long cable accounts of a duel alleged to have been fought between Edward Modoc Fox and Hallett Alsop Borrowe. The encounter is said to have taken place among some sand dunes on the Belgian coast, a few miles from Ostend. A peculiar feature of this alleged duel was the fact that the correspondent of these favored newspapers were invited to be present. According to these veracious chroniclers Borrowe and Fox were confined in Prison Albert coats, closely buttoned. They also were "top" hats. Both men are described as being exceedingly brave and cool. As a proof of this it is stated that after exchanging their first shot Fox stood perfectly still and Borrowe lighted a cigarette.

Neither Man Was Hit.

Neither of the men were hit at the first fire, but the second bullets were more effective, for Fox's ball said to have whistled past his ear, while Borrowe's bullet passed through Fox's coat, but did not touch his body or his "top" hat.

The men fired at the distance of twelve paces. They had remained out of bed all night, writing letters. There is not a mention of any wife, an omission probably due to the fact that neither Borrowe nor Fox had anything to bequeath.

Fox wrote a "deathbed" confession that he had gone into the Borrowe-Drayton quarrel at the instigation of Colonel Thomas Cochrane, correspondent of the Standard, and that his correspondence would be a big newspaper "scoop." No denial has as yet been received from the Texan colonel, as he is still hunting all over Europe in search of Fox, Borrowe and Drayton.

The "Liar" Still Stands.

The correspondents are very graphic in relating the conduct of the principals, for we are told that the day before the duel there was an accidental meeting, when "Borrowe's face was impassive, but Fox looked upon his prospective antagonist with ill concealed contempt." In a letter Borrowe had declared Fox to be a contemptible coward and a liar. After the "shooting" of Fox's coat Borrowe took back the charge of cowardice, leaving the "liar" to stand.

Police After the Duelists.

The Herald's London special declares that the duel did take place, and says that the police of Belgium and Holland have been looking all day for Messrs. Fox, Borrowe and the other members of the dueling party. They have been advised that the duel was taken seriously and are now desirous of making money for their respective states in the shape of fines. The minimum fee in Belgium is 1,000 francs and one month's imprisonment. There has been much excitement in the American colony in London over the affair.

The Sun's duel no one was hurt seems to be rather a disappointment to some persons, while the majority are glad that no casualty occurred. The principals for themselves will be satisfied that the best way possible. Both Fox and Borrowe said after the duel was over that they desired to kill each other, and at first they were sorry they did not do so, but later they changed their opinions.

Two minutes after Borrowe's bullet plowed Fox's coat he said to Fox: Hostile reporter, "I feel like a fool," by which he meant that he was sorry the shot had not been better aimed."

New York Thinks of It.

Much interest was excited in New York by the reports of the duel. A southern gentleman, who has been in several duels himself, was asked:

"Does the fact that Borrowe stood up and permitted Fox to shoot twice at him relieve him from the charge of cowardice put on him by Drayton's action?

"No; Mr. Borrowe's position is not altered in the minds of Mr. Drayton's friends. Now, the idea of Borrowe and Fox meeting on a field of honor makes me tired. There was no field of honor about it. Let's look at the whole thing:

"The correspondence between Borrowe and Drayton was made public by Fox. Fox declares it was made public by authority of Borrowe. Borrowe writes a letter and tells Fox he is a liar and a coward. Fox challenges him. They invite two reporters to see the fight, so that it shall have sufficient notoriety. They fight. Fox is shot through the coattails. Borrowe then takes back all that he said about Fox. Fox, wounded as he is, takes back nothing. Each declares his honor unstained. Each proclaims the other's courage and they retire. This is fine, isn't it? I do not believe that either man meant to shoot the other. If either did, then it is a question whether or not that man was not too frightened to shoot straight."

"Is an exchange of shots without the spilling of blood sufficient to wipe out a deliberate imputation of lying and cowardice?" asked the reporter.

"Well, in this case, remember, the original cause of the quarrel was a horse. That ought to be considered. I think that under the code, the gentlemen could agree that their honor was satisfied. But Fox, at last accounts, refused to accept the fact that Borrowe lied. I should say that as long as he continued saying that, so long would Borrowe have to keep shooting at him."

THE READING COMBINE.

How It Has Already Affected the Country.

THOUSANDS OF MEN ON HALF TIME.

It Is Believed That the Great Coal Syndicate Is About to Advance Prices 25 Per Cent.—Effect of the Pennsylvania Railroad's Fight Against Its Rival.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The Herald says: When the clever gentlemen of Philadelphia and New York devised and carried out the Reading deal they laid a heavy hand upon all the industrial and material interests of the east. The results of their performance are just beginning to appear. The consolidation has been in active existence three weeks. In the great Lehigh Valley coal region it has thrown 60,000 men out of their employment half of the time. In the flourishing cities of the lower valley it has deprived 2,000 workmen of half of their employment and saved from their wages $75,000.

An Advance in Price Certain.

Its restriction of the coal product is a sure forerunner of the coming advance of coal prices, which is to increase the cost of most everything in all the eastern states, the price of manufactures for the whole country and the cost of living for the people of New York. The only cause for all this disturbance of business and misfortune to the people, The Herald says, is an attempt to make an unprofitable railroad pay excessive dividends for two other railroads which it has no right to possess.

At Packerton, which is the first station below Mauch Chunk, the Lehigh Valley sorts and makes up all its coal trains from the various branches in the mountains. In the yards and the repair shops are 900 employes, who formerly received about $5,000 a week. Now they are receiving only $2,500. At Delano are 300 repair shop hands who formerly received $2,000 a week. Now they are receiving $1,000. At Weatherly there are 400 shop hands, whose $4,000 a week has been cut to $2,000. At Wilkesbarre there are 200 shop hands, whose $3,000 a week has been cut to $1,500. At Mahanoy City there are 200 shop hands, whose $3,000 a week has been cut to $1,000. At Sayre there are 400 shop hands, whose $4,000 has been cut to $2,000. Total number of shop hands and train shifters on the Lehigh Valley system thrown out of work half the time, 3,150. Total weekly reduction of expenses on this item alone about $21,000.

This has been going on three weeks. Total saving affected on this item, $60,000.

Adding what has been saved from train hands, bridge builders and materials makes, say, $75,000.

But take $75,000 every three weeks from the business of the cities along the valley largely dependent upon the railroads and railroad men, and it is no wonder that the people are alarmed. From one end of the valley to the other there are feelings of dismay and distrust. In the mining towns, where every kind of trade hangs absolutely upon miners' wages, the result of a 50 per cent. reduction in those wages is simply paralysis.

What the Rise May Be.

Coal is about ten cents a ton higher than a year ago on an average, taking in all the grades. This is not enough to pay the combination for its trouble. It would be but $500,000 on a total output of 50,000,000, or $375,000 for the combination. The general belief is that the advance will be twenty-five cents when made. That would mean increased receipts on every ton of coal mined and sold over 100 of thirty-five cents a ton. An increase like that would mean a fortune every month. Let us consider that the output for May will be restricted 2,500,000 tons. Of this the "combine" considers itself entitled to mine and sell 1,875,000 tons. If the price during May is advanced twenty-five cents then the increased revenue of the coal combine and the operators it controls will amount to $656,250.

The only obstacle in the way, so far as the local trade can see, is the attitude of the Pennsylvania in making the reduction in freight a week ago.

To Make Coal Scarce.

One of the largest middlemen, in speaking of the situation, said: "I do not know whether or not the Pennsylvania can prevent the advance in the price of coal. If they do, it is only to hurt the combine for the present. The Pennsylvania has been left out of the deal. They want to get in it. As soon as they are in a position to dictate terms we will see them accept the terms; then every thing will be at peace, and all the companies will divide the profits. But that is far in the distance. Now, you know that the favorite way of the combine to keep up prices will be to make coal scarce.

"They will simply stop mining all through the anthracite region in order to restrict production. Of course the 7 per cent. of output which has been allowed the Pennsylvania is not enough to seriously disturb the market even if sold lower than the combination coal is sold, but it is not likely it would be sold lower. But if the mines which the Pennsylvania reaches continue on full time while the others are shut down or so to largely increase the Pennsylvania percentage, that would stir things up and keep the combination just where the Pennsylvania recently protested its freight tolls recently threw it."

The Herald says that when the owners of the unprofitable Philadelphia and Reading railroad got possession of the Lehigh Valley and the Central of New Jersey they guaranteed large dividends on the stocks of the consolidated lines. To secure the money for these dividends, to say nothing of the interest on bonded debts and other matters, it is necessary that the three roads be made to earn very much more than they have earned heretofore, hence the cut down in time at various shops and mines and the limitation of the coal output.

The Herald says that the next step will be to lay the whole country under tribute, increase the cost of manufacturing and therefore the price of manufactures and add to the expenses of every household in the eastern states. The depressing fact about all this is that it can serve no other end but the enrichment of a few men already far beyond the possible reach of want.

A Bloodless Duel Recalled.

PHILADELPHIA, April 25.—John G. Heckscher and Mrs. Mary M. Travers, of New York, were married at the Hotel Stratford by the Rev. Thomas A. Hoyt. Mrs. Travers was married when very young to Henry Winthrop Gray, a well known member of New York society. The couple separated, and Gray and Heckscher fought a bloodless duel in Canada. Gray claimed that the indictment of Mrs. Gray had been alleged and that Heckscher, who was a married man at the time, was the source of all the trouble. Mrs. Heckscher is the daughter of the late W. R. Travers.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

HANS ANDERSEN.

Anecdotes of the Poet Story Teller—Beloved of Young and Old.

The "fairy story" of Hans Christian Anderson's life has already been told in his own charmingly simple way. His early years were spent in a home of humble toil on the Island of Funen, and he only won his way to ease and fame after long and desperate struggles for a livelihood in Copenhagen. A collection of his letters has just been published, which shows that whether he is writing to the great ones of the earth, to kings, queens, grand dukes, to old friends or to an unknown little Scotch child, he is always the same loving, child-like, simple and sincere man, just what the many young readers of his works have no doubt imagined him to be.

Enthusiastic affection was lavished upon the poet by all classes of people in his native country, from kings and princes to the poor children in the streets, who used to flock around him as he walked about the town. Toward the end of his life it was said he used to show a little vexation if any one, even a stranger, addressed him otherwise than as "Dear And'sen." "There goes 'Dear And'sen," he was accustomed to hear his fellow townsmen, large and small, say as he passed by, and it was in this familiar fashion that he was spoken to by young and old.

At the houses of his friends he was petted like a spoiled child, as well as looked up to with the respect due to his genius. The best armchair was always kept for him, and on all occasions he was helped first at table. His extreme dejection when this privilege was once accidentally accorded to a young lady, a visitor from England, has been amusingly related. The slip had to be repaired at once and explained to the amused and bewildered guest. "Dear And'sen's" spirits promptly recovered and he rewarded the involuntary offender by telling her fairy stories in the manner all his own through a long summer afternoon.

Though he had lived out his threescore and ten years, his readers, both young and old, felt as if they had lost a friend when they heard of the death of the poet story teller at Copenhagen in August, 1875.

Two Ways.

"Fallen Brown and Tumbled Cross,"
Said grandma to my one day,
"Were girls who went to school to me
When I taught down in Bray.

"The scholar never sewed on long seams then,
Each afternoon their study;
I used to mark off with a pin,
As to their seats they went.

"Thankful would take her seam between
Her thumb and finger—so,
And put each stitch in straight and true,
Her face all of a glow.

"Saline, with a frowning look,
Would measure off her length,
And fretting o'er her stent, would lose
Half of her time and strength.

"Thankful's was always finished first,
And this the reason why,
Her thoughts were on the 'stitch in time,'
Not those of by and by.

"And I have often thought since then
A lesson I've learned way,
And wish we all could do our work
In short lengths, day by day."
—Christian at Work.

The Bird of Wisdom.

Owls are found in all parts of the world, and there are many kinds of owls, differing in size and color, but not much in habit. Our cut shows one of the smaller species.

They are all grave, majestic looking creatures, that hide in lonely places during the day and come out at night to look for such prey as mice, small birds, or any animal food of which they can get hold. They never by any chance look as if they were happy, but they always look wise, and you know, probably, that in olden times the Greeks considered the owl a sacred bird, and it was said to be a special favorite of the goddess of wisdom, Athene. There is something attractively mysterious about an owl, and when one of the big ones, known as barn owls, or screech owls, flies noiselessly through the air on a warm summer night, uttering a weird and mournful cry, one has almost the feeling, as one stands and watches it, as if one had suddenly got into quite a strange world. In the woods after dark one may often hear owls call to each other, or listen to the queer little attempts at shrieking by the owlets.

One of the most curious of North American species is the burrowing owl, which inhabits a hole in the ground. If necessary it will make its own burrow, but prefer to take possession of that of the prairie dog.

OH, HOUSE OF MANY MANSIONS.

Oh, house of many mansions,
Where the soul forever resides,
And ever are all the doors
Upon the other side.

The portals are golden, golden,
And those who enter in Shall know no more of sorrow,
Of sickness or of sin.

Oh, house of many mansions,
My weary spirit waits
And longs to join the throngs
Within the golden gates.

Who enter through the portals,
The mansions of the blest;
Who commune with the angels,
And find in them their rest.

Thy walls are not of marble,
Oh, house not built with hands;
I sigh for thee while waiting
Within these border lands.

I know that but in dying
The threshold be crossed o'er;
There shall be no more sorrow
In the forevermore.

HOME TRAINING.

Do We Give Our Children Enough Sympathy and Consideration?

It is not unusual to hear the mothers of grown families assert that their children when young never disobeyed them. It is only charitable to suppose that they must have forgotten many little everyday occurrences, but it is nevertheless a fact that those same children have caused young mothers much unhappiness. The higher education of home discipline is to train a child to self government, and the question sometimes arises whether implicit obedience in children always generates characters best fitted to withstand temptation.

That there is nothing so sweet and lovable or that adds more to the comfort and happiness of parents than a dutiful, obedient child, must be counted by every observer of domestic life. That a restless, disobedient child is a thorn in the flesh to its parents is equally true, but any number of cases could be cited where these same disobedient children have become men and women possessing strict uprightness and principle. It is quite possible to teach a child at a very early age that its faults and failings only react upon itself. If it will play with the fire it is wisdom sometimes to allow it to burn its fingers. But to see every fault (unless it has a grievous one) is no doubt often unwise, and that is why too little training often seems to bring about better results than the use of excessive parental authority.

The rule of gentle persuasion also seems to fail with some temperaments, and a sound spanking may ride over present difficulties; but a sensible parent looks further than the mere present, and trains a child for self government and future usefulness. "Put yourself in his place" is the golden rule of home. Mrs. Gladstone in Ladies' Home Journal.

Chocolate Sandwiches Are Dainty.

Chocolate sandwiches are a variation which may be new to some readers. They are made with grated vanilla chocolate between the thin layers of buttered bread. The filling should be rather generous in taste of it and the sandwiches should be eaten as soon as prepared.

Uses of Kerosene.

Kerosene will make a tin kettle as bright as new. Wet a flannel cloth and rub with it. Kerosene will also remove stains and dirt from varnished furniture.—New York Journal.

WHY IS THIS?

Three years ago the Duluth Imperial Mills made 500 barrels of flour a day.

Now they make 5000 barrels daily.

THE HOUSEHOLD

FANCY WORK.

Fashionable Modes of Making and Decorating Favorite Articles.

The long gloves and the handkerchief and sightly scarf are all in vogue this season with a fetching air of their own, unless the latter are of fancy cotton or very pretty crashes, and then plain colored cotton is used. At many smart weddings the glove, handkerchief and large sightly scarf, with the square toilet cushion and toilet tray for the brushes and combs are all given together as one present or as the joint offering of several friends, and are all of white satin, trimmed with a frill of soft pongee silk and ornamented with a spray of orange flowers, fruit or leaves worked in silk.

Many of the large package bags have cord run through small rings, placed at distances outside the bag, instead of drawstrings run inside. The large fancy silk handkerchiefs make beautiful bags, with the corners drawn together to form four overhanging leaves, a narrow frill of pongee silk edging them. The rings are placed just outside the matting all round, so that when closed the frill forms a sort of rose. Some small opera glass bags, made in much the same style, are edged with feather trimming or the new cut silk, which looks like feathers.

Exceptionally attractive tablecloths and doilies have the drawn linen borders outlined with red or blue. Some of these are edged with lace; others have merely a broad hem. In some examples floral sprays are scattered all over the material worked in white, but outlined with a color, or sometimes embroidered in a uniform tone of silk. One of these in yellow silk shows butterflies and flowers scattered all over it.

Quilted or embroidered satin or plush piano keyboard mats are fashionable now. They are exactly the size of the keyboard and remain there when the piano is open and shut. They have a layer of wadding between the upper and under satin and are sometimes edged with silk cord.

Eggs for Easter Day Breakfast.

Fried Eggs with Pickles—Put enough butter, lard or ham fat in a hot frying pan to entirely cover the bottom. Break as many eggs as it will hold, dust them with pepper and salt, cook them to the required degree and put on a hot white meat platter; chop a large pickle finely and put it into the frying pan for one minute after the eggs have been taken up, then put it on them and serve them at once.

Baked Eggs—Separate the whites and yolks of six eggs, putting each yolk by itself in a cup and the whites all together in a bowl. Put all the eggs in a broken bowl and beat the whites to a stiff froth, after adding to them a saltspoonful of salt and one of a saltspoon of pepper; spread them in a buttered dish, slip the yolks on top, laying them a little apart, and bake for five minutes in a hot oven, or until they are light brown; dust pepper and salt over the top and serve them hot.

Eggs a la Suisse—Spread the bottom of a dish with two ounces of fresh butter; cover this with grated cheese, break eight whole eggs upon the cheese without breaking the yolks. Season with red pepper and salt if necessary; pour a little cream on the surface, strew about two ounces of grated cheese on the top and set the eggs in a moderate oven for about a quarter of an hour. Pass a hot salamander over the top to brown it.

Scrambled Eggs—Four eggs, one tablespoonful of butter, half a teaspoonful of salt. Break the eggs and add the salt to them. Melt the butter in a saucepan. Turn in the beaten eggs, stir quickly over a hot fire for one minute and serve.

A Fireplace Arrangement.

A consistent fireplace, such as is sometimes found in old fashioned houses, is not an easy thing to deal with, but our cut shows an effective way of managing it (without attempting to alter the fireplace itself) by having an overmantel and introducing an extra panel on one side.

This overmantel need not be costly; it can be made in white wood and painted to match the rest of the woodwork. A picture can be introduced in the center instead of a mirror, unless you prefer the latter. The alterations here suggested recently helped in the transformation of a very plain and rather awkward looking bedroom into a delightful little guest chamber.

Cocoanut Meringues.

Beat the whites of four eggs till they are a stiff froth, then stir to them as quickly and lightly as possible one-half pound of powdered sugar and one-quarter pound of freshly grated cocoanut, with a wooden spoon; rub a warmed baking tin with white wax and put the meringue mixture on this, either by means of a forcing bag or a spoon, and bake them in a cool oven till the meringues are a pale fawn shade and quite dry and crisp; this will take about a couple of hours. The meringues should be dusted with icing sugar when they are placed in the oven, and a piece of white paper should be laid over them when they begin to color to prevent their being too deep a shade.

A Water Glass Candle Holder.

In a tumbler filled with water a piece of a paraffin candle is placed after having been supported by a match stuck in the lower end to keep the candle floating. The advantage of this light is that it burns steadily, being below the line of any draft, and when it is burned out it is extinguished by the water, leaving no smoke. As the candle burns down in the ordinary light it flickers and at last gives out an odor of burning grease, which is very unpleasant to the nick. The water glass candle holder prevents all this, says The Industrial World.

—The City Common Council will meet in regular session next Monday evening at eight o'clock.

—The game of base ball to be played next Saturday will be called at 3.45 p. m. The Crescents will wear new uniforms.

—The Star-Athletics of this city defeated the Stars in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon by a score of 16 to 9.

—A horse belonging to Garrett Q. Packer of Park avenue ran away last night and wrecked one of the wheels of the wagon.

—Mr. Beach, agent for the Arnold cooker, will cook another entire dinner in the cooker Wednesday, at three p. m. He invites all to attend.

—The monthly business meeting of the Woman's Temperance Aid Society will be held on Thursday at 2.30 o'clock in the parlors of Reform Hall.

—Delegates from Plainfield and North Plainfield will attend the Republican State Convention at the Taylor Opera House, Trenton, to-morrow at 12 o'clock noon.

—Warrants are to be issued for two arrests for fast driving. It is alleged that the alleged offenders drove their horses very fast on West Second street yesterday afternoon.

—A fire in the chimney of the residence of Mr. A. C. Baldwin of Park avenue caused an alarm to be sounded from box No. 36 this morning. The department responded. Very little damage resulted.

—Warren Engine Company No. 1 took their apparatus out for a "wash" last evening. While the engine was working, one of the tubes in the boiler burst, and the steamer is now laid up for repairs.

—Ex-Policeman Robert Randolph reports that a horse ran away on East Third street yesterday afternoon and wrecked the vehicle to which it was attached. He said he did not know the name of the owner of the horse.

—The sad spectacle of a drunken woman was witnessed on Somerset street last evening about six o'clock. She turned into Green Brook road and with much difficulty wended her way up the mountain side, toward her habitation.

—Mr. J. G. Miller, the druggist, desires us to say that there is no truth in the statement in another paper that he had sold out his business. Parties desired to purchase his place, he says, and negotiations were pending, but were not consummated, because he was not satisfied with the security.

—The "Ty" will hold their annual meeting next Friday afternoon, May 6, at four o'clock, in their new rooms in the Crescent building. Miss Campbell of New Brunswick will be with them, and they cordially invite the members of the W. C. T. U. and all other friends who are interested, to be present at this meeting.

—"Gentle" Willie Murphy, the well-known ball player, who is to play with the Crescents this season, arrived yesterday from Connecticut where he has been spending six weeks. He claims to be in good condition and says he is going to try his best to win the medal offered by Mr. Frank Linke to the player making the best average during the season.

—The remains of the bodies of about 200 persons, mostly soldiers in the Revolution army who died of smallpox in the Winter of 1776-80, have been removed from the old Baptist church burying ground in Morristown to Evergreen cemetery. The church was used as a hospital when the continental army had its headquarters there, and hundreds of the brave patriots died within its walls.

—The Pennsylvania Railroad Company announces that for the benefit of visitors to the Republican State Convention to be held at Trenton, Wednesday, April 27th, excursion tickets will be sold from all principal stations on the United Railroads of New Jersey Division to Trenton and return at the rate of two cents per mile. The tickets will be sold April 26th, and 27th, valid for return until April 28, 1892.

—It has been ascertained since yesterday that the young woman who attempted to set fire to the Crescent avenue church on Sunday evening was never in the employ of the Rev. Dr. Richards, the pastor of the church. When she was described to Dr. Richards he is reported to have said to the group of people, "Why that girl was formerly in my employ and she was laboring under the hallucination that I was trying to kill her." THE NEWS reporter interviewed Mr. Stewart, the janitor of the church, shortly after the incendiary attempt and he said that Dr. Richards told him that he thought she was a girl who had been formerly employed by him. The doctor has since satisfied himself that he was mistaken.

—This State continues to be overrun with a horde of agents of irresponsible life insurance companies who effect insurances upon the lives of aged and feeble persons, in favor of those who take out the policies. Their operations are mostly among the poorer classes in each community who are not likely to look up the standing of the companies with which they do business. When a policy becomes payable it is one of the practices of the agents to force a compromise for a small amount under various pretexts of a more or less reprehensible character. In short, it is a swindle by which the agents first work upon the greed of their victims, and then upon them out of the results of the transaction. The scheme is a distinct revival of the "graveyard" insurance plants of a few years ago.

NO DIPHTHERIA.

Only a Boy with a Sore Throat Discovered.

A section hand, employed on the Central railroad, and residing on Liberty street, in the vicinity of some Italians he has under him, was met by a NEWS reporter Sunday afternoon searching for the Health Inspector respecting the Italians, among whom he said black diptheria had broken out.

Yesterday, after reading the rumors published in THE NEWS, ex-Mayor Cockefelow, President of the Board of Health, and City Physician Ellis visited the locality and found an Italian boy suffering with a bad cold which had settled in his throat. The lad had a very sore throat, but there was not observed the slightest indications of diptheria of any kind.

A report of THE NEWS visited the house to-day and ascertained that three children had been sick with throat troubles but that the illness was not of a serious nature.

A Probably Fatal Fall.

George Apgar, residing in Dunellen, while at work on a building at that place this morning, either slipped, or the part of the scaffolding he was on, broke, and he fell headforemost to the ground, eighteen feet below.

A large mortar-box was directly beneath, and the young man struck on its edges, first his head and then his back. He lay unconscious after the fall and was carried to his home.

He is suffering from concussion of the brain and internal injuries.

A Runaway.

A horse attached to a light wagon became frightened on Park avenue at about four o'clock yesterday afternoon and ran away. The man who was driving the frightened animal, jumped out of the wagon in front of Dalzhon's jewelry store. He was unhurt. When the horse turned into Front street the wagon collided with a truck belonging to George Rickert. One of the wheels of the vehicle was badly wrecked.

The Anniversary.

Queen City Lodge No. 298, Independent Order of Odd Fellows, celebrated the anniversary of Odd Fellowship last evening in their rooms on West Second street. Past Grand Master Howard Sutphen of Flemington was present and delivered an address which was very interesting to the members. At the conclusion of the meeting the membership took of a banquet. The affair was a very enjoyable one.

Woman Foreign Missionary Society.

The annual meeting of the East New Jersey Association of the Woman's Baptist Foreign Missionary Society will be held in the First Baptist church at Elizabeth on Friday. It will be an all day meeting. Mrs. Ward, corresponding secretary of the Board, and Mrs. Luther, of Newark, are expected to be present and make addresses.

Taken to the Asylum.

Captain Grant and Policeman Cooney this morning took Maria Meeker to the county asylum at Morristown, she having been declared insane, as reported in yesterday's NEWS, by the examining physicians, Drs. Ellis and Fritts. It will be remembered that she attempted to set fire to the Crescent avenue church.

—The Y. M. C. I. A. has an excellent bowling team and will give the other clubs in the Central League a hard race for the pennant.—Elizabeth Herald.

NEW BORN CHILD FOUND

DROWNED IN GREEN BROOK THIS AFTERNOON.

Two Boys Saw It While Sauntering Along the Brook, and Gave the Alarm—Who Drowned It?

Two boys named Wilson and McCloy about this afternoon found a new born child in Greenbrook near the Water street bridge. Infanticide is suspected.

Dr. Carman and other Borough members of the Borough Board of Health viewed the remains.

It is not known how long the child had been in the water.

A paper dated April 16th, was found near the body.

In all probability the doctors will give instructions to have the child interred immediately.

The child when found was sewed up in a sheet.

A VISIT FROM THE VISITOR.

Interesting Paragraphs Culled from Pastor Mitchell's Paper.

Mrs. Roberts, 27 West Front street, is still very ill with heart trouble.

Mrs. Doane is gaining some strength and hopes to be at church again before long.

Mrs. Charles R. Mitchell is home again after several weeks' absence in Pittsburgh and Geneva.

That mock trial is to take place at next regular meeting of Epworth League, May 4.

We are glad to welcome Mr. Lacky and family, 30 Westervelt avenue, who come to us from Westfield.

Henry M. Carroll, LL.D., was ordained a deacon by Bishop Bowman at the last session of our Conference.

The Rev. Herbert Walker, son-in-law of James Mitchell, Esq., is now stationed at St. Luke's M. E. church, New York city.

Our congregational singing is improving. The organist, Mr. Dale, after long experience in Gilmore's band, is fully competent. Let all the people sing.

Tuesday evening, April 26, in Park Place chapel, Albert Tutt will give magic lantern views of Baltimore and Washington, for the benefit of the Ladies' Aid society.

A recent letter from J. W. Jackson brings the tidings of good health and content and wife, and their delight with the beauties and glories of California. They expect to return about the first of May.

S. E. Birdsall and family have removed from the city, we hope only temporarily. Mr. Birdsall has long been one of our most efficient workers. He and his excellent family have many warm friends in this city.

Thursday evening, April 7, at 202 West 42nd street, New York city, Charles Stuart Smilack and Miss Edith Kathine Ingham were united in marriage by the pastor assisted by the Rev. J. E. Price, D. D. The young couple received many congratulations and valuable presents. They were boarding at present at 19 Craig place, but will soon begin housekeeping at Mrs. Smilack re-sprained her ankle the other day, and will not be out for a week or two.

The following amounts were raised last year by our church for the various benevolent enterprises and forwarded to the proper boards. Bible society, $25; church extension, $125; Sunday-school union, $25; tract society, $25; education society, $25; freedman's aid, $50; edmonton, $60. About $700 in money and supplies was raised by the women's foreign and home missionary societies, also over $600 for the Brooklyn hospital and other benevolences.

"Trifles," by Dr. Deems.

The work of Rev. Dr. Deems, of New York, to alleviate the distress of the weak and lowly, won for him the substantial help of the strong and exalted. His good seed sown at his impromptu midnight mission bore such excellent fruit that out of it grew the handsome Church of the Strangers, in New York, to which the Vanderbilts alone contributed $80,000, a part of a large fund to help on the special and noble work.

Dr. Deems, who is among the most entertaining and instructive speakers living, has been secured to give the final lecture of the library course, which is to take place on the evening of Thursday, May 5th. His subject will be "Trifles." This lecture will be in lieu of the one which was to have been delivered by Bishop Vincent. While it is to be regretted that the people of Plainfield will be denied the privilege of hearing the eloquent Bishop, it will be no less rare a privilege to hear Dr. Deems. Make a note of the date, my friend, and you will not regret it. It is to be given at the Casino.

Frightened a Horse.

Miss Powers of South Plainfield had quite a thrilling experience this morning. She was seated in her father's milk wagon on West Front street when the lines broke and she was returning from the fire. The continuous ringing of the bell frightened the horse and it started to run away. The young girl clung pluckily to the reins and succeeded in stopping the horse at the corner of Madison and Second street.

She says that as soon as the persons on the wagon saw that the horse was frightened they rang the bell more violently than before and that after she had succeeded in stopping the horse she was returning they all laughed at her. Her father made a complaint to Assistant Chief Martin.

Lost a Cap.

Gazelle Engine Company No. 1 returned to this city from the fire at Westfield yesterday afternoon at about three o'clock. On the way to the fire one of the caps on the wheels of the engine was lost and has not as yet been recovered. Any person returning it will receive the thanks of the company. After the fire the members of Gazelle Company were entertained by the Westfield firemen.

STATE NEWS

The New Jersey Medical Society will hold its annual convention at Atlantic City, June 28 and 29.

It is reported that at their meeting next week the Jersey City Police Commissioners will follow the lead of the New York commissioners by making wholesale transfers of the Police Captains and Sergeants of the city.

The Joint Teachers' Institute for the Counties of Mercer, Burlington and Ocean will take place in Mount Holly, May 9, 10 and 11. In the elaborate programme arranged is an illustrated lecture on the sun by Professor Young of Princeton.

At the meeting of the Presbytery of New Brunswick Friday the following were granted full licenses to preach: Warren S. Dunham, Indiana; Samuel J. Onque, New Jersey; Frederick Perkins, Pennsylvania, and John A. Terhune, New Jersey. Mr. Dunham will be ordained as an evangelist to labor in the mission work of Dr. John Hall's church in New York City.

Long-Lived People.

It will be seen by the following that Plainfield has not got a monopoly of all the old people in the world, although many of our people attain a ripe old age, largely on account of our healthful climate:

Patrick Sears, of Howard county, Ind., aged 106 years, has been a church member 100 years.

Aunt Sally Smith, a colored woman of Chicago, was 100 years old on March 27th. She was seventy years a slave.

Mrs. Charlotte Post Sisson, who died in New York city at the age of 101 years, retained her faculties to the last.

Mrs. Anna Catherine Sharp, of Philadelphia, and Mrs. Lucy Evans, of Independence, Mo., are two splendid examples of longevity. The former is being recently celebrated her one hundred and fourteenth and the other her one hundred and sixth birthday.

Anton Jurisich, a peasant who still labors in the vineyards of Dremlitz, in the district of Agram, in Hungarian, has in his possession documents which together with his personal experience, afford strong proof that he is entitled, for the belief that he is 130 years old.

Alexander Hockaday, of Rose River Township, Ind., is 122 years old. He is the father of twelve children, and his wife, who is ninety years his junior, is still living. Mr. Hockaday never took but one dose of medicine in his life and did not take that until he was more than 100 years old. He is hale and hearty and pids fair to live several years yet.

Mrs. Priscilla Stevenson, of Georgia, who is said to be 113 years old, has 1,276 descendants living, of whom 28 are great-grandchildren.

$125,000 Fire Near Glenmore.

Glenmore, a small station near Pennington, on the Bound Brook railroad, was the scene of a devastating fire Sunday night, which destroyed $125,000 worth of property belonging to Edward S. Wells, principally in the shape of barns and stables.

The property that was burned includes all the barns, stables, and other outbuildings of Mr. Wells's place, and the best herd of high-priced horses and valuable carriages owned in this section seems to be almost entirely destroyed in the fire. Several sleighs were also consumed.

Among the horses burned was the well-known stallion, Prince Allen, for which Mr. Wells placed a value of $20,000. Apart from this there were other horses burned, all of which were high-priced stock.

The fire broke about seven o'clock and raged with great fury. Hundreds of people from Pennington and surrounding country visited the scene of the conflagration, but were powerless to render any assistance, owing to the headway the fire had gained from the absence of any fire engine.

The origin of the fire is unknown, other than that it must be of incendiary origin.

Observing Memorial Day.

At a meeting of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, held last evening, the following preamble and resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, The Councils of the City and Borough have for several years appropriated enough funds to enable this post to perform in a creditable manner the services of Memorial Day; and

Whereas, They (the Councils) have thought proper to divide such appropriation this year, and to give to each of this city, therefore, be it

Resolved, That Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, observe the day as formerly, accepting from the Councils such amounts as they may see fit to appropriate, depending upon voluntary contributions from our members and a loyal and generous public who have heretofore been liberal.

The Memorial Detail has invited Company H., 2d N. J., N. G., Capt. Snowden Cook, commanding, and Lodi's Cadets to act as escorts on May 30th. Memorial Day will be observed in the usual manner.

DISGRACEFUL SIGHTS.

Sacrilege and Cruelty that the Police Ought to Stop.

The splendid new county roads are not an unmixed blessing. While they furnish a delightful driveway for pleasure and riding and driving on Sundays, they also furnish a rendezvous ground for drunken roughs, so many of the vile resort, and annoy and disgust the residents along the roads. Sunday afternoon and evening of the poor beasts there are cruel and abused unmercifully.—Elizabeth Journal.

At John Jacob Astor's house, 871 Fifth avenue, it was said that the news of Mr. Astor's death was received by cable late last night. The butler said the news was a great shock to the family.

"Mr. Astor had been ill with congestion of the lungs," he continued, "but his condition was not considered critical.

"He died at 11 o'clock last night and the news was immediately cabled to Mr. John Jacob Astor."

Assaulted a Friend.

It is reported that Mrs. Jacob Schneider of Somerset street assaulted one of the members of the Salvation Army last evening, by striking her in the face with her fist. EDITORIAL NOTES

In this bad world everybody who submits to be kept down always is kept down.

Margaret Mase, sixty years old, living three miles from a railway station, boasts that she has never seen a train of cars. Margaret must be careful never to look at one now, or she will lose the only claim to distinction she has.

Japan is learning civilization rapidly. The Third National bank of Japan, at Tokio, with branches in three other places, has failed because the directors went into grain speculations. The only difference was that the grain in this case was rice instead of wheat.

A joint resolution has passed congress and been approved "to encourage the establishment and endowment of institutions of learning at the national capital by destining the policy of the government with reference to the use of its literary and scientific collections by students." Will some one kindly tell us what this means?

The largest wooden bridge in the world is that at Two Medicine, on the St. Paul and Manitoba railway. It is 731 feet long and 211 feet above the water. A wooden bridge was 750,000 feet of lumber, and any one piece can be removed and replaced when worn out without disturbing the rest. A curious reason for building a wooden bridge instead of an iron one is given. It is that it would take too long to wait for an iron bridge, as the road was wanted in a hurry.

To Her Beloved Editor.

A Roman lady died lately who had been a faithful reader of one certain newspaper most of her lifetime. She was a very intelligent woman indeed. She possessed a good taste and intuitive discrimination rare even among women. She likewise appreciated talent when she saw it to an extent such as is given to few mortals.

Therefore she willed all her fortune to the writer of the editorials which had given her so much help. In return for the good he had unconsciously done her during so many years, she did him a very great good indeed. Rest to her soul, and sweet happiness eternal in paradise be hers. Go thou and do likewise.

But why not? It is true the editor of a newspaper is not now the impecunious individual he used to be, thanks to his own talent and shrewdness. Country editors had it the toughest in the old time, but even the country editor no longer devotes half a column of thanks to the woman who sends him a mince pie. Not he. He holds up his head as a man among men, and asks no favors that he cannot return. But it is not uncommon for individuals to give a bequest to the faithful doctor, who has been able perhaps to make life a little easier for them. It is really common for both men and women in their wills to remember handsomely their beloved pastor. Why not also their beloved editor? Perhaps this Italian lady's example will become catching.

A Southern View of It.

The white race never was ruled by any other one, therefore it never will be, writes the effect Mr. Thomas Nelson Page in The North American Review. Mr. Page, the author of "Marse Chan," here sets his mind seriously to the discussion of the negro question. His view is substantially that of all southerners. He agrees with Professor Bryce that the question of what to do with the negro in the south is the most serious problem confronting United States.

But Mr. Page does not believe the black man is capable of receiving the white man's civilization. Here he may be right, for no two races ever did develop precisely the same civilization. The negro has certainly had a fair chance in New England, we are told, yet what are the blacks doing there after all these years of education and public sympathy? They are barbers, shoeblacks, whitewashers and chimney sweeps, but never a merchant or a banker.

In countries of their own, where they have had every chance and encouragement for reaching the highest results of modern development, they have stood still or gone backward, says Mr. Page. In Liberia they seem to be lapsing into the condition of the barbarians around them. In beautiful Santo Domingo, the Black Republic, voodoo worship is springing up and "negresses are cooking their bananas amid the ruins of the best houses of the capital." Mr. Page thinks that in this country, in cities and neighborhoods where the negroes are in constant contact with the whites, they are improving, but where they are left to themselves, among only people of their own color, they do not advance a peg.

Mr. Page believes in educating the negro, but he would not let him vote till he is educated. As to the future of the negro in America, Mr. Page says he will disappear. His will in time be crowded out by the white man. Some of the blacks will go to Africa, part to Mexico and South America. The conditions of life will become harder and the struggle for existence fiercer, and those that are left will simply give up and disappear, "a portion by absorption into the stronger race, the residue by perishing under conditions of life unsuited to them."

REVENGE FOR RAVACHOL

The Wineshop Where He Was Arrested Blown Up.

PROPRIETOR VERY'S LIFE TAKEN

Ten of the Patrons of the Famous Place Were Severely Injured—Paris in a State of Panic on the Day of Anarchist Ravachol's Trial.

PARIS, April 26.—An explosion occurred last evening in the entrance of the wine shop of M. Very, 239 Boulevard Magenta, where Ravachol, the anarchist, was arrested on March 30. The bomb contained at least twelve pounds of dynamite, and completely wrecked the establishment. Ten persons were seriously injured and M. Very is dead. Three arrests have been made, including a man who, just after the explosion in the wineshop, shouted at the waiter, "Vive l'anarchie!" A revolver and knife were found on him. He professes to know nothing of the explosion.

Troops finally cleared the Boulevard Magenta. Thousands of sightseers had crowded the street, near the wrecked wineshop and the police were unable to drive them back. In the confusion it was feared an other outrage might be perpetrated. Four companies of soldiers were called out.

M. Very's Terrible Fate.

The wineshop was half full of guests, and the bomb was placed at the door leading from the corridor into the winerooms. M. Very was standing in the middle of the room. He was thrown against the wall by a heap of shattered tables and chairs. The ceiling fell, and several beams were split and fell to the floor. The police, who have been stationed near the wineshop since Ravachol's arrest, came up and took out the wounded. Both of M. Very's legs had been crushed by falling beams, his collar bone was fractured and his right arm was broken. He was bleeding at the mouth and ears and had received internal injuries. His little boy was found unconscious in a corner with his collar bone broken. Both were taken to the Saint Lois hospital, where M. Very's legs were amputated. He died just before midnight.

Of the other ten persons injured three were taken to the hospital and the others were helped to their homes by the police. Six have broken bones and internal injuries.

The Wineshop Wrecked.

Half of the front of the wine shop was blown out, the stairs of the lower two stories were smashed to splinters, and not a door or window in the house was left whole. The floor in the corridor was blown away and the cashier was twisted and hurled into a corner, and, where the ceiling and walls were not split, the plaster was taken off as if scraped with a knife. The buildings on each side were damaged from top to bottom. The whole block was shaken, and the walls were started so that they cracked or bulged. Two minutes after the explosion the street was crowded with frightened men and women. An extra force of police was unable to induce them to return to their rooms.

Men began carrying out their most valuable possessions and prepared to move their families to other parts of the city. Much of the panic-like feeling was lessened, and families in the neighborhood fear that Ravachol's friends have marked it for destruction, as a warning to the magistrate and the witnesses of the trial of Ravachol.

Paris Panic Stricken.

M. Very had received fifty or sixty threatening letters from anarchists since Ravachol was arrested. One of them, found by the police in M. Very's desk at the rear of the shop, read:

SIR—You have dared to betray Ravachol. Beware! You will learn what his friends can do. Your shop is doomed and your infamous life will be taken before May 1. Your family is no better than you. We will take care of them too. FRIENDS OF RAVACHOL.

At the top of this was printed in red letters "May 1," and the same was printed at the bottom in black letters. There was another letter, with skull and crossbones at the top, which apparently referred directly to the present outrage.

L'Hernt, the waiter who assisted in the arrest of Ravachol, was not at the wineshop when the bomb exploded, and it is thought he has fled from the city. In the morning he received a letter warning him that he would not live to testify against Ravachol, and that the following twenty four hours would be his last.

The rumor is abroad that an attempt will be made to assassinate M. Quesnay de Beaurepaire, the prosecutor general, on his way to court today. His residence is guarded within and without and detectives patrol the street in which the house stands. M. Atthelin, the examining magistrate in the case, is similarly guarded. Today's trial of Ravachol will be held in an atmosphere of panic, for the police have been warned that preparations have been made to blow up the courtroom. The panic throughout the city surpasses anything that has been experienced since the outrages began.

NEWS FROM ALBANY.

The Capitol Dispatches as to the Day Before Reflection of Assemblymen.

ALBANY, April 26.—The extra session of the legislature, called by the governor to make a reapportionment of senate and assembly districts, has started with a rush, and the Democrats are not able to agree over the distribution of Kings county, New York, Westchester, Onondaga and Buffalo ask too much. Some of the smaller counties in the state also object to the allotment made to them, and their representatives decline to vote on the bill unless they get as many assemblymen as they think they should have.

In a conference over the bill New York was given thirty, Brooklyn nineteen and Buffalo six. Albany county was given three and Steuben county one assemblyman.

The apportionment bill had been prepared for introduction immediately after the opening of the session, but these complications necessitated a change of action. It was then decided to organize the special session, and then take a recess in both houses, to see whether the differences could not be adjusted.

Lieutenant Governor Sheehan called the senate to order at 8 o'clock. Every senator was present. Senator Erwin offered a written protest, signed by all the Republicans, against the extraordinary session being any business, on the ground that it was not properly constituted. The Republican position is that the governor has no power to name the subject of apportionment in the call. No attention was paid to Senator Erwin's protest, and then he moved that the rules of the regular session be adopted. By a party vote the motion was laid on the table.

"What?" said Senator Erwin, "are we to have no rules?"

"The majority propose to run this legislature," replied Senator Cantor.

"But we must have rules to transact business," replied Mr. Erwin.

"Not until we are ready for them," said Mr. Cantor.

The rules were adopted and the senate took a recess.

Similar proceedings took place in the assembly. General Husted protested against the legality of the session. Speaker Saxton ruled against him, and on an appeal the Democrats sustained the speaker.

FASHIONS

Sensible Summer Dress.

A DESIGN IN SATEEN.

The great number of pretty designs in cotton fabrics shown in this spring, would indicate that it was the popular material for sensible summer dresses. These fabrics range in price from the cheap percales, prints, satteens, printed pekins, crepon cloths, Swiss plumetis muslins up to broche zephyrs.

Another novelty in these goods is the trimmed skirting which can be had flounced or pleated in any manner, in fine printed cambrics, spots and figures, for either over or under skirts, suitable to wear with the popular blouses. These skirtings can be readily adapted for wear for either slender or stout ladies, also girls, by the use of a draw-string.

The Senate Rejects the Geary Exclusion Bill.

PRESENT LAWS CONTINUE IN FORCE.

If the Senate's Chinese Measure Goes to the President the Celestials May Come and Go for Ten Years as They Have for Some Time Past.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The senate passed the Chinese bill exactly as reported by the senate committee on foreign relations to continue existing restriction laws for ten years, and sent it to the house for concurrence. The senate by a vote of 42 to 14 rejected the Geary Chinese total exclusion bill. The new bill, as it now goes to the house for concurrence, enacts as follows:

The New Bill.

That all laws now in force prohibiting and regulating the coming into this country of Chinese persons and persons of Chinese descent are hereby continued in force for a period of ten years from the passage of this act.

Section 2. That any Chinese person or person of Chinese descent who shall come into or be found in any place in the United States in violation of this act or who shall hereafter come into the United States from any foreign country, except such as may be provided by treaty, shall be adjudged to be unlawfully within the United States and shall be subject to arrest and deportation as hereinafter provided.

Sec. 3. That any Chinese person or person of Chinese descent arrested under the provisions of this act shall be adjudged to be unlawfully within the United States unless such person shall establish, by affirmative proof, to the satisfaction of such justice, judge or commissioner his lawful right to remain in the United States.

Sec. 4. That any such Chinese person or person of Chinese descent who shall refuse or neglect to make such application for a certificate or subject himself thereto and pay the fee and tax as a condition of the removal of such person to that country, be arrested and taken before any justice, judge or commissioner of any district court of the United States, and upon refusal to make such application and pay such fee and tax as a condition of the removal of such person to that country, he or she shall be adjudged to be a criminal and upon conviction thereof shall be punished by imprisonment at hard labor for a period of not exceeding six months, and thereafter removed from the United States, as herein before provided.

It Was Another Mitchell.

When the debate opened Mr. Mitchell spoke at length on the subject of the repeated violations of our treaty obligations by China by the importation of Chinese coolies into this country for immoral purposes. Mr. Gray, of Delaware, suggested that the proper way to meet this evil was to abrogate the treaty, to which Mr. Mitchell assented. Whereupon Mr. Mason, of West Virginia, accused the senator from Oregon of voting to sustain President Arthur's veto of such a bill. Upon this point a rather warm colloquy ensued, resulting in the explanation that it was Senator Mitchell, of Pennsylvania, and not of Oregon, who voted in the way referred to by Mr. Kenna. Apologies were then in order, and were promptly tendered and accepted.

Mr. Sherman interpolated a remark as to the passage of the Scott law that if that bill had only been held back a week or two until the Chinese minister, then on his way back from Peru, could have appealed to the country there would have been no necessity for its passage, as the provisions of the bill would probably have been substantially incorporated in the pending treaty.

Mr. Chandler, of New Hampshire, referred again to the rejection of his late colleague, Mr. Bell, by China, and contended that there was unreasonable delay on the part of the United States government in making a proper presentation of the facts in Mr. Blaine's case to the Chinese government.

The Vote in Detail.

Mr. Call, of Florida, argued that the whole question was within the constitutional jurisdiction of the states which opposed Chinese immigration. He saw no reason why Oregon and California and other states should be objected to Chinese might not, under treaty agreement between the two countries, subject, of course, to the paramount authority of congress, provide not for the registration of all Chinese immigrants, but also for regulations as to their reporting themselves at stated times to the public authorities. The whole subject, both of Chinese labor and Chinese crime, was within the power of the states. A vote was then taken on the question of substituting the senate bill for the Geary house bill. The result was 43 yeas to 14 nays, as follows:

Yeas—Messrs. Allison, Berry, Brice, Butler, Call, Carey, Carlisle, Colquitt, Cullom, Culquitt, Cullom, Dawes, Dixon, Frye, Gorman, Gray, Hansbrough, Higgins, Hiscock, Jones of Arkansas, Jones of Nevada, Kenna, Mackey, Manderson, Morgan, Proctor, Pugh, Pasdock, Palmer, Platt, Perkins, Pettigrew, Platt, Ransom, Sawyer, Sherman, Spooner, Stockbridge, Vest, Vilas, Walthall and Washburn—43.

Nays—Messrs. Aldrich, Blodgett, Chandler, Daniel, Dubois, Felton, Jones of Nevada, Mitchell, Pasco, Power, Sharp, Stewart, Teller, Warren and Wilson—14.

The Scott Law Denounced.

The senate bill was before the senate subject to the amendment offered by Platt in a vigorous five minute speech insisting on the amendment that the Scott exclusion law of 1888 should not be among the laws continued in force. Mr. Morgan, while remarking that the Scott law was in his opinion one of the most vicious laws that ever passed, and while declaring that it was a mere political arrangement between two political parties to try to influence votes on the Pacific coast, he thought it better under the circumstances to let the law of 1888 stand until congress in a more deliberate way could regulate the matter, or until the executive department could do so by treaty.

Mr. Platt's amendment was then voted down by 9 to 46, so the Scott act was allowed to stand. Mr. Felton then offered an amendment providing an elaborate system of registration for Chinese, and making an appropriation of $100,000 for the appointment of additional deputy collectors to carry out the provisions of the amendment was lost and the bill was passed.

Deadlock in the House.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The entire day in the house was consumed in an attempt to procure a vote on the resolution expunging certain portions of Mr. Walker's remarks from the record. It will be remembered that Mr. Walker made allusions to Mr. Williams and Mr. Hour, of Massachusetts, which were considered objectionable. The Republicans declined to vote, thus breaking a quorum, the speaker refusing to count members present as voting, and after three calls of the house and repeated yea and nay votes, the house adjourned, without action on the resolution.

Two Hundred Out of Work.

PETTSBURG, April 26.—The 200 workers at the Edgar Iron mills, West side, reported for work this morning, but learned that the management had ordered an indefinite suspension in all departments.

The 1892 Model of the Remington is now on the market.

GENERAL GRANT'S TOMB

The President to Lay the Corner Stone Wednesday.

THE REMOVAL QUESTION SETTLED.

It Is Said That the Legislators Who Were Working Hard to Move the Hero's Remains Taken to Washington Have Abandoned Their Movement.

NEW YORK, April 25.—The exercises attending the laying of the corner stone of the monument to be erected to the memory of General Grant, at Riverside park, will occur on Wednesday. The day will be a notable one. President Harrison and several members of his cabinet will be present. The president, who will decide at the ceremony, will be escorted to Riverside park by Troop A, United States artillery.

The United States monitor Miantonomah will lie in the Hudson river, off Riverside park, and will fire a salute of twenty-one guns. Her commander, Captain Sicard, will land a company of marines to act as a guard to the president. It is expected that fully 200,000 persons will be present at the ceremonies.

A platform has been built to accommodate the presidential party and invited guests, including the 2,000 committeemen. On the platform below the mound will be placed benches for 3,000 members of the Grand Army and 300 members of the Loyal Legion.

The president and his party will be escorted from the Fifth Avenue hotel to the tomb by Troop A. The route will be up Fifth avenue to Fifty-seventh street, Eighth, Fifty-seventh street to Broadway, up Broadway and the Boulevard to Seventy-second street, through Seventy-second street to Riverside drive and thence along Riverside drive to the tomb, where the president will be saluted by the United States troops.

President Harrison, Secretary Rusk, Secretary Tracy, Postmaster General Wanamaker and Private Secretary Halford will arrive from Washington with their families early this evening by a special train.

No Removal of the Remains.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The movement to transfer the body of General Grant from New York to the National cemetery at Arlington has substantially come to an end. Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, expressed himself as ready to take the matter up after the death of Senator Plumb, who introduced the resolution, and there was a strong disposition among the committee on military affairs to pass it again through the senate and send it to the house. But it was found that the Grant family preferred to have the body of the great soldier remain where it is than have a contest in congress over its removal.

This fact, taken in connection with the renewed activity of the managers of the monument fund, decided the senate committee to drop the resolution and leave the body of General Grant in Riverside park.

CHICAGO'S PLEA FOR AID.

How Boomers Arguing for a World's Fair Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The World's Fair committee of the house heard further arguments in support of the proposition for an appropriation in aid of the fair. Mr. Gage reviewed the work of the expositions, telling the difficulties which had been encountered and overcome and showing how Chicago had discharged the obligations placed upon her. The responsibility for making the fair a success, he says, now rests upon congress. He insisted that it was the duty of congress to make an appropriation.

Edwin Walker spoke on the legal aspects of the case, and gave the precedent established by the government in giving assistance to the Philadelphia Centennial. This, he said, was legal and could be followed in this case.

Mr. Little, a member of the committee, asked about the responsibility for enlarging the scope of the exposition. Mr. Walker replied that had the commission done less it would have been subject to criticism. The enlargement, he said, was essential. Mr. Walker claimed that if the government failed to appropriate money for the fair it would by its refusal bring discredit upon itself.

He adds: "The day that Mr. Borrowe left for America I talked with him as to the publication of the letters, and he said: 'Use your own judgment, and if you find that the newspapers are getting the story in any garbled form print the entire correspondence, leaving out that portion of Aurelien Scholl's opinion that refers to a lady.'"

GENERAL GRANT'S TOMB

The President to Lay the Corner Stone Wednesday.

THE REMOVAL QUESTION SETTLED.

It Is Said That the Legislators Who Were Working Hard to Have the Body Remains Taken to Washington Have Abandoned Their Movements.

NEW YORK, April 26.—The ceremonies attending the laying of the corner stone of the monument to be erected to the memory of General Grant, at Riverside park, will occur on Wednesday. The day will be a notable one. President Harrison and several members of his cabinet will be present. The president, who will officiate at the ceremony, will be escorted to Riverside park by Troop A, United States artillery.

The United States monitor Miantonomah will lie in the Hudson river, off Riverside park, and will fire a salute of twenty-one guns. Her commander, Captain Sicard, will land a company of marines to act as a guard to the president. It is expected that fully 200,000 persons will be present at the ceremony.

A platform has been built to accommodate the presidential party and invited guests, including the 2,400 committeemen. On the plateau below the tomb will be placed benches for 3,000 members of the Grand Army and 300 members of the Loyal Legion.

The president and his party will be escorted from the Fifth Av nue hotel to the tomb by Troop A. The route will be up Fifth avenue to Fifty-seventh street, through Fifty-seventh street to Broadway, up Broadway and the Boulevard to Seventy-second street, through Seventy-second street to Riverside drive and thence along Riverside drive to the tomb, where the president will be saluted by the United States troops.

President Harrison, Secretary Rusk, Secretary Foster, Postmaster General Wanamaker and Private Secretary Halford will arrive from Washington with their families early this evening by a special train.

No Removal of the Remains.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The movement to transfer the body of General Grant from New York to the National cemetery at Arlington has substantially come to an end. Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, expressed himself as ready to take the matter up after the death of Senator Plumb, who introduced the resolution, and there was a strong disposition among the committee on military affairs to pass it again through the senate and send it to the house. But it was found that the Grant family preferred to have the body of the great soldier remain where it is than have a contest in congress over its removal.

This fact, taken in connection with the renewed activity of the managers of the monument fund, decided the senate committee to drop the resolution, and leave the body of General Grant in Riverside park.

CHICAGO'S PLEA FOR AID.

Her Boomers Arguing for a World's Fair Appropriation.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The World's Fair committee of the house heard further arguments in support of the proposition for an appropriation in aid of the fair. Mr. Gage reviewed the work of the exposition, telling the difficulties which had been encountered and overcome and showing how Chicago had discharged the obligations placed upon her. The only responsibility for making the fair a success, he says, now rests upon congress. He insisted that it was the duty of congress to make an appropriation.

Edwin Walker spoke on the legal aspects of the case, and gave the precedent established by the government in giving assistance to Philadelphia Centennial. This, he said, was legal and could be followed in this case.

Mr. Little, a member of the committee, asked about the responsibility for enlarging the scope of the exposition. Mr. Walker replied that had the commission done less it would have been subject to criticism. The enlargement of the plan was essential. Mr. Walker claimed that if the government failed to appropriate money for the fair it would by its refusal bring discredit upon itself.

He Declares That Borrowe Agreed to the Publication.

LONDON, April 26.—In the letter that he wrote just before the duel, Edward Fox says that he only yielded to Colonel Ochiltree's request to act as second in the Borrowe-Drayton affair upon condition that he was to have all the news there was in the duel.

He adds: "The day that Mr. Borrowe left for America I talked with him as to the publication of the letters, and he said: 'Use your own judgment, and if you find that the newspapers are getting the story in any garbled form print the entire correspondence, leaving out that portion of Antoilee Scholt's opinion that refers to a lady.'"

FACTS FOR HOUSEWIVES.

THOSE INTENDING TO BE HOUSE-KEEPERS SHOULD ALSO READ.

They Can Never Learn Younger—This Information Is Practical and Cannot Be Obtained Elsewhere—It Is Sure to Interest You.

It pays better to spend an hour every now and then going over one's gowns, freshening them up and giving the little touches here and there that keep their prettiness alive, than to wait until they are all going to pieces, and then have to take a day and devote yourself to mending them. You often can't do much for them at such a late hour, for the tiny hole or rip will have frayed all out of shape, or the dangling tape will have pulled the plaits away from all semblance of proper hanging. Don't throw them over the backs of chairs when you come in; they will wrinkle and mess up horribly, waists especially, for they are a bit warm when you take them off, and so more susceptible to new and ugly creases.

Give frocks a good shake and hang them up, dust off the collar or tucker, before putting them in their box, and have a bit of a place for ribbons and chiffons, where they won't get all mixed up with bottles of hair tonic and powder. Alcohol and water is better than anything ever advertised for taking dirt out of clothes. Grease, sugar, paint, everything yields to the almond meal process, and there is left no unpleasantly suggestive odor behind, as in the case of almost all patent cleansers.—American Dairyman.

RHUBARB.

The Best Method of Cooking this Valuable Pie Plant.

The best way of cooking rhubarb is to wash the stalks, cut them in small pieces without peeling them and throw them in an earthen pipkin with about two tablespoonfuls of water to every bunch of rhubarb. Let them cook slowly in the pipkin after also adding about a cup of sugar to a bunch of rhubarb. The sugar will draw the juice out of the rhubarb and when this is accomplished the pot should be pulled forward gradually and the rhubarb stewed till tender. Taste of it and add more sugar if it is needed. This makes a rich red sauce and is far richer than when the rhubarb is peeled.

For pie, line a plater with rich crust, egg with the white of an egg, fill it with fresh pie-plant, cut in pieces, add a cup of sugar and half a teaspoonful of butter. Cover it with a very thin, rich crust, and bake it for about one hour. When the pies are done, sprinkle them with powdered sugar. Leave the oven door open for fifteen minutes after the pies are sprinkled with sugar and before they are taken out.

THINGS USEFUL TO KNOW.

Almond meal is very softening and whitening to the skin.

Peroxide of hydrogen diluted with ammonia will bleach the hair.

Naphtha is good for cleaning kid gloves, but keep it away from the fire.

Keep a small box filled with lime in your pantry and cellar; it will keep the air dry and pure.

Soda is the best thing for cleaning flatware; apply it with a damp cloth and rub well, then dry.

Prick potatoes before baking so that the air can escape; this will prevent their bursting in the oven.

Ordinary sticking plaster makes a good remedy for corns, as it keeps them soft and prevents rubbing.

Wash white flannels in cold water with suds made of white soap, and they will not shrink much or turn yellow.

For sore throat, beat the white of an egg very stiff, strain the sugar it will hold, and the juice of one lemon.—Good Housekeeping.

For chafing, try fuller's earth pulverized; moisten the part on first when applying it. Oxide of zinc ointment is also excellent.

One of the most effectual injections for constipation in young children is equal parts of glycerine and water. It is harmless and healing.

Never sweep dust and dirt from one room to another, nor from upstairs to the lower part of the house. Always take it up in each room.

A good dentifrice is made of two ounces of pulverized borax, four ounces of prepicitated chalk, and two ounces of pulverized castile soap.

Spanish Fritters.

Cut the soft part of bakers' bread in slices of a quarter of an inch thick, and of any form you choose. Take a pint of milk or cream, three well-beaten eggs, half a teaspoonful of nutmeg and cinnamon mixed, three drops of the essence of lemon, and sugar to the taste; stir all well together, and pour over the pieces of bread. When they have soaked up half of the milk or they will, take them out before they get too soft, and fry them of a nice light brown on both sides. They may be served with or without sweet sauce.

Use for Stale Bread.

With a little care all stale bread can be utilized. All the odds and ends of crusts should be spread evenly on a pan, and slightly dried in a warm oven. When quite dry, put them in a small bag made of ticking or canvas, and pound them until fine. Sift and put them into empty salt cans. They will keep a long time, and are useful for breading meats, croquettes, omelettes, and making dressing for fowls.

Orange Pudding.

Peel and slice three oranges, lay them in a pudding dish and sprinkle with sugar. Make a custard of one-half pint of milk, the yolks of two eggs, one-fourth cup of sugar and one teaspoonful of corn starch. When cold pour it over the oranges. Beat the whites of the eggs into a stiff froth, add one-third cup of pulverized sugar, pour on the custard and put it in the oven for a few moments to brown.

The Finest Kind of Paste.

Mix rice flour smoothly in cold water, and then gently boil it. It is beautifully white and transparent. A little carbolic acid, or an essential oil, will keep it from moulding or souring.

A sufferer from the widespread dress reform movement makes the following wail: "'Bifurcation' is vexatious, 'suspenders'' are as bad; "trunks to the knee" discomfort me, and "bloomers" drive me mad.

An Awkward Gaff to Lowell.

"Many years ago a young American girl," said Colonel T. W. Higginson in a recent talk, "who was the daughter of a guest of a relative, who was the wife of an ambassador to England from a continental state and a person of great rank and influence, made the acquaintance of this young lady, only seventeen years of age, who, in a way, to enter upon many terms the most exclusive society. You can imagine how she enjoyed it. A dinner party was given in her honor, at which she went her eye fell on one very distinguished looking old man in the opposite corner, who was evidently a man of the highest authority of any social position: not handsome, rather ugly than otherwise, but keenly intellectual and in every way distinguished. After awhile the summons was given to the dinner table —they were summoned to the dining hall in that complicated and elaborate order of precedence which you will find at the end of the English books on etiquette. This young girl saw every stripling lordship and every young dandy offer his arm to lead her down, except her, by, and she watched from her corner.

"Last of all, at the very end of that brilliant procession, there was left this one unattended plebeian in the room, that young American girl and that distinguished looking old man, who turned out to be famous Hugh Miller, then the leader of his days, and the recognized head of literary society in London. It was a lesson in the utter shallowness and folly of hereditary position which she never forgot. Later Rogers' poems are not read so much now as formerly, but at that time the highest literary honor a man could have was to stand —The members of the Exempt Firemen's Association will hold their annual meeting this evening.

—The horse that ran away on North avenue Monday evening is owned by Mr. Wesley Ulrich of West Fifth street.

—A man who was arrested last evening for drunkenness and disorderly conduct is still confined in the city jail. He will be given a hearing this evening.

—Joseph T. Sullivan's new saloon at No. 66 West Third street was formally opened last evening. A large crowd is said to have been present to partake of the supper prepared by a local caterer.

—A number of members of the Greenville Rowing Club held a fly on Sunday from Elizabeth, a distant of ten miles. It was the best race that ever took place from that city by Greenville clubs. The Westcott Brothers won. Time, 14 minutes 15 seconds. H. Lutz was second and Rose Brothers third. The winning bird will be named Fire Fly. He is a son of Rose Brothers' Red Knob. The next race will be from Plainfield.

—The latest and most popular fad is an "anti-treating club." Under its rules one man cannot set another without incurring a fine from a club. There is doubt that such a course would promote temperance, but at the same time it would be rough on the saloonkeepers, and especially to those convivialists who want about drinking resorts, ever-ready to respond to an invitation, and often step up to the bar when not invited.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

—A paper on photography applied to the detection of crime was read by Dr. Paul Jeserich at a recent meeting of the Photographic Society of Great Britain. Photography can be of good use for the detection of forgery. In an enlarged photographic picture erasures and alterations can be more clearly seen than in the original. So, moved all, photography can demonstrate differences in ink which cannot be perceived by the eye. The inks of the so-called blue-black inks are either brown, red, green, or blue in shade, but with ordinary sensitive plates yellow and green only-inks are rendered dark, and blue ones light, the same will follow in photographing inks of various tones.

—A pretty fable of the pansy is current among children. The flower has five petals and five sepals. In most pansies, especially of the garden varieties of highly developed varieties, two of the petals are plain in color and three are gay. The two plain petals have a shape unlike the two of gay petals have a equal size, and the third, which is the largest of all, has two sepals. The fable is that the pansy represents a family, consisting of busy mother, two neglected daughters, two of the latter being stepchildren of the wife. The plain petals are the stepchildren, with only one sepal each, and the gay petals are the daughters with a calyx each, and the large gay petal is the wife, with two calyxes. The fable is that they must strip away the petals until the stamens of all kinds are bare. They have a fanciful resemblance to an old woman with a flannel wrap about his neck, his shoulders upraised, and his hands in his breeches. The story is probably of French origin, because the French call the pansy the stepmother.

SAENGER HALL APIRE.

By Hard Work the Members of the Society Extinguished the Flames.

Last evening the members of the Plainfield Gesang und Turnig Gesang held their regular weekly rehearsal. At its conclusion the members adjourned to the basement of the hall where they held a meeting. Before the meeting adjourned the members smelled smoke. Several of them rushed upstairs and then saw that the hall was afire. The fire originated on the stage and the supposition is that it was caused by some member carelessly throwing a lighted cigar stump among the scenery.

The burning was unbroken and it was with much difficulty that the flames were extinguished. The curtains and some of the scenery was burned. The damage will not exceed $200. No alarm was sounded.

The Remains Interred.

The child found in Greenbrook near the Water street bridge yesterday afternoon was taken to Terrill & Cole's undertaking rooms on East Front street. The case is still a mystery, although the North Plainfield authorities are investigating it.

This morning the remains were interred in the city plot in the M. E. Cemetery. There is only one coroner in Somerset county and the undertakers were unable to communicate with him. They then proceeded to a portable from Dr. Joseph B. Conley, who is also assessor of North Plainfield.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. R. A. Allen of Richmond street starts to-day for a three weeks' visit with relatives in Wilmington, Del.

A number of friends of Miss Sadie Bonn of Somerset street tendered her a surprise party last evening. The young people thoroughly enjoyed the affair.

A Child Found.

A four-year old boy named Rupert, whose parents reside on Craig Place, North Plainfield, was found wandering along the boulevard yesterday afternoon. Policeman Lynch took charge of the infant and returned him to his home.

NUPTIALS.

Rose—Potter.

The elegant Potter mansion on Seventh street was the scene of a beautiful wedding last evening, when in the presence of about one hundred relatives and most intimate friends the charming Miss S. Florence Potter was made the bride of Mr. Alexander M. Rose, by Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, pastor of the Seventh Day Baptist church, of which her family are members.

The ceremony took place at seven o'clock in the parlor to the left of the grand hall, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion with palms, Easter lilies, roses and other flowers.

The bride was attired in white satin, trimmed with seed pearls and point de gene lace with diamond ornaments, and the bridesmaids in pink satin. These were the bride's sister, Miss Mabel Potter, and niece, Miss Bessie Titsworth. After the ceremony the smiling bride turned her head and made a pretty bow to her friends, who becomingly recognized it. A wedding tour is to have taken place last January, but for the illness of Mrs. Potter, the bride's mother, who was, however, so much improved in health as to be able to participate in the pleasures last night.

The event was understood to be intended as a quiet affair, although it was one of the most elegant ever seen here.

The presents were very fine, among them being a check for $15,000 to the groom from his mother, and a similar check to the bride from her parents. Other presents to the bride were, from the groom a Jurgensen watch studded with diamonds, from the bride's father a solid silver service consisting of seventeen pieces, from the groom's mother an oak chest containing several dozen solid silver knives, forks and spoons, consisting of eighty-four pieces, from his sister, Miss Hattie, a decorated dinner set from Haviland's, New York firm, consisting of 100 pieces, from his youngest sister, Miss Carrie, a grandfather's clock, from Tiffany's, an onyx clock and ornaments from the bride's mother, and from other friends the following: Silver lobster dish, Dresden China ice cream set, cut glass berry dish with glass stand, salad fork and spoon, two pair of candelabras, cut glass celery dish, two chiffoniers, numerous bric-a-brac and other presents.

The couple, after receiving the congratulations of their guests endeavored to slip away unobserved, having heard that the streets had on hand a shower of rice and old slippers to wish them good luck. Mr. and Mrs. Rose exceed themselves and with their parents went up stair ostensibly to prepare for their wedding trip, but quietly to slip out a side door.

The jolly company were on the alert however, and as a procession locked the door and hid the key. The couple got to the door as they supposed unobserved, but were greeted with roars of laughter and discovering themselves outwitted laughing started through the main hall to the front door, the guests forming on each side, and heartily congratulating them as they passed.

After the shower of rice and old slippers had ceased the groom turned to pick it up, the bride meanwhile shaking hands with friends and the opposite side. She took the arm of one of the guests, Mr. Will Hubbard, and was preceding slow when the roars of laughter led her to discover her mistake.

Finally the couple reached their carriage, when they were greeted with showers of rice and old slippers, laughter and cheers.

They took the 5.55 p. m. train for New York and will be absent about a week on their wedding trip.

They have rented the Heyniger residence, corner Seventh street and Grant avenue, and will be at home to-day.

Among those present were Mrs. A. M. Rose and the Misses Rose, of New York city, mother and sisters of the groom; Mrs. William Pearson, of Brooklyn; Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Titsworth, Mr. George B. Titsworth, Mr. George H. Babcock, Mr. David R. Titsworth, Mr. H. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Titsworth, Jr., Mrs. Wm. A. Bell, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mr. Charles O. Pearson, Mr. and Mrs. Wellington R. "My Septuagint."

This is the title of a new book recently copyrighted by the Rev. Dr. Deems. It contains articles written since her seventieth year. Among them are some which have already attracted more than local attention, such as "The Present Outlook of Theology," "Among the Christians," "Christ and Christianity," "Crystals and Heretics," "Evolution and Morality," "Heredity," "George Washington," "Abraham Lincoln." Still others are stories, "Mr. Markham's Dream," and "Mrs. Mary and Mrs. Jones," and several poems, which have become popular, as "The Light is at the End" and "The Banner of Jesus," written for the I. Mrs. Johnston Cleared by her Counsel

The Somerset County Grand Jury has thrown out the complaint against Mrs. Susan Johnston, formerly the janitress at the depot. It will be remembered that there was a charge preferred against her by a hackman who had lost his carriage robe, and accused Mrs. Johnston of stealing it. Mrs. Johnston was arrested and held to bail.

It is claimed by her friends that this was because she did not have the benefit of counsel at the hearing. One of her friends is reported to have said:

"Mr. March, who promptly took away which has resulted in having Mrs. Johnston cleared from the charge. Mr. March says that he was offered assistance by many of the best known society people in town, all of whom believe Mrs. Johnston to be innocent.

The Grand Jury has thrown out the complaint, placing Mrs. Johnston in a position to sue for damages, which it is said she will do.

New Jersey's Railroads.

That New Jersey is a great railroad State is emphasized by the report of the State Board of Assessors, which has just been received from the printer. The Board reports that during the year railroad property to the amount of $1,000,000 has been added to the list, including the portion to be distributed among the localities, $200,975,497 has been assessed and taxed, and that the amount derived by the State is $1,282,252.26. This represents a mileage of over 2,214 of railroad tracks, and 178 miles of canals. In former years, especially in 1885, the payment of the tax was resisted, and nearly half of the companies took the matter to the Supreme Court. In that year forty writs were applied for and allowed, but the companies are growing more used to the operation of the law. They could not live again every year, and in 1890 only nine companies showed dissatisfaction with the Board's valuation and took the matter to the court.

The Benefits of Business Association.

While contending that association of business persons, I must necessarily introduce selfish ideas, I have endeavored to keep them subordinate to the general good, which I consider paramount. I do not consider that I have succeeded in this, but I am willing that the public should be the judge. The only way to check competition is to lower prices, and the only way to accomplish this object is to raise prices. If it is the policy of this country to prevent aggregations of capital, such as "The Present Outlook of Theology," "Among the Christians," "Christ and Christianity," "Crystals and Heretics," "Evolution and Morality," "Heredity," "George Washington," "Abraham Lincoln." Still others are stories, "Mr. Markham's Dream," and "Mrs. Mary and Mrs. Jones," and several poems, which have become popular, as "The Light is at the End" and "The Banner of Jesus," written for the I. S. S. Convention, and the poem on "Peter and Crosby," together with fresh matter which has never been published.

THE CASE OF DR. STILLMAN.

Reviewed from the Columns of "The News" to Date.

The New York Sun recently a reporter in Plainfield yesterday to examine a file of THE NEWS for several years past for a history of the case of Dr. Charles Stillman, which with such other information as he secured from the family appears in the Sun to-day as follows:

Dr. Charles F. Stillman, who about three years ago left his wife and lived openly with Miss Mabel Schanz, a daughter of William Schanz, the Fifth avenue picture dealer, has just gone to his home in Plainfield, N. J., to die. Dr. Stillman was once medical examiner for the Mutual Life Insurance Company of this city, after his infatuation grew. Schanz became public he had to resign his place. Later he went with her to Europe, where they have lived until quite recently. Miss Schanz came back to her parents' home in this city, and on Monday Dr. Stillman followed her. He held home very near his end.

Only a few months ago, in Chicago, Dr. Stillman contracted a severe cold; which developed into pneumonia. Though a man of iron constitution, at only 38 years old the disease overpowered him. His brother, ex-Judge William M. Stillman, of Plainfield, N. J., and his wife were sent for in company with a nurse brought the last week. Mrs. Stillman's friend Sunday afternoon and Dr. Stillman was taken to the New York Hospital for observation. On Monday he was met with his brother William, his sister, and his brother-in-law, J. Kirtland Moyers of Plainfield, N. J., and Mrs. Stillman, and Aunt Nate Company of New York, he was taken to Plainfield.

At the station there he recognized many old friends, but they hardly knew him as they saw he was so ill. His friends took him in a coach from the car to a carriage, and he was driven to Mr. Moyers' residence on Grant avenue. Under ordinary circumstances, he would have been taken to the Stillman homestead, on Watchung avenue, but the wife did not visit him. In his present unconscious state and with death apparently so near a reconciliation seems impossible. All his family, including his brother, Prof. Thomas R. Stillman of the Stevens Institute, Hoboken; his sister, Mrs. J. Kirtland Moyers, and his uncle, John Kirtland, whom he kidnapped two years ago, have seen him.

The kidnapping caused a sensation in Plainfield. Kirtland was then 16 years old. He lived with his mother, who, after her separation from her husband, had gone to live with her husband's mother in Grant avenue, on the outskirts of the city. The boy was attending the Irving public school. On Friday, January 16, 1890, two men drove up to the school in a cab and asked to see him. The teacher, Miss Susie Gilbert, inquired what they wanted and they said that his mother wanted him to come home. Miss Gilbert asked if they had a note from Mrs. Kirtland to verify their statement. They said not, but he said he was the boy's father. In reply to a question from Miss Gilbert as to why he had not taken his family with him, Mr. Stillman replied: "Never mind that now with me."

No further objection was made and the boy drove away with the men. They took him to the police headquarters to get him back, and the strange part of all these troubles is that nobody has ever been able to find. Kirtland remained with his father in Chicago until about two months ago, when arrangements were made for the boy's grandmother, Mrs. Charles H. Stillman, went out to Chicago and brought him home. Kirtland has been under the immediate care of his father's brother-in-law, Mr. Myers. He is now a pupil at the Cedarcroft Academy, just out of Plainfield. He returned there yesterday morning after having spent his vacation, which he spent at Mr. Myers's.

Dr. Stillman's father, the late Dr. Charles H. Stillman, of Plainfield, was one of the best-known physicians in the State. He was greatly interested in the Republican party, and was once the Mayor of the city. Stillman Monte Hall is named after him. Dr. Charles F. Stillman, who is now 38 years old, is a brother of the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, one of the leading churches in Plainfield.

While living in Chicago Dr. Stillman practiced medicine.

"It is all over now, or soon will be," said Mr. Myers yesterday. "As for my brother-in-law's wife, she is in New Orleans, it was simply a case of infatuation on both sides. They could not live together as they desired, and so went to Chicago."

Complaint and Answer

[Republished by request.]

The following, written by a bright and witty Plainfield lady, is one where have we any that are not bright and witty?—is sent to us for publication:

UNDER HER LATTICE.

BY R. H. STODDARD.

Under her lattice I stood and sang,
The sun in the noon grew tired and slept,
And a flock of birds in the forest sang,
Under her lattice.

Under her lattice when all was still,
The breeze was blowing as warm as a sigh,
And I sang my love with a right good will,
Under her lattice.

Under her lattice I stood to sing,
The moon was high in the heavens above,
But it put on night's mantle to hide my love,
Under her lattice.

Under her lattice a week ago,
I caught this cold that makes me so,
I'll never call on her more.

ANSWER TO "UNDER HER LATTICE."

BY MRS. S.

If under her lattice you caught such a cold,
I pray you will not call under her door,
Never in the world would I let you in,
As to linger "Under her lattice."

Instead a mission where mockings cease,
Where you can sing to your heart's content,
Where you will find you to
But they say "Under her lattice."

You will not catch cold, but will be quite hot,
If stories are true, will study all out,
As to excuses for calling on me,
Then to the tune "Under her lattice."

The Widow of Reflection will pay on the Bible,
Take the hint of Jealousy by the tail,
Why you had better be married to some one else,
Than to linger "Under her lattice."

So take wholesome advice and pour your cares,
From which who are pure, and smile who are
They will lead you to somewhat, my boy, always,
So hurry not "Under her lattice."

EDITORIAL NOTES

"The Tassel on the Corn."

Our national flower has been found at last. It is simply the graceful and esthetic Indian corn tassel. In America originated this most valuable human food, Indian corn, not yet sufficiently known or prized even here at home as it ought to be. It is our greatest crop. We are trying to initiate foreigners into the knowledge of its use as food. When we do we shall have been the great benefactor of Europe. In a table of the comparative food values of different substances corn ranks above everything else in the matter of supplying "potential energy" in proportion to its cost. A diet of cornmeal, beans and codfish helped the Pilgrim fathers to settle this country, and later enabled their descendants to fight in the Revolution. There are now in the United States some 300 varieties of the corn plant.

In one year we produce over 2,000,000,000 bushels of corn. The money it brings to our farmers at fifty cents the bushel it is easy to calculate. When rightly used this great plant has not a scrap of waste about it. Even its stalks are now being manufactured into paper. As food 130 different articles of delicious human diet have been prepared from corn. A pamphlet containing formulas for these preparations is now being circulated throughout Europe. It will help introduce this product to hungry masses across the water, and America will become still more the feeder of the nations.

Of corn are made whisky and starch. We read that when Columbus discovered this continent he found the gentle savages already knew how to make "a pleasing drink" of the maize grains. We have evidently improved on the aboriginal methods a long way in the matter of making a beverage out of corn. Within the past ten years a more perfect food has been made for live stock in the form of corn ensilage. The methods of culture have so improved that the same labor which once raised one acre of corn will now produce five acres. The shrill whistle of the steam corn cutter is heard in the land. In 1849 Ohio was the banner corn producing state. Now Iowa is. This staple has contributed no little to our civilization. Wherever the soil will produce great crops of corn, there the country is quickly settled by a prosperous and enlightened community. Civilization follows the corn tassel. Let it be our national flower, and long may it wave.

Stop Lying!

It would be "highly unimportant if true," that story that Mr. Blaine is taking boxing lessons, and for the sake of his health has a bout with a professional wrestler daily. It is to be hoped that even a secretary of state may go in for physical culture if he wants to, without causing a disruction of the inward parts of the earth.

But the important thing about the story is that it was not true. It was manufactured, a pure lie, and telegraphed over the country as pure truth. So was another precious disreputable tale about another public man and, put upon the news market at the same time.

In the name of decent journalism we protest against this. If the task of a reporter or correspondent is to write fiction, let him step down and out. There are already writers of novels and short stories who can do the work far better than his clumsy pen can. Let these sit down at their desks at home and manufacture our news dispatches. But if a reporter or correspondent is believed to record the things that happen, and the public faith is centered on him accordingly, then it is simply villainous for him to give the public lies. The fellow who will do it has no honor as a man. Not a grain. He ought to be dismissed with a kick, wherever he is detected, and newspapers warned against employing him.

There is just one way for the negro to obtain recognition as a man and a politician. He must first get money, education and the recognition mankind instinctively gives to force of character. The Jew for over a thousand years in Europe had it as tough as ever the negro did, even in slave times, yet the Jew's inherent power and intellectuality brought him to the top. Where everything else had been denied him—political rights, social standing, even the privilege of owning real estate—he yet conquered. Two things he could and did get—money and education. The rest of the question worked itself out. Today in every department of human industry and brain achievement the Jew is among the foremost. He carries the finances of Europe in his pocket. Only those who cannot be kept down ever rise, and they do it always by sheer force of character. The field of financial, industrial and intellectual achievement is all open to the negro. The prejudice for him to overcome is not as great as was that against the Jew in the time of Shakespeare's "Merchant of Venice." If the negro has the inherent force necessary to lift him he will rise among the highest, otherwise he will remain a waiter and whitewasher.

In a few years more the United States will have cable connection with all the more important of the West Indies islands. Such bonds are a powerful argument against war.

THE CORNERSTONE LAID

General Grant's Monument Begun at New York.

PRESIDENT HARRISON OFFICIATES

The Nation's Chief Executive Wields a Golden Trowel. Chauncey M. Depew Praises the Dead Hero and the Monitor Misstonomah Fires a Salute.

[NEW YORK, April 27.—At 2 p. m. today President Harrison laid the cornerstone of the Grant monument in Riverside park in the presence of thousands of interested spectators. The ceremonies, which were simple, were opened with music by the United States band from Governor's island. When the president and his party arrived the band played "Hail to the Chief." Accompanying President Harrison were Postmaster General Wanamaker, Secretaries Noble and Rusk, Assistant Secretary of the Interior Bussey, Major General Scofield and Lieutenants Parker and Andrews. After the band had rendered several national airs Rev. Dr. John Hall delivered a prayer, in which were many references to the dead hero who was to be so lovingly remembered.

The Cornerstone Laid.

Following the prayer was an address by General Horace Porter, who is president of the Grant Monument association. Then President Harrison, using a gold trowel, laid the cornerstone of the monument.

The stone itself is of flawless granite from the coast of Maine. After the cornerstone was laid 1,500 schoolboys marched by the tomb and scattered flowers upon the casket.

A copper box 6 by 10 inches square and 10 inches deep was placed inside the stone. It contained the following articles:

Copies of the constitution of the United States, Declaration of Independence and address of representatives, bound in one book. A copy of the Bible printed by the American Bible society. A copy of the book of General Ulysses S. Grant," in two volumes.

A copy of Memorial Day pamphlet, May 30 and 31, 1886, containing the following: Map, a list of contributors of flowers, prayer by Rev H. S. Storrs and address by General John. A. Logan.

A copy of Mayor Grant's proclamation, dated April 8, 1892, to the citizens of New York.

A new American flag of silk.

Medals and coins from the United States mint as follows: Major General Grant, struck by joint resolution of congress, Dec. 17, 1863; U. S. Grant, presidential; Pacific railway, bond of Grant; Grant's Indian piece, "Let us Have Peace;" Washington and Grant medalette, Lincoln and Grant, Grant reception, Dec. 16, 1879; Grant's birthday, 1880; Grant's birthday, 1887; complete proof set of United States gold and silver coins; copies of New York and Brooklyn daily papers, various illustrated papers.

When the children had finished their work President Harrison delivered an address, in which he paid a glowing tribute to the greatness of the dead general.

Dr. Depew's Address.

Following the address of the president came the oration of Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, who spoke with more than his wonted eloquence. Both the address of the president and that of Mr. Depew were listened to with interest by as many of the vast throng as could get within reach of the speakers. Then Dr. Hall pronounced the benediction, the turreted monitor Monstonomoh fired twenty-one guns, and the ceremonies came to an end. The president's party returned to Washington immediately after the conclusion of the ceremonies.

The military parade was not as large as was at first expected, as the First brigade was not ordered out by Governor Flower. The Grand Army of the Republic was represented by 3,000 men.

The parade started at 12:30 sharp from Madison square. Troop A, U. S. N. Y., Captain C. A. Roe commanding, formed in front of the Fifth Avenue hotel. President Harrison then left the hotel, accompanied by Secretary Elkins, Secretary Rusk, Secretary Foster and Postmaster General Wanamaker. He rode in an open landau drawn by four horses.

Following them came open carriages, containing the only four generals now living who commanded corps during the war—General Schofield, now in command of the army; General O. O. Howard, General Granville M. Dodge and General H. W. Slocum. Then came the committee of arrangements in carriages and invited guests, including the mayors and members of the city governments of New York and Brooklyn, the representatives of New York in congress, members of the state legislature and heads of the various city departments.

Troop A, after saluting the president, wheeled into column, four platoons preceding the president's carriage and three platoons forming in the rear of the carriages. Detachments of the Veteran Legion encampments fell in behind Troop A.

The line of march was up Fifth avenue to Fifty-seventh street, to Broadway, to Seventy-second street, to Riverside drive and thence to the tomb. Upon arriving the president was received by three companies of regular troops from Governor's island and a corresponding number of sailors from the Brooklyn navy yard.

Tammany Hall's Contribution.

This evening the Grant Birthday association, of which General H. W. Slocum is chairman, will give a dinner at Delmonico's. The guests will number 130. This is the fifth annual dinner of the association. The speakers will be Secretary Elkins, General Brackenridge, G. R. Blackburn, of Iowa, congressman, and General Horace Porter.

The committees working for the fund now reported, have carefully selected from the varied business and professional interests of the city, with a large representation from Brooklyn. It is expected that the committee will complete their work by Memorial Day.

At a special meeting of the sachems of the Tammany society at Tammany hall $5,000 of the society funds were donated to the Grant monument fund.

YOUNG ARBETT A BENEDICT.

they proceeded up the aisle to the altar. First came two young girls, Miss Daisy Hall and Miss Tillie White, who were pretty gowns of pink silk and chiffon. They carried bouquets of lilies of the valley. Next came the groom, Messrs. William Abbett, William H. Hall, Frederic Carter, S. Negus, Joseph Herriman and Colonel Kuger. After them were the bridesmaids, Miss Mary Abbett, Miss Carter, Miss Thomas and Miss Edith Smith. They wore handsome gowns of white satin striped moire, made with demi trains and garnitured with pink hyacinths.

Just before the bride came the maid of honor, Miss Augusta Barney, whose gown of shell pink satin was made plain with a straight train. The bride was with her father. An exquisite veil of point lace completely enveloped her gown of heavy white satin, embroidered in pearls and rhinestones. The sleeves were full and half long, the cuffs being embroidered like the skirt. The veil was held with diamond ornaments and orange blossoms.

At the altar was the groom with his best man, Mr. William Post. At the conclusion of the ceremony, which was performed by Rev. Dr. John Hall, pastor of the church, a large reception followed at the home of the bride's father. The bridegroom is clerk of the New Jersey senate, corporation counsel of Hoboken and a colonel on General Plum's staff of the N. G. S. N. J. The bride gave her attendants white enamelled pendants. After a short trip Mr. and Mrs. Abbett will make their home at Castle Point, Hoboken, where a handsome house has been built for them.

SOME FRILLS OF FASHION.

Veils for large hats are very long and wide and draped into festoons around the brim.

Artificial flowers are so true to nature this season, and so perfect, one cannot help being disappointed to find the treasure vanishing.

Ribbons of all kinds are in great demand for dress trimmings, as well as millinery. The pale shades are shot with contrasting colors, and some are very delightfully blended.

Lace is more popular than ever. Flounces lace, point de Venice, and Chantilly are used unsparingly on dresses. Point lace, point d'Alencon and oriental lace, and guipure are also to be used.

Wedding gowns for Easter brides are of white satin and heavy rich moires, and are simple only in the cut, for they are more richly trimmed than ever with lace and ribbons and trailing flowers.

The mourning of the English royal ladies is so simple that it has excited comment from foreigners who have visited them. There is an absence of crape, and long flowing veils of thin net are worn by the princesses.

The long street skirts are going out of fashion, and in their place is a prettily shaped round skirt, which just touches the ground. Demi-trains are for calling and house wear, and long trains appear only on very elaborate occasions.

The new umbrellas have unique handles which serve a double purpose. One of the latest novelties is a dog's head of carved wood. The mouth opens on a ear trumpet. Another handle has a whistle for calling cabs, and in the third is an opera glass.—N. Y. Sun.

The New Sailor Hats.

Sailor hats, which are always used for boys toward the end of spring, are more becoming than usual. The shape is something like the old one, but has round brim, and is trimmed with sash ribbon around the crown, tied in a bow at the side, under which the brim is slightly caught up. They are made of nutmeg straw, in all colors.

No Power to Tax Patent Rights.

HARRISBURG, April 27.—Decision was rendered in the case of the Westinghouse Electric Light company against which the state had brought suit for $40,000 for the years 1888, 1889 and 1890. The court holds that the company is organized exclusively for manufacturing purposes and that no power exists in the state to tax patent rights.

For Compulsory Voting.

OTTAWA, April 27.—A bill was introduced in the house by Colonel Amyot, having for its object the compelling of voters to exercise their franchise. Finally two clauses were agreed to, viz., to make every man who refuses to vote liable to forfeit to the municipality a penalty of $10, and that proof of reasonable excuse shall rest with the defendant.

To Forfeit Railway Lands.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Mr. McRae, of Arkansas, introduced in the house a bill providing that lands granted to railroads to aid in their construction opposite to and coterminous with the portions of railroads completed within the time specified in the granting act.

THE DEAD MILLIONAIRE.

William Astor Had Spent $30,000,000, It Is Said.

IT WAS ALL UNEARNED INCREMENT.

The Deceased Was the Father of Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton and a Descendant of the Original John Jacob Astor—History of a Remarkable Family.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The sudden death of William Astor in Paris attracted widespread attention in this city. Cable advices state that the body will probably be forwarded on the steamer La Bourgogne. At the time of Mr. John Jacob Astor, 3d's, Fifth avenue, it was said that Mr. Astor had been ill with congestion of the lungs, but his condition was not considered critical.

William Astor was born on July 13, 1830. He was the second grandson of the original John Jacob Astor. He went to Columbia college and graduated in 1849.

Immediately after his graduation he commenced the roving life he has led ever since. In 1852 he returned and became engaged to Caroline Webb Schermerhorn, of the famous family of that name. He married Miss Schermerhorn on Sept. 25, 1853. He then went into his father's office and remained with his father until the death of William Backhouse Astor, the first millionaire of the Astor family, when he left Miss Schermerhorn and established himself in Paris.

Mrs. Astor was born on July 13, 1830. She

Wild Times in the Assembly at Albany.

NEW YORK'S REAPPORTIONMENT.

The Bill Passed by Both Houses of the Empire State Legislature and Sent to the Governor—Husted's Fight Against the Measure Proves Ineffectual.

ALBANY, April 27.—Based upon the new state census a reapportionment of legislative districts was put through both the upper and lower houses of the legislature by the Democrats amid scenes of great disorder. The bill is now in the hands of Governor Flower, and the extraordinary session is adjourned. It was in the assembly, after the bill had passed the senate, that the uproar began. G. H. Bush, the Democratic leader, moved the second reading of the bill. General Husted objected.

"We have no rules," said he. "How can a bill be ordered to a second reading?"

And then the Republican members began trying to amend the bill, but without success.

General Husted Excited.

"I move we adjourn until 12 o'clock tomorrow," said General Husted at last.

G. H. Bush moved to lay the motion on the table, and General Husted changed his motion to a simple adjournment, but Speaker Bush refused to put the question.

"What!" replied General Husted, "you won't put a motion to adjourn? A motion to adjourn is always in order, and you cannot lay it on the table."

The speaker would not put the question.

"You have no sense of decency, no self respect," said General Husted, exasperated, and walking up and down the aisle. A dozen Democratic members called him to order and the speaker pounded with his gavel.

"I'll not sit down. I'll do as I please," said he.

"Oh, get a platform and give us a song and dance," threw out "Dry Dollar" Sullivan.

The general continued to denounce the proceedings and to gesticulate. G. H. Bush's seat is across the aisle from the general's and the leader stood in the way of the general's right hand, so that in gesturing the general struck him a light tap on the breast.

"An assault! an assault!" yelled "Dry Dollar" Sullivan, springing from his seat three feet into the air.

"Bah!" roared the Bald Eagle, "I supposed I was associating with gentlemen, not with boys," and raising his hand again he struck George Bush another light stroke on the breast with the back of his hand.

Shook His Fist in Bush's Face.

"That's an assault!" exclaimed "Dry Dollar" again, which aggravated Husted so much that he turned and shook his fist in George Bush's face and denounced the treatment the minority was receiving.

"I have sixty Republicans and men at my back," he shouted, and at that a dozen or more of General Husted's friends left their seats and formed a ring around the Republican leader. It looked like serious trouble for a quarter of a minute, and the speaker said:

"There is no disposition to limit debate on this bill: the majority is quite willing to listen to amendments and discussion."

This announcement of the speaker calmed the uproar. Mr. Stranahan offered an amendment giving an additional assemblyman to each of the following counties: Cattaraugus, Cayuga, Chautauqua, Jefferson, Monroe, Niagara, Oneida, Oswego and St. Lawrence. The number of Kings county assemblymen was reduced from eighteen to fourteen, the number of New York assemblymen from thirty to twenty-six and Erie county from six to five. The roll was called and the clerk announced the vote as 57 to 55 against the Stranahan amendment.

Seated by the Sergeant at Arms.

The bill was advanced to third reading. Mr. Maltby wanted to offer an amendment. The speaker would not recognize him. General Husted walked down the aisle and into the well, shaking his hand at the speaker.

O'Connor, of New York, as Husted entered the well, left his seat, and, red and furious, swore at General Husted.

"You — little mannikin," said he, "I'll kick you out of the building."

The house was in an uproar instantly. Mr. Deyo tried to make some further remarks on the bill.

"Mr. Speaker, have the sergeant at arms put the fellow into his seat!" yelled Mr. Sulzer.

The speaker pounded the desk with his gavel continuously. Mike Redmond, the sergeant at arms, approached Mr. Deyo softly from behind and touched him on the arm.

"I won't sit down," said Mr. Deyo.

"Oh, yes, please do now; that's all right," said Redmond, and Mr. Deyo sat down.

The disorderly scene went on for two hours. By the rules, the adoption of which were forced, the previous question was ordered and the final vote taken. It resulted in 67 for the bill and 58 against it.

Senator Hill on the Bill.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—Senator Hill, speaking of the passage of the apportionment bill in Albany, said:

I do not conceal my gratification over the result of the new apportionment. It is the fairest act of the kind ever passed. It enables the people for the first time in thirty years to be equitably represented in the two branches of the legislature, and gives to the Democratic party hereafter the control of that body in both branches. The apportionment is both morally right and constitutionally correct. The pretense of the Republicans that it is unconstitutional will amount to nothing. The courts will not and will decide against them, because their claims are frivolous and ungrounded. For seven years the Republicans refused to take an enumeration to make an apportionment when they had an opportunity to do so themselves, and now they must suffer the consequences of their folly.

Policemen Fight at New York.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Two policemen, John S. Coyle and William E. Mildrum, had a quarrel on Seventh avenue and attacked one another with their clubs. Then Mildrum fired three shots at Coyle, who retreated. Finally they were separated. A woman was the cause of the trouble.

FRIENDLY TO WHITE METAL.

President Harrison Sends an Interesting Letter to the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The day was a silver and Pacific railroad day in the senate. The silver question came up first by taking up the Morgan silver resolution, which constructively are lying on the table, Mr. Cake, of Texas, speaking at length. It was brought back into discussion later by the president's reply to the request for information on the proposed international silver conference, and is likely to be made a continuing subject of debate for some further days. Strongly marked divergence of views were expressed in connection with the relations of the government to the Pacific railroad companies as legislated upon in the pending army appropriation bill. The senate adjourned with this question still under consideration. The president's silver letter follows:

I have received the resolution of the senate of April 21, requesting that if not incompatible with the public interest, I inform the senate what steps have been taken toward the securing of an international conference to consider the question of the future coinage of silver at the ratio of the nations participating in such conference, or to the enlarged use of silver in the monetary system of said countries, and that I transmit to the senate any correspondence between the United States and the governments named the subject, and in response thereto beg respectfully to inform the senate that in my opinion it would not be compatible with the public interest to at this time advise the senate at this time the information requested; but that at the earliest moment after definite information can properly be given of all the facts and any correspondence that may take place will be submitted to congress.

It may not be inappropriate, however, to say here that believing that the full use of silver as a coin metal upon a agreed ratio by the great commercial nations of the world would very highly promote the prosperity of all their people, I have not and will not let any favorable opportunity pass for the promotion of that most desirable result, or if free international agreement be not presently obtainable, then to secure the largest practicable use of that metal.

In the House.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—The house took up the diplomatic and consular appropriation bill. As reported the bill carries $1,584,925, being $503,541 less than the estimates. It proposes radical changes in many consulates, and for that reason met with considerable opposition. Mr. Blount, of Georgia, opened the debate, explaining the bill, and urged the house to accept the figures of the committee. Mr. McCreary, of Kentucky; Mr. Hitt, of Illinois, and Mr. Post, of Illinois, deprecated the curtailment in salaries and the general cut in the bill, and warmly advocated just and proper expenditures.

RAUM AND ENLOE AT ODDS.

A Fist Fight Only Averted by Interference of Others.

WASHINGTON, April 27.—"I'm not afraid of any man living." This was the parting remark of Pension Commissioner Green B. Raum as he made a hurried exit from the room of the house committee on pensions, where the investigation of the pension claims was in progress. Chairman Enloe was endeavoring to ascertain who had furnished a certain amount of money (fifteen dollars) to corrupt an employee of the pension office. Commissioner Raum denied all knowledge of the transaction in spite of repeated inquiries from Mr. Enloe. Judge Payson, of Illinois, who is Commissioner Raum's counsel, finally said:

"Have you not had enough denials?"

Before Mr. Enloe could reply Commissioner Raum ad.-d in a sarcastic tone:

"No, he wants another."

"You're a liar!" shouted Chairman Enloe, jumping from his seat excitedly.

"You're another!" retorted Commissioner Raum, trembling with anger.

Instantly Mr. Enloe made a wild rush for the commissioner of pensions, and there would have been a conflict had not several persons present seized the infuriated chairman. While he was thus a captive he struggled to get at the commissioner, and picked up a glass sponge cup and would have hurled it at General Raum.

A ready hand took it from him. Then Commissioner Raum declared that he was not afraid of any man living. At this Mr. Enloe made another effort to get at the commissioner. The latter, notwithstanding his defiant declaration, grabbed his hat and cane an. left the room.

GILKEY'S STRANGE SUICIDE.

Two Neighbors Watching Him Suspected Nothing Until He Was Dead.

PITTSBURG, April 27.—The most deliberate and remarkable suicide that ever took place in Allegheny county occurred at Boston, John Gilkey, the superintendent of the upper division of the Pittsburg, McKeesport and Youghiogheny railroad, while ill in bed and in the presence of two neighbors, who were watching at his bedside, cut his hand nearly off and bled to death before his act was discovered. The watchers did not realize that there was anything wrong until his cold forehead and ashy color indicated that he was dead. They did not suspect suicide until upon turning down the covers the bed was found to be saturated with blood.

Gilkey had been confined to his bed for a month, suffering from an attack of jaundice and his mind became affected. He asked for his knife for which to pick his teeth. It was given him and after using it for the purpose indicated for a short time he covered himself up and was soon apparently asleep. In that condition he cut the arteries and the flesh to the bone on his left wrist and without a struggle he soon died.

She Was Sympathetic.

A couple of Detroit men were talking about their respective wives the other day at the club.

"You have a very sympathetic wife, I should say," remarked one.

"I don't know about that," hesitated the other.

"Well, I only judge by what I saw from my house the other morning when you slipped and fell on the steps as you were sousing out with her. Why, I saw her actually crying over it."

The other man didn't look pleased at all.

"Yes," he admitted reluctantly. "She cried, but not over my injuries. I sat down flat on that confounded dog of hers."

"Indeed! I didn't hear him howl."

"Well, I should say not. The dog weighs—or did weigh—two pounds, and I weigh 200."—Detroit Free Press.

No Comparison.

In the background: "I hear you are going to marry Miss Bullion. I should think you would marry Goldie Sterling; she is just as rich and much younger."

"Yes, my dear boy; but Miss Bullion's papa is much older."—Life.

The Engineer Was Dead.

NEW YORK, April 27.—Joseph H. Gray, the engineer of the screw ferryboat Cincinnati, of the Pennsylvania railroad, was instantly killed at the bulk head while entering the slip at the foot of Cortlandt street. Gray was engaged in oiling the machinery just over the crankpin, and in some way was literally ground to death. The Cincinnati ran into the slip and several passengers were injured.

Foltz Was Murdered.

LANCASTER, Pa., April 27.—Samuel Foltz, whose horribly mutilated body was found on the Pennsylvania railroad near Colemago, was murdered and his body placed on the tracks to hide the crime by Italians who were badly beaten by Foltz recently for making improper propositions to the latter's daughter. In preparing the remains of Foltz for burial a knife was found driven into his lung.

THE HOUSEKEEPER'S CORNER

USEFUL INFORMATION GATHERED FROM MANY SOURCES.

Recipes that Should be Preserved for Future Reference—Here is the Importance of Other Housewives Considered for Our Benefit.

Recent experiments have shown that, after tea has been steeped in boiling water, for three minutes, over five-eighths of the valuable constituents of the leaf are extracted, while at the end of ten minutes the leaves are almost entirely exhausted. It is better, therefore, not to allow tea to "draw" for a long while, as there is no gain in strength, and the flavoring principles are volatilized and lost. Hard waters dissolve less tannin from the leaves than soft waters, and are to be preferred on this account.

ALMOST A CURE-ALL.

The Praises of the Humble Onion Sounded by a Devotee.

They are invaluable for soups. They are blood purifiers. A liberal use of them is recommended as a cure for boils, and they tend to make the complexion clear and the face free from pimples. The children of those who partake liberally of them most largely nationality escape that bane of childhood, worms. Their use is beneficial to the digestive organs, they are excellent for the liver, the bladder and kidneys, are of benefit in liver complaints, and their power for good in lung affections is well known. They are the best cure for insomnia.

A favorite remedy for a cough is a syrup made by alternating slices of raw onion with slices of sugar. Cut a large onion horizontally, into thin slices, put one in a dish, sprinkle sugar over it, then add another slice of onion, building it up layer by layer until all are used. Cover the dish. About once in three hours a teaspoonful of syrup will have formed, which should be taken at intervals of about this length, throughout the day.

Hot gouttie s, made of onions, and mixed with goose oil, have been used advantageously in croup. Roasted onions are sometimes bound to the feet and placed upon the chests of little ones suffering from the effects of a cold. Placed over night a cloth, then beaten to a pulp, bandaging with this the throat and well up over the ears, they have given relief in cases of diphtheria.—Good Housekeeping.

THE CROSS RIB OF BEEF.

How to Cook This Most Economical and Juiciest of Meats.

"Very few persons even know what a cross-rib of beef is," said an experienced housekeeper, "and yet it is the very juiciest and most economical of cuts, for you get no bones until all are used. Once when that sixteen cents a pound. When trimmed and trussed into a proper fillet shape it is not at all a bad-looking piece, but, like all the solid beefs, it should be properly 'hung' and not cooked too fresh. After it is trimmed into a good shape, tie it up into a somewhat round form and put it into a stone pot without any water, covering it with a tin plate, or, better yet, a stone tin cover with a weight on the top, so that no steam can escape. Add salt and pepper, at the roasting, and set the pot in the oven and let it cook slowly for four hours, according to the size of the piece. It will be found that when done the meat will be tender, juicy and of a much finer flavor than when cooked in the ordinary roasting-pan.—N. Y. Tribune.

"FEED THE BRUTE."

The Best Way to Win a Man's Friendship is Store Grown.

All men are fond of good things to eat. When he takes you out in the evening, don't go to a restaurant with him, but have a luncheon prepared at home. That home luncheon will dwell in his memory. Have a salad and then ask him to make the dressing, after which it is your province to praise him for its excellence.

The lion of a season is not impervious to allurements of a gastronomic nature.

Shakespeare recommends that woman be won with gifts—

"Dumb jewels oft in their silent kind
More than quick words do move a woman's mind."

Pie sometimes proves invincible bait for man.

A Bright Woman's Advice.

If the man you desire to captivate knows a great deal, never parade your own knowledge. The first thing you know the better he will like you. Men of brains force the world over to find a congenial companion for life, and though she mustn't have a head so empty that a rat-tat-tat could be sounded on the top of it with no difficulty.

If you are a bright, witty woman, temper your wit. You are apt to grow sharp and men abhor a sharp woman. Be docile and appreciative, and clinging and helpless and with that, if you possess winning facility as a Hindoo god, you need never do pair.

Grilled and Baked Oysters.

To grill oysters is the simplest of all ways of cooking them, but is to many suppose the most troublesome. It is an excellent "invalid" dish. Place the cleaned oysters with the deep part of the shell downward, on a hot gridiron. When they plump, the shells bulge open with a jet of steam. Serve instantly.

For baked oysters choose fine large ones, and lay a number of them together on a nice round of buttered toast. Put a little pepper and salt and a few bits of butter on them, and set in a very hot oven till the edges of the oysters curl a little.

To Sweep a Room.

Very few people know how to sweep or dust a room. The proper way is just to take all the movable articles and bric-a-brac, dust them carefully, and place them in an adjoining room. Then roll up your curtains and have the apartment swept thoroughly. When the dust is well settled, remove it from the pictures, door and window frames, and then bring back your knick-knacks and lighter pieces of furniture.

Cleaning Silks and Ribbons.

Silks and ribbons may be cleaned and made to look like new by sponging them with equal parts of strong tea and vinegar. Iron with a not too hot iron.

Kerosene for Dandruff.

The best thing to clear dandruff from the hair is kerosene. Of course, if it is used, it ought to be scented, and that can be done.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

WHO STOLE THE BIRD'S NEST?

What the Sheep, the Crow and the Hen Often Do.

To-whit! to-whit! to-whee!
Will you listen to me?
Will you come four and I tell,
And the nice nest I made!

"WHO STOLE FOUR EGGS I LAID?"

Not I, said the sheep; oh, no!
I would not treat a poor bird so!
I gave the wool the nest to line,
Else the cold would numb it of mine.
Baa! baa! said the sheep; oh, no!
I wouldn't treat a poor bird so.

Caw! caw! said the crow,
I would like to know
What bird took away
A bird's nest to-day.

Chuck! chuck! said the hen,
Don't ask me again,
Why, I haven't a chick
Which I do such a trick.
We all gave her a feather,
And she wove them together.
I'd have to be sure
On her nest her beast.
Chuck! chuck! said the hen,
Don't ask me again.

Chuck, a little of mine is right!
We will make a guess at it.
Let us find out his name,
And all cry—For shame!

"LET US FIND OUT HIS NAME."

A little boy hung down his head,
And went and hid behind the bed;
For he stole that pretty nest
From little Robin Redbreast;
And he felt so full of shame
He did not like to tell his name.

Old Mr. Peppy and His Pretty Story.

Old Mr. Peppy had a good many pretty stories, and good girls kept at it very early ago the practice of keeping a diary. But very often the fever soon passed off, and the record of their daily life ceased to a sudden stop somewhere, perhaps, about the middle of March.

But suppose you have always kept a diary with the greatest regularity. And suppose you have written down private and sacred things in this diary that you thought it best always to write in cipher. Suppose, when you had finished, and were very much pleased, these little books were carefully laid aside by you and were at last brought to public notice many, many years after your decease.

This just what happened to Mr. Peppy and his diary. How would you like all the little details of your every day life and your most private and sacred thoughts to be printed for the amusement of everybody.

Happily, for some, it was not known that Samuel Peppy had left such a treasure behind him until more than seventy years ago. Then the manuscript was brought to light, deciphered and published to the world in the year 1825. Samuel Peppy was born at Brampton, near Huntingdon, England. His diary extends from 1660 to 1669, when failing eyesight compelled him to cease.

He not only gives us much about himself, but much, too, about many great events. We can see just how the plague and fire of London were looked upon by the people of that day.

But scarcely less interesting are the private details. Mr. Peppy was evidently very careful about his dress and very proud of a new suit. "Up early," he says, on the 12th of the month, "the first day that I put on my black cloth suit with silver lace."

Sometimes we are carried to a christening. To one of these he tells us how he carried in his pocket a silver spoon and a silver fork, expecting that the child would be named after him. But the parents named the boy John, instead of Samuel; so grieved Mr. Peppy carried the spoons and porringer home again.

A Dog and Her Fawn.

The following pretty tale of the woods is told in Golden Days. While two men were gliding along a creek in California they saw some distance ahead a doe and her fawn drinking from the stream. The bank was very steep, and the doe was quite deep at this point. When the deer saw the hunters they were startled, and in attempting to turn the little fawn lost its balance and fell into the creek. The water runs very swiftly in this creek, and of course the fawn was carried down stream, and the mother deer, apparently losing all fear of the human species, was along the bank, trying to reach her offspring with her head. Falling in this she ran forward for some little distance, plunged in, braced her feet in the crevices of the rocks and waited. Presently the fawn was washed against her and instinctively clasped her neck with its fore feet. She also successfully regained the bank. There she lay down with the baby deer, and, although the two men were not far away, the doe licked and fondled the fawn until it rose to its feet, and then the two animals trotted off into the adjoining woods."

Happy, Though Unequal in Age.

Dr. Johnson's wife was old enough to be his mother, but "he continued to be under the illusions of the wedding day until she died at the age of sixty-four," he being only forty-three.

OVERHEARD AT A RECEPTION.

The man's voice: Ah, when there was but the slightest reason for it that I could read!

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Of course not. What should I know against him? And he may be clever, you say.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Travels? Oh, every one writes travels nowadays, or gets some one else to write them. I saw the book you speak of.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Certainly, he has been abroad, and the writing is not of so very great excellence. He may have written it without help.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Critical? Harsh? What an idea! And I don't dislike him. On the contrary, since you are so much his friend——

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: What do you call friendship?

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: I think I understand perfectly. Ahem! Has your sister confided her love to her?

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Pardon me, but at your own showing a woman must think a great deal of a man when she—— But never mind! By the way, I have just heard about a nice house in Montclair—you might tell your sister——

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Thanks; but I am afraid I shall be out of town next week.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: No, really—it's a pressing business engagement. I don't know when I shall get back. And then I expect to run over to London.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: You are very kind, but I fear I must forego the pleasure. You're very kind, I'm sure.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Oh, most kind! What could be a kindness? I haven't write ten any travels.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Cross? Not at all. Hurt a little? Yes.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Of course I feel— But it doesn't matter in the least what I feel or have felt.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Changed? To you! Angels!

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Dear!

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: But there's nothing to forgive. I ought to ask your pardon on my knees. Oh, do you really mean——

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Yes—yes! Of course I'll come. I'll do anything——

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: London? Pshaw! No, indeed—not now!

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: No—unless you'll come with me. Only say you'll come with me and we'll take in Switzerland and Italy. We'll write our travels together.

The woman's voice.

The man's voice: Darling!—Madelina S. Bridges in Truth.

Fete Was Waiting.

She answered an advertisement to do some simple work in the sewing line. When she had taken a seat in the private office she heard:

"I can do all sorts of sewing and can bring high references."

"You are in deep distress?"

"I am, indeed, kind sir," she replied, taking back her hand; "will you not advise just a flicker, 'and if you aid me I shall always remember you in my prayers.'"

"Well, state your case," said the man, looking her over the while.

"It is a simple tale, sir," she continued, edging nearer. "You see, I am the mother of half a dozen children, and of course they cannot be allowed to starve."

"No, of course not," said the man, sighing and looking dreamily at his left boot toe.

"Still, the children help me all they can," added the woman, looking a shade brighter. "You see, there is Nellie, the eldest, she is helping me in a couple of nice houses; Tom, the second son, is a telegraph messenger; the blacks boots, Sam picks up firewood along the dock, Julie is a cash girl and dear little Jimmie sells the evening papers."

"Well," said the man slowly, "it seems to me that between them all you could manage."

"It would seem so," said the widow, beginning to sob.

"Well, what is the trouble?"

"Well, it is this: My husband's brother Pete is living with us. He is an actor. He is out of a job. He just sits by the stove all day. He is waiting to get a star part from some of the big Broadway managers. The other day a friend offered him a snap as a waiter in a ten cent restaurant for his board, but he indignantly refused. He just sits and sits and sits and have to chip in and feed him. He says some day he is bound to make a hit. Do you think he will, kind sir?"

"Frankly, madam, I do not."

"Then you think I had better not let him sit any longer?"

"So, madam."

"Well," she said, tying a hard knot in her stocking, "just stay here up, and I'll be obliged to you for your advice. Here he's been a-sitting all winter, but I'll just rush right home now and tell him, or as near as I can, what you said. God bless you, kind sir, for your interest in a poor widow."—New York Recorder.

Alarmed.

A good story is told of a very reserved and very clever professor of an English college. Although "the doctor" was a serious man, he was also a kindly one, and once a young man of his college fell ill and all in his power to make him good cheer and the best medical advice.

Finally the invalid's sister arrived, and as she was young and inexperienced the worthy doctor considered it his courteous attention to lighten her load of anxiety.

She was most grateful and confided to her betrothed, who was a fellow, how desirous that only "the dear doctor," the master of the college, should perform their wedding ceremony. The student recovered, and was now to accompany his sister home, there to be nursed into vigor again.

The doctor was present to say goodby, and the young lady was full of gratitude.

"Doctor," she said, grasping both his hands, "you have been so good to me!"

"I have found great pleasure in your acquaintance," said the gentleman, in his most dignified and reserved manner.

"You have done so much for me, but I am going to ask one more favor! Will you promise to marry me?"

The doctor, amiable as he was, dropped her hands and started back in horror.

"My dear young lady," he stammered, "I'm afraid we shouldn't get on together!"—Youth's Companion.

REPUBLICANS MEET.

THE STATE CONVENTION AN ENTHUSIASTIC PARTY RALLY.

The Administration Indorsed—Tariff and Honest Money Upheld—and Delegates to Minneapolis Elected—A New State Committee Chosen.

The Republican Convention at Trenton yesterday to appoint delegates to the Republican National Convention at Minneapolis, developed into a tremendous party rally. Never have the Republicans of New Jersey been more enthusiastic or more confident of redeeming the State from Democratic control. The convention was held in Taylor's Opera House, which was packed with delegates and spectators. Peter F. Wanser, the new Mayor of Jersey City, who defeated Allen E. McDermott, the Democratic boss, was present and was received enthusiastically. Mayor Wanser was forced to make a speech, in the course of which he said that he was not a candidate for the nomination of Governor. He thought it would not be using the people of Jersey City right to desert them at this time. "Ex-Congressman John Hess, Jr., chairman of the State Committee, called the convention to order at noon. Ex-Judge John A. Blair, of Hudson, was elected chairman and made a vigorous speech. References to Blaine and Harrison evoked great applause. J. Herbert Burke, of Hudson; Augustus S. Ferrell, of Gloucester; and Elmer W. Sanderson, of Essex, were chosen as secretaries of the convention.

At this juncture the members of the State Committee tendered their resignations and offered a resolution that thereafter the committee should be composed of one member from each county and four members-at-large, provided that in counties having more than three and less than five members in the Assembly an additional member should be elected, and in all counties having more than five members two additional members should be elected. This arrangement was not altogether satisfactory to the convention and an amendment was carried providing that the committee should consist of one member from each county and four members-at-large, but counties containing cities of over 100,000 population to be entitled to two representatives on the committee. This gives Newark and Jersey City each one extra member. The resignation of the old members were accepted and the resolution in its amended shape unanimously adopted. A resolution was also adopted recommending the advisability of a mass-election convention early in June to nominate several counties, the details to be referred to the new State Committee.

Pending reports from its subordinate committees the convention took a recess. Immediately afterward the platform was read and after slight changes adopted. It indorses the Administration of President Harrison in thorough-going terms and says: "The President, wise, clear-headed, and patriotic in his every word and act, has furnished to noble example of a safe ruler of a great people." The platform adds that the Republican Congress has kept the promise of the Republican party to revise the tariff in the interest of American industries, American wages and American homes. It has provided for the rebuilding of the Navy and has maintained a happy mean in appropriations between extravagance and parsimony. It then contrasts the comfortable and duplicity with which the present Democratic House is treating the questions which engross the attention and affect the interests of the people. The platform goes on as follows:

We declare our constant and abiding faith in the wisdom and beneficence of the protective tariff system. We believe that the tariff act known as the "McKinley bill," in spite of misrepresentations from foreign manufacturers and from their allies in this country, has been fully sustained by the calm judgment of the American people. Under its operation our foreign trade has increased in the year just closed so as to exceed in amount that of any previous year. From no point have more cheering reports been received, considering the fact that the protection afforded by the McKinley bill has not resulted in a largely decreased importation of such products and a corresponding benefit to our foreign competitors, but the great manufacturing industries which add to the resources of our State have unusually flourished, and there has been in wages to our people are the splendid product of the protective system, and must not be sacrificed to the clamor of the American free-trader or the interests of the foreign manufacturer.

We are uncompromisingly opposed to any and all attempts to debase our National currency. We stand with President Harrison and the Republican party in favor of using both gold and silver as money, and we commend the action of the coining of a 70-cent silver dollar. We want no silver dollar that is not equal in value at all times to any other dollar.

The platform closes with a scathing denunciation of Democratic misgovernment in New Jersey, setting forth the various ends to which legislative powers have been subjected at the will of an unscrupulous majority. Ballot-box stuffers even have been rewarded with public office. The administration has been the basest slave of corporation influence. Reference is made to the Reading Railroad deal as a movement to increase the price of coal.

At large—General Wm. J. Sewell, of Camden; Hon. Wm. Walter Phelps, of Passaic; A. Halsey, of Essex, and Garret A. Hobart, of Passaic. Alternates—L. H. Kirkbride, of Burlington; George T. Cortelyou, of Ocean; Elisha P. Gaddis, of Essex, and Colonel William Morrell, of Union.

District delegates—1st, David Baird, of Cape May, and Daniel F. Elmer, of Cumberland. 2d—Colonel Washington Moore, of Mercer, and Henry C. Thorn, of Monmouth. 3d, R. F. Howell, of Middlesex, and Wm. T. Hoffman, of Monmouth. 4th, Frank Swayze, of Sussex, and G. Walter Scudder, of Morris. 5th, John S. Miller, of Bergen, and Thomas McEwan, both of Passaic. 6th, Dr. H. C. Bender and Frank Parker, both of Essex. 7th, Gilbert Collins and Thomas McEwan, both of Hudson. 8th, Mayor Alexander Gilbert, of this city and Elias M. Condit, of Essex.

The new State Executive Committee was formed as follows: Atlantic, John J. Gardner; Bergen, C. E. Breckenridge; Burlington, Robert Hunt; Camden, David Baird; Cape May, Dr. Walter S. Corson; Cumberland, M. T. Tellet; Essex, Elmer W. Sanderson; Gloucester, Hudson, R. B. Seymour and John H. Duffy; Hunterdon, Richard Stevens; Mercer, Colonel Wm. E. Sickle; Middlesex, John H. Conger; Monmouth, Matthias Woolley; Morris, Geo. W. Jenkins; Ocean, A. M. Bradshaw; Passaic, Arthur E. Pierce; Salem, George Hires; Somerset, Edward J. Anderson; Union, E. M. Wood; Warren, D. C. Blair.

Essex county did not agree upon its members, but will do so shortly. The committeemen-at-large will be named by the chairman of the convention at an early day. The convention was wound up with a short and humorous speech by ex-Congressman Hoxy, of Michigan.

Colonel William Morrow, a colored man from Hudson county, was opposed as alternate delegate-at-large by Henry E. Carroll, of Somerset, of "The New Independent." Colonel Morrow received 448 votes and Mr. Carroll 327.

THE COURT INCENSED.

JUDGE M'CORMICK DENOUNCES THE SUNDAY DESECRATIONS.

He Orders the County Officers to Protect the Community—Sentences Imposed in the Special Sessions Yesterday Morning.

The Union County court of special session convened yesterday morning. There were several matters on the orphans court and other branches and prisoners were arraigned as follows:

William Leuch, charged under two old indictments for assault and battery, pleaded not guilty. The offence were committed in 1888, and Leuch was arrested yesterday on a capias. The case was committed to Frank Bes and Christian Regenthal.

Mr. Louis A. Graff appeared for Leuch and made a statement in behalf of the defendant. He said that Regenthal, who was in dispute with Leuch, when the alleged assault was committed was equally at fault. He has since left the city. Rea who was struck while acting as peace officer, complained in fear of passion, and now desires to withdraw.

Prosecutor Marsh said he had not had an opportunity to investigate the case and the sentence of Leuch was deferred.

John Kelley, of Rahway, pleaded not guilty to assault on his wife and attempted criminal assault on his stepdaughter, Annie Springsteen. The court assigned Mr. Gilbert Lindsay as attorney for the prisoner. The trial was set down for Friday morning.

Daniel Cobb pleaded guilty to malicious mischief in breaking a window in William Flynn's grocery. The defendant is an old offender, and he was sentenced to the county jail for three months.

Patrick Barley, who was charged with assault and battery on Officer Lake Matson, was arraigned for trial. He was defended by Lawyer Graff.

Officer Matson testified to being assaulted by Carley and "Tramp" Barry. He caught the men robbing the person of a man named Mohan, whom they knocked down.

Carley denied the allegations, and testified that the officer struck him with the club without provocation. He denied being with "Tramp" Barry in the robbery of Mohan.

The court found the defendant guilty. The prisoner was then tried for the robbery of Lawrence Mohan, the allegation being highway robbery.

Mr. Mohan testified that on the night of March 26th, he was going down Pine street, Elizabeth, when three men, "Tramp" Barry, Griffen and Carley, stopped him for money to buy beer. They threw him down and took what money he had on his person. He was not positive of Carley's identity, but believed he was one of the men.

Officers Matson and O'Loughlin, who arrested Carley, identified him as one of Mohan's assailants, and the court found the defendant guilty as charged.

The sentence of Carley was deferred until Friday morning.

Peter Costick was next arraigned for an atrocious assault on John Killette and the trial took place.

Dr. Mosher, the house physician of the hospital, described the wounds of Killette which were inflicted with a glass bottle.

Killette and other witnesses were sworn and the prisoner was convicted.

Costick was a prisoner of one year in State prison upon Cosrick, Judge McCormick said this assault was one of the Sunday fights which are so frequently about Elizabeth, and he also took occasion to denounce the shameful Sunday desecration and sacrilegious conduct witnessed on the suburbs of that city. He was a spectator of some of these disgraceful scenes, and he said the authorities must put a stop to them. He directed the county officers to take such steps as will prevent the continuance of the disgraceful practices, the closing of the public houses, and bring to justice the offending parties.

Came Near Ending Two Lives.

An unknown man jumped off the Royal Blue line train at Elizabeth yesterday and came within an ace of being killed or badly hurt. He struck Theodore K. Pembrook, who was standing at the station waiting for a train. The shock knocked Mr. Pembrook down. The stranger was well dressed, and, coming out in Philadelphia. He was not to Elizabeth, he said, to attend a funeral. He was slightly bruised. He declined to give his name.

EPISCOPAL CONVENTION.

ARRANGEMENTS BEING MADE FOR THE GATHERING IN MAY.

A Large Number of Delegates Expected — Bishop Scarborough will Preside and Four Business Sessions will be Held—Committees Arranging for the Entertainment of the Delegates.

Next Tuesday Camden will be invaded by from three to four hundred delegates representing the Protestant Episcopal churches in the Diocese of New Jersey.

The occasion for the gathering will be the annual Diocesan Convention, which opens in St. Paul's church, on Market street, that city, on May 3d, at 10.30 a. m. In consequence of the number of parishes in the city have organized into a general committee for the entertainment of the visiting delegates and are all busily at work in these preparations.

This diocese is by far the largest of the two into which the State is divided and its territorial limit extends as far up the State as Elizabeth, while in the opposite direction the Atlantic alone is the boundary.

The fact has been so rapidly increased that the work is said to be getting beyond the control of one Bishop and it is declared that as no far distant day the Bishop will have to have assistance of some sort. An extra diocese is talked of.

At the session next week Bishop Scarborough will preside and will hold four business sessions on the morning and afternoon of Tuesday and Wednesday. On Tuesday evening a missionary meeting is to be held.

KILLED BY A RIDE LIKE "PLAIN."

John F. Peebles Meets With a Terrible Death.

John F. Peebles, father of W. F. Peebles of Raritan, was struck by an express train near his home at Weston about 6.45 p. m., yesterday and instantly killed. He was on his way to Millstone with a horse and buggy. His buggy was literally converted into kindling wood. Mr. Peebles was hurled a distance and was terribly mutilated. The body was taken in charge by Undertaker Adair of Somerville, and after an examination by Acting-Coroner Sutphen was taken to his late home. The crew of the train have been summoned to appear before the coroner.

The Base Ball Season Will Open Saturday.

The arrangements for the opening of the base ball season are complete and every effort is being made by Manager Kellerand the Committee of the Crescent League Club to comfortably care for the large attendance they anticipate. A large number of representative citizens is expected will be on hand with their fair base ball enthusiasts, all the local "cranks" of course will be there, and as the Plainfield Cornet Band of seventeen pieces has been engaged for the occasion music has been given a carte blanche to select his artists, he has gladly availed himself of this liberal offer to show the quality of his band. Prior to the opening of the game with the Bicycle "boys" there will be a concert on the grounds, and the music will probably inspire enthusiasm in "cranks" and ball players alike. The following selection of musical gems will entertain the audience:

1. Quick Step—Wide Awake	Goetz
2. Waltz—Sweet Dreams	Wilson
3. March—M. A. P. C. C.	Wilson
4. Selection—Trip to Chinatown	Bratton
5. Waltz—Dreamy Days	Wilson

7. Waltz—Sleepy Hollow	Wilson
8. March—Battle of Santiago	Wilson

The Origin of Bangs.

The Pittsburg Commercial says that the name had its origin in the request story for girls on Blackwell's Island. Mr. Bangs, it will be remembered, is the habit of getting away, and it was difficult to recapture the effervescent humorist. He did so. It was first suggested to drop them, but this was considered too severe, so they were simply shorn of their locks. Out and on them. 200 fine shears were used.

The request story struck the people's fancy, and in the course of a few years after its adoption as a mark in the reformatory it became one of the fads of fashion.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Boomer Leads.

Of the two distinct reservations recently opened to settlement by the presidential proclamation, the first strip, to which the boomers made their rush April 19, was a portion of the surplus lands of the Sissetons and Wahpeton Sioux. The lands were mostly in the northeastern corner of South Dakota, with a small portion stretching into North Dakota. The total number of acres opened in this reservation was 867,257. The Sisseton Sioux selected somesteads of 160 acres each and sold the rest to the government; that in turn opened it to white settlers. The Sissetons once owned the whole country from Winnipeg to St. Louis and from the Pacific ocean eastward to Lake Michigan. Now they own 160 acres apiece.

The region opened in the Dakotas *consists of much choice land, with con*siderable that is worthless. In this Sisseton reservation is the source of the Red river of the north, which flows northward: the Minnesota river, which empties into the Mississippi, and the Big Sioux, which flows into the Missouri. Soldiers in the Union army during the late war got 160 acres of the new lands by paying two dollars in fees, ordinary settlers paid $2.50 an acre, due at the end of five years' residence on the claim. Five thousand persons obtained homes during the Sisseton rush.

The lands for which 25,000 boomers made a rush April 19 are part of the reservation of the Cheyenne and Arapahoe Indians, forming Oklahoma. The tract is bounded on the west by Texas, and contains 4,000,000 acres. The Indians selected in severalties of 160 acre farms 500,000 acres of the land, and they have been shrewd enough to get the best of it lying along the water courses. The new settlers pay the government $1.50 an acre, half of which is to be paid in two years. The amount of land thus *opened up is twice as large as the pres*ent territory of Oklahoma, whose boarders will be enlarged accordingly.

The lands in this tract were divided beforehand into six counties, with county seats located and staked off into town lots. A colony of 1,000 people intend organizing a great co-operative community in one of the counties.

The Nicaragua Canal.

The governor of California has sent a circular letter to the governors of all the other states asking them to appoint delegates to attend the national Nicaragua canal convention to be held at St. Louis June 23. Certainly all the governors will respond. Here is an enterprise which will be one of the grandest achievements of the Nineteenth century. What it will be to the United States was put before us in an object lesson at the time of the threatened war with Chili. It means that in case of any difficulty with South America, Asia, the South Pacific islands or the Pacific coast of British America our warships can in two weeks pass from New York to San Francisco, whereas it now takes nearly two months for our fleetest cruisers to measure the distance around Cape Horn and come up on the other side.

It means that the ships of all nations shall pay toll to citizens of the United States in conveying freight through the canal to the Pacific. The countries along the line of the canal have granted all necessary concessions to the canal company, and it is working on steadily, fulfilling its contracts. But more capital is needed, and the citizens of this country generally need to take a more enthusiastic interest in the enterprise.

Senator Sherman endeavored to put a bill through the last congress granting some government backing and countenance to the canal, but the bill failed to pass. Again he is working to secure its passage, and every patriotic citizen must hope it will become a law.

The United States has agreed to the resolution of Mr. Peffer, of Kansas, requesting the secretary of state to obtain information on the use of electricity as a motive power for farm implements and machinery, and also in regard to the growth and propagation of plants by electricity in foreign countries. Here is a field for useful investigation. If the signs of the time mean anything, electricity may largely take the place of horse power on the farm. The day will come when it will plow the farmer's ground, haul his produce to market and reap and thrash his grain. It will be cheaper than steam, when once man knows how to apply it, and we are rapidly nearing that period. Then there will be no more stables to take care of and no more horses eating their heads off. Agriculture stands more than any others are interested in the development of electricity as applied to small motors. There is reason, too, to believe that the same mysterious force will play no small part as the servant of the vegetable gardener and florist in the future.

Secretary Foster recommends that United States inspection agents be stationed in Europe at the ports from which most of our immigrants ship to America. A bill will be introduced into congress authorizing such inspectors. Every year Europe pours more and more of her dregs upon us, and it is time to draw the line tight. Canada, meantime, is offering bounties to immigrants.

THE LOSS ONE MILLION.

Flames Devastate a Whole Square in Philadelphia.

PANIC IN THE CENTRAL THEATER.

A Wild Stampede for Life in Which Many People Are Injured—Taggart's Sunday Times Building, Poulson's Hotel and the Central Theater Burned.

PHILADELPHIA, April 28.—A million dollars gone up in flames and smoke and nearly an entire square consumed is the record of the fire fiend's work in Philadelphia last night. The territory devastated by the flames is bounded on the north by Sansom street, on the south by Walnut street, on the east by Eighth street and on the west by Ninth street. In the block were the Central theater, now a smoldering ruin, and the historic old Walnut Street theater, which was not reached by the fire. The Times annex, which stood directly in the rear of the Central theater, where the flames originated, is also in ruins. In addition to The Times, which occupied two floors and the basement, the building was occupied by a number of business houses, whose loss will be heavy. Taggart's Sunday Times and Poulson's hotel, which stand on Walnut street above the theater, are badly gutted, and the loss will be heavy. All the buildings on Eighth street between Walnut and Sansom are badly damaged by fire, smoke and water, as are those fronting on Walnut street.

The Loss $1,000,000.

A careful estimate places the entire loss at over $1,000,000, and it is said that the insurance will not reach $400,000. The fire is one of the most sensational which has ever visited this city. At 8 o'clock Gilmore's Philadelphia theater, the most popular variety theater in the city, was crowded, the attraction being "The Devil's Auction." While the orchestra was playing the overture a fire broke out in the dressing rooms under the stage and a hasty struggle for life. As they rushed from their dressing rooms they were met at every turn by the flames and many had narrow escapes. A number of the women fainted and were carried into the street almost at the cost of their lives and those of their rescuers. All of them lost everything except the costumes which they had on at the moment the fire started.

In the front of the house the first warning received was from the crier on the stage, which was followed by a burst of smoke and there was a wild rush for the door. Men, women and boys were borne down and crushed on the floor in the fight to reach safety. In the top gallery the rush was the worst, as the staircase leading down to the street is narrow and tortuous. At the Walnut street theater it spread with fire escapes and hundreds reached the street by them. Hundreds more were, however, carried out by the firemen and brought into insensibility and left lying in the burning theater. The police and firemen brought out those who had been injured and left to perish.

Ambulances from the Jefferson, Pennsylvania, Hahnemann and University hospitals carried about 100 injured to the hospitals. In an incredibly short time the rear of the theater was a mass of seething flames, which shot high into the air.

Directly in the rear of the Central theater and fronting on Sansom street was the eight story Times annex, separated from the theater only by a few feet of space. As the flames shot up they burst through the windows and the building was doomed. When the alarm was given the whole force of The Times was at work, but every one escaped.

The Times editorial rooms were elegantly fitted up and a valuable library occupied a portion of this floor. Everything was eaten up by the fire.

A Panic Averted at the Walnut.

At the southwest corner of the square at Ninth and Walnut is the historic old Walnut Street theater, where a large audience had assembled to see a comedy. When the alarm was given Business Manager Simpson decided instantly to have the announcement made that no performance would be given, and to dismiss the assemblage with the assurance that tickets would be redeemed. Manager E. H. Price, of the comedy company, wishing to avoid a panic, announced that on account of the continued illness of one of the actors no performance would be given. The audience left the theater in order and no accident occurred.

From the Central theater and The Times building the flames spread to Poulson's restaurant, and for a time it looked as if the whole square would go. Sansom street is narrow, and from the burning Times annex the flames swept across and set fire to the store of S. M. Wanamaker & Co., which fronts on Chestnut street. The flames in Wanamaker's were finally extinguished, but not until considerable damage had been done. The Times annex, however, could not be saved, and by 11 o'clock was a mass of ruins.

Scenes at the Fire.

In "The Devil's Auction" company were forty people—eighteen men and twenty-two women. The stage manager of the company reports that all are accounted for.

The rush down the fire escapes was thrilling. Like rats the men and boys of the galleries rolled and tumbled down, with an occasional clutch at a rod or support to stay their flight. Many fell with but very few injuries in their journey and landed on the sidewalk with broken limbs and other injuries. It is miraculous that no one was killed. Those following is a partial list of the badly burned and injured:

John McConley, Harry McCloskey, Robert McGroarty, Abram Mallock, James Pigeon, Jerry Twenty-nine, Harry Patterson, Frank Robinson, Cassie Sibley, James Rice, Patrick Mooney, James Scanlon, Charles Mooney, Joseph Silver, John Ward, Charles Worden, George Gantes and Patty Goldberg.

Mr. McLaughlin, of The Times, estimates his loss at $250,000; insurance, $100,000. Colonel McClure lost many books, valuable manuscripts and clippings.

This is the fourth fire that has visited the site where smoulders the remains of the Central theater. In 1861 thirteen ballet girls were roasted to death, although the building of that time was but slightly damaged. Again in 1867 disaster came. The scene was then called the American Variety theater. It was burned to the ground, and seven men, four of them firemen, were crushed under the fall of the Walnut street wall.

ST. PAUL'S BANK FAILURE.

The Commercial Closes Its Doors During a Run.

ST. PAUL, April 28.—The Commercial bank, of St. Paul, has closed its doors, as a result of a run caused in part by the recent failure of the St. Paul Germania Fire Insurance company. The leading man in the insurance company is Albert Scheffer, who is also president of the bank which bears his name.

Scheffer is confined to his home by illness and William Hamm, vice president, and Herman Scheffer, cashier, have not yet been found. Insurance Commissioner Merriam, of Kansas, is in the city, and in company with Insurance Commissioner Smith, of Minnesota, called on the St. Paul Germania Fire Insurance company with a view to further inquiring into the affairs of that concern. It is now reported that the affairs of the accident insurance company, which are under the same management as the German Fire Insurance company, are in bad shape.

Mr. Middleton, one of the bank directors, stated to the United Press reporter that all depositors of the bank would be paid in full, and none except the stockholders would lose a cent. He said that the run was entirely caused by a rumor set in circulation in the country to the effect that the failure of the German Fire Insurance company would have a serious effect upon the popular banking institution. This rumor reached the city and caused a run which necessitated the suspension. State Bank Examiner Keyes states that the bank was found to be in good condition when he last examined into its affairs.

FASHIONS

New Wraps and Millinery.

Height on the shoulders is no longer the characteristic feature of the new mantelets. The effect predominating in some of the newest ones for spring and summer is that of greater width obtained by the use of wide lace frillings, large ribbon bows, rosettes, etc. The black silk mantle here illustrated has a double pelerine of full spotted net edged with lace at the shoulders and finished in front with jet. A large bow of moire ribbon with very long ends is attached to the collar at the back. The hat worn with this mantle has a guipure brim and is trimmed with large bows of heliotrope satin ribbon and Prince of Wales plumes.

A DRESSY MANTLE AND WATTEAU JACKET.

A new effect is secured in the jacket worn the Watteau plait by means of a belt or sash, as shown in our cut of a long jacket. This jacket is of black pouit de soie, with sleeves and yoke in shape of lace. A Watteau plait is set into the back seam at the bottom and drawn up to the neck outside of the moire sash, which confines the full front at the waist. The lower corners appearing this jacket is in corn guipure over a transparent drawn foundation, with Welsh crown. The trimmings are a band of ecru ribbon, rosette of bebe velvet ribbon, osprey and tufts and velvet strings.

Summer Hats for Little Girls.

There are some charming summer hats for little maids. These are in art silk, flowered muslin, Venetian satin and crepon. They have full crowns and shady brims lined with silk of a delicate color. There is no a ...ture that looks so fresh and dainty as the trim of apple green. A hat seen was of soft silk in these two shades.

Women are more than ever inclined to buy men's style of dress.

WILLIAM ASTOR'S WILL.

He Leaves $60,000,000 to His Son, John Jacob.

MRS. DRAYTON GETS HER PORTION

Her Father Believes in Her Innocence, It Is Said, and She Receives $2,000,000. Mrs. August Belmont to Succeed Mrs. Astor as Queen of Society.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The will of William Astor leaves the bulk of his fortune to his son, John Jacob, whose wife was Miss Willing, of Philadelphia. Mr. Astor's entire fortune amounts to $70,000,000. It was about $68,000,000 originally, but the accretions through interest have been about $2,000,000. Each of the three daughters will receive $2,000,000, and when the other bequests are deducted there will be in the neighborhood of $60,000,000 to be handed over to John Jacob. The widow will receive an annual income while she lives of $300,000. At her death this will go to her son, John Jacob. She will also receive the family residences in New York and Newport, including the new city mansion for which plans were recently made. Provision has been made in the will for completion of the mansion, which at Mrs. Astor's death will become the property of her son, as the family home.

Mrs. Drayton Not Cut Off.

John Jacob Astor will receive the great fortune of his father, subject to care for his children. There is now one son, William Vincent Astor, about six months old. Mrs. J. Coleman Drayton, the second daughter, will receive $2,000,000 with a shilling, as some people supposed she would be on account of the Borrowe scandal, will receive $2,000,000, the same as her daughters. Under the will she will receive $2,000,000 to be added to the $600,000 which was given to her at her marriage. Mr. Astor was always fond of Mrs. Drayton and showed his daughter Augusta, Mrs. Drayton, and from the first to the last of the Borrowe scandal he maintained that she had been innocent of any wrongdoing.

Mr. Astor was perfectly satisfied with Mr. Drayton's explanation of that clause in his letter which was regarded as reflecting upon his wife. The claims was "You have done me the greatest wrong that one man can do another."

Mr. Drayton Really Meant.

Mr. Drayton declared that by this he meant that Borrowe had broken up his home by his interference, by his persistent following of Mrs. Drayton about and by his careless matter among clubmen and society people. He did not mean to charge that anything criminal had occurred.

That Mr. Astor was convinced of his daughter's innocence is shown by his generous provision for her in his will. There is no doubt that Mrs. Drayton will return to America and also that she will reside with her mother in New York and Newport. It is uncertain yet whether Mrs. Drayton will come with her mother next Saturday. She may decide to return to England and bring her children with her when she comes.

An authentic friend of the family said that there was not a word in the letter that Mrs. Drayton had not been allowed to see her children. She was at liberty to see them at any time, he said, but has pledged herself not to take them away without her husband's consent. Mrs. Orme Wilson and Mrs. Roosevelt Roosevelt, the other daughters, will receive $2,000,000. Both already have large fortunes. Mrs. William Astor has a large fortune of her own in addition to the annual income left by her husband's will.

Mr Is Now "Mr. Astor."

All of the legacies are in trust for the children of the legatees. In this respect Mrs. Astor has followed the plan of her own originally drawn by William Backhouse Astor. The daughters all have children who will come into the property at the death of their mother.

William Waldorf Astor, as the oldest in the male line, is now the "Mr." Astor of the family. He is also the wealthiest. His fortune, which consists wholly of inherited property, amounted to $20,000,000. William Waldorf has been fully as careful in his business affairs as was his father and his father was, and it has been naturally increasing at the rate of nearly $5,000,000 a year.

There is already much speculation in society as to the effect that Mrs. William Astor's forced retirement will have upon the social leadership. It can be positively said that Mrs. August Belmont will re-enter society next winter, and that her friends will promptly re-enthrone her as society's queen. A few years ago Mrs. Astor's social rule was petted away. She ruled as absolutely as did Mrs. Astor, who succeeded her in the leadership.

Astor's Funeral to Paris.

PARIS, April 28.—The body of the late William Astor will be conveyed to New York on the General Transatlantic line steamer La Bourgogne, which sails from Havre on Saturday. The funeral service will be held this afternoon at the American Episcopal church. There was no unusual display.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 28.—A Jewish peddler named Max Lesser was found dead in the woods near Glen Lyon. He is believed to have been murdered. Two weeks ago the body of another peddler was found in the woods near Montrose, and it is thought that an organized gang is pursuing peddlers.

Manager Girard's Rash Act.

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., April 28.—Frank Wade, who attended the "Wonderland" show at Ouris hall, wished to leave before the performance was over. Wade stepped over a seat to depart, he said, whereupon Manager Girard struck him with a club and broke his skull. Wade will die.

Protestant Clergymen Protest.

TROY, N. Y., April 28.—The Protestant clergymen of this city have addressed an open letter to the board of school commissioners protesting against the recent removal of twenty-one Protestant teachers employed in the schools and the appointments of Catholics in their place.

Ex-Senator Laughlin Assaulted.

BUFFALO, April 28.—At the trial of the case of Mrs. Kinsella against Dr. Charles Carey for damages for malpractice, Dr. Carey attacked ex-Senator Laughlin, Mrs. Kinsella's lawyer, and struck him in the face. Lawyer Laughlin, who used to drag Dr. Carey away, was also struck.

Burglars Make a Haul.

EATON, N. Y., April 28.—Burglars entered the New York, Ontario and Western railroad station and Morse Brothers' store here. They blew open the safe and secured $100 at the station and $300 at the store.

THE POLITICAL ARENA.

Empire State Republicans in Convention at Albany.

ILLINOIS DEMOCRATS FOR PALMER.

If a Western Man is to Be Named for President They Want Their Favorite Senator to Get the Nomination—Colorado Desires a Free Silver Man.

ALBANY, April 28.—The 777 delegates to the state Republican convention in Kinney's theatre this week were nearly all in their seats today when Chairman Brookfield, of the state committee, called the convention to order. The temporary chairman named was W. A. Southerland, who made a speech in which he thanked the convention for the honor, and then dwelt briefly upon state and national politics.

It is understood that Hon. Whitelaw Reid will be made permanent chairman. There is a letter from Warner Miller in the possession of ex-Congressman Sherlock, and it will be read at the convention. It will be Mr. Miller's views on state politics very briefly given.

No Instructions for Delegates.

So far as is known the convention will not be called upon to transact any business outside of the selection of delegates to the national convention, the naming of presidential electors under the new congressional apportionment, the selection of electors at large, adoption of the platform and a reorganization of the state committee.

This morning the state committee met at the Kenmore to decide contests. The only one noted is in Albany county. It is believed that the convention can get through in one session and that all will be over by today. Indications are that while indorsement of the national administration will be made, that no resolutions will be adopted favoring any one particular candidate, or in any way tending to instruct the delegates to the national convention.

There is a good deal of talk among the delegates as to the legality of the new apportionment. It is not improbable that in most cases will be made immediately. The board of supervisors of some counties will redistrict the assembly districts under the reapportionment bill, and the Republicans will apply to the courts to prevent the change from being made. Appeals will be taken to the court of appeals, and if the redistricting order is finally granted it will prevent the execution of the redistricting ordered by the legislature.

To Name the Big Four.

It is generally conceded that the delegates at large will be the same four years ago—Depew, Platt, Miller and Hiscock. There has been some talk among the Brooklyn men of putting forward ex-Mayor Schroeder as a candidate against ex-Senator Platt, but it is not likely to fructify into any formidable opposition.

The platform will reiterate the fundamental principles of Republicanism, including protection and sound finance, indorse reciprocity and give commendation to President Harrison's administration, with a complimentary mention of his able secretary of state; there will be scathing denunciation of the policy which has been inaugurated in this state by the present leaders of the Democracy. There is no question but that the resolutions will be in the same tone on national affairs as those recently passed in Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.

The undercurrent of sentiment which insists upon having the delegates free from instruction is largely charged with inquiries as to the possibility of Mr. Blaine's acceptance of the nomination. If it was thought that he would refuse to run, there would be practical unanimity among the delegates for a resolution requesting the delegates at large and the district delegates as well to vote for him at Minneapolis.

Fassett and Reapportionment.

Ex-Senator J. Sloat Fassett was asked if the Republican convention would take any action in the Democratic reapportionment of the state. Mr. Fassett said:

"I don't believe they will. Personally, I do not believe that there is shy necessity for such action. The reapportionment is a act upon the Democratic party with much more force than any appeal of ours to the people. Why, by its action the Democracy has made Rochester Republican for ever, and I don't know but some other cities. While I am talking to you I want to say this one thing: It is a notable fact that only such sections as are controlled by Irish Democrats have been given any greater representation—Kings county with Hugh McLaughlin; New York, with Tom Grady; Erie, with William Sheehan; Rensselaer, with Ed Murphy. What do you suppose such men as these care for county representation? It will not be many months before the Democrats in the country throw over the present controlling influences and refuse to allow the cities to dictate the entire legislation of the state."

New Jersey Republicans Meet.

TRENTON, April 28.—The Republican state convention to name delegates to Minneapolis made Judge John A. Blair both temporary and permanent chairman. The delegates cheered and cheered and cheered for Secretary Blaine in his address, and then somebody proposed a cheer for Harrison, which was given. The platform commended Harrison's administration, the McKinley bill and opposed free silver. Every point in the platform was received with enthusiasm. When the reading was completed a delegate tried to move a reconsideration with instructions to insert an indorsement of Mr. Blaine, but, though Mr. Blaine's name was received with cheers, the motion was not even seconded, and the platform was adopted as read.

Upon motion of Senator Griggs the state committee was reorganized so as to be composed of one member from each county and four committeemen at large.

W. J. Sewell, John A. Blair, Garrett A. Hobart and George H. Halsey were nominated for delegates at large.

During the convention the members of the state executive committee realigned in a body. The district delegates were chosen as follows:

First district—David Baird, of Camden, and Daniel F. Elmer, of Cumberland. Second—Colonel Washington E. Richling, of Mercer, and Henry P. Thorn, of Burlington. Third—B. F. Howell, of Middlesex, and William T. Hoffman, of Monmouth. Fourth—Frank Swayze, of Sussex, and George W. Jenkins, of Morris. Fifth—John E. Miller, of Bergen, and William Barbour, of Passaic. Sixth—Dr. F. C. Herold and Frank Parker, both of Essex. Seventh—Gilbert Collins and Thomas McEwan, both of Hudson. Eighth—Alexander Gilbert and Elias M. Condit, both of Essex.

Famous Republicans at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, April 28.—The sixth annual banquet of the American club at the Monongahela House last night, celebrating the anniversary of General Grant, brought together many famous Republicans.

Governor McKinley, of Ohio, responded to the toast "Grant, Greater with the Growing Years." In a brief but beautifully worded eulogy Mr. McKinley said that Grant's place is secure in the remembrance of a nation not given to hero worship. Hon. John M. Thurston spoke of "The Republican Party." Hon. John Dalzell spoke of "Pennsylvania, Virtue, Liberty and Independence." Hon. W. A. Stone talked in an interesting manner of "The New Congress and Its Hopes, Its Expectations and His Disappointments." General Algor spoke about the Republican party in a manner to wildly enthuse the audience.

Before leaving the city Governor McKinley said there was no Foraker-am or Sherman-am in Ohio, except in newspapers. He declined to say anything about the probability of his leading the Ohio delegation to Minneapolis. Asked in regard to Republican prospects for 1892, he said he was confident the nominee of the party will be elected.

General Algor was rather indisposed to talk of his own prospects in Michigan and the country at large as a presidential candidate. He said: "There is not much talking place at present to disturb the state of Michigan politically. If we succeed in defeating the Miner law by which presidential electors are chosen by congressional districts, there will be no doubt as to the state being strongly Republican."

Illinois Democrats for Palmer.

SPRINGFIELD, Ills., April 28.—The Democratic state convention nominated Altgeld for governor and General Black and Judge Hunter were nominated by acclamation for congressmen at large. Ex-Assistant Postmaster General A. E. Stevenson, A. W. Greer, C. E. Crofts, Ben T. Cable, N. E. Worthington, Walter Watson, Samuel B. Chase and John A. King were chosen delegates at large to the national convention.

The convention instructed the Illinois delegation to vote as a unit and to present the name of the candidate to be a western man. It also indorsed Cleveland's administration, however, which is regarded as encouraging the claims of Senator Palmer.

Senator Palmer, on being asked to express his wishes as to the course of the convention, telegraphed as follows: "I don't ask instructions. I don't wish to yield anything to opposition. I don't wish to antagonize Mr. Cleveland. My friends ought to speak on both Mr. Cleveland and myself in language of their own."

The Alliance Call Denounced.

TOPEKA, Kan., April 28.—There is a big row among the Alliance and People's party leaders over the call for a secret conference of representatives of the southern states at Birmingham. Chairman Chase, of the People's party executive committee, and Secretary French, of the Alliance, both denounce it as a scheme to turn the southern Alliance over to the Democratic party.

They Are for Cleveland.

NEW HAVEN, April 28.—Ninety-nine of the Democratic delegates from New Haven county to the Connecticut state convention, or nearly one-fifth of the whole convention, are said to be for Cleveland.

GENERAL GRANT'S BIRTHDAY.

Many Banquets Held in Honor of the Dead Hero.

NEW YORK, April 28.—The banquet of the Grant Birthday association was held last evening. General Grenville M. Dodge presided. There were speeches by Secretary of War Elkins, General Horace Porter, Elihu Root, Senor Matias Romero and others.

A dinner was given at the Union League club, in Brooklyn, under the joint direction of U. S. Grant Post, 327, G. A. R., and the club. Rev. Dr. R. R. Meredith, Mark D. Wilbur, Assistant Secretary of the Navy James R. Soley, General Palmer, ex-Senator S. W. Griswold and Mayor Boody spoke.

Mayor Boody would refuse to run. There would be practical unanimity among the delegates for a resolution requesting the delegates at large and the district delegates as well to vote for him at Minneapolis.

Fassett and Reapportionment.

Ex-Senator J. Sloat Fassett was asked if the Republican convention would take any action in the Democratic reapportionment of the state. Mr. Fassett said:

"I don't believe they will. Personally, I do not believe that there is shy necessity for such action. The reapportionment is a act upon the Democratic party with much more force than any appeal of ours to the people. Why, by its action the Democracy has made Rochester Republican for ever, and I don't know but some other cities. While I am talking to you I want to say this one thing: It is a notable fact that only such sections as are controlled by Irish Democrats have been given any greater representation—Kings county with Hugh McLaughlin; New York, with Tom Grady; Erie, with William Sheehan; Rensselaer, with Ed Murphy. What do you suppose such men as these care for county representation? It will not be many months before the Democrats in the country throw over the present controlling influences and refuse to allow the cities to dictate the entire legislation of the state."

New Jersey Republicans Meet.

TRENTON, April 28.—The Republican state convention to name delegates to Minneapolis made Judge John A. Blair both temporary and permanent chairman. The delegates cheered and cheered and cheered for Secretary Blaine in his address, and then somebody proposed a cheer for Harrison, which was given. The platform commended Harrison's administration, the McKinley bill and opposed free silver. Every point in the platform was received with enthusiasm. When the reading was completed a delegate tried to move a reconsideration with instructions to insert an indorsement of Mr. Blaine, but, though Mr. Blaine's name was received with cheers, the motion was not even seconded, and the platform was adopted as read.

Upon motion of Senator Griggs the state committee was reorganized so as to be composed of one member from each county and four committeemen at large.

W. J. Sewell, John A. Blair, Garrett A. Hobart and George H. Halsey were nominated for delegates at large.

During the convention the members of the state executive committee realigned in a body. The district delegates were chosen as follows:

First district—David Baird, of Camden, and Daniel F. Elmer, of Cumberland. Second—Colonel Washington E. Richling, of Mercer, and Henry P. Thorn, of Burlington. Third—B. F. Howell, of Middlesex, and William T. Hoffman, of Monmouth. Fourth—Frank Swayze, of Sussex, and George W. Jenkins, of Morris. Fifth—John E. Miller, of Bergen, and William Barbour, of Passaic. Sixth—Dr. F. C. Herold and Frank Parker, both of Essex. Seventh—Gilbert Collins and Thomas McEwan, both of Hudson. Eighth—Alexander Gilbert and Elias M. Condit, both of Essex.

FOOLISH MISTAKES OF THE GIRLS ADDICTED TO BRAGGING.

I asked a young bachelor who is confessedly slightest in life why he did not marry. "Well, I will tell you," he replied. "I want a home, which of course means a wife, but I am disheartened about making the venture. I am tired of it, growing greatly, and was beginning to think seriously of paying her court. She seemed to be my ideal; was a model daughter, progressive, refined, intelligent, intellectual. She was always neatly but simply dressed, and her cheerfulness was like a ray of light. Recently I met her on the street just as she was emerging from a milliner's establishment.

"'Why, my dear boy,' she exclaimed, as I walked along by her side, 'isn't it pretty?'

"I had not noticed the new hat, but how I saw a simple straw affair, trimmed with a wreath of daisies and a few ribbons.

"'Yes, very pretty and becoming,' I replied. 'I have a finer one being made, she added, carelessly.

"'Indeed,' I answered. 'What did you pay? Only twenty dollars for it. It is stylish, though, for the price, I should say.'

"My heart sank at her light remark, and I made no comment. Later on, and my suspicions received a knock of telescopic force, I confess, I had never known what ladies' hats cost. If that simple affair in straw and ribbon cost twenty dollars, what would be the price of the fine one being made? Thirty dollars at least. I could not see my hard-by prospective bride a girl who paid fifty dollars for two hats in one fleeting season. What a fortune it would require to furnish all her wardrobe on that rate! I was disheartened, and to all appearances nothing at all showy about her. I suppose all girls in her station pay as much for their clothes, and I think I will leave marriage for richer men. The average young man cannot stand that sort of thing, I assure you."

Perhaps if the young man who thus young woman was, and I happened to know that she was not an extravagant girl. If she had paid twenty dollars for a hat it was an unusual expenditure for her, and would trouble her conscience and purse for many a day, and cause her much self denial in other directions.

But the poison of the foolish idea so prevalent in this age of great fortunes, that men admire women who use money lavishly and who pay large sums for their garments.—Ella Wheeler Wilcox in Ladies' Home Journal.

Intolerance of Some Mothers.

"One of the signs of the age," says an observing woman, "is the disinclination of daughters find in adapting their ideas to the intolerance of the mothers who will not share in the progress about them. This is especially true where the daughters do not marry early, and either remain at home or go out to pursue some one of the many occupations now open to women.

In the one case the mother soon overshadows the daughter's individuality, and in the other she is apt to be impatient with the daughter's desire to do anything in a way different from that in which she herself has been accustomed to do it. A woman who brought up a child and saw it grow to maturity without finding in it many points of difference from herself would be a wonder indeed. Yet how often do we see a mother who, if she does not openly condemn, at least looks coldly upon the efforts of her daughter to do things in a way that seems to her unnecessarily complicated, or that she is apt to think will lead the girl into danger.

"The friends of the mother are apt to be those of her own age, and the friends of the daughter those of her own age

—Do you know what is the best way to start a fire in a stove? Why, to light it in a newspaper. Spread a good sized one over a half floor. The burglar cannot be seen at work by anything it may smoke, the same result will attend an effort to start it up, and to work on it is to "coon" the whole matter. If a fire is made in the stairs, one on the "roll," so that the sun cannot take to that, and sleep in it will the other night comes that lets you know of danger or the cat. There is no so silent, prowling after mouse-game.—Wyatt Daily Earp.

—County organizer MacDonald of Plainfield is a worker, and is hopeful that the Republicans of Union county will move thoroughly organized than ever were before. He has taken hold of the work now that the city and county executive committees are to be reorganized the work will be pushed with vigor and success unusually. In South Jersey they are well ahead in the matter of organization, and the Republicans of Union county must not be allowed to stay in the rear ranks.—Elizabeth Journal.

—The surest cooking, authoritatively stated, is done not long ago by Irving Brunck's former chef, who is now the head of a famous restaurant of Berlin. He had made a bet that he could cook one of the pieces of 225 that he would be willing to eat and serve a dozen in 45 minutes. The exploit was to be performed before invited spectators. At the o'clock on the day appointed the cook appeared with his gas cooking stove on a platform in sight of all in the hall. Within the chicken was prepared and it cooked lustily. Dessert—a fowl with one blow of a gillotine knife, this gastronomic expert severed sixty seconds had removed every feather from it. The gas stove was already lighted, and a broiler in the oven. The fowl was put open and drawn in one piece, and placed upon the broiler, a hot dish previously with water. The oven was set hand, and it locked just a minute of the six minutes when the chicken was served.—Pittsburg Dispatch.

A COLLISION AT NETHERWOOD.

While Crossing, Bicyclists Collided with a Carriage.—A Runaway.

A peculiar accident occurred on South avenue near Johnston's coal yard at Netherwood last evening. Two Westfield bicyclists were coasting down the hill, at the same time Messrs. Cook who was accompanied by his wife were seated in a carriage driving along that street. The bicycles collided with the vehicle. The collision frightened the horse and it ran away. The occupants of the carriage were thrown out.

The bicyclists were also thrown from their wheels. The vehicle passed over one of the wheels. The other became entangled in the wagon. The horse ran as far as the corner of Dudley avenue and Randolph road where it was caught by Mr. Samuel Smalley. The bicycle was still clinging to the wagon and was badly wrecked. The vehicle was not badly damaged.

The occupants of the wagon escaped with a few bruises. Their names are unknown. The bicyclists took their wheels and left on the next train for Westfield.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE.

Quarterly Session of the Grand Division.

The Grand Division Sons of Temperance of New Jersey met in quarterly session at New Brunswick yesterday. There were over a hundred representatives in attendance from various parts of the State.

Past G. W. P. Edward K. Drake, the senior past grand officer present, presided in the absence of G. W. P. Leonard Brown, of Trenton. Later on Mr. Brown arrived, and Mr. Brown gracefully yielded the position to him.

Twelve candidates were initiated among the number being Andrew Murray, W. P. of Lincoln Division.

The session continued until half-past eight in the evening. A fine dinner and supper were provided. The afternoon and evening sessions were devoted to matters connected with the interests of the order.

The two oldest members in attendance were Henry B. Howell, of Trenton, and Elias R. Mason, of New Providence. Mr. Howell has held the exalted grand scribe for forty-six years.

The session was characterized by unusual harmony, and the debates on officers' reports, etc., were participated in by a large number of members. The next session will be held in Camden. In September the past grand officers will visit New York, and attend the fiftieth anniversary of the founding of the order, when all portions of North America will be represented.

ALMOST STRANGLED.

A Young Man Says he was Dragged Around with a Rope.

Edward Stephenson of West Front street complained to the police last evening that two young men, yesterday afternoon tied a rope around his neck and dragged him down the mountain side. He told the following story:

"Several of us purchased a keg of beer and went on the mountain to drink it. During the afternoon I did something that offended a fellow named Dowd and he and another began to abuse me. They finally knocked me down, tied a rope around my neck and dragged me around. I almost choked and could not speak for over an hour."

He wanted the police to arrest the accused parties, but they told him they had no jurisdiction as the assault was committed in Somerset county. He says he will have a warrant issued for their arrest to-day.

NO HEIRS FOR HIS WEALTH.

A New Jersey Miser Leaves $60,000 and no Relatives Known of.

Christian Grimm died Wednesday at his residence at Parkertown, at the age of eighty. He came to this country from Germany many years ago, and had lived in Manasquan for the greater part of that time at Parkertown. He was a miser and leaves property valued at $60,000. Very few people had any idea that the old man was worth any such amount, as he appeared in the streets in poor circumstances and generally with a soiled black derby hat. For a number of years he ran a store at Parkertown. There are apparently no heirs to his property.

Seventy years ago Grimm went to Germany for his sister to come over and keep house for him. She came, bringing with her a daughter about sixteen years of age. Before long the girl was taken sick and died. She was shortly followed to the grave by her mother. Both deaths, it is believed, were hastened by Grimm's refusal to buy proper food for their table. After the girl died Grimm took the idea into his head that his sister was a witch, and while in his room in the house he loaded a gun and for some time kept up a fusillade at the building. He was arrested, but released later on. After his sister's death he lived alone.

A part of the old man's wealth was invested in mortgages on property in Monmouth county. The money is on deposit in Red Bank, New York and Atlantic Highlands banks. The committee of Middletown Township have been instructed by Surrogate Crafer to make an inventory of the estate and take charge of the property.

Grimm left no will, and according to New Jersey laws, if no heir is found the property will be divided between the State and Middletown Township.

THE SUNDAY VIOLATORS.

Chief Tenney and County Detective Keron Plan a Line of Action.

Judge McCormick's vigorous remarks in denouncing the disgraceful happenings on Sundays in Rahway avenue and other parts of the county, has stirred the police officials of the various cities in the county, and a line of action for procedure against the violators has been agreed upon.

Chief Tenney of Elizabeth will prevent as far as possible a repetition of any of the shameful scenes which have so incensed the people who have any regard for law and order, and County Detective Keron is planning for the preservation of order in the Plainfield section. The proceedings will be taken under the advice of Prosecutor Marsh.

Detective Keron yesterday notified the keepers of all road houses that they will be held responsible for all breaches of the peace by drunken men, and that they will be called to be used as evidence for indictments against them for Sunday selling and the maintaining of disorderly houses.

The tavern men have insisted that they will be responsible, and that no disorder has occurred in their places. The police, however, are satisfied that it can be shown that the taverns are open on Sundays, and that the source of all the disgraceful doings is in these places.

The movement against the offenders will be pushed with vigor, and County Detective Keron has authority to call what assistance he requires.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Ohio legislature adjourned in time for corn planting, thus setting an illustrious example to the other states.

Mary E. Wilkins, one of the best living writers of short stories, is to try her hand at a long story for Harper's Magazine. If she succeeds as well here as elsewhere the United States will have a novelist to be proud of.

"American overbearance" is the German expression for the pre-eminence of the United States in commercial affairs connected with the South American and West Indian nations. Germany does not like it. She objects to anybody's overbearance but her own.

Of course one may oppose woman suffrage or advocate it, just as he pleases. This is a free country. But when a representative whose wife supports him by keeping a saloon makes a speech in the legislature attacking the moral character of all women who go in for female voting, then it certainly looks as if it would be in better taste for him to let somebody else make that sort of speech. That is all.

A new use for dynamite has been found which will prove of great value. This year at the breaking up of winter it was employed effectually to blow up ice barriers and prevent an ice gorge such as causes disaster so frequently in both the northern Missouri and Mississippi rivers. The Canadian Pacific railway authorities blew into fragments the ice at the Louise bridge and relieved the pressure against the bridge.

The Wyoming Broil.

A curious mix of authorities is that in Wyoming. The side of the story told by the "cattle barons" of Wyoming is that the state has been infested for some years by a desperate band of cow thieves. These, they said, stole cattle by the thousand, until no ranch owner felt secure any longer. Then the large cattle owners organized and determined to take things into their own hands and rid the state of the "rustlers." They did so, and opened war to the death on them and stood against the rustlers. Two of these were killed.

The rustlers were enraged and gathered from near and far, vowing vengeance. Then the governor of Wyoming called on the United States troops for protection. The cattlemen surrendered to these. But the sheriff of the county where the men were killed sided with the rustlers, so it was a conflict between the civil authority represented by the sheriff, who took the parts of the alleged cattle thieves on the one hand, and the military and state authorities on the other, with the cattlemen under their protection. The cattle kings bit off much more than they could masticate. Next time perhaps they will wait awhile.

Health of the Rural Population.

Sereno Edward Todd is perhaps unconsciously drawing something of a caricature in his sketch in The Herald of Health of the food on which too many farm people habitually sustain body and brains. If his story is true, however, it will go far to explain why the farmer has appeared for years to be the under dog in the fight. A man who lives on half baked buckwheat cakes, dotted with lumps of cold white butter, could never under any circumstances become an upper dog.

Sereno Edward tells us that he and his wife once went, after repeated solicitation, to visit a farm family in mid-winter. After a long, cold ride they reached the farmer's house at 10 o'clock. They were already hungry, but since it was midwinter the family had only two meals a day, which brought the next meal at 3 in the afternoon. When it came all that it consisted of was buckwheat cakes, half inch in the shape of which had been mixed with elder. The cakes were eaten with a raw kind of molasses, and the only drink was "a weak beverage of scorched rye." The intellectual and financial victories of the world are not gained on that kind of diet.

Mr. Todd believes that ill health and early death among the rural population are caused oftentimes through insufficient and badly cooked food. A boy whom he knew at school could never learn anything to speak of just because he was starved, and his parents did not know it. It is from mistaken notions of economy that this kind of diet prevails. One young lady, the daughter of a well to do agriculturist, confessed that although her father had cultivated strawberries ever since she could remember she had never had as many as she wanted to eat on a single occasion till she visited the family of Mr. Todd. At her home they were all sold, all the eggs were sold and whatever would bring money, and the family were compelled to live on pork, hominy and skimmilk.

One of the first requirements of success in any field is to feed well, not gluttonously, but sufficiently, of the best food one can get. The nourishment it gives to the brain will show the farmer a better way to get money than by starving himself and his family. Still one cannot help thinking after Todd's picture is overdrawn. American farmers generally know enough to feed their families as well as they do their live stock.

THE BIG FOUR WILL GO.

Platt, Miller, Hiscock and Depew New York's Delegates.

THEY ARE INSTRUCTED FOR NO ONE.

The Platforms of the New York Republican Means Praises Both Harrison and Blaine. Speeches by Chairman Whitelaw Reid and Messrs. Depew and Fassett.

ALBANY, April 29.—The delegates to Minneapolis having all been selected in the congressional districts, the representatives of the Republican party of New York in the national convention will stand as follows:

Delegates at Large—Chauncey M. Depew, Thomas C. Platt, Warner Miller and Frank Hiscock.

Alternates—Samuel H. McMillan, Buffalo; George C. Reeb, Rochester; J. F. Parkhurst, Rome; W. S. Wood, Potsdam.

District Delegates—1—Benjamin Wurford, Carl S. Sorg. 2—Charles A. Moore, Robert A. Sharkey. 3—John A. Hennessy, Edward C. Jacobs. 4—Theodore B. Willis, Jacob J. Donallon. 21—Frank D. Wilbur, Edward C. O'Brien. 22—G. R. Sandford, E. B. Goodale. 23—V. Loomis Waters, Robert C. Sherman. 24—Henry G. Danforth, Hobart Krum. 25—Rufus R. Peck, William B. Ruger. 26—Edmund Gilbert, Abram W. Dederer. 27—Gorton W. Allen, James W. Durwell. 28—J. Sloat Fassett, John W. Dwight. 29—F. D. Locke, Edgar T. Brackett. 30—Hobart H. Warner, Frederick E. Gott. 31—William C. Watson, U. S. Bourdeau. 32—O. G. Steele, Frank Hiscock. 33—Henry A. Perrine, Willis H. Howes. 34—N. V. Frederick, James McEwen.

They Go Unistructed.

The "big four"—Depew, Platt, Miller and Hiscock—go uninstructed and unpledged to support any candidate. The convention was well attended by delegates, and cheered that of Harrison. Harmony in the proceedings in convention was the distinguishing feature. For presidential electors at large H. W. Sage, of Ithaca, and Jesse Seligman, of New York, were nominated. The only candidate for a state officer to be selected was to fill a judge of the court of appeals. The state committee was authorized to make that nomination.

The platform as adopted reaffirms that of 1888. It congratulates President Harrison on the success with which his administration has carried out the principles enumerated by that platform for protection and reciprocity; sees therein the State Blaine; commends the Republicans in congress for defeating the free silver coinage bill; condemns the Democratic party for removing county clerks, for overriding the verdict of the people in the legislative elections, for granting valuable franchises to political favorites, for invading Central park, for whitewashing a guilty judge of the court of appeals, for increasing taxes, for the "bogus census," by which the rural districts were robbed to benefit the Democratic cities, for the gerrymander of the senatorial and assembly districts, for legislation for its own benefit and for forgetting its promises to the working people.

It denounces what it calls the degradation of the bench by Judge Maynard and charges the Democratic party with having stolen the returns from Dutchess county. The apportionment is denounced and its alleged partisan character is illustrated by the fact that Republican Monroe, with 161,000 population, receives only three assemblymen, while Democratic Albany, with 150,000 population, is awarded four.

Whitelaw Reid's Speech.

In his speech Chairman Whitelaw Reid asked:

Are the farmers of New York, even the Democratic farmers, jealous that another legislature like this should have another chance at their tax levy? Are the Democratic business men of New York anxious that this congress should have its way unopposed about silver free silver or the tariff? Nobody who knows the political history dreams that on critical occasions and with a fair count New York is now, as it has been from the beginning, essentially a Republican state.

New York has been carried by the Democrats just three times in thirty-six years. Four years ago we beat Cleveland before the people of New York by 14,373 votes. They say he has come up to try it again. By the rule of three the problem would read thus: If his first success by 80,000 gives us one year a second success by 1,567, then a first defeat by 14,373 ought to give, in four years, a second defeat by how much? But if this is what the state of New York did to Grover Cleveland, whom, she respects, what would she do to David B. Hill?

We have not lost one State—a right, the denial of which means revolution. We demand a fair, non-partisan count. This secured, we can carry New York if we choose, and with New York we can carry the nation. Only one thing can or has kept us from success—the fact that we were at this time, very many, We must "act together." There are enough Republicans in Republican New York to have elected Harrison by a handsome majority, but there are not enough for two. The seeds to be, then, the short and plain rules of party organization.

Mr. Reid referred in his speech to "the matchless Blaine," and defended most mildly personal Harrison and Reid, he said.

Four years ago we commended Benjamin Harrison and Levi P. Morton to the people of the nation. We have observed them in office. We have no apologies now to offer for their men, no explanation to give; and we enter upon this year's contest with the record of what they have done and what they have done as the signature of the successful canvass we mean to make.

Depew Called For.

Mr. Reid's remarks were received with the greatest enthusiasm. Mention of Senator Hill's name called forth hisses. There was great applause when the speaker referred to President Harrison, but the greatest applause was manifested when Mr. Blaine's name was mentioned.

When Mr. Reid had concluded the delegates insisted upon hearing from Hon. Chauncey M. Depew, who said that his friend, ex-President Cleveland, when he took his familiar pilgrimage to Rhode Island to carry the state intemperated the harmless political platform, which his managers had built understand, with a quotation from the Scriptures. Fresh from the victory at Albany they had exclaimed, "Who dare disturb us? Shall not steal." The people of Rhode Island instantly elected a Republican governor and legislature. [Laughter and applause.] The Republican party, Mr. Depew said, entered on this campaign with the record of an administration so successful that criticism was at fault. It had said that the American eagle must be protected on every wave; that America's seamen must be safe in foreign ports; that fabrics were used to be protected according to taxation. Wherefore the nation was wealthy and made no differences. The state department and the executive had joined in saying that the United States would do anything for peace, but it must be peace with honor. [Applause.] The Republicans of New York were not saying that they should or would submit to dishonor at Minneapolis, but they were saying that they had one statement which solved the problem, who had shown us how to preserve peace between ourselves and with all the world. No president could add any honor to that enjoyed by the American people on the record of Benjamin Harrison. [Great applause.] Daily through the cable the people of the United States were greatly entertained by the description of Windsor, of the Duke of Humboldt, of the infant king of Spain, of the queens of Great Britain; but they turned to the free choice of the people as against hereditary legislation. He concluded the speech made to the people in all parts of the country with extraordinary fluency and felicity, to the circumstances of his life, to the duties which he had performed, and with a message to when its chief was sick, to go into the finance department and manage that not to be at all. It is to the credit of the chief magistrate of 65,000,000 of people, and they said to hereditary legislators, "There's the choice of the people—Benjamin Harrison." [Great applause.]

When Mr. Depew had concluded there were cries for Fassett and he took the platform. Mr. Fassett said that "this big four" business was a new description of Republicans who went to Chicago four years ago. They represented all shades of opinion in the state. The convention proposed to send them again to the national convention to show the country that the Republicans of New York had united.

The Inspectors of Election Bill.

Mr. Fassett moved the following resolution, which was received with applause and adopted:

Whereas, Doubtless in the counting of votes in the experiment of the city of New York confusion is found, and

Whereas, The Hon. Samuel J. Tilden and Chauncey C. Shaffer dealt their severest blow to the Tweed ring by making the supervision of the election machinery effective, therefore be it

Resolved, That we favor the continuance of our laws as continued until the present republican law, giving a majority to one political party.

Resolved, That we, the Republican party of the state, in convention assembled, respectfully demand that the interests of honest elections require that the Hon. Roswell P. Flower, as governor of the whole state and not of a political party, to vote the act to repeal chapter 410 of the laws of 1891.

The secretary was instructed to communicate this resolution to the governor.

After selecting the state committee, the convention at 5:30 adjourned sine die.

The Fight in Ohio.

CLEVELAND, April 29.—It is the general impression among the leaders of both the Ohio factions in the Republican party that the action of the convention merely continues indefinitely the Sherman and Foraker quarrel. Prior to the convention it was conceded that the Sherman men predominated. The choice of Governor McKinley, Ex-Governor Foraker, William Hahn and General Bushnell as delegates at large shows that the Forsker faction was in the majority. The appointment of Hahn as one section of those four was in the nature of a Sherman compromise and was a bitter pill for the supporters of the senator to swallow, as it is impossible to name two more distasteful to Sherman than Foraker and Bushnell.

Governor McKinley was given a most enthusiastic greeting on being presented as permanent chairman. He said:

We organize today for the victory of 1892. That it will be won I have no doubt. It will, must result in a triumph for the Republican party. We have had four years of a most untried administration. We have had a president in the person of Benjamin Harrison whose equipment for office was pre-eminently patriotism in the breast of every Republican. He has had to the administration that distinguished statesman, the representative of the whole people of States!" who has been his counselor at all times; that distinguished leader from the state of Maine. [Reserved cheers.] We are not more proud of the president of these United States, but of all of his constitutional advisers, including his own colleagues, than of Hon. Charles Foster. Every promise made in 1888 has been fulfilled, and in the form of legislation is on the statute books.

On the currency question we are just as strongly committed to the honest dollar of gold as we were when General Grant vetoed the inflation bill sixteen years ago. We are always in favor of a free ballot and a fair count in every corner of this republic. On the protective tariff the Republican party stands where it always stood. It is a tariff that protects the home and the fireside of America against the world. We are not dealing with a measure four weeks of age. When it was four weeks old it was too young to speak for itself. Today it is eighteen months old and is beginning to own talking. We propose to stand right by it. They say that the last congress was a billion dollar congress. Remember, it was not a billion dollar congress. In the past year our domestic and foreign trade increased two billion of dollars, the balance of trade never reached in the world.

For Harrison and Blaine.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo., April 29.—The Republican convention's platform indorses the administration of President Harrison, especially commends its foreign policy, "so successfully and ably conducted by that distinguished statesman, James G. Blaine," declares it to be the duty of the state to vote for Harrison's renomination; indorses the protective policy of the party as embodied in the tariff law of 1890; favors the free coinage of silver at the present ratio, and favors a currency still mountain gold, silver and paper money, and in a party in value and an international money system on the safe solution of the silver question. Wednesday, June 15, at Sedalia City, was named to bend the state ticket.

Louisiana's Senatorial Fight.

NEW ORLEANS, April 29.—The Louisiana legislature, which convenes next week will choose a United States senator to succeed Samuel B. L. Gibson, whose chances for re-election are particularly bright. Other candidates are Governor Nicholls, Congressmen Foster and Congressman Blanchard.

A Split in Alabama.

MONTGOMERY, April 29.—The Alabama Republicans split into opposing factions here and the result was two distinct and separate conventions. Two sets of delegates were named and instructed for Harrison.

Nebraska for Harrison.

KEARNEY, Neb., April 29.—The Silloon convention instructed its delegates to vote for Harrison at Minneapolis.

Tartman Moore's Latest Purchase.

LEXINGTON, Ky., April 29.—John D. Creighton sold to Albert H. Moore, the Philadelphia millionaire, the 4-year-old mare Evangeline, 2:19, by Director, dam by Red Wilkes. Price, $18,000.

Ashore at Atlantic City.

ATLANTIC CITY, April 29.—The steamer that went ashore on the shoals below Atlantic City was the side wheeler Florida, of the Bay line. Wreckage from her is being washed ashore.

Farmer Lobb Suicides.

KINGSTON, N. J., April 29.—Aaron A. Lobb, aged seventy-two years, a prominent and wealthy farmer of Hightstown, N. J., committed suicide by shooting himself.

MILBANK'S LATEST DUEL

The Englishman Dangerously Wounds a Frenchman.

PISTOLS WERE USED BY THE MEN.

The Affair of Honor Grew Out of Remarks Made by the Frenchman Concerning the Drayton-Borrowe Scandal—Milbank Was Not Touched by His Opponent.

BRUSSELS, April 29.—There has been another duel as a sequel of the Fox-Borrowe meeting between Mr. Harry Vane Milbank and a Frenchman whose name has not yet been divulged. The cause of the affair was a remark made by the Frenchman regarding the character of the Fox-Borrowe meeting. The Frenchman was wounded in the leg. The wound is of a very dangerous character.

The weapons used were the regulation dueling pistols, and the duel was fought at a distance of twelve paces.

Milbank Not Injured.

The wounded man was taken aboard a steam yacht lying off Ostend, and is being carefully attended by friends who were awaiting the result of the meeting. Since the duel began Milbank has had his condition. Mr. Milbank escaped without injury. His seconds were Messrs. Lestrange and Forester.

It is stated that the Frenchman is in Belgium after the Borrowe-Fox duel. The Frenchman spoke in uncomplimentary terms of the duel, and Milbank's opinion. He and Fox were unacquainted between the principals that neither was to hit the other. In his opinion the whole thing was a put up job and reflected discredit upon the persons concerned.

These remarks irked the doughty Milbank and he sent the Frenchman a challenge. The challenge was promptly accepted, and the duel occurred on last Wednesday afternoon on Belgian soil, not far from Ostend.

FASHIONS

STYLES THAT PLEASE.

The Fancy for Green—A Practical Walking Skirt—Silks and Grenadines.

Green may be mentioned as the popular color of the season. A dress of sea green veiling lately seen had the crescent seen in the back, and rested on the ground. The sleeves were of black silk, with a broad band of French bringing three inches or four inches wide in gold and black, with jet facets matching the galon on the bodice; this described a point at the wrist, black and green, and the front of the bodice had a full pointed piece of black silk covered with net richly embroidered in gold sequins. The same galon also outlined round a point between the shoulders, and the whole appeared to be cut en princesse. Nothing could be more simple, or at the same time more stylish. A tea jacket in soft green silk had a full front of crepe de chine of the same tint, caught together with gold passementerie into a knot at the waist, the fullness being retained in the long waist formed of a folded belt of the same soft material caught up like the peplum.

Our cut shows a green fancy straw hat, with black lace bow and foliage on one side, and crown of pink roses and foliage. Another picture of a fancy straw hat for summer is most becomingly bent, and has for trimming a large rosette holding flattened tulips, carelessly thrown across the crown. A cluster of the three colored shape, has a rache of lace border-ing it and a row of single cowslips, a few leaves of the same, and a full bow of velvet standing up at the back. Long green ribbons hanging at the back are a feature of some attractive hats for young ladies.

The present is a lace season. Lace is largely used on every possible form of garniture for millinery, both in black and all shades of rich cream; antique and guipure laces are also much in favor.

The new way of lengthening the skirt with a full, very deep flounce, smaller tail-bows at a distance above it, is pretty, and looks well carried out in lace on evening gowns.

The elaborate dress sleeves in vogue have made large sleeves a necessity in coats.

Paris dressmakers are sending out walking dresses that will please women who protest against the long bell skirts that sweep the pavement. The bodice effect is given by a large rosette holding smaller tail

DEEMING'S TRIAL BEGUN

Another Alleged Confession That He Is the Ripper.

THE CANARY BIRD MAY HANG HIM.

It Belonged to the Wife He Murdered Near Melbourne, and He Carried It with Him from There to Fiuce—A Strong Case Made Against Him.

MELBOURNE, April 29.—The Standard says it is in a position to announce without reserve that Deeming has confessed to his lawyers and the doctors who examined him that he committed a majority of the "Jack the Ripper" crimes in the Whitechapel district of London. The articles has created a great sensation. The demeanor of Deeming when he was arraigned for trial in the central criminal court presented a marked difference from his conduct at the inquest. He was quiet and depressed, and he looked very much disappointed when the Judge decided that the trial should at once be proceeded with.

His Flippant Air Put Aside.

After the jury had been selected the public prosecutor began his speech, in which he arrayed with almost irresistible force all the facts in connection with the murder of the prisoner's wife. Deeming had put aside the flippant air that characterized him at the previous hearings and he listened closely to the prosecutor's speech.

The taking of testimony was then begun. Connor, the agent, testified to letting the house to Deeming and the discovery of the crime. The witness related a terrible scene in the bedroom and the police having been summoned the hearthstone was taken up, with the result already known. He identified the prisoner as Deeming.

Police Sergeant Loghlin swears to discovering the body of the deceased encased in cement and lying in a hole beneath the hearthstone. To Oakes, who was a passenger with the prisoner and his wife on board the Kaiser Wilhem II, during the outward voyage in December last, said he had identified the remains as those of Mrs. Williams. Williams seemed very kind and affectionate to his wife during the voyage. He identified the prisoner as the man he had known as the husband of the deceased.

The Arrest of Deeming.

Evan Williams, a policeman from western Australia, gave evidence as to the prisoner's arrest at Southern Cross. He placed his hands on the prisoner's shoulders and said to him: "I arrest you for the murder of Emily Williams, at Windsor." The prisoner replied: "I don't know anything about it. I never was at Windsor, to my knowledge. I am innocent."

At Albany the prisoner was placed in the lockup in the charge of two constables. During the night he contrived to remove his mustache. No one could explain how. Numerous witnesses testified to seeing Deeming buy a shovel, cement and sand, and to hearing sounds of pounding in the house, made while Deeming was burying his victim under the cement.

A curious feature of the courtroom was the presence of the canary bird which had belonged to the murdered Emily Mather Deeming and which the prisoner had taken with him after the murder. By means of this canary bird and its cage the prisoner had been traced from place to place, and it had thus been largely instrumental in bringing him to justice.

No Insanity in the Family.

LONDON, April 29.—The correspondent of the International Telegram company had an interview with Albert and Alfred Deeming as to the allegations that Deeming showed signs of insanity in his boyhood and that insanity had been common in the Deeming family. Both indignantly denied that any member of the family had ever been in an asylum. Albert Deeming said:

"The story that our brother was even queer in his youth is brutal and nonsense. He was never called 'Mad Fred;' that is a mere fabrication to suit the present emergency. It is ridiculous to slander our father and mother by saying that they were regarded even as eccentric."

Alfred Deeming said: "Our brother was not even especially tricky or mischievous. He was a commonplace boy, and all this talk about instinctive insanity is due to the efforts of his counsel to get him released. The whole story is imaginary, and we wish people to understand that we do not countenance it."

Not the Ripper, They Say.

LONDON, April 29.—The Scotland Yard authorities, in view of the Melbourne Standard story, are of the opinion that Deeming could not have committed the Ripper murders.

In Letters a Foot Long.

EXETER, N. H., April 29.—Words insulting to the principal of the Academy and teachers in letters a foot long or the dome of the town hall and on the residences of members of the faculty during the night. The town will offer a reward for the conviction of the perpetrators of the outrage.

HIS SUNDAY CLOTHES

Something curious to his air,
Something about his eyes
Gone are long-cherished his hair,
Got on one of dad's best ties.
"I wonder if he's gone to court?"
Printed enough, the goodness knows!
Bertha's brewerie, I'll be bound—
John's got on his Sunday clo'es.

Washed his hands with extra care,
Shaved himself from ears to throats,
Curled his mus-taches, I declare!
Pinned a rosebud on his coat.
Face shines like the harvest moon,
Puffs powder on his nose.
Something's long to happen soon—
John's got on his Sunday clo'es.

Usual clo'es a suit of jean,
Has a brood fathomed widowaika,
Biggest boots was ever seen,
Hands rough from hoe and rake;
Now his shoes are shinin black,
Small and narrow as the toes,
As on Sunday you can tell
John's got on his Sunday clo'es.

Pretty girl as Turtle Brook,
Daughter of Selectman Smith,
With a look that's like a book
Fit to enter heaven with.
Yellow hair and laniel eye,
Cheeks like peaches on the snow—
Guess she knows the reason why
John's got on his Sunday clo'es.

TWO NEGROES LYNCHED.

They Had Assaulted White Girls in Tennessee.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., April 29.—A terrible crime, followed by swift punishment, is reported from Goodletsville, ten miles from Nashville. Lee Bruce, living half a mile from town, died about a month ago, leaving a wife and a fifteen-year-old daughter, Sonia. Last night a cousin of Sonia's, Mary Bruce, spent the night with her, and one or two other women were sitting up with the sick child. About 10 o'clock two negroes broke into the room where the girls were in bed. The girls screamed and struggled with the intruders, the younger, the older being badly injured. The women sitting in the other room ran for help, the nearest house being half a mile distant. Before help arrived the fiends had disappeared.

Scotch was at once instituted and as day light five negroes were captured and taken before the girls for identification. Henry Grizzard was identified and hanged to a tree. Before he died Grizzard confessed and implicated Mack Harper, but the girls were too excited to positively identify Harper as the other.

Detective Morton, of the Louisville and Nashville railroad, started for Nashville with Fred Bruce, John Garrard and Mack Harper. They were pursued by the mob and overtaken a short distance from town. The mob fired on the party, wounding the detective. Fred then captured the three negroes, took them back to where Henry Grizzard was hanging. The mob hanged Mack Harper, but sent the other two men to Nashville.

NEW YORK, April 29.—Cable advices from Venezuela state that President Palacio captured Crespo's son, declares he would execute him as soon as his father comes within a league of Caracas and sent word to Mrs. Crespo that he would torture the young man unless she revealed her husband's plans. THE WOES OF THE RED MAN.

President Harrison Criticised During a Debate in the Senate.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The old story of government injustice to the Indians was discussed all day in the senate by Mr. Jones, of Arkansas, in connection with the suspended appropriation of nearly $3,000,000 for an area of land variously estimated at from 1,000,000 to 7,000,000 acres, taken from the Cherokee and Chickasaw nations. Mr. Jones contended that grand injustice had been done by the president in holding up the appropriation, and the contrary view was taken by Messrs. Allison and Platt.

Mr. Teller, of Colorado, and Mr. Perkins, of Kansas, criticised the action of the president in setting aside an appropriation passed by congress and approved by himself.

Mr. Jones' resolution, which declared that there was not sufficient ground for withholding the appropriation, was still unacted on when the senate adjourned.

A Day of Filibustering.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The house wasted four hours in an attempt to proceed with the diplomatic and consular bill. The rejection of the salary bill by the senate, the salary of several important missions, notably that of the envoy to Venezuela, was not acceptable to the Republicans nor to many Democrats and the house found itself without a voting quorum, although three calls of the house disclosed a quorum present each time. After four hours wasted in an attempt to secure a voting quorum the house adjourned.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The house committee on railways and canals offered a favorable report on the bill introduced by Mr. Dalzell, of Pennsylvania, appropriating $40,000 for a survey of a route for a ship canal to connect Lake Erie with Erie, Pa., with the Ohio river at Pittsburg, Pa.

The Reynolds-Shank Contest.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Chairman O'Ferrall, of the elections committee of the house, has called a meeting of the committee for today to hear Reynolds-Shank contested election case from the Twelfth Pennsylvania district. THE MURDER OF DR. HILL.

Light on Maryland's Mysterious Tragedy Through a Negro's Confession.

MILLINGTON, Md., April 29.—The mystery surrounding the murder of Dr. James H. Hill, whose body was found by his wife in his carriage near home Sunday, has been cleared away, through a confession which implicates eight men in the murder. Dr. Hill's great popularity and the sympathy felt for his young widow has caused the greatest feeling of horror and indignation to spread throughout the community. The wildest excitement has been created by the confession of Joshua Bayard, a colored boy of fourteen years of age, who says he was present at the killing, but did not assist in the murder. Bayard made the following statement:

"I and Charles Brooks, Fletcher Williams, Perry Reed, Henry Hurst, Charles Emory, Fris Comegys and Moses Brown were leaving town together. I did not know of any arrangement to kill anybody and don't know that any was made before hand, but when Dr. Hill came along in his dogcart Fletcher Williams and Charlie Brooks caught the horse and stopped it. Comegys held the horse. Charlie Brooks struck the doctor with a stone and Fletcher Williams cut his throat with a pocketknife. Dr. Hill fought, but did not get anything with. Comegys held the horse Williams forced the man's head between the shafts and the iron stay on the underside of the shafts. Brooks then turned the horse around and let it go."

All of the men accused have confessed in Chester town jail. They are supposed a great crowd surrounding the jail, and a probable lynching bee may soon take place.

COOLIDGE SUGGESTED REID.

The New French Minister Was a Democrat in 1887.

WASHINGTON, April 29.—T. Jefferson Coolidge, the new minister to France, is one of the most prominent residents of Massachusetts and his appointment is viewed with the utmost satisfaction by the delegation from that state. He is a grand nephew of the third president of the United States, whose namesake he is, and a resident of Manchester-by-the-Sea. He is a highly cultured gentleman, liberally educated, a good linguist and a patron of the arts. A magnificent library was his gift to the reading of the city of his residence. At present he is engaged in banking, but was for many years a manufacturer on a large scale in Lowell and Lawrence. His political affiliations had been with the Democratic party until he became satisfied from President Cleveland's famous message of 1887 that the Democratic party was bound toward free trade; since then he has acted with the Republicans.

He has never held any public office, unless his appointment as one of the United States delegates to the Pan-American congress may be considered one. In appointing from the Democratic party it is interesting to note he did not carry with him at least one member of his family, T. Jefferson Coolidge, Jr., his favorite son, the first secretary of the Young Men's Democratic club of Massachusetts.

SOME ODD STORIES.

INTERESTING INCIDENTS RELATED BY MAJOR A. R. CALHOUN.

How a Typical New York Tough Went Out to "Bag" a Mexican Bandit and Was Himself Sent Home with His Head in a Bag.

There are Californians living today, and not old men either, who recall having met the notorious outlaw, Juan Murieta, while there is not a schoolboy between San Diego and the Oregon line who has not a story, more or less mythical, to tell of the blood-thirsty Mexican bandit.

The career of Juan or Joaquin Murieta's exploits was in southern California, where their people of his own race who regarded him as an idol, and who were ever ready to warn him and to shield him when the officers of the law were on his track.

There was nothing in the character or appearance of this swarthy, redhanded wretch to excite admiration. The best of me have "a striking resemblance" with Rob Roy MacGregor, Robin Hood, Dick Turpin and outlaws of that stamp who are familiar with daring and adventure are lavishly supposed to have plundered the rich to help the poor. But Juan Murieta was as devoid of nobility of character as the merciless wolves with which he was often forced to find refuge. He robbed to satisfy a savage craving for plunder and murdered to quench an innate thirst for blood.

"EMPTY YOUR POCKETS, OR I FIRE!"

Rewards were offered for the destruction or capture of this man, but with kindred spirits among the Mexicans and Americans, ready to aid and warn him, he long set the authorities at defiance, and at times he shrewdly turned the tables on his pursuers, and more than he showed a magnanimity.

Jake Williams had been a beauty Bowery boy, and a ward politician, and a resident in New York city before he went west to seek his fortune. He was not long on the Pacific coast before he had established a reputation as "a terror" in a barroom fight, but as fists were too slow and primitive a method of combat Jake Williams, with a ready adaptability, fell in with the methods of his associates and soon developed unusual skill in the use of the pistol.

"We don't want no man for sheriff of Kern county that won't pledge himself to clean out Juan Murieta," this is what the people of the lower San Joaquin valley said on the eve of one of their nominating conventions.

Jake Williams was not present—he had brought with him from his native city an intense yearning for action—and it was not that they were afraid to nominate him, but people that he could not fill their pockets as "sheriff," if he should be elected.

"If I'm to 'hoist' one of the boys, you," said Jake to the chairman, "I'll be on hand, treating, before the convention meets. Just run the office for nixy if inside o' two months I don't fetch the head o' this Murieta into this bar in a bag and thump it onto the floor!"

Whether it was Mr. Williams' forceful manner and the free use of coin, his liberal dispensation of whisky or the belief that he was the right man for the place that influenced the convention we cannot pretend to say, but certain it is he was unanimously nominated and overwhelmingly elected to the position he so much desired.

Jake Williams certainly had physical courage. He banked on the fact that he was a freeborn American citizen, and that the man he had sworn to hang was a "greaser," to that he was lacking in the essential confidence when one morning he mounted his horse and rode south toward the Cajon pass where the deputies whom he had enlisted for the hunt were to rendezvous.

A few miles south of Kern river Sheriff Williams was joined by a horseman, who came over from the direction of the Sierra to the east.

This man, though stoutly mounted, was dressed in the black flowing gown of a missionary priest. His smooth shaven face was half concealed by a broad brimmed sloucher, and from his neck hung a rosary of silver beads terminating in a golden crucifix.

"Heaven bless thee, my son!" was the salutation of the priest, as he brought his horse alongside the sheriff's and turned in the same direction.

"You'll have to chin English to me," said Jake Williams. "I don't go much on greaser lingo, and I wouldn't if I could."

"There is much to be learned in English," said the priest, with a quiet bow and speaking with a strong accent. "Do you ride for the Cajon pass?"

"That's where I'm bound," said the sheriff.

"Ah, that is also my destination. You sit your horse like a soldier, and no doubt belong to the garrison at Los Angeles?"

"Now I'm the sheriff o' Kern county," said Jake.

"Sheriff Williams?"

"Yes, that's my name. How do you like it?"

"I like the name and the man," said the priest pleasantly. "I have heard of you as a brave American, and I shall be pleased, if you precede me in trying the aguardiente, to drink to your good health and prosperity."

The padre, without checking his horse, produced a bottle of native brandy from his saddlebags and handed it to the sheriff, who took a long, gurgling drink, and his thick red beard on the back of his big freckled hand and at once felt more amiable.

The priest went through the motion of drinking and then resumed the conversation. The sheriff's tongue limbered up, and he told his companion that he was on his way to find Juan Murieta and bring his head down to Kern in a bag.

"Did you ever see the outlaw?" asked the priest.

"No, but I've had him described so often that I feel as if I could tell him by his track after the struggle is over and one looks at the many posters that are out for him."

"Of course there were no outlaws, not even for our own boys, who covered the ground by treachery. We dog supper, and then I went to bed with my head lying on a saddle."

"They tell me he is brave," said the priest.

"Brave, certain," replied Mr. Williams, "but not what you call brave. He's treacherous, and will shoot a man in the back if he gets a chance, but I guess he'll kinder crawl and hunt his hole of it was invited to look into the bore of a six shooter with an American citizen in front of it."

Cajon pass was a long day's ride from Kern, so the sheriff did not expect when, at noon, his companion proposed a rest for an hour, during which they could eat their lunch, "sample" the aguardiente again and take a little siesta.

The priest produced a tin flask, ornamented by a beautiful spring a short distance from the trail. After lunch and another drink, both of which the priest paid for, Jake Williams began to feel sleepy again, and he poured out the vials of his wrath and contempt on the cowardly and treacherous Mexicans.

"I am a Mexican, and you must not talk so before me," said the priest firmly.

"I'll talk as I — please," shouted Jake, who felt quite safe in the presence of this man of God.

"You must not. I please," said the priest, and he got off his horse and faced the sheriff.

"Then I'll please myself," said Jake, and he got off his horse and faced the priest.

"What do you mean?" asked the sheriff, as he lowered back in obedience to the command of the priest.

"Why, this," and the priest fell—not from the sturdy form of the priest, and taking up the rope that had girdled his waist, he said with a sneer,

"I am Juan Murieta, you are my prisoner."

"And what are you going to do with me?" asked Jake Williams, when he could get his breath.

"I am going to send you back to Kern with your head in a bag. Resist and I'll put the head and body in separate packs," said the bandit.

Sheriff Williams could not resist. Indeed, he was in no condition to do anything that required concentration and muscle.

Juan Murieta, with a few strokes of his keen knife, was doing a shrewd business, two horses halted before the principal saloon, and a man called in, "Here's your sheriff!" and he had a couple of replevin bills.

Men rushed out with lanterns. They found a man seated on a horse with his arms bound behind him and a bag tied over his head, and in the bag was a bit of paper on which were penciled the words:

"With Senor Murieta's compliments. Senors, you had better try another sheriff."

And so Jake Williams "hit on" the very next day, the people of Kern were found to act on the outlaw's suggestion.

"I Am He."—

"As you gentlemen who fought on the other side are no doubt aware," said the handsome ex-Confederate colonel, with a smile, "we rebels held the battlefield of Chickamauga.

"I was a captain at this time, and for the first and only time in my military career I found myself detailed to bury the dead. It was a gloomy task, but this much to do you can form no idea of its appalling horrors.

"It is said that 'familiarity breeds contempt,' but not precisely of cadaverous; I never make no indifferent to the sickening, heartrending sights of a battlefield

SHE WILL NOT LIKE HEAVEN.

The serpent wound in here
Before my Eve got for a wife;
And what folks say is gospel truth,
Is not the Devil in it?
Kennels there, also beats the world
On ladies' hearts and purses;
But how I hate to hear the word
And circumvents' Rise.

Her temper's the low bar pie crust, which They're both themselves about;
At thought I can live cool-easy this,
Remember she makes no count.
There she's no sense in havin' things
When she's not with you;
Her sarin' or my time I save.
"Now, Kat, I wipe your feet!"

I don't set down in our best room,
It is no affair out o' repair;
Best fit, most everything we've got's
For good for common use.
There's room in heaven, all the book
Puts clear, I'm sure I can found
We my Kennard's mighty sqz
It is less in the ground.

There she's no use in lickin': I'm Prepared to bear my cross.
Some day, perhaps, I'll wear my spurs;
Kennard's my boss.
Yet wonder, I sometimes am worried if
That there is no much my cross
Come to correct, I'm sure I'm Sure she's no dust.

But, oh, what will Kennard do
When I pass pearly gates,
If she has Devil at her side
That she so dearly hates?
O'er Kennard's comfort will be
Enquired in awful gloom.
When my Kennard enters in
And cannot see a Room.

SCOTT AND VANDERBILT.

The Great Pennsylvanian's Business Acumen Vividly Illustrated.

In business matters Mr. Scott was quiet in his conclusions, exact in judgment, and inexhaustible in resources. The public remembers yet the sale by William K. Vanderbilt of $10,000,000 worth of stock in the New York Central at 128. That sale was made by William L. Scott.

Vanderbilt, harassed and worried in the management of the property, vexed by public criticism, and concerned about his health, expressed in the presence of Scott a wish to be rid of the property.

"How much will you take, Mr. Scott?

"I was never more in earnest in my life," was the reply.

"Why not sell it then?" the Pennsylvanian asked.

"Sell it?" exclaimed Vanderbilt; "where can I find a purchaser for $20,000,000 of the stock?"

"I can find such a purchaser," said Scott, "at a fair commission."

"Do it," was the response, "and I will pay you half a million dollars."

In a few days Scott had organized a syndicate among the bankers of New York to purchase the Vanderbilt stock at 120, and without any difficulty the transaction was concluded.

The same Mr. Scott's demand for his commission of $500,000. Vanderbilt demurred; half a million dollars was a big sum of money for such work. Mr. Scott insisted that it was a bargain. Vanderbilt openly and seriously and carried to a conclusion. Still Vanderbilt objected that it was too big a commission.

"What was it worth?" asked Mr. Scott.

"Oh," said Mr. Vanderbilt, "two hundred thousand."

"Very well, then, let me have the $200,000," said the gentleman from Pennsylvania, and the matter was settled. Had Mr. Scott insisted there is little doubt that half million would have been forthcoming. As it was, the commission was not easily earned as any money Mr. Scott had ever made.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Not an Need of Mourning After All.

When the September term of the District Court opened here yesterday there was one among the jurors who wanted to be excused. Juror Don Doe is not his name but it goes here.

"What is your name?" asked Judge Davis.

"John Doe," was the reply.

"Do you want to be excused from duty," inquired the Judge.

"Why? I have to talk a little loud-er, Jedge. I'm a little hard of hearing," said Mr. Doe.

Judge Davis repeated the question, and Mr. Doe replied:

"No, sir; I don't want to serve."

"What excuse have you?"

"Well, Judge, I'm hard of hearing, and I'm afraid it would be useless for me to try to serve."

"Can you hear no ordinary conversational tone?" asked the Judge.

"I say, can you hear an ordinary conversational tone of voice?" asked the Judge, pitching his voice a little higher.

"Well, I'm hearing no worse," said Doe.

"Well," said Judge Davis in a low tone of voice, "I guess we will have to excuse you, if you can't hear well."

Long the loose way, Doe heard it, and he started away with a pleased smile twinkling about his face.

"Hey?" said Doe, as Judge Davis, "I guess if you can hear that you can hear well enough to serve as a juror. We must not excuse you."

And John Doe collapsed and fell into the nearest chair.—Omaha Morning World-Herald.

The Mississippian.

It has often been remarked that orators and actors have a fleeting fame, inasmuch as their art dies with them and cannot be reproduced for posterity. Mr. Jefferson Davis, however, should be a conspicuous exception by his new invention of the Mississippian, which consists in the phonograph and the megaphone. By the first he will reproduce his own voice in such a way as to reproduce to the ear the words of a speaker, while his actions are presented to the eye. The phonographic cylinder will be a cylinder of forty-six in a second, are taken by an automatic camera on a traveling film of sensitized gelatine, and these, after being developed, are produced on a screen by the calcium light in such a way as to give the impression of living action. The phonograph, by which the voice of the orator speaks sounds, is caused to utter them at the right moment. Thus one can listen to a speech while looking at the animated picture of the speaker, or, to go further, witness the performances of a play as open in one's own easy chair.

Destruction to Mosquitoes.

A Hannibal justice of the peace, who is already in great favor with persons contemplating matrimony, adds to his popularity by this simple device: After their arrangements with Judge Hawkins, of Palmyra, to secure marriage licenses for persons within one hour after I receive the application, and with these facilities at hand I expect to increase my business in that line considerably. In the future I shall present a beautiful bronze to every couple that I marry. The chromo is entitled 'Happy Hearts and Willing Hands,' and is a gem of a beauty."—Kansas City Star.

To secure the trade for this year he offers which new carriage and harness-sellers mouths, he advertises a twenty-five per cent. cash reduction.

AN ENJOYABLE AFFAIR.

The Methodists of Cranford Visit Scotch Plains.

About fifty members of the Methodist church, of Cranford, visited Scotch Plains Thursday evening. They arrived in carriages, sleighs and other vehicles at the Methodist church at about nine o'clock. The ladies and members, together with the young pastor, Rev. Wm. Maroney, welcomed the visitors as they entered the edifice. The scholars of the Sunday-school recited and sang and were heartily encored. The ladies of the church had prepared a collation for their visitors, and at about ten o'clock all sat down at large tables where the dainties of the season could be found. The affair was arranged for a reception to the new pastor, who is very much liked and is his first year's work. The Cranfordites returned home about 12 o'clock well pleased.

Arrested for Embezzlement.

Henry S. Phillips was arrested in Newark Thursday evening on the charge of embezzlement. The arrest was made on complaint of his former employers, Hann, Rice & Co., the printing house. He was brought to this city, waived examination and furnished bonds for his appearance in court. The employers accused him of embezzling funds in the sum of $200.

A Model Press.

A press shipped to Washington from the Potter Press Works in this city yesterday is considered one of the best presses ever made in the United States. It is a Webb press and was manufactured for the United State Government. It will print a sixty-four page paper at one time. The press was tested and gave thorough satisfaction.

An Enjoyable Affair.

THE BROADWAY GRADE

A CONFERENCE TO SAVE THE TREES.

Likewise to Save the People Paying Again for the Work They Have Already Paid for.—The Interests of all the City Ought to be Considered Also.

The Street Committee of the Council held a meeting last evening to hear the views of the property owners and other adjacent in opposition to the re-grading.

Messrs. Johnson and Case of the Committee were present. Mr. Pine being absent. Among the property holders who were present to oppose the proposed re-grading were Messrs. Miller, Byers, J. Wesley Johnson, George H. Frost, Drs. E. H. Hedges and Murray, ex-Mayor Chas. Place, Rev. Dr. Hoffman, Mr. Murray representing the Crescent avenue Presbyterian church, and others.

The subject was thoroughly discussed by all present, the grade map was examined, and all parties raised pro and con, which had a proper bearing upon the proposed action which might have to be taken by the Council.

It is thought the Street Committee will recommend some feasible plan to carry off the water and not cut the street down. It was stated by the Engineer and Street Commissioner of the city that to grade the street as ordered by the Council for by the survey for a proper grade, would involve cutting 16 down from six to eighteen inches. This would not only cause a relaying of the sidewalks on a different grade, but would take out every tree now upon that beautiful street.

The residents may rest assured that there will be no cutting down the street, but that the water which it is said, accumulates from the corner of Fifth street, Broad way and La Grande avenue will be carried off in some proper way satisfactory to all.

Why cannot some similar remedy be adopted on other streets. It is a shame to compel property to pay over again for the work, and in addition have their beautiful shade trees ruined.

The Result of Assaulting an Ingoing Man.

While returning from his work last evening Mr. William Harding, a resident of West Third street, came in contact with a man who was under the influence of liquor. The man attempted to strike Mr. Harding. At the time the latter, who is a carpenter, had tools in both hands, he threw up his right hand to protect himself. His assailant, it is alleged, staggered against a chisel and was badly cut on the temple.

He was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital. Blood was flowing profusely from the wound. He was delirious last night. No one seems to be able to ascertain his name. Two policemen were watching him during the night.

The man who struck the liquor had been arrested on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct.

NEW JERSEY LEADS ALL.

THE GREATEST MANUFACTURING STATE IN THE COUNTRY.

In One Industry at Least the New Jersey Commission for the World's Columbian Exposition Shows This to be the Case.

The New Jersey Commission for the World's Columbian Exposition desire to call public attention to the prominence of New Jersey in the cast iron pipe industry of the United States. Her high rank in this important branch of special manufacture is not generally known or appreciated. The tabulation given below should be a source of just pride to our citizens, emphasizing the fact that our State, small as to area and population in comparison with many of our sister commonwealths, surpasses in this important manufacture not only every other State, but all the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio combined, in amount of invested capital, wages paid, cost of materials and value of products. The annexed figures are official, being taken from the Census Bulletin issued by the Department of the Interior at Washington, under date of February 13, 1892. This bulletin was prepared by Dr. Wm. M. Sweet, Special Agent, under the direction of Mr. Frank R. Williams, Special Agent, in charge of Statistics of Manufactures:

STATES.	Number of establishments reporting.	Capital invested.	Average number employed.	Wages paid.	Cost of materials.	Value of products.
Total	338	$14,333,000	7,128	$2,794,407	$6,403,000	$12,102,000
New York and New England	1	200,000	200	100,000	250,000	500,000
New Jersey	8	4,540,000	2,200	1,007,000	2,100,000	4,000,000
Pennsylvania	11	2,000,000	1,000	400,000	1,000,000	1,800,000
Southern States	1	2,000,000	1,000	400,000	1,000,000	1,800,000
Ohio	1	2,000,000	1,000	400,000	1,000,000	1,800,000
Other Western States	1	2,000,000	1,000	400,000	1,000,000	1,800,000

(a) Includes 2 establishments reporting $60,000 capital, which were not in operation during the census year 1890.

It will thus be seen that the amount of capital invested in New Jersey exceeded by $613,326 the aggregate capital similarly invested in all the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. The average number of hands employed in New Jersey foundries was 2,200 exceeding by 328 the total number employed in all the States] enumerated above, and nearly one-third of the entire number in the United States.

Preserving the same comparison as to States, New Jersey paid the labor bills, $98 in excess of all New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio combined. The cost of materials used in New Jersey amounted to the large sum of $2,100,000, nearly one-third of the entire cost of materials for the United States. The value of product is $4,080,571, more than one-third of the entire manufactured value of the United States, and again exceeding, by the large amount of $934,280, the aggregate value of the New England States, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio.

The annexed table still further illustrates the prominence of New Jersey in the quantities and values of cast iron pipe, together with the values of other castings and products manufactured within the State. Under the head of "Products Made" the official figures show as follows, illustrating the proud position of New Jersey in this very important industry:

STATES	Tons of pipe.	Value of pipe.	Value of other castings.	Value of other products.	Total value of all products.
Total	312,000	$12,102,000	$1,978,000	$500,000	$14,580,000
New York and New England	12,000	500,000	50,000	50,000	600,000
New Jersey	95,000	4,000,000	800,000	200,000	5,000,000
Pennsylvania	45,000	1,800,000	300,000	50,000	2,150,000
Southern States	45,000	1,800,000	300,000	50,000	2,150,000
Ohio	70,000	1,800,000	300,000	50,000	2,150,000
Other Western States	45,000	1,800,000	300,000	50,000	2,150,000

The items of "other castings" is made up chiefly of pipe fittings and specials, and also includes some general foundry products. The "other products" embrace valves, gates, hydrants, gas and water machinery, and miscellaneous machine work. The gates, valves, and hydrants made by the large hundred constitute only a small portion of the aggregate production of these fittings, as the manufacture of this class of products forms in itself an important industry.

It is worthy of note that the oldest seat of the cast iron pipe industry is in eastern Pennsylvania and the adjoining sections of New Jersey, the largest works being located in the immediate vicinity of Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. One establishment, situated at Millville, New Jersey, has been in operation since 1806, and has been conducted by the same interests since its organization, but it did not begin the manufacture of pipe until 1850. Seven other establishments in this section are all of large size, while those recently built are of comparatively small capacity. During the census year 1890 the pipe foundries in Eastern Pennsylvania and New Jersey produced 62 per cent. of all the cast iron pipe.

The Commission in its work of calling public attention to the important and diversified interests of New Jersey is justly proud of its high rank as a manufacturing State, and would again urge upon its citizens, as a matter of State pride and a furtherance of their own pecuniary interests to make such exhibits at the Great Exposition to be held in Chicago, as will illustrate and confirm its position so deservedly high, and as a manufacturing centre in the very foremost rank.

Invited, in various special and important industries, New Jersey stands without a rival near her throne.

In silk, in leather, in artistic pottery of a very high grade, in artistic jewelry, the value and importance of her productions may be largely in excess of any other State of the Union, and indeed of many of them combined, as to render a comparison somewhat difficult, but eminently satisfactory.

With a large opportunity for the demonstration that our manufactures of every grade and variety are citizens of no mean commonwealth, it should be their pleasure, as it is undoubtedly their duty, to illustrate her resources and capabilities at the World's Great Exposition by such an exhibit as will maintain the proud claim of New Jersey—"Foremost among the foremost."

EDITORIAL NOTES

The only surviving general of highest rank who served in the Confederate army is P. G. T. Beauregard. It is likely, however, that more brigadiers survive of the Confederate army than are left from the Union army.

An electrical tuning box has been invented for the use of orchestra leaders. Now if somebody will invent a means to put a little electricity into congressmen's and other people's speeches, a long felt want will be supplied. Why not? It has been successfully used to give added speed to horses.

Sulphate of soda forms with carbolic acid a harmless compound. Therefore when a person has been poisoned by taking carbolic acid into his stomach have him at once drink a strong solution of sulphate of soda. It will never fail but may be classed as a reliable antidote to carbolic acid poisoning, it is claimed.

The next lands to be opened to settlement will be in southeastern Utah. These lands belonged to the southern Utes. After the agreement with those has been finally ratified, the land will be sold to settlers at the price of $1.50 an acre. Then there will be one more boomers' rush, almost the last one in the history of the country.

Professor Barnard, of the Lick observatory, made some strange discoveries in connection with Swift's comet, visible to the naked eye as a small, hazy star without a tail. The Lick telescope, however, discovered tails enough—a whole system of tails. From time to time during the present month Professor Barnard has been examining the comet. He found that it had not only tails, but forked tails, with curves in them. He succeeded in photographing the remarkable phenomenon, and the picture will be one of the most striking ever obtained in the field of astronomy. The telescope showed three principal tails, of which the southern one was most distinct. The most remarkable thing was, however that this tail grew 10,000,000 of miles in twenty-four hours, as observed under the telescope.

Behanzin.

France may have to take seriously this ugly black brute and wipe him out. He warned France that if she wanted to fight him he was ready to pit his little pocket handkerchief kingdom of Daho mey against the whole French nation He has 15,000 warriors, 6,000 of them the ferocious Amazons, who are the world's phenomenon in these closing days of the Nineteenth century.

Behanzin, is enraged because he sees as the Indian of America saw 300 years ago, the white man's civilization closing in on him and forcing him to adopt its ways or pressing him to extinction. The proximity of the white man means to Behanzin that he can no more make bloody raids on the tribes around him for the purpose of capturing slaves to sell to the traders. It means that he can no more behead or torture whom he will and he can no longer offer his human sacrifices Behanzin has therefore grown desperate, and moves on unwittingly to his own destruction.

England proposed to France to enter into a convention whereby these two nations should prevent, as far as possible the sale of firearms to Behanzin. But his soldiers are already equipped with the best modern rifles of German make, so that the action of France and England might have little effect. It is unfortunate indeed that savages can always obtain from the white man both firearms and firewater to an unlimited extent The trade in these is the first to be opened and the last to be suppressed.

Marriage and Working Women.

In London one-fifth of all the women between the ages of thirty-five and forty-five are single. In all England one-sixth of such women are single This being so necessarily, apparently since there are not men in Great Brit ain to go around to provide husbands and a maintenance for them, Clara E Collet, writing in The Nineteenth Century, urges that some systematic provision should be made whereby they may learn how to live and be independent. After the age of thirty-five the chances are almost certain that they will never marry.

Miss Collet finds a rather curious fact in the course of her investigation. It is that the expectation of marriage really works against girls industrially. If they look forward to getting husbands to support them, they may perhaps work indifferently a few years, merely for enough money to buy clothes and furnish pocket money. They do not take pains to learn anything well, because they expect soon not to be obliged to earn money at all. Many of them never marry. They have not trained themselves to any occupation, consequently their lot in after life is a pitiable one The remedy, Miss Collet says, will be carefully training all women of poorer and middle classes to some occupation. She writes:

> If any one objects that women who are intensely interested in work which also enables them to be self supporting are less attractive than their would otherwise be, I can make no reply except that to expect a hundred women to devote their energies to attracting fifty men seems absurdly ridiculous.

WARD HAS TEN DOLLARS

The Napoleon of Finance Out of Sing Sing.

HIS WILD CAREER AS A FINANCIER.

The Man Who Wrecked the Firm of Grant & Ward and Smashed the Marine Bank Finishes His Term of Imprisonment—He Sees His Boy.

SING SING, N. Y., April 30.—Ferdinand Ward, the first "Napoleon of Finance," was a free man at 10 a. m. today. Upon leaving Sing Sing prison he was given a prison made suit of clothes, ten dollars and a ticket to New York.

Ward has spent the last few weeks in breaking in a convict to fill his place in the printing office. He feels his position keenly, but intends to lead his life short and earn an honest living. In an interview with the United Press correspondent he said: "I look anxiously forward to my release, principally so that I can see my seven-year-old son, who was a baby six months old when I came to this prison. Since my confinement I have received sad blows in the death of wife, father and mother, so that the only near relatives I have living besides my son are a sister and a brother."

In appearance Ward is a pale faced, shrewd looking man, with sharp features. As he has had a very easy time of it while in prison compared to other convicts, his health has been good.

His Remarkable Career.

Ward's career has been a most remarkable one, for in three years, through his own shrewdness, from a messengership in the Produce exchange to the head of a great banking firm that could borrow fourteen million dollars. Ward was in partnership with the son of the first soldier of the era, General Ulysses S. Grant, under the firm name of Grant & Ward. Then black days, beginning with May 6, 1884, when it was announced that the great firm of Grant & Ward had gone down and that the Marine bank had closed its doors as a consequence, are too recent to be entirely forgotten. The liabilities of the firm were $14,000,000, with nothing left which to pay them. By posing as a big lender of money, Ferdinand Ward, the thirty-year-old son of a Baptist minister, obtained great blocks of stocks and bonds, always exacting twice as much collateral as he loaned money. Then he pressed the collateral for all he could, paid ruinous rates of interest and invested in all kinds of wildcat schemes, with President Fish, of the Marine bank, as silent partner.

Ward finally came to the end of his rope and the crash followed. He was arrested and his trial occurred in the following October. General Fry, now secretary of the navy, defended him, and after a three days' fight he stood before Judge Barrett, on Oct. 31, and received a sentence of ten years at hard labor in Sing Sing. He was brought here the next day and put to work cleaning castings in the stove department. From there he was removed to the printing office, which he was the first to conduct, and printed labels. He had worked at the trade when a boy, and soon learned to do good work. Since then he has done all the printing for the prison, besides keeping a scrap book for Warden Brown and his predecessor.

The United States district attorney has decided not to rearrest him at present on the indictments hanging over him in the United States courts.

DEEMING'S FIANCE TESTIFIES.

MELBOURNE, April 30.—The central criminal court room was thronged with people who wished to see not only Deeming himself but also Miss Roussevell, the young woman to whom he was engaged to be married, and who testified against him. She walked to the witness box unfalteringly, and looked steadfastly at the prisoner, who also returned her gaze. Miss Roussevell stated that she was traveling from Adelaide to Sydney on board the steamship Adelaide. After the vessel left Melbourne she was sitting in the saloon when a man came and took a game of whist, introducing himself as Baron Swanston. She consented and in this manner an acquaintance was formed.

"He is sitting there," the witness added, pointing to the prisoner. "At that time he wore a mustache. Next day he asked me if I intended staying at Sydney. I said that I was going to join my sister at Bathurst. He then said that he would stop at Bathurst, too. He explained that he was an Englishman and had only recently come out from England. While we were in Sydney Swanston gave me the ring and asked me to marry him. I replied that I did not intend to marry, and Swanston then asked me to keep the ring as a memento of our acquaintance. He also gave me a small opal brooch.

"When we arrived at Bathurst my sister met me on the station and I introduced the prisoner. On Jan. 16 he called upon me three times and was admitted on the third occasion. He renewed his offer of marriage, and then accepted him. He gave me the scent spray and the two diamond rings now produced."

Mr. Walsh, crown prosecutor, interposing, stated that one of the rings, which had a boat shaped setting, had been identified as having been worn by the murdered woman.

Miss Roussevell said that Swanston (Deeming) soon left for western Australia on business, and after frequent correspondingly. Deeming wrote from the Wentworth hotel, Sydney, Jan. 18:

> DEAR KATE—I arrived safe in Sydney, but am wretched without you. The boat leaves Melbourne on the 21st for Perth, so I shall be there on the 23d. I wish you were going. However I shall have you soon. God bless you. Send you a wire when I hope you will like it. Remember me kindly to your dear sister. Take care of yourself. You are my property now and I expect you to be Darned over to me in as good condition as I left you. From your loving

BARON.

In another letter Deeming urged Miss Roussevell to lose no time in joining him. He added that she was to telegraph to him if she needed money. The evidence of a Mr. Vivian, salesman for Messrs. Kilpatrick, jewelers, Melbourne, showed the prisoner to be a sneak thief as well as a murderer. Vivian testified that the prisoner made various purchases at the shop, and about the time Deeming, who then called himself Dawson, was there two rings were missing. These were the rings which the prisoner afterward presented to Miss Roussevell.

SENSIBLE AND SUTLISH.

The most sensible of the summer hats shown, are those that protect the wearer from the sun. Here is a charming shape, carried out in gray "Amour" straw, trimmed with a wide satin ribbon, which is tied in a huge bow at the back and fastened in front with a jeweled buckle. This hat is further garnished with a very becoming cluster of four black ostrich feathers, arranged very prettily in front.

New Plan to Keep Congressmen from the Races.

HARRISON FAVORS RETALIATION.

He Will Urge Congress to Punish Canada for Levying Tribute from American Ships That Pass Through the Canal. Miller May Succeed Justice Bradley.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The severe rains and the consequent reduction of attractions at the race course were the prevailing causes for the presence of a quorum in the house. The sergeant at arms submitted a report upon the order of the house to arrest members absent Thursday without leave. Twelve members were brought before the bar of the house and compelled to give excuses for their absence. Two hours were thus consumed in personal explanations, which were ludicrous in many instances, and finally all delinquents were excused. During the proceedings Mr. Bailey, of Texas, introduced the following resolution:

> No Work, No Pay.
> Resolved, That at the end of clause 1, by adding the following: And the sergeant at arms is hereby directed to withhold and retain the pay of a member at the end of each month until there is presented to him a statement in writing by such member and over the member's signature that he has not been absent from the house during the month last preceding, and if he has been absent during the said period a statement and affidavit showing the reason for such absence on account of the sickness of himself or some member of his family, by the statement shall be deducted the amount or amounts of wages and allowance of the member considered by either than the above causes, and the sergeant at arms shall deduct the salary for such absence, as provided for by the statutes. Any violation of the rule by the sergeant at arms shall make him liable to be tried at the bar of the house and subject to the provisions of the statutes.

The house then went into committee of the whole on the private calendar, the pending bill being that for the relief of Henry H. and Charlotte K. Sibley, which has been pending five weeks. It was finally referred to the committee of five for adjustment.

When the delinquents appeared before the bar, some with crestfallen countenances and others smilingly, Mr. Bowers, of Alabama, was the first to face the music. He acknowledged that he had been caught by the sergeant at arms but said he was at his room answering correspondence. He remained in the house until 2 o'clock and then left. The discussion was a battle of giants in which he supposed he was not wanted. (Laughter.) He had sent a card to the speaker asking to be excused after 2 o'clock, but the speaker not being in the chair he supposed he could go home and did so.

Mr. Reed on the Question.

Mr. Burrows, of Michigan, declared that members under arrest could not participate in the proceedings of the house or vote until they were excused, and cited precedents to show that Speaker Winthrop had so decided. The chair said that the cause differed in that the members were under arrest. Now the order of arrest had been executed and the members were before the bar of the house and were now asked to give their excuses. They were members and could not be deprived of their privilege to vote.

Mr. Reed, of Maine, said that every member under arrest is supposed to be on the floor, and was therefore entitled to vote at vote. The constitution did not authorize the house to override its provisions. It was the business of the house to follow the constitution. A quorum only required a present quorum, and not a voting quorum. It was the attempt of the house to override the constitution which now made it the laughing stock for the world and gave. (Laughter.) The excuses of more members were then heard.

Mr. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, said he was present Thursday until a late hour, and having some Kentucky friends in the city he took them to his residence to dispense true gentlemen hospitality. (Laughter.) His was excused. Mr. Harter, of Ohio, was present until 3 o'clock, and having important business at the postoffice department he went there. Mr. Lapham, who made that the gentleman from Ohio be fined a silver dollar. (Laughter.)

Mr. Heighhill of South Carolina. Mr. McDonald of New Jersey, Mr. Pickler of South Dakota, Mr. Randall of Massachusetts, Mr Stackhouse of South Carolina and Mr Towney of New York were respectively excused amid some laughter.

Mr. Meredith, of Virginia, created considerable amusement by confessing his sin. He said that he went to the races with a senator, but that he had paid for the privilege. This completed the list of law breakers who were arraigned.

Harrison and the Civil Service.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Under date of Dec. 26, 1891, Mr. William Dudley Foulke, of Richmond, Ind., a prominent advocate of civil service reform, wrote a letter to President Harrison setting him why he did not extend the civil service rules to postoffices and custom houses having less than fifty employees, in accordance with the declaration in the last annual message. He argued that the classified civil service system should be extended to all grades of the service to which it was applicable. Mr. Foulke says in his letter that civil service reform pioneers have repeatedly urged that this extension be made to postoffices having twenty-five employees or more, yet the president has not ordered the extension. The president's reply follows:

> WASHINGTON, Dec. 27, 1891.
>
> MY DEAR SIR—I have your letter of Dec. 26 I have not time this morning to discuss at any length the question which you present or to attempt any restatement of what I have already said to the promotion of civil service reform movements with which I have been here. My thought was that the first thing to do was to have accomplished in this direction as fully and faithfully and impartially administered as to those offices already classified. I think a good deal has been accomplished in this direction, as there has been an important extension of the classified service. The subject presented by you, and which is the subject of very suggestive movements, has been lately and will have my own attention, but I am not now prepared to announce my programme. Very truly yours,
>
> BENJAMIN HARRISON.

The President Favors Retaliation.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—No action has yet been taken by the president in reference to the proposed retaliation upon Canada on account of the tolls charged American vessels for passing through Welland canal by levying a toll upon Canadian vessels which use the Sault Ste. Marie canal. It is expected that the president will send a communication to congress early next week and will recommend congressional action.

Will Miller Succeed Bradley?

WASHINGTON, April 30. — The United States supreme court has closed for Easter. The impression prevailed that the president would appoint the successor of the late Justice Bradley before the court closed, but he did not do so. The place is generally mentioned in Attorney General Miller.

THE ROBINSON TRAGEDY

Hetherington Was Driven to Kill the Englishman.

TWO LOVE-LETTERS IN EVIDENCE.

The Testimony showed That Robinson Deserved Punishment for His Conduct with Mrs. Hetherington—He Repeatedly Promised to Leave Her.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 30.—The steamship Belgic has arrived with Yokohama papers containing full reports of the trial and acquittal of Lieutenant Hetherington, of the Marion, for shooting Gower Robinson. The verdict was a great surprise to English and other foreign residents, who expected that Hetherington would be punished.

It is said, however, that after the trial the British officers visited Hetherington and expressed their pleasure that he had been acquitted. According to them Robinson ought to have been shot some months previously.

Boasted of His Conquests.

The evidence, even that of Gower Robinson's own servants, shows that he was a libertine who boasted of conquests, and the letters that were made public at the trial show him in a despicable light, for he had repeatedly, even to the woman he had compromised, assured her he had burned her letters, and afterward showed them to her friends, and broke his solemn promise to Captain Bartlett not to speak to Mrs. Hetherington at a dinner entertainment, and also his promise to Hetherington not to return to Yokohama while he and his wife were there.

Two of the Couples' Letters.

During the trial Hetherington's counsel read a letter from Mrs. Hetherington to Robinson. Some extracts follow:

"In all this trouble I have never lost faith in you until now. I was told you tried to throw all the blame on me and acted in an ungentlemanly way generally, but did not believe it. Now I don't know what I believe. In the first place, you told me you had burned all my letters. Now you say you have them. What do you mean by that?

"How dare you tell me that you supposed I had mounted the high stool of respectability! I never fell off that stool until I fell into your arms, and I shall never attempt to mount it again in my own mind. We have brought this on ourselves. It can't be helped. Now the only thing to be done is to let it die out once and for all. The whole navy out here is in arms about the way their women have been treated, and it will end in some awful trouble unless we keep quiet. I'll watch Judge and keep him from saying or doing anything more. He thinks you are going to leave Yokohama, and I don't know what he will do when he finds out you are not. Gower, for God's sake, take back what you said. Don't say you hate me."

After Hetherington thought that the affair between his wife and Robinson had been broken off he found the following letter in his wife's valise:

"My own, my pet, I don't know whether I should write to you or not, as, upon my word, I am scarcely responsible for my words or thoughts. I got your letter when I got up this morning. I believe I was mad for a few minutes.

"Your 'Do n't ask me to meet you again. I mean to be a better wife, and good night; good by,' seemed to be all mixed up in my brain. Good God! darling, you don't mean you are going to throw me over, after all that has passed.

"Do you realize that you have made me love you, worship you, and are you now going to say, 'I have had enough; good-by?' I went down to-day and saw you standing at the window as if nothing had happened. Have I been mistaken? Have you no heart? No, I cannot believe it. Those great big, blue, loving eyes looked too true into mine, and did not lie when they looked what your lips said: 'I love you'—and yet you say all is over.

"My love, see me once more, anyhow, and I will swear to you as man and gentleman that I won't ask to meet you again, as you don't want to; but let me kiss those lips and eyes once more, and then—well, forget if I possibly can. Those golden hours I passed with thee, as I sang to you in my song at the concert, 'I love you, my darling, and am crazy after you.' I don't insist, of course, but if you want to do one more kindness to me meet me once more ere we part for good."

The Judge's Charge.

The court, in charging the jury, gave his conclusion as follows:

"As shown by the evidence, for more than two months the defendant had been trying to avert trouble. He had notified the deceased by letter to cease attention to his wife and was assured that his wishes would be complied with.

"When matters became more serious Captain Bartlett interposed and received the solemn word of the deceased that he would cease his attention to the wife of the defendant. Even this did not avail, but, on the contrary, he continued to pursue the wife, according to the evidence, relentlessly, almost fiendishly.

"During all those long, weary weeks that the conflict of emotions was constricting in his breast, in all of his talk to his friends or enemies, the defendant never made a suggestion of shooting the deceased.

"In December the defendant did not know how bad matters actually were, but he knew they were bad enough.

"Robinson had confessed that he loved the defendant's wife, yet defendant could not believe that it had been anything criminal between them.

"So time goes on. Robinson goes away to Kobe, not a long distance, but far enough to relieve the wife of the defendant from his influence.

"She makes a confession to the defendant, Feb. 1 of her visit with midnight ride to Robinson's house, Oct. 25, 1891; she tells him everything.

"In view of the facts I cannot conceive how any man under the same circumstances could have maintained his self control on meeting the cause of his sorrows that day. Therefore, I think he should not be convicted of murder or any other crime. There is no evidence in this case of premeditation."

Brigands Attacked by Police.

CAIRO, April 30.—The Bulak railway station here was raided by brigands, but on leaving the station they were attacked by the police. One brigand was killed and one was arrested.

Tried to Choke Her.

ROCKVILLE, Conn., April 30.—An unknown man entered the bedroom of Mrs. Forney, seventy-five years old, at an early hour and attempted to choke her to death. He escaped.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Senators Who Will Serve on the National Democratic Committee.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—The following is a list of senators who will serve on the executive committee of the national Democratic campaign committee: Matthew C. Butler, South Carolina; Alfred H. Colquitt, Georgia; Joseph C. S. Blackburn, Kentucky; James K. Jones, Arkansas; William B. Bate, Tennessee; Charles J. Faulkner, West Virginia; David Turpie, Indiana; Barna Blodgett, New Jersey; John S. Barbour, Virginia; R. Q. Mills, Texas.

Cleveland Feeling at Washington.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Charles S. Hamlin, secretary of the New England Tariff Reform league, who is here, says he is struck with the change that has come over public sentiment in Washington in regard to the presidential nomination. "When I was here in February many seemed to feel that it might be better to nominate a so-called third candidate for the presidency, but today it seems to be the general feeling at Washington among public men that the nomination of Grover Cleveland is inevitable. With Cleveland as a candidate and with Governor Russel running again for the governorship we can surely carry Massachusetts."

IRISH FOLKLORE.

Its Which the Robin, Wren, Blackbird and Others Take Part.

The robin is called "God's bird," because it plucked a thorn from the cruel crown thrown upon the head of our Saviour, and in doing so wounded its own breast. It forsakes a "cursed" graveyard.

The wren is classed every St. Stephen's day on account of its betraying the Saviour by chattering in a clump of furze where he was hiding. It is called the "king of all birds," because they are forced to conform to the wing of the eagle when that lordly bird claimed supremacy by soaring highest. "Here I am," said the wren, mounting above the eagle's head when the latter could go no higher.

The blackbird and thrush are "wandering souls," whose sins must be expiated on earth, since they are forced to endure the rigors of winter. Rooks, jackdaws, bats, hawks and owls are animated by lost souls. The wagtail is called the "devil's bird," for no other reason, I suppose, than that it cleverly evades the missiles thrown at it. A dead wagtail is a rara avis.

The stone chat is continually chatting with the evil one, so it is held in bad repute, and as the raven commonly impersonates his sable majesty it is ranked in the same category of evil birds. Sometimes, however, its appearance foreboded a death. With the ancient Greeks the magpie was supposed to possess the soul of a gossiping woman, and we all know how unlucky it is to meet an odd number of the species in Ireland—

One for sorrow, two for mirth,
Three for a burying, and four for a birth.

Crows, like crickets, come for good or evil luck, but the "curse of the crows" is a maledictory too to avoid. If good luck abides in the homestead where they build their rookery they should not be molested. Sparrows, starns, and storns are on friendly terms with the fairies. The lark and the swallow are birds of good omen, but the latter should not rest on the homestep.

The redg warbler possesses the souls of subaptized babes and sings their sorrow at the midnight hour; while the linnet, yellow hammer and finch sing their plaintive and tender songs to remind us that they are souls of departed friends not yet relieved from purgatorial pains, says The Irish Times, authority for the foregoing.

Gratitude.

Gratitude is not a common virtue, but it sometimes balances the making of hand some bequests. An old lady left $30,000 to a gentleman, for no other reason than because he once held her pew door open. Charles Reade, James Payn, Tupper and several other writers have been handsomely remembered in the wills of admiring readers. Very thoughtful was the man who left a large sum of money to his nephew, on condition that he would get married in six months, and not be a miser able old bachelor, like his uncle.

The question is sometimes asked whether women are or are not meaner than men. Some say that they are less generous in giving "money to servants and others. If this be the case (which is doubtful), perhaps the reason is because the money they have generally belongs to some one else, and they are too conscientious in the man

Science Progress.

A PHOTOGRAPHIC FEAT.

A Simple Process That Affords Entertainment to Amateur Photographers.

Striking results in photography are obtained by the use of a black or monochrome background and a process of double exposure on the same plate. Popular Science News illustrates and describes an excellent and amusing example, where a youth sitting at a table is surprised, as he naturally would be, to see his own head served up to him "on a charger," a la John the Baptist.

In this case the open door to a darkened home formed the background. A piece of blackened cardboard pierced with a hole small enough to cut off all parts of the scene except the doorway was placed inside the camera, and the larger head photographed first, its position being accurately marked by a bit of paper gummed to the ground glass screen. The pasteboard was then removed and the rest of the group, with the head, was posed and photographed in the usual manner. Upon development the two different exposures were combined with the result shown in the illustration.

Photography with a monochrome background is an easy, simple and inexpensive process, capable of an infinite number of novel, ludicrous and startling effects, particularly well adapted for the amusement of the ever increasing army of photographic amateurs.

Wire Glass.

Under the name of wire glass, a new fireproof glass has been brought on the market by a Dresden firm which marks an important development in the glass making industry. A foreign exchange tells that the process of manufacture consists in furnishing glass in a hot, plastic condition with a flexible metallic layer, iron wire netting, for instance, which is completely inclosed by the vitreous substance and effectively protected against exterior influences, as rust, etc. The new glass, which has been patented in the leading countries, is much greater tensile resisting power than the ordinary metal, and is, it is claimed, indifferent to the most abrupt changes of temperature, and will even withstand severe fire. A further proof of its toughness and durability is stated to be the fact that it may, in a highly heated condition, be quenched with cold water without being materially damaged. The glass is specially adapted for skylights, the powerful resisting qualities of the material enabling the usual wire protectors to be dispensed with. As wire glass cannot be cut by the diamond, except under the application of great force, and cannot be broken without creating considerable noise, the

GOOD HEALTH

THE PRAISE OF YAWNING.

A Mixed Physical Exercise Which Stimulates and Refreshes the Whole Body.

To yawn is to do a good deal more than merely "to open wide the mouth through drowsiness or weariness," as the dictionaries tells us. According to Mrs. Russell, of Debarrasian fame, the yawn is an involuntary exercise which nature suggests to us when, in consequence of sleep or drowsiness or casual or cold or lassitude or indigestion, something is needed to restore the system to a state of general activity. Through it and the movements which accompany it the whole body, beginning with the muscles of the throat and face, is stimulated and refreshed, the successive motions extending themselves throughout the entire frame and resulting finally to the feet. "A good yawn," says Mrs. Russell, "is always slow, and the best ones every articulation in the body—probably every muscle—possibly refreshes every nerve. Not all at once or in jerks, but slowly, in perfect succession and rhythm, with the most possible breathing. Certainly the gymnast, with the single exception of Francois Delsarte, ever so arranged the same expenditure of force, nervous and muscular, as to result in so much amount of invigorating effect upon the system." And again we are informed that yawning "embodies all the laws of graceful motion and movements that are to give physical growth and refreshment, and some of the laws which are necessary to the higher growth, as to mind, of the emotions and the intellect."

The moral of these observations would appear to be that we ought all to yawn as much as possible—the ethereal, the bestial, and further, all yawning cannot be made perfection as a mode of bodily exercise, that we should do well to discard such conventionalities as hand fans and the like, and instead bar, and to cultivate our bodily powers by merely lounging in our chairs and yawning. Merely to think about it or to read about it is enough to make some people agape, while if these devices fail, the desired result can be attained in a purely mechanical fashion. Droop the eyelids as if languor, at the same time rolling the eyeballs slightly upward, though without closing the eyes; repeat the movement some half dozen times and you will find yourself beginning to yawn.

Hot Bathing in Japan.

Its hygienic matters the Japanese have everywhere a habit which may have a lesson for us, writes Dr. Benjamin Howard in The Lancet. In their nightly bath and morning wash the water is never cold, never warm, but always hot as it can be borne. To foreigners this habit seems very surprising, but the most inveterate Englishman, if he stays in the country long enough, abandons his cold tub in its favor. The cold taking which it is suspected must follow is found not to occur if the water has been hot enough. This heat is maintained by a little furnace beneath the bath. In the bath the bather or bathers take a prolonged soaking, the whole proper being done on the bathroom floor; then follows a second and final soaking, drying with a towel and a lounge in bathing wrapper. This bath seems to promote relaxation and suppleness of the skin, and by persons inclined to rheumatism is soon found to be altogether preferable to the cold bath in every instance. The drying and lounge after a hot bath with ammonia is delightful, and would be sure the man who used it must be a benefactor. With respect to the comparative merits of the hot bath and the cold, I have come to find that in my own case certainly the Japanese are right.

TALKING SHOP.

This May Be an Innocent Pleasure or a Most Selfish Amusement.

People seem to think it necessary to apologize for talking of their chosen business in life. If a man makes a pun, good or bad—it is usually men who make puns—he assumes a sort of half guilty, half pleased air, to be ready to look ashamed of himself or proud, according to how his wit is received. But when a man "talks shop" he usually tarries with no polite excuse. Whether he is the party may be "an outsider," and yet this very topic may be of interest to all, from the mere fact that those talking on it are those most competent to discuss it thoroughly.

"Talking shop" may, to a great extent, be called a pastime, for while it is one of our most innocent pleasures, it is often also one of our most selfish amusements. To render it a selfish amusement is it only necessary to introduce one unconcerned element.

While "talking shop" may be a great pleasure, provided all present are interested in or understand what they are talking about, yet, if any false note is present in the chord of perfect harmony which should prevail in order to enjoy the talk comfortably, all is changed. To those directly admonished let one word of advice be addressed, which is, if you are present when shop is being talked, sit still and say nothing—think, if you are not thoroughly well informed on the subject. The intelligent listener will seldom fail to learn something from those who are discussing any point which they understand, and their patience will assuredly meet its reward.

Rite of Social Wisdom.

Tact is the art of putting yourself in another's place, and being quick about it.

To know the beauty of apology in its fullness it should be met in the same spirit of frankness. To receive an apology in a doubting, grudging, ungracious way is a disgrace. It is ill brief, ignoble.

It is hard to find fault with people who think just as we do.

It pays 100 per cent. to be polite to every one, from the garbage gatherer to the governor.

Give a bay address and accomplishments," says Emerson, "and you give him the mastery of palaces and fortunes wherever he goes; he has not the trouble of earning or owning them; they solicit him to enter and dwell in them.

Lord Chesterfield wrote: "It is better to return a dropped fan genteelly than give a thousand pounds awkwardly; you had better refuse a favor genteelly than grant it clumsily. All your Greek can never advance you from secretary to envoy or from envoy to ambassador, but your address your air, your manner, if good, may."

To get something for nothing is contrary to the laws of nature and mankind.
